Knight turned down the job at

New Mexico. This was good news for a fellow Binghamton native, Dave Bliss. YR will go out on a limb and predict great things for this team. Maybe not next year or the year after but sometime down the road.

Pro Basketball — The NBA is into its play-offs. Or as they say in or on the Media, their second season. YR likes Boston but they must survive. This is based solely on nostalgia. YR can't get really excited about pro ball anymore. There are too many teams, too many games and too many fights. This goes for pro hockey also. YR remembers the good old days when by the end of March or early April these guys would have folded their tent and silently slipped away, leaving time for Hot Stovers meetings. Remember those? Now with expansion, the league has two conferences. Each conference has play-offs. These play-offs consist of quarter-finals, semi-finals and finals best-of-series, usually 7 games. Then the winners of all this meet in the best of 7 series to determine the champion. It will be June before they're gone from your TV screen. All done in the name of the game. Actually, all done for M-O-N-E-Y. Please do not think YR has anything against making money. He doesn't. It's the American Way. But let's not be naive and think the league and the owners are doing it for you, the fan.

Foul Shots — More specifically, foul shooting contests. Another Heslin took her place in the Annual NYS K of C Foul Shooting contest. Colleen Heslin outshot the best of them in her age group in a series of shoot-outs throughout NYS. Colleen started her trek by besting the competition at her school, St. John's in Binghamton. Next she took on the City of Binghamton, then moved on to Broome County; then the best in Diocese of Syracuse, which was held in Syracuse, NY. Returning to Syracuse the next weekend, she took on the best Upstate NY had to offer. Finally, Colleen went to West Point where she outshot a girl from Staten Island and a girl from Brooklyn. Colleen is the daughter of Terry and Kathy Heslin; the granddaughter of the same James "Red" Heslin mentioned previously and the grandniece of YR.

Baseball — With the NBA and the NHL still trying to decide who are their champs, Major League Baseball opened another season. The Yankees have been showing mucho power at the plate. Billy Martin didn't have the power in a men's room encounter. The Mets are going strong. The Yankees are getting some fierce competition from the Cleveland Indians. Cleveland is the host for the National Convention in July. Some Hibernians might be more interested in seeing major league baseball than the convention. Cleveland is also home for WWWE which has a terrific sports show. YR listens when he can pick it up which is not too frequent anymore. There's too much interference.

There's a kid from Binghamton pitching with the Chicago White Sox at present. YR hopes that he has enough stuff to last in the Bigs. It's tough. The kid's last name with the Sox is Palowski.

Ron Luciano, the former umpire has a new book out. Ron's now making the circuit of talk shows pushing his literary talents. Not too bad for a kid that came out of Endicott, the home of Johnny Logan. Remember him?

Wrestling — Amateur not Professional. Chris Cody, son of Leo and Mary Cody of Binghamton, keeps winning all sorts of tournaments against international competition. Chris is no heavyweight but YR would not like to tangle with him. This would never happen. Young Cody has been brought up to respect his elders. Leo is another member of Div 1-Broome County.

Tourneys — Bowling tournaments and softball tournaments should be coming up. NYS AOH Bowling Tournament was 5/21 in Oswego. Results not in. Also YR hasn't received any word on this year's NYS Softball Tourney, or for that matter any other tournament.

The End of the Game — That's it for this edition. Until the next time on the sidelines, send those cards and letters to PO Box 156 ESS, Binghamton, NY 13904.

Chicago's New Gaelic Park

CHICAGO, IL — The Irish have at long last achieved and completed a project that has been proposed, discussed, tried and failed a few times. The project just never got established or even got off the floor. This has been my experience in my sixty-five years in Chicago. Now I am telling you about the wonderful Gaelic Park we have in the southwest side of Chicago.

It was started by two Irishmen, John Crane and Eamon Malone, with a purpose in mind and determination in their hearts. Although it began only a few years ago, I feel we now have a Gaelic Park and Country Club that can compare with the best in America. It is about ninety percent complete; yet improvements are already in order, such as enlarging and blacktopping the parking lot.

We have seventeen and a half acres and the beautiful part is this — everything is paid for. The location could not be better. This proves that when the Irish and Irish Americans work together, their horizon is infinite. Once the undertaking got off the drawing board, help came in all forms. Monies, bonds, professional and trades people did their part; and much laborious work was expended.

Now that the functions in the clubhouse are in full force, the fair ladies play an important part. We have an excellent picnic grove and lots of action on the football field. I am proud of them all. The young Irish people coming to Chicago will have something to behold.

When traveling this summer, if you come to Chicago or suburbs, ask your relatives or friends about our park. We have very interesting weekends all summer. It would be hard to mention all the names of the wonderful people that put this together. They don't need praise or glory. Their good deeds and works are visible on solid ground.

As a member of the AOH, Division 52 in Chicago, I wonder what happened to Hibernianism here. We have the potential. Maybe in the near future we will find a John Crane, and Eamon Malone and others that will put their shoulders to the wheel and start Hibernianism on the road again. I know they are out there somewhere.

Questions and Answers

NOTE: Please forward questions to Mr. William T. Malone, Box 255, Division of Celtic Studies, Catholic University, Washington D.C. 20064

Q. Can you tell me whether or not the name SHALOO is Irish? Tom Gannon, Groton, CT.

A. Indeed the name is Irish. It comes from O Sealbhaigh and the English equivalents are Shalloo, Shallow, Shellew, Shally, (O) Shelly (the most popular), Shealy, Sheilly, O Shallowe, O Shallee, O Sheilly. The Irish means 'descendant of a possessor or proprietor.' The name belonged to a branch of the Corca Laoighdhe in Southwest Cork, whose seat was probably at Baile ui shealbhaigh, 'town of the proprietor,' about one mile east of Dunmanway. The Four Masters note the death of Domhnall Ua Shealbhaigh, erenagh of Cork, in 1140 A.D. They dub him 'pillar of the glory and splendor of Munster.' In the 12th century, four bishops in Cork and one in Lismore have the name. Four centuries later Bishops of Cork, Waterford, Tipperary, Kilkenny, and Donegal have it. Thus there must have been a distinguished Northern O Sealbhaigh sept as well.

Q. What is the origin and background of the family name LANDERS? Christopher Landers, Selden, N.Y.

A. The name is Norman from de Loudres 'one of London,' whence many emigrated to the Dublin, Meath, Wexford, and Ormond regions during the Norman conquest. Irish variants are de Londrar, de Lombrach, de Londra (peculiar to West Munster), de Londras, de Londrach. De London is a variant of de Londrar used predominantly in 12th and 13th century Limerick and Waterford. Modern examples include Launders, Landry, Londry, Londres, Londra, and Landers. The name also has an occupational meaning, 'one who bleached and washed wool, flax, cloth etc.' and a locational one, 'dweller near the churchyard.'

Q. Could you please provide me with information on the name KINSLOW? Gerald P. Ennis, Bristol, PA.

A. In English the name is either Kingsloe meaning 'king's seat' or Kinsley 'king's wood.' Kin is Irish Cinn 'head.' As such the name is a kin to Cinnsealach, giving Kinsella and Kinsheala.

Q. Could you tell me something about the family name SHEERAN? J. Sheeran, Massapequa, N.Y.

A. Your unusual name can be a variant of two unrelated Irish names: O Sirin whence O Shirine, O Sherin, Sherin, Sheeren, Sheeran, Shiran all meaning 'descendant of Sirin,' itself a variant of O Siorain whence O Shearane and O Sherane. The other names are MacSeartha or MacSearthaigh whence M'Shearhie, M'Shearhiy, M'Shiary, M'Shera, M'Shire, Shira, Sheera, and Shirra all meaning 'son of Geoffrey,' itself a variant of MacSearthaigh. This is a patronymic surname of the Hodnotts of Co. Cork, from which Courtmacsherry is still called in Irish, cuirt mhic shearthaigh. Also, from an ancestor, Geoffrey MacGiolla Phadraig, the Fitzpatricks of Ossory assumed Searthra as a second surname. Geoffrey appears in Irish dialects as Searfraidh, Sioffraidh, Searra, Searthra, Seathra, Seathrun, Searthun. The old Cork sept is now extinct and the Donegal-Fermanagh one spread south to Mayo.

Q. What is the origin of the name LYDON? My grandparents came from Spiddel, Co. Galway. David Lydon Jr., Pittsburgh, PA.

A. In Irish the forms are O Loidain and O Loideain whence (O) Ludon, Leyden, Liddane, Lyden, Lydden, Ludden, Leddin, O Lydan, O Lear-don, all meaning 'descendant of Loidain or Loideainudan,' 'one who came from a lydden,' a pasture with a shelter (in Kent). The name is seemingly English, but belonged to an old Connacht family from Galway. Now it is more common in Cos. Mayo and Clare and in most places as Lydon.

Q. How did the harp become associated with Ireland? Marie Smith, Galatin, TN

A. Even I saw, resting in the Long Room of the old library at Trinity College, is what the Irish will tell you is Brian Boru's harp. The harp has seemingly always been identified with this nation of singers, dancers, and poets. As the official symbol, the following is certain. After Henry VIII proclaimed himself 'King of the Irish' in 1541, the harp first appeared on coinage. In 1603, at the coronation of James I, the Royal Standard depicted the harp. During the same time, one shown on the flag of the Confederation of Killkenny. After the Act of Union, 1801, the Royal Standard continued to display a harp in its third quarter. The Union Jack standard of Ireland's Lord Lieutenant had a central blue shield bearing a gold harp. Such flags were not accepted by the general populace because they represented foreign domination. We might think of the harp as a symbol borrowed from the Irish people by British Royalty to represent England's ownership. Nowadays as the centerpiece of the Irish coat-of-arms, it proclaims Ireland's independence.

Q. Can you explain to me how Ireland got its flag? Alan Love, Forestville, MD.

A. Before the middle of the 18th century blue was the color most often associated with Ireland. 'St. Patrick's blue' it was called. Around 1700 the green shamrock became the symbol of Irish Catholics in their struggles with William of Orange and his successors. Slowly green became the color of the nationalist movements.

Many believe that Henry Grattan and the United Irishmen used solid green flags at the end of the 18th century. The Irish press and literature tell us that green flags were displayed in the 1870s during rallies held by the Irish Parliamentary Party. During the Dublin National Exhibition of 1882 and at the visit of the Prince of Wales to Ireland in 1885 the green flag was flown beside the Union Jack in deference to the surging sentiments of nationalism and as a statement against British occupation.

The Irish Volunteers, founded in 1913, used the green flag. When John Redmond visited the Allied European front in 1915 the Irish soldiers in the British army paraded before him with green flags.

During these decades the press referred to the green flag as the 'national flag,' and as 'the Irish flag.' After 1916 the green flag fell out of use and was replaced by the current tricolor. One reason for the change was that the green flag was associated with the futile constitutional parliamentary movement. Now that Ireland was in open rebellion a new symbol was needed to show the changing nationalistic attitude.

Atop the General Post Office, during Easter 1916, hung the solid green flag along with the tricolor. After the executions the tricolor was seen more and more as the symbol of the movement to independence. Tricolor badges were worn on clothing.

The tricolor consciously imitated the French tricolor, which was the symbol of their revolution. In 1848 a group of Young Irishmen returned from Paris and presented the citizens of Dublin with a green, white and orange flag. Records show that such a flag was used as early as 1830, and maybe even in Wexford during the 1798 uprising.

But after 1916, the tricolor did indeed become the new flag. The green represented the Catholics, the orange the Protestants, a color linked with Protestant Irishmen since the time of 'Billy of Orange,' and the white symbolizes 'a lasting truce' between the two peoples that would constitute the emerging nation.

Hibernian Sports

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

Greetings & Salutations! First, it's graduation time at the colleges throughout the U.S. YR would like to take this opportunity to say congratulations to the graduates and especially their parents. As an English teacher friend of YR would say, "You done good."

Speaking of graduations, there was a first at SUCCO-Fredonia in western NY this time out. Two Heslins received degrees. Susan Heslin received her Masters in Education in Speech Pathology. Joseph Michael Heslin received his BS in Communications/Media. Joe is YR's oldest son. Susan is the daughter of James "Red" Heslin, VP of Div 1-Broome County. YR is very proud of his son and his niece.

Enough family business for now, let's go to sports.

College Basketball — The NCAA tourney is history. Interesting is the point that no team from the Big East, the Big Ten, the old PAC 8 or any independent made it to the championship game. There's always next year. The NCAA will probably begin to the world about parity in the ranks. Not so. Not until colleges quit exploiting high school players and insure they get the education promised. Players, on the other hand, have to quit signing letters and/or agreements for and with agents until they can do so legally. Or has the time come as a friend of YR says to take off the blinders and admit some of these so-called colleges today are no more than diploma mills. He is a former college player from a Big Ten school. His ideal conception is to have colleges such as those who insist students, athletes included, go to class, take tests and receive their degree when qualified. Scholarships would be allowed. These colleges would be on equal footing. Then institute what he calls "Jock Schools." These schools could pay athletes to play for them. After four years, regardless of what the athletes have learned or not learned, they would be given certificates of attendance. This is an interesting theory. It's food for thought and discussion.

Bobby Knight, the coach of Indiana, put his foot in his mouth on national TV during a program on streets. Perhaps Mr. Knight should hire a personal PR person. YR is available for $50,000/annum plus perks.

We must work together through peaceful means to end the years of discrimination and bloodshed that have so tragically separated Catholic from Protestant, north from south, in Ireland. That is the best way and the only way that some day we can look forward to a united Ireland.

"Thank you all very, very much."

YES! THERE IS A HIBERNIAN LIFE INSURANCE FUND

What it is...

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAOH members by 1953 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and the LAOH. In 1963, the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Bursar Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.

Jan Elected AOH National President

Mary Bradley to Lead Ladies

By JOHN J. CONCANNON

CLEVELAND: Veteran Hibernian, Michael Coogan of Dayton, Ohio, the AOH incumbent Vice President, was elected AOH National President at the recent National AOH Convention here. He won over candidate Michael Hession of Albany, N.Y.

The incumbent Vice President of the Ladies AOH, Miss Mary Bradley of Central Falls, Rhode Island, was elected LAOH President without contest.

Men and women AOH Convention delegates, by cumulative vote but balloting separately, selected Crystal City, Arlington, Virginia, as the site of the next National convention in July 1990.

The contest for National Vice President was between two National Directors: Michael Carroll of Worcester, Massachusetts, and Jack Hassett of San Francisco. Carroll was the victor. National Secretary Thomas McNabb of Auburn, New York, was unopposed for that office. Edward Wallace of Clayton, New York, retained the position of National Treasurer, overcoming a challenge by John Bonner of Pittsburgh.

Nine Hibernians ran for the six available positions of National Director. The successful six in order of votes received: Bill Hines of San Antonio, Texas; Tom Gilligan, Fort Lauderdale, Florida; Jack Irwin, Nassau County, N.Y.; Frank Kearney, Meriden, Connecticut; John McInerney, Detroit; and Kevin Reynolds, Cleveland.

$45,000 to Columban Missionary Father James O'Brien. She also announced the appointment of Father George B. McCarthy of Rhode Island as LAOH National Chaplain and named Patricia A. Oberath of Rocky River, Ohio, as Assistant Editor of the Hibernian Digest.

Newly-installed President Michael Coogan announced several appointments: The new National Chaplain of the AOH is Bishop Thomas Drury of Corpus Christi, Texas. Now retired, the Bishop has previously served the Order as National Chaplain. Two Deputy National Chaplains were appointed to assist him - Father Donal O'Carroll of Steubenville, Ohio, who has been serving as Ohio State chaplain for both the ladies and men's AOH; and Father Michael Healy of San Francisco. Father Healy, currently a Deputy National Chaplain men's AOH, substituted at the Cleveland Convention for National Chaplain Father John Ahern of Syracuse, N.Y., who is convalescing from minor surgery.

President Coogan also appointed former National Vice President George Clough of St. Louis as the National Board's new Legal Counsel. Michael McCormack of Suffolk County, the incumbent N.Y. State Historian, was named National Historian, and David Henshaw continues as National Hibernian Digest editor.

The Cleveland Convention, which ran from Monday, July 25 through the evening of Thursday, July 29, formally opened on a spiritual note. It had rained all through Monday morning and afternoon. But, lo and behold (all praise to St. Patrick!) at 7 p.m., as the multitude of Hibernians prepared to form outside the Convention headquarters, Bond Court Hotel, the rain stopped. Some 2,000 Hibernians — men, women and children — under a dry, clear sky, marched behind the North Coast Irish Pipe Band to attend a 7:30 p.m. Memorial Mass at the Cathedral of St. John the Evangelist.

MICHAEL COOGAN

The principal celebrant of the mass was the Most Reverend Anthony M. Pilla, Bishop of Cleveland. He was assisted by ten Hibernian priest celebrants. The venerable, 140-year-old Cathedral was a fitting setting for a memorable memorial mass, which thanks to two Cleveland Hibernians, Father Brendan McNally and Margaret M. Lynch, had the added touch of the original words of the "Hibernian Hymn."

The Convention closing banquet took place in the huge Grand

Ireland: The Reagan Years

Ronald Reagan, the 11th President of the United States to claim Irish heritage, is the fourth such President to serve since Ireland's unilateral partition. His tenure at the White House began and ends with a complete indifference to the real issues of the Irish conflict. The Reagan years brought America to the far corners of the earth to defend freedom and peace with justice and yet today, America looks away from Ireland where tyranny is most triumphant. How is this possible? A historical context will show how dramatic a shift in policy the President has brought about.

What most Americans know about the Anglo-Irish conflict begins with the late 60's clash between the civil rights cause and the "separatist" craftsman of the colonial office. The social engineering required to keep partition and the state-of-seige needed to enforce it ruptured the body politic of Ireland. Bloody Sunday, mass internment, police riots and forced migration of Catholics awakened Americans to English cruelty. In 1972 Senator Ribicoff was joined by many in calling for British withdrawal and stated, "No talk of reform and halfway measures are sufficient. More of the same can only guarantee future conflict and tragedy." President Carter noted Britain's abuse of human and civil rights and supported an end of U.S. arms sales to the Royal Ulster Constabulary. British Misinformation Services aided by government censors soon turned this reality of state-sponsored murder and mayhem in Ulster into a fantasy of international conspiracy by communists, terrorists and criminals.

President Reagan took office in 1980 surrounded by public relations types in white hats anxious to reduce foreign policy to "terrorist" and "evil empire" slogans. So far in 1988 England has publicly approved the murder of Irish civilians, R.U.C. perjury and obstruction of justice, the wrongful imprisonment of 6 Irishmen in jail for 13 years and early amnesty for soldiers who murder Irish civilians. The silence from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue is predictable and defiant. These actions by England are the fruit of an appeasement policy that began early in the Reagan presidency.

During the Hunger Strike in 1981 in which 10 helpless Irish prisoners — two elected officials — died in protest, the Department of State issued perfunctory press releases proclaiming it an internal matter. This from the same government that has made their own the cause of prisoners from Russian gulags, Ft. Bonifacio in the Philippines, and Pollamore prison in South Africa. In 1982 the President was alarmed by the State of Emergency declared in Nicaragua, but that June addressed Parliament and never once spoke of the Emergency Provisions, Special Powers and Prevention of Terrorism Acts that have made a police state of Northern Ireland since 1922. Nor did he mention the European Parliament's ban in May on the use of plastic bullets which have killed 14 Irish men, women and children and maimed hundreds of others. Instead he spoke of Poland as a regime planted by bayonet and ignored the 30,000 British troops garrisoned on beachhead Belfast.

In 1983 the New Ireland Forum received faint praise but no support from Reagan. When Thatcher publicly ridiculed the wishes of elected Irish officials in the Forum Report, the President seemed to join the mockery by denying a visa to Gerry Adams, the only democratically elected official to ever be denied a chance to visit the land of the free and the brave. All this while Reagan was courting Congress with Commander Zero (Nicaragua), Jonas Savimbi (Angola) and Oliver Tambo (South Africa). Later in 1984 Reagan cronies at the Institute for Defense and European Studies, Richard Allen and Frank Shakespeare, did their part by publishing Ulster: The Undeclared Frontier, a piece of NATO myth-making rivaling any Communist regime's rewrite of history.

The contempt the President has shown for Congress was exceeded when Prime Minister Thatcher stated to Congress in February, 1985

President's Message

Teachtaineacht An Uachtaráin

By Nicholas Murphy, National President

Address to National Convention

Reverend Fathers, fellow members of the National Board, State, County and Division officers, Brothers Hibernians and Delegates to our 84th Biennial Convention — God bless you all.

It seems like only last week since you entrusted me with the leadership of this noble organization, and I will be forever grateful to you for giving me that opportunity. There is no more rewarding endeavor than serving as National President of the greatest Irish American organization in this great land. It has indeed been a privilege to serve you and the good cause.

However, it is now time to give an account of my stewardship and to express my opinion as to where our order should be heading over the next several years.

First, I am pleased to report that our order is healthy, robust, fully engaged in the issues of the day and at peace with itself. There are no major conflicts within our organization that pose a threat to our motto of Friendship, Unity and Christian Charity. That is something in which we are all entitled to take justifiable pride.

One of the most challenging goals of any presidency is the maintenance of membership. Any ethnic, cultural or religious organization, such as the Sons of Italy, Knights of Columbus or even the V.F.W., will on an annual basis lose 10% of its membership. The AOH is no exception. So you see the task is formidable. The game plan adopted by our National Board over the past two years was to place the major impetus on increasing the membership of existing divisions, as opposed to an all-out drive for new divisions. To accomplish our goal we held two major membership drives including a joint effort with the Ladies AOH. We placed heavy emphasis on direct mailing and paid advertising, including the first time advertising in a national monthly magazine. Our ad campaign was an outstanding success. Not only did we meet the 10% increase necessary to maintain our membership, but we increased our overall membership by a respectable margin. In the process we organized 15 new divisions including for the first time two divisions at Catholic universities, namely Georgetown University and Catholic University in Washington D.C. I want to extend a special congratulations to Matt Hannan of the D.C. Board for his work in this area, and to Mike Hession for his outstanding leadership as organizer during the past two years.

There was a period in the early 80s when our organization had a strained relationship with the Dublin Government of the day. During the past two years we have reestablished relations with the people of Ireland on several levels — and that is as it should be. No party or leader of opinion in Ireland has been excluded from communication. When we agreed with the Dublin Government we congratulated them — and when we disagreed we also let them know. An example of this was the signing of an extradition agreement with Britain. We expressed our disagreement publicly which got extensive coverage in Ireland. It is important to recognize that it is possible to continue to exchange views with those with whom we disagree, whether they be in or out of government. This is true not only of the people of Ireland, but also of Britain since it is the failed policies of British Imperialism which are at the root of many of Ireland's woes.

As an example, promoting the restoration of Irish forests, destroyed by past English exploitation. Last year we planted an Hibernian forest near Killorglin, Co. Kerry. Next time you visit Ireland I hope you will visit that forest; it is marked with a large bolder inscribed with the dedication from the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America.

We must continue to propagate Irish Culture in the New World as well as to support Irish culture in the Old. It is our responsibility as Americans to offer to America what is best in the traditions of our ancient heritage. Music and dance, literature and language, religion and philosophy, all this and more can we continue to give to the world — and most importantly to our own posterity.

Our youth are our future. With this in mind we adopted the Irish Youth Foundation as a charity of our Order. We have also recommended support for Colaiste Na bhfian, between Project Children, Scoil Gaolach — Beal Feirste An Ahar.

Since 1986 Irish Immigration or should I say illegal immigration has become a major concern to the Irish American Community. To the credit of our order we stepped right into the breach and continue to play a major role not only in helping our unfortunate brothers with their everyday problems but in stepping to the forefront in the lobby effort for a new immigration bill in Washington. Your National President was requested by the Prime Minister of Ireland to chair a committee of Irish organizations to deal with the problem. During the past year I have chaired that committee, which meets in New York City on a weekly basis. We also pioneered an AOH immigration assistance center in New York. This office is staffed by a paid immigration attorney and has literally helped hundreds of young immigrants find their way as illegal immigrants in a hostile environment. I want to congratulate Bronx Hibernians for the noble work they are performing in this area.

Much work remains to be done in finalizing an immigration bill. It is imperative that our order continue to play a major role. There are an estimated 150,000 illegal Irish in the U.S. and properly cultivated, they can become fertile ground for recruiting future members of our order.

As with several of my immediate predecessors, the plight of our oppressed people in Northern Ireland is something that has been never far from our minds during our waking hours. To continue to deal with the situation requires a tremendous degree of fortitude, patience and persistence. But our order has kept the Faith for 150 years and will continue to do so for another 150 if necessary.

During the past two years we attacked the problem on several fronts, keeping constant pressure on British propaganda merchants in the U.S.

The MacBride Principles campaign remains high on our agenda. Led by our P.E.C. chairman, Joe Roche, we have expended a tremendous amount of time, energy and money in the successful efforts in Connecticut, New Jersey, Florida, Minnesota, Maine, Vermont and Rhode Island. We are well on our way in Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire and many others. Halting this campaign is a high priority with the British Government. They have outspent us 1000 to one but they are selling a bad product with a flawed reputation. The American people are fairminded and they will continue to support us as long as we get our message across in plain language. The MacBride campaign has been a tremendous weapon; more than anything else it has educated grassroots America about British atrocities in Northeast Ireland and this is what the British fear most about the campaign. I would be remiss if I did not mention the toughest state to crack, and that was Florida. But crack it did and the major credit must go to our National Director from Florida, Tom Gilligan. I had the sad honor of representing you at the funeral of Sean MacBride and our order received several favorable comments on our work.

During the New Hampshire primaries in February of this year we took the Irish cause directly to the candidates and to the people. We had AOH delegations visit the headquarters of the various candidates and we ran full-page ads in the local newspapers, posing a series of questions on Irish issues to the candidates. During the New York primary we played a major role in the Irish Forum which was attended by Governor Dukakis and Senator Gore. As a matter of fact, our Deputy F.F.A.I. chairman, Jack Irwin, moderated the discussion. Gov. Dukakis for over one hour fielded questions on Irish issues without the benefit of notes and showed a solid grasp of the issues involved. So, for the first time we have the nominee of a major party who is not only educated on Irish issues but is sympathetic to them as well.

Early in our administration we realized that the greatest part of our political efforts should be expended where we had the greatest potential for success and that is in the United States Congress. Therefore we established an AOH Lobby in Washington D.C. We have rented quarters, and Past President Roche is our official lobbyist. We share this space with the Irish-American Unity Conference. While the work has begun well, a lot remains to be done. It will require additional personnel and financial resources.

During the past two years we have supported and participated in Virginia Wins 1990 Convention Site

Fifty members of the Virginia AOH and LAOH travelled to Cleveland, Ohio, the last week of July to join a couple thousand of their brothers and sisters in the Hibernian biennial convention.

In a week of tough competition the Virginia Group concentrated on bringing the convention, 2,000 strong, to Virginia in July 1990. Pitted against strong convention sites in San Francisco, St. Louis, and the Poconos, Virginia won out.

Virginia offers a great convention packet in Crystal City," great historic sites, restful beauty of the state, and true friendly, southern hospitality. Come join us, "you All."

SEAN MACBRIDE HUMANITARIAN AWARD

Section 1. To memorialize the Human Rights contributions made by Nobel Peace Laureate, Dr. Sean MacBride and to recognize the efforts of others who make similar contributions in the cause of peace, justice and the economic well being of the Irish people, the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America shall award bi-annually, at the National Board Meeting a bust or likeness of Dr. Sean MacBride. The award will be conferred without regard to the nominee's race, creed, sex, religion, color or national origin.

Section 2. The award will be presented in the year between National Conventions.

Section 3. The National Vice President shall serve as the Chairman of the nominating and award committees. Other members of the nominating committee shall be all members of the National Board, both elected and appointed, all State presidents, all County Presidents and the National President of the Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, Inc. The same officers will constitute the election board for the award.

Section 4. The chairman of the Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award shall, in the first week of November of the year prior to the National Board meeting, send to all national officers, elected and appointed, all State, District and Provincial Presidents, Division Presidents and the National President of the LAOH a request that the aforementioned send to him, before January 15th of the following year, the name of one nominee for this award. The Chairman shall outline the requirements as indicated in Section 1 of this Article, and shall request that the nominator send a biographical sketch of their nominee, not to exceed 500 words and shall request that the nominator ascertain that the nominee, if selected, would be willing to accept the award at the time and place designated by the National Board.

Section 5. A ballot will be mailed to all eligible for voting, listing in alphabetical order the nominees.

The first choice will be worth five (5) points, second choice four (4) points, third choice three (3) points, fourth choice two (2) points and the fifth choice one (1) point. The nominee with the highest number of points will be declared the recipient of the award. Any winner who declines the award at the time and place designated by the National Board will be declared ineligible, and the award will go to the nominee with the next highest number of points.

Section 6. The Chairman shall complete the election on or before March 10th, and he and the national President shall announce the name of the recipient of the Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award at a time they consider most appropriate for the good of the Order.

Section 7. The Chairman shall publicize the selection and granting of this most prestigious award in all sections of the media including the National Hibernian Digest.

New President Appoints Team

DAYTON, OHIO: Newly elected AOH President Mike Coogan announced several appointments which take effect immediately. Coogan stated,

"George Clough (St. Louis, MO) will be the new Counsel for the National Board, replacing the very capable Jim Shannon (San Diego, CA) and Mike McCormack (Centerreach, N.Y.) will join the Board as National Historian. Both of these men bring the experience and skill the National Board demands and I am delighted they have accepted the responsibilities.

"In order to continue the progress we are making in Washington and in state capitols around the country, I have asked Joe Roche to continue as Chairman of the Political Education Committee and to act as liaison to the other organizations seeking a new American policy on the conflict in Ireland."

Coogan announced also that Bishop Drury (ret.) will return as National Chaplain. Bishop Drury is from Sligo and he will be ably assisted by Fr. O'Carroll (Ohio) from Tipperary and Fr. Healy from Co. Cork, who will act as National Deputy Chaplains. Mike Cummings, Albany, N.Y., has also been reappointed as National Director of Public Relations and Dave Henshaw as Editor of the National Hibernian Digest.

Coogan concluded, "The vigorous leadership of my predecessors has given the AOH a full agenda which I am determined to continue, but this has also made other appointments more difficult. Fortunately we are blessed with an abundance of talent." Remaining appointments include National Organizer, Charities, Missions and Freedom for All Ireland.

National Awards

CLEVELAND, OHIO—July 27—The National Awards Program was held here today at the AOH Biennial National Convention.

First prize of a round trip to Ireland for two was awarded to Michael Murphy, 2257 Coral Sea Drive, Youngstown, Ohio.

Second prize, a remote control VCR, was awarded to John C. Sullivan, 32 No. Kensington Ave., Rockville Centre, New York, and third prize, a Waterford Crystal Ship's Decanter with glasses, went to Mary Anne Weber, 6888 Thornhill Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Recipients of seven Participation Awards were as follows:

He is a member of the Augustine Bolland/William Berry Division 2 of Cleveland. (The Bolland/Berry division and Division 5 and 10 of the Ladies AOH hosted the National Convention).

Dennis P. Long, prominent St. Louis businessman, received the 1988 John F. Kennedy Memorial Award from Frank Kearney, Award Committee Chairman and AOH National Director. The banquet keynote speaker was Father Edward A. Malloy, President of Notre Dame University.

Hibernian George Clough, in his capacity as Chairman of the Notre Dame Fund, presented a $21,000 check to Father Malloy. That brought the Joint AOH contribution to the University to $300,000 during the 10-year duration of the fund drive. With the ending of the Notre Dame fund drive, the AOH turns its educational interest toward Catholic University of America, in Washington, D.C.

SCENES FROM the annual Los Angeles Irish Fair.

STATE NEWS: California The Grand National Irish Fair Held in Los Angeles

By M. MALLOY

Once again the 14th Annual Irish Fair and Music Festival proved to be a wonderful surprise; each year it appears that the fair has reached the ultimate in displaying the finest in Irish culture and then surpasses itself. Terrance and Allyn Anderson, the fair's promoters continue to add and improve and make the Irish in Southern California very proud.

Located on 75 acres of tree-shaded lawns of the Los Angeles Equestrian Center, over 65,000 visitors entered a little bit of Ireland, as the Center was transformed into the Curragh for the West Coast Commerara Pony/Horse Show, Dublin's Fair City for the "Mansion House Feis" and "Royal Tara" where Ireland's historical past came alive.

The Southern California Gaelic Athletic Association held a series of football and hurling tournaments on the expansive polo field as hundreds of traditional musicians and Gaelic speakers performed in a beautiful tree-shaded grove. Thousands of fair visitors strolled down "Galway Market Place," where shops displaying everything from lovely crystal decanters to the always present T-shirts kept shoppers busy.

Sixteen stages of continuous entertainment provided something for everyone; pub bands, singers, cloggers, jugglers, comics, Irish little theatre, bag pipe and marching bands, harpists, fiddlers and of course, the world-famous Chieftains.

It's difficult to identify the fair's highlights since there was so much going on and of course each area had the best of the best. However, the "Grand Parade" (actually two parades; because the grounds are so large, the parade starts at two locations and merges before entering the "Shamrock Dome," a covered polo stadium with hundreds of flags hanging from the ceiling). This colorful collection of fair participants is led off by a massing of the bag pipe bands, followed by one of the largest flag displays ever seen, over a hundred American stars and stripes, followed by an equal number of Irish tricolors, with all the Provinces and County banners following behind and carried by men and women in green and white outfits. What seemed like an endless procession of Irish dancers, costumed characters from Ireland's past, the 1988 Southern California Rose of Tralee, musicians and the Long Beach Marching band playing the Notre Dame College fight song, marched through the fair grounds and entered the Shamrock Dome filled with over 7,500 cheering Irishmen.

Star of stage and screen, award-winning actor Sean McClory, served as Master of Ceremonies, introducing the fair's General Chairman, Terrance Anderson, who in turn welcomed the fair visitors and introduced the 1988 Grand Marshal, local Irish radio personality Tom McConville, the 1988 Southern California Rose of Tralee and Queen of the Fair, Rose "Christine" Briers, and the Irish Consul General, Brian Nason. These Irish Fair guests were given a special salute and performance by each of the participating groups as they passed in review. Certainly a spectacular and colorful program.

Ireland is famous for its crystal. Every piece is the product of rare craftsmanship and strict adherence to quality.

The same is true for Budweiser.

We brew our beer with the finest hops, rice, and barley malt. Then we age it with Beechwood, to aid the natural carbonation. The result is a clean, crisp taste that has been distinctively Budweiser's for over one hundred years.

STATE NEWS: Georgia Hibernians Flaunt Culture on Beach

By O. KAY JACKSON

Until you noticed the Irish flag and the medieval sandcastle, the group on the Back River beach at Tybee looked like any other group of picnickers. They were, in fact, members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and they were celebrating the feast day of St. Brendan, the patron saint of Irish seamen.

"The Irish may have been the first white men in America," said Hibernian President E. Graham Harold, his voice filled with Irish pride.

Known as "the navigator," St. Brendan is credited by some with having landed in America long before either Christopher Columbus or Leif Erickson. His epic, "The Odyssey of the Old Irish Church," dates from the 11th or 12 century and is found in all the great libraries of Europe.

In 1492 Columbus sailed to Galway to search out traditions and records of Brendan — a fact of record in the National Archives of Madrid. There also are names of Irishmen on the roster of the Santa Maria on its voyage to America, according to

"The Saints of Ireland."

In 1976-1977 a group of adventurers led by Tim Severin — to prove Irish monks could have been America's first European visitors — endured a rugged crossing from Ireland to America in a leather boat built to Brendan's specifications.

St. Brendan is one of 250 Irish saints and while not as well known here as Savannah's favorite St. Patrick, he is revered in Europe, Harold said.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, a national organization, is "the oldest Irish Catholic lay organization in the United States," Harold said, as he watched the sandcastle take shape.

Sculpted by John Mahoney, with assistance from other group members, the castle was a replica of Bunratty Castle "built by the O'Briens in the 15th Century," Harold said. Today Bunratty Castle is the site of medieval dances and dinners for 100 people at a time, Harold said, adding he had just returned from a visit there.

The castle builders worked to the sounds of taped Irish music ranging from traditional to modern, and the children in the group worked on their own castle under the watchful eyes of their mothers.

Beach walkers wandered up to see what was going on, giving the Hibernians a welcome chance to talk about Irish history.

"We want to exploit our culture," Harold said, smiling. "Seventeen presidents were of Irish decent, (as were) more winners of the Congressional Medal of Honor than any other ethnic group."

He also said the next generation of great artists and poets and writers "will be coming from Northern Ireland," because of the present turmoil there.

"Ireland has always had a sad history," Harold said.

Sunday's gathering was the second annual celebration of St. Brendan's Day by the group to "promote our heritage to the people." The Hibernians also are involved in charity work, Harold said.

SECOND ANNUAL Hibernian tribute to St. Brendan is visible on Savannah's Back Beach.

STATE NEWS: Florida

The quarterly Spring meeting of the Florida AOH State Board was held May 28 in Ft. Lauderdale, combining a business and social weekend in lieu of the "family gathering" originally planned. President Martin McAndrew and organizer Don Hartnett of host Division 1, Broward County, presented a most enjoyable weekend, made the more memorable because of the surprise attendance of National President Nick Murphy for the entire weekend activities.

Also attending the business meeting were State President Jack Boyle, presiding; National Director Tom Gilligan; State Vice President John Cullinan; State Chaplain Rev. Fr. Gerald Grace; State Secretary Bob Schneider; State Editor Nick Schneider; State Treasurer Eamon Quinn; State Director Al Murphy; Vice President Ed Nagle; Recording Secretary Don Fortune and Financial Secretary, Bill Maroney. From Brevard County Division 2 was John Barry, coordinator, and Dennis Fitzmaurice. From Pinellas County were Division 1 President Bob McNulty, Financial Secretary Mike Walsh and their newest member Mike Davis. From Pasco County Division 1 were President Tom Condon and his Christian Charity Program Director Frank O'Brien. From Manatee County Division 1, President Paul Finnerty, who is also a Past AOH State President from the State of Virginia.

On the agenda were remarks by Scott Hennenbird, of the Irish-American Unity Congress, who is working closely on passage of the MacBride Principles Bill. Matters of General Convention were discussed and resolved. Recruitment methods were discussed, with helpful suggestions. State activities were reviewed, with all divisions asked to contribute to a state lobbying fund.

National Director Tom Gilligan was unanimously endorsed to run for a second term at the Cleveland convention.

National President Murphy addressed the group, congratulating Tom for his progress in Florida on the MacBride Principles and offering interesting information about Ireland not available through regular news media.

A report of the weekend's fun activities followed, which included AOH and LAOH Hospitality Rooms on Friday evening. Mass followed by dinner and a dance on Saturday and a get-away brunch at the home of Don Hartnett on Sunday.

President Bob Carroll of Brevard County Division 2 reported signing up new members Earl P. Cross and John Jordan into the order. Pinellas County Division 1 introduced new member Mike Davis, a recent military retiree. The division announced the retirement of Chaplain Rev. Fr. Thomas Simcox, who is 80

Origin of the Feis In Ireland

Originally the Feis was a parliamentary assembly; to it came the provincial kings and nobility, chiefs, judges, doctors, poets, and bards of all Ireland. Thus were assembled in one place the living repositories of the Gaelic culture and tradition. Residences for them were maintained at Tara, and we can but imagine the pomp displayed and the protocol observed at their gatherings. Lengthy descriptions have been left of the order and procedure followed then, the attire of the important personages present, and the wisdom displayed in judgements handed down or laws enacted or amended.

Two of the great books of Ireland, the Book of Leinster and the Book of Ballymote, both contain descriptions of such an affair, and in them are references to music and musical events. As each king and chieftain worthy of the name had his own bard and harpist, we can imagine the competition among them for fame and adulation. Even the most prejudiced of foreign observers had nothing but praise for the musicians of the old Gaelic order and the melodies played.

Given the emotional nature and natural exuberance of the Irish, it is impossible to imagine that there was not also a proliferation of the terpsichorean arts, both among those devoted to it almost exclusively as well as those enjoying dances native to the people. Certain it is even today that there are features to dancing that are peculiarly and exclusively Irish, not found among the dances of any other people.

Of the arts and crafts, we need only point to such examples as the various great books still in existence (Kells, Leinster, Ballymote, etc.) and their glorious illuminations and ornamentations. The artistic treasures in precious metals found in chance diggings or in archeological excavations are vivid positive proof of the Gaelic eye for beauty in form and design. Apprentices in the various crafts were required to exhibit examples of their skills for approbation to achieve certification before they could practice them. (One of the earliest records of adjudication at a Feis!)

In the famous Book of the Four Masters is recorded the great Aonach or Feis, called by the then Ard Rhi of Ireland, Rory O'Connor. It was in 1169 A.D., the year of the Norman invasion of Ireland. It is worthy of note that the line of chariots carrying the king, nobility, and chieftains to the Feis stretched for a distance of six miles! One can imagine the press of the throng of the general public that attended this affair.

After 1169 A.D. began the eight-hundred-year assault on everything Gaelic and most especially its years old. The newest division, Manatee County Division 1 was proud to report reaching 28 members already and announced that Mike Hanlon, Irish Radio Show, now has an hour program on Sunday at 1, station WBVM 90.5. Pasco County Division 1 is making plans to participate in underwriting a new radio show in the Clearwater area, featuring Irish music.

State Editor Nick Schneider, 240 Eyre Ave., Merritt Island, 32953 again urged all divisions to send him news of their activities and to place him on their mailing lists.

It necessarily follows that the high order of the old Gaelic culture and its glorious traditions went into eclipse. In the recorded history of Ireland are found occasional glimpses of it. Particularly poignant are the lives and fortunes of those who labored to keep alive the old Gaelic Bardic tradition among a deprived and impoverished people. It is so obvious that the fragments remaining to us today are but a shadow of that rich and beautiful heritage.

Wherever in the world Irish people gather for a Feis today — be it ever so large, spectacular, and even beautiful — there persists that haunting memory of a splendid vanished glory.

Especially here in North America, few words would seem more appropriate than those of the New England poet, James Russell Lowell. In the closing stanza of his poem "Maud Muller," he reminds us:

"... Of all the sad words
Of mouth or pen,
The saddest are these —
It might have been."

OLD TIMERS in Watertown gather around tournament table.

OLD TIMERS POOL TOURNAMENT

WATERTOWN, MA — On Wednesday, May 18, the first Old Timers Invitational Pool Tournament was held here at Division 14 AOH. The Old Timers Tournament reunited many of the players of the mid 60s and early 70s who started the regular Wednesday night pool tournament twenty-three years ago.

Harold "Hacker" Martin, chairman of the Old Timers Invitational, spent many hours trying to locate the participants, many of whom have moved far away from the Watertown area. Among the returning players were Dick Thompson and Jack McDermott who were responsible for obtaining Division 14's two beautiful regulation-size pool tables. Other "old timers" included Jimmy McCarthy, Bill Gildea, Don McAdams, Dick Johnson, Arthur Griffin, Dave Bowler, Jack Connelly, Nick Americo, Ed Reardon, Jim Burns and Bob O'Reilly, as well as Owen Matthews, who came all the way from Auburn, Maine.

The regular three-game tournament got under way shortly after 8 P.M. It was soon apparent that the old timers had lost none of their skills. By 11 P.M., Bob O'Reilly and Jim Burns remained to fight it out, as the games ended in a tie. In the closely-contested play-off game, Bob O'Reilly edged out Jim Burns and was crowned champ for the evening.

Special thanks go to Dan McElroy who served as scorekeeper for the event. Trophies were awarded to champ Bob O'Reilly and runner-up Jim Burns. Owen Matthews received a special award.

Bill McLaughlin

At the conclusion of play, everyone enjoyed a fabulous buffet which was prepared and served by Brothers William Gildea and Jack Connolly. Irish chef Connolly specializes in Italian cooking. If you like Italian sausages, meatballs and ravioli, Jack is your chef.

The first Old Timers Tournament produced many moments of nostalgia as the "old timers" greeted each other after years of longing to return to the club and reminisced about the many happy times they have shared. Plans are already under way for another old timers night sometime next year.

To the "old timers," a special thanks for an enjoyable evening; and to our chairman "Hacker" Martin, who put this program together, a tip of the hat.

Hibernian Needs Help

AUBURN, NY — On behalf of a fellow Hibernian, the Craig Lewis Benefit Committee is seeking support in raising revenue for his pancreas-kidney transplant, scheduled for the University of Wisconsin at Madison. A pancreas transplant is still considered experimental and is being done in only a few areas of the country. The initial fee is ten thousand dollars; and there will be travel and additional expenses to defray.

Those interested in helping may send a donation to "The Craig Lewis Benefit Fund," c/o Mr. John Nican-dri, Cayuga County Savings Bank, 113 Genesee St., Auburn, New York 13021.

Committee Chairman is Christopher Byrne with Mrs. Joyce Cavasugh as co-chairman.

Recent North Irish History Is Micropublished

DUBLIN, IRELAND: European Micropublishing Services here, in conjunction with the Linen Hall Library, is publishing for the first time on fiche their unique collection of Northern Ireland Political Literature, according to G.E. Ryan, EMS director.

"This fiche project offers students, academics, journalists and other interested people the complete range of published material concerning the history of the present troubles in Northern Ireland," explained G.E. Ryan. "For the first time on fiche the Linen Hall Library's unique collection, painstakingly built up over two decades and comprising some 35,000 items from 1968-1985, is available to the public.

Phase One: Periodicals comprise some 2,000 fiche with approximately 500 individual titles. The major titles published by the myriad of political parties and parliamentary groups are complemented by community papers, local news sheets and small circulation "heavies." From the "Protestant Telegraph" to "An Phoblacht/Republican News," the whole spectrum of political opinion in Northern Ireland is covered.

To facilitate access to this invaluable archive, a computer index to the titles and holdings is included with each phase.

Phase Two of the project comprises the pamphlet output of the political parties, pressure groups, paramilitaries, church groups and individuals involved in politics in Northern Ireland since 1966.

"Phase Three comprises the very ephemeral but historically important publications of the troubles," added G.E. Ryan. "These include handbills, posters, stickers, Christmas Cards, postcards and other items. This material will also be available for sale."

This unique collection is also available to libraries and institutions and will add greatly to their effectiveness without creating major storage problems.

Council's First Lobby Day Meets with Great Success

NEW YORK, NY — The Council of Presidents announced that their first Lobby Day (May 11) of 1988 was a success beyond expectations. Michael Cummings, spokesman for the Council, stated, "The response by members of Congress and their staffs on both a personal and issues basis was overwhelmingly favorable." Messrs. Linnon (IAUC), Murphy (AOH), Finucane (AIPEC), Galvin (INA) and Ms. Hoffman (AP-TI), agreed that this dialogue should be continued and expanded and tentatively set the third week in September to schedule a Lobby Day II. "The Council," the spokesman continued, "expresses its gratitude for the time and attention to our efforts by Congressmen Borski, Manton, Kennedy, Donnelly, Gilman, Morrison, Hughes and Senator DeConcini and for the dedication and sacrifice of the members who lobbied."

Mr. Cummings noted that the issues discussed with the legislators included: the case of Joe Doherty; visa denial; the abuses of the International Fund for Ireland; the MacBride Principles; and immigration reform. Anyone wishing to join in the preparation and conduct of Lobby Day II should contact the member organizations.

AOH Public Relations

Platform Position on Ireland Urged by AOH National Board

The National Board of the AOH has released letters forwarded to the National Chairman of the Democratic and Republican parties. "The National Board," a spokesman stated, "and indeed most of the major Irish-American organizations view the absence of dialogue on the Irish conflict as tantamount to four more years of indifference to anti-Catholic employment discrimination, official murder and mayhem, plastic bullets, state of siege powers and continued waste of American taxes used to reinforce partition."

Mike Cummings, Director of Public Relations for the Board, noted that "too often America's position on the Irish conflict is dictated by a foreign policy elite of corporate, academic and diplomatic representatives wholly within the grip of England's vast influence in America."

Mr. Cummings concluded, "Americans of Irish descent cannot and will not be denied a voice in defining the problem and its solution as the MacBride Principles in twelve States will attest. We hope the Party Chairmen will recognize that a failure to include the policy position adopted by the major organizations will result in disfavor at the polls and in some cases may represent the margin of victory of defeat."

several public demonstrations. I have come to the conclusion that unless you can put in excess of 100,000 people on the street, the media will ignore you.

Our most effective efforts to further Freedom for All Ireland will continue to be fought in the halls of Congress. It will continue to be our task and duty to educate Congress, to educate them to the reality that Irish Freedom is in the interest of the United States and the North Atlantic community, to educate them particularly to the realization that Peace with Justice and Honor is possible only in a re-united sovereign Irish Republic, an Ireland which fulfills the bright dream of the Men of 1916.

We have worked diligently for the release of Joe Doherty who is in his 6th year of incarceration in the N.Y. Federal House of Detention. He has committed no crime. Yet the justice department is still trying to extradite him to Britain. When a new Attorney General comes before the Judiciary Committee of the Senate we should do everything in our power to see that the Joe Doherty issue is dealt with.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of public relations. To this end we have made a start in correcting our deficiencies in this area. Several months ago we issued a Public Relations Guide to all Division Presidents. This booklet, ably prepared by Jack Flatley, is an excellent guide to dealing with the media. Basically it encourages each Division on a regular basis to visit its local radio, T.V. or newspapers and discuss with them issues of concern to Hibernians, both nationally and internationally.

Several months ago our Public Relations Director Mike Cummings and I visited the New York Times on two occasions. We met with the foreign editors and the Editorial Board. We pointed out to them their lack of in-depth coverage on news from Northeast Ireland, as well as the obvious bias in most of their stories. I believe these visits have had a tremendous effect on the Times, for recently we have seen several substantial and balanced articles in that paper.

We considered the Times effort a pilot project — just to see if it would make a difference. I assure you that it did. Therefore I would recommend to our next President that we follow through with the same approach to the major moulders of public opinion in the U.S. — namely the Washington Post, Boston Globe, Los Angeles Times, etc. Right now these editors are only hearing one side of the story on N.I. and that comes from the British information service. It is up to the AOH to supply the true story.

In closing I would like to thank all Hibernians throughout the country for their tremendous support and for the courtesies extended to me as I travelled to your home territories. I would like to thank the members of the National Board for their help and cooperation — I believe each member of our board performed to the best of his ability. As in all boards there are the few who work long and painful hours in virtual obscurity and I would like to recognize these people — Mike Cummings, our P.R. Director; it is not unusual to call Mike on a Saturday night and be informed by his sainted wife that he can be reached in his office building working on some AOH project at 11 p.m.; Dave Henshaw, our National Editor; Jack Irwin, Mike Hession and of course Tom McNabb, Joe Roche and many others. Thank you all very much.

I would like to thank all who wrote and called encouraging me to seek another term. It is because my personal situation does not permit me to continue to devote the same level of intensity of effort that I reluctantly have declined to seek another term as your National President. This does not mean that I intend to retire from Hibernian activity, nor that I will be unavailable for service to the National Board. But, to another must fall the opportunity to serve as National President for the next term. Fortunately, there is no shortage of talent in our Order, which makes my decision a little bit easier. In fact, one of our great strengths over a century

Kevin's father is a Sinn Féin activist while Brendan's father led the 1980 hunger strike in Long Kesh. Kevin was shot three times by loyalist para-militaries when he was 18-months old.

William Bennett, the Kid From Brooklyn

By HARRY MCGUIRK

William Bennett is the United States Secretary for Education, appointed by President Ronald Reagan. As a child Bennett lived in Brooklyn, where he attended Holy Cross School on Church Avenue. The boy's school was under the direction of the Xaverian Brothers and the girl's school was directed by the Sisters of St. Joseph.

At the present time Sister Eileen Gildea, a Josephite, is principal. She is concluding her 11th year and is moving on to Mary Louis Academy in Jamaica where she will take up the post of vice principal. Sister Eileen was in charge the day the U.S. secretary for Education decided to "Come to Brooklyn" to visit his old school and a teacher he remembered from his school days, Margaret Brennan (McGuirk).

His presidential style arrival with police escort was a memorable day for Brooklyn and for Holy Cross Parish. Here was one of President Reagan's closest associates in the cabinet, a registered Democrat, to boot, making a sentimental journey to boost the morale of the faculty and the student body. He was a big hit with the students. They still ask about him.

William Bennett is Irish American and proud of it. He is a Catholic and loves his faith and upholds it. Being a top ranking member of the United States government didn't separate him from the ordinary people. In his childhood days, like many other American kids, he sported and played in the Rockaways during the hot summers of long ago. As a career he was a teacher and still maintains the role of educator.

outspoken about his ideas for change and progress in the United States education system. He believes that assistance should be given to parents who prefer their children to attend religious or parochial schools. He maintains that this is a freedom of choice. His belief is that all should have civil rights.

William Bennett is a real person living in the real world. It is not unusual for him to visit the poorest school districts in America and to take over a class for a day. Children seem to respond to him instantly. The President made no mistake when he chose Bennett who is, in fact, a human dynamo.

On national television one morning he was told by the presenter that his name is constantly being mentioned as the preferential choice of George Bush for vice president on the Republican line. He has been a

Wall St. Work Experience for Irish Graduates

KILLARNEY, IRELAND: Three graduates from St. Brendan's College here will be at the center of an innovative new exchange program designed to boost the future of the financial services industry in Ireland. Beginning next October, each of the three will spend 18 months in New York working for a leading Wall Street firm while continuing their formal education at New York's Institute of Finance.

"By exporting three of our brightest and most ambitious young people to New York for 18 months, we hope to import technical knowledge and, of equal importance, a spirit of entrepreneurship to Ireland upon their return," explains Denis P. Kelleher, chief executive officer (CEO) of Wall Street Clearing Company and originator of the program.

"Unique in international terms" is how Mr. Dermot Desmond of National and City Brokers describes the program. "It is a fantastic opportunity and will be of enormous value to any participant."

Mr. Desmond, whose idea it was to develop the International Financial Services Centre in Dublin, says of the St. Brendan's Wall Street Work Experience Programme that "it is highly relevant in terms of the development now taking place in registered Republican for the past two years. Bennett responded by saying that he would be honored to serve his country, but stated that he does not anticipate this to happen.

What a pity if America's children should lose a champion. Whatever he does in life we congratulate William Bennett for services he has rendered to his country and wish him continued success.

Ireland."

"This is a very special opportunity for a young man to further his business career" is the reaction of the Rev. Daniel O'Riordan, president of St. Brendan's College.

Mr. Kelleher, a native of Gneeveguilla and a graduate of St. Brendan's says the program has been designed to give the students a total business experience in a short period of time. "Our goal is to expose them to all areas of the business they work for, as well as to the decision-makers to see how things really work," he explains. "This type of hands-on, in-house training is only available in the United States and is at least as valuable as any classroom training."

Mr. Kelleher has arranged positions with Automatic Data Processing Co. (ADP), the leading data processing organization, with Moore & Schley, a retail brokerage firm, and with his own firm, Wall Street Clearing Co., a leading provider of clearing and execution services.

"The key in selecting these firms is that they provide services that will be essential in building the financial service industry in Dublin," Kelleher adds. "Our hope is that after the interns have completed their two years, they will return with the knowledge and entrepreneurial spirit to get something started and generate employment."

The intern working with ADP will gain an understanding of how a data center is run; how the systems, programming and operations come together.

THE IRISH SUBMARINE

The free world relies with confidence on the U.S. Navy's nuclear submarines armed with powerful Polaris ballistic missiles capable of destroying an enemy anywhere in the world while remaining undetected in the depths of the seas. Over the years our Submarine Force has been out on the picket line, always vigilant, always ready to defend our precious liberty. The heroics of our WWII submariners helped destroy an enemy's ability to fight that war. Since the early days of this century the U.S. Navy's Submarine Force has been one of our bulwarks of freedom.

It all started on May 22, 1878 when the first successful submarine was launched in the Passaic River at Patterson, New Jersey, studios and designed and built by an Irishman from the seaside village of Liscannor in County Clare, close by the Cliffs of Mohr. John Philip Holland was a true genius; a mathematician and teacher; a dreamer and a doer. Most interestingly, he was an Irish patriot, and the drive behind his remarkable endeavors can be traced to his deep feelings for Ireland and for the suffering Irish people of that era. He was born in 1841 and died in 1914. In those 73 years of his busy life he created, in his mind, a powered flying machine, and his underwater miracle. Both designs were futuristic for his day.

John Holland, the elder, was an Irish Coastguardman who came to Liscannor from Killkee in 1831. His first wife, Ann, died in 1835. He remarried a local Liscannor girl, Mary Scanlon, and had 4 children: Alfred, John Philip, Robert (who died of cholera at age 2 years), and Michael Joseph.

John Philip attended local primary school and then went to the Christian Brothers schools at Ennistymon in Clare, and also at Limrick. He completed his education and later taught at the Christian Brothers school at Ennistymon. During his early years he experimented with submersible devices and discovered, during that time, his basic concept for depth control.

Holland emigrated to the U.S. in November, 1873, and first settled in Boston. He was invited to Paterson, New Jersey, by Father Whalen to teach mathematics at St. John's Parochial School. Since his first design was offered to the U.S. Navy in 1875, it is obvious that the submarine design concept originated in Ireland. The Navy rejected his first proposal; it was thought to be an absurd folly.

It was the Irish Republic Brotherhood and the Fenian Society who came up with the money for the Holland #1 boat from their "Skirmishing Fund," which was administered by Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa, the great Irish patriot. O'Donovan Rossa was hoping for a weapon to use against the English. Another prominent Fenian of that time promoting Holland was John J. Breslin.

The Holland #1 boat was only 14 feet long, but contained all the elements of subsurface operation we know today. This amazing craft ran submerged for 1 hour at 3 1/2 miles per hour during trials. Because of design security reasons Holland removed all usable equipment and secretly scuttled #1 in the Passaic River (it was later raised in 1927 and is now on exhibition with Boat #2, the Fenian Ram, in the Paterson Museum on Market Street, Paterson, New Jersey).

Holland's next submarine, #2, the Fenian Ram, was built with visions of attacking the British Fleet in home waters. The Fenians and the Irish Republican Brotherhood financed #2 and it was launched in May, 1881. It was 31 feet long and was manned by a crew of 3. Holland cruised the lower bay of New York harbor submerged in the Fenian Ram for as long as 2 1/2 hours many times. It was a neat trim craft and was operationally successful. After a dispute with Holland over lengthy testing schedules the impatient Fenians stole the Fenian Ram and brought it to New Haven, Connecticut. It was eventually returned to Paterson and is now on display. Walking up and touching this Irish treasure in the Paterson Museum is an historic thrill for any Hibernian.

Holland went on with new designs; the Fenian Model (#3) launched in 1883; the Zalinski Boat (#4) named after Edward Zalinski, an artillery officer who supplied Holland with his pneumatic dynamite gun — launched in 1885; the Plunger (#5) in 1887, the first Navy submarine; finally, the U.S.S. Holland design, SS1, (#6) also in 1887. Several Hollands (#6) were built and all were tested in Peconic Bay, Long Island, New York, at the town of New Suffolk, far from prying eyes.

Holland went on to establish the Electric Boat Company at Groton, Connecticut. Electric Boat currently builds the modern nuclear submarines of today's Navy, based on Holland's concepts. John Holland was unique because he not only designed the submarine hull and all its functional features, but he also meticulously designed all the complex internal operating equipment. Early Holland designs included automatic depth control and an ingenious auto-pilot for navigation. His ideas were so revolutionary for his time that many learned people, especially the Navy brass, could not comprehend this radical new underwater weapon. Fortunately for Holland, Admiral William W. Kimball, a leading Naval officer, was his advocate, and became his life long friend.

John Holland was plagued with rheumatism in his late years. Always nearsighted, he lived his last days in Paterson, New Jersey, studious and keen-brained, always pursuing the limits of his imagination. His first love was the flying machine design he created in his younger days in Ireland. His studies in aerodynamics presaged his later investigations in submarine hydrodynamics.

Holland designed submarines for the Japanese Empire during the Russo-Sino war of 1905. He also designed a successful submarine escape respirator in 1904. This design was adopted by the U.S. Navy 25 years later.

It always surprises many Irish-American people to learn about John Philip Holland. He certainly deserves a more prominent place in American history. His futuristic technological ideas of a century ago have given our country a decisive edge in the cold war of today.

America Should Agitate For Irish Human Rights

Why do the British seem to keep punching holes in the spirit if not the fabric of the fragile 2-year old Anglo-Irish agreement? They've given the appearance lately of losing no opportunity to offend Irish Catholics north and south of the border on the sensitive subject of security in Northern Ireland.

First came word a month ago of a highly questionable decision not to prosecute Northern Ireland policemen involved in an unofficial "shoot to kill" policy allegedly applied to suspected Irish nationalist guerrillas. Then a British appeals court denied a petition to quash 13-year old convictions and life sentences against six Irishmen for pub bombings that many Irish passionately believe, and possibly tainted evidence suggests, that they did not commit.

Afterwards, Britain acknowledged plans to make permanent the "temporary" provisions of the 1974 Prevention of Terrorism Act that allows police to hold terrorism suspects incommunicado — for up to seven days. The act is seen as an instrument of harassment against the one million Irish citizens residing in Britain.

Another uproar centered around British non-compliance with Irish legal requirements for extradition. As if there weren't enough strain in recent days a young Catholic election worker was shot dead at a British army checkpoint. And it was disclosed that a British soldier is back in the army just three years after being jailed for life for killing an unarmed Catholic on a Belfast street.

The result of all this is further erosion of confidence in Britain's administration of justice, poisonous effects on cooperative arrangements with Ireland and serious questions about human-rights violations. Some plain talk from Washington, which doesn't hesitate to criticize abuses elsewhere, might help London see matters more clearly in Belfast.

Opposing Religious Discrimination In Northern Ireland

FIGHTING DISCRIMINATION

There is Widespread Religious Discrimination in Northern Ireland, Directed Against The Catholic Community

This is not denied by reasonable people. Accordingly, in this booklet we are not concerned with detailing the evidence of discrimination, although some facts are shown in an appendix. Instead, we concentrate on the efforts being made to oppose it by trade unionists in Ireland, Britain, the USA and elsewhere. Specifically, we are anxious to demonstrate the unity of purpose to the efforts being made to oppose it by trade unionists in Ireland, Britain, the USA and elsewhere. Specifically, we are anxious to demonstrate the unity of purpose to the efforts being made to oppose it by trade unionists in Ireland, Britain, the USA and elsewhere.

Discrimination against any person or group is wrong. It also poisons society as a whole and nowhere is this more obvious than in Northern Ireland. It must be rooted out. Its elimination would have further benefits. Against a background of high unemployment and social deprivation, religious discrimination and bigotry have been used to divide workers and paralyse the Labour Movement. This has been recognised by the trade union movement in Northern Ireland, which has called for equal opportunities for all.

A Divided Or United Campaign?

Some trade unionists in Ireland and Britain have been campaigning against the McBride Principles, which are concerned with religious discrimination in Northern Ireland, and they have gone to the USA to argue against them at State Legislatures.

This is a Mistaken Campaign, Which Does Not Represent The View Of The Majority In The Irish Trade Union Movement. Specifically, It Does Not Concur With The Policy Of The Irish Congress Of Trade Unions (ICTU).

At the Annual Conference of ICTU, held in Cork in July 1987, motions on the McBride Principles were remitted to the Executive Committee. The executive subsequently took no action on the motions, so Congress has NO position, either for or against the McBride Principles. The Annual Conference did adopt a strong statement on religious discrimination in Northern Ireland, which particularly emphasised the need for the early enactment of effective legislation by the British Government.

There is Therefore No Contradiction Or Conflict Between The Policy Of ICTU And The Campaign On The McBride Principles. Each has the same purpose — the ending of the widespread and obnoxious practice of religious discrimination. Instead, They Complement Each Other.

THE McBRIDE PRINCIPLES

The McBride Principles were drafted by the late Sean McBride, first chairperson of Amnesty International. The campaign around them has mainly been in the USA and requires companies investing in Northern Ireland to implement the following fair employment practices:

1. Increasing the representation of individuals from underrepresented religious groups in the workforce including managerial, supervisory, administrative, clerical and technical jobs.

2. Adequate security for the protection of minority employees both at the workplace and while travelling to and from work.

3. The banning of provocative religious or political emblems from the workplace.

4. All job openings should be publicly advertised and special recruitment efforts should be made to attract applicants from under-represented religious groups.

5. Layoff, recall, and termination procedures should not in practice, favour particular religious groupings.

6. The abolition of job reservations, apprenticeship restrictions and differential employment criteria, which discriminate on the basis of religion or ethnic origin.

7. The development of training programs that will prepare substantial numbers of current minority employees for skilled jobs, including the expansion of existing programs and the creation of new programs to train, upgrade, and improve the skills of minority employees.

8. The establishment of procedures to assess, identify and actively recruit minority employees with potential for further advancement.

9. The appointment of a senior management staff member to oversee the company's affirmative action efforts and the setting up of timetables to carry out affirmative action principles.

THE DEMAND OF ICTU

The ICTU document, adopted in July 1987, called on the British Government to:

- (a) extend to private sector employers the proposed statutory duty on public employers to promote equality of opportunity;

- (b) require all employers to monitor their workforces;

- (c) extend the proposed requirements to a larger number of companies by reducing the proposed 50 employee cut-off point as far as possible, thus making any exclusions as limited as possible;

- (d) extend the proposed scheme of assistance for the introduction of monitoring arrangements to public sector as well as private sector employers;

- (e) strengthen the Fair Employment Act as follows:

- (i) The legislation should be changed to ensure that appeals against FEA decisions on discrimination in individual cases should only be allowable on points of law. This would bring the law into line with, amongst other matters, the unfair dismissal legislation which is not dissimilar in concept to dealing with unfair rejection for appointment or promotion.

- (ii) The Agency should have the right to promote voluntary but binding agreements with employers. Failure to honour the agreements should lead to the Agency issuing directions.

- (iii) The Agency should have the power to amend its directives in the light of experience without being required to pursue a second complete investigation.

- (iv) The legislation should be amended to allow for individual remedy where discrimination against individuals is uncovered during a 'pattern of employment' investigation carried out under Part 2 of the Act.

- (v) Where an investigation shows undue concentration of persons from one section of the community in low-paid or low-skill jobs whilst persons from the other section are over-concentrated in skilled, supervisory or managerial positions, this should be prima facie evidence of failure to promote equality of opportunity as defined in the Fair Employment Act.

(vi) The legislation should provide for groups which have a legitimate third-party interest to initiate complaints to the FEA and to have the right to seek remedies, especially remedies such as the elimination of barriers to equality and the ending of indirect discriminatory practices.

OBJECTIONS TO THE McBRIDE PRINCIPLES

Given the common objective of these demands and the McBride Principles, it is difficult to understand the opposition to the Principles from a section of Irish Trade Unionists. This becomes more inexplicable when one examines the arguments they use. Let us consider some of these.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR ENDING THIS DISCRIMINATION RESTS WITH THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT AND NOT WITH AN IRISH-AMERICAN LOBBY.

Obviously, responsibility for enacting corrective legislation lies with the British Government. However, Americans (the same applies to other nationalities) are entitled to decide the basis on which American overseas investment takes place, and this is the purpose of the McBride Principles. Taking the "anti" argument to its logical conclusion, international solidarity would not exist and there would be no international campaign against South Africa, for example. The Botha Government would be let get on with abolishing apartheid!

THE McBRIDE PRINCIPLES ARE NOT ABOUT CREATING EXTRA JOBS, BUT REDISTRIBUTING EXISTING ONES.

This is a poor argument. The civil rights movement in the United States was not about creating more jobs and wealth. It was, and is, about a fairer distribution of the existing wealth in society. The civil rights movement in Northern Ireland, including the Fair Employment Agency, has a similar function. On the other hand, the trade union movement has the task of pressurising the Government to create more jobs. In the meantime, existing jobs and those coming on stream must be fairly distributed.

In a statement issued on 2nd March 1988, Kevin McNamara, the Labour Party Principal Spokesperson on Northern Ireland, said:

"We share the Government's commitment to job creation, but we cannot accept that progress towards fair employment must be delayed until there are more jobs. There are, on the Government's own figures, more than 100,000 job changes in Northern Ireland every year. The complete failure to take on board paragraph 4.33 of the SACHR report looks suspiciously like a cop-out."

Paragraph 4.33 of the report on Fair Employment by the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights reads:

"The Commission does not accept, however, that where employment is static or declining that it is wrong or pointless to seek to promote equality of opportunity. Where employment opportunities are scarce, it may be more difficult but it is all the more important that they be distributed fairly. Even where there is no employment growth, it is possible to make important progress toward equality of opportunity. The Department of Economic Development has pointed to the substantial number of job changes which occur in Northern Ireland every year. In addition, although overall there may be few additional employment opportunities, there are several sectors of the economy which are growing in Northern Ireland, particularly the service sector. In sectors where there is little growth this should not become an excuse for inaction, but should signal a redoubling of efforts."

THE McBRIDE PRINCIPLES CAMPAIGN LEADS TO DISINVESTMENT

First, there is no evidence that this has happened. But even if it was true, is it a valid argument? The trade union movement does not support investment at any price. If we were to abandon working conditions fought for over two centuries, investment would flow in and Ireland would have more sweat shops than Hong Kong! It is indeed strange to find trade unionists arguing against fair employment practices on the grounds that to insist on them threatens investment.

OBJECTIONS TO SPECIFIC McBRIDE PRINCIPLES

It has been argued that some of the Principles involve quotas and would therefore be contrary to the Fair Employment Act in Northern Ireland. This untruth has been peddled by the British Embassy in the USA. It has been effectively answered by the Rt. Hon. Peter Archer, Q.C.M.P., who was Solicitor General in the United Kingdom Government from 1974 to 1979, when the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act was passed. He has stated that the McBride Principles would not contravene the Fair Employment Act.

On May 12th 1987, the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York ruled that American companies operating in Northern Ireland would not violate the Fair Employment Act if they operated the Principles.

THE McBRIDE PRINCIPLES CAMPAIGN

The McBride Principles have been enacted in a number of states in the USA, including Philadelphia, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey and Massachusetts, with legislation pending in other states. Support for them is considerable, including from the AFL-CIO, the US equivalent of ICTU or the British TUC. A result of this has been to exert pressure in the British Government and to stimulate public interest in the subject. This was acknowledged by Kevin McNamara in a submission made in December 1987, a response to a British Government discussion document. He stated:

"The McBride Principles have played a role in putting equality of opportunity between the two main communities in Northern Ireland on the political agenda. The Principles embody the type of affirmative action which I regard as necessary if unacceptable levels of inequality of opportunity are to be reduced. Indeed they embody sentiments with which no person could disagree."

WHY TRADE UNION OPPOSITION?

We can understand the British Government's opposition to the McBride Principles. But why are they opposed by some Belfast trade unionists? The central trade union body in Ireland, ICTU, is not against them. It is widely accepted that the campaign around the Principles has assisted in highlighting the evil of religious discrimination in Northern Ireland and we have demonstrated that the arguments used against the Principles are illogical. So why the opposition?

We can only conclude that the trade unionists in question, while sincere in their opposition to discrimination, would prefer to see the issue played lowkey, for fear of antagonizing their Protestant members. Hence opposition to "campaigning", preferring instead to lobby by the British Government. This explains the "leave it to the British Government" argument. Naturally, we are sympathetic to the complexities facing the trade union movement in Northern Ireland, but overriding these, is the bigger issue of equal rights. Demanding equality for Catholic Workers must be faced up to and not relegated to the realms of diplomacy. The Irish Trade Union Movement was built on the slogan "an injury to one is the concern of all" and the tradition of the movement is entirely contrary to placing difficult issues on the back burner.

A UNITED EFFORT

There is one weakness in the McBride Principles campaign, viewed from Dublin, Belfast or London. They make no direct demand on the British Government and perhaps they were taken up as a campaigning issue too mechanically on this side of the Atlantic. We should not attempt to reproduce the USA campaign. Instead we should see the work in Ireland and Britain against religious discrimination as running in tandem with the McBride Principles campaign in the United States. The more effective the latter is, the greater the pressure on the British Government to enact legislation.

This is the explanation for the extraordinary efforts of the British Embassy in Washington in opposing the McBride Principles. No expense has been spared, including bringing out individuals from Northern Ireland to testify against the Principles. This expensive campaign would not have been mounted unless they were worried about international pressure on them to tackle seriously discrimination in Northern Ireland. They are especially sensitive to pressure from their main international ally, the USA.

It is Therefore Mistaken For Irish (And British) Trade Unionists To Attack The McBride Principles. If We Sincerely Wish To See The Demands Of ICTU Being Realised, We Should Give Every Support And Encouragement To The Campaign In The USA And Internationally, Which Has The Same Objective.

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT'S PROPOSALS

On March 2nd 1988, the British Government published new anti-discrimination proposals. The fact that they were compelled to do so, is a tribute to the pressure on them, domestically, in Ireland and internationally. However, apart from the fact that their proposals will not become law for at least two years, they are inadequate. The Northern Ireland Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights (SACHR) published a detailed report in 1987. Many of its recommendations are not included in the current British proposals.

Catholic men are two and a half times as likely to be unemployed as Protestant men in Northern Ireland. SACHR recommended that the British Government should adopt a performance indicator to measure achievement and suggested the target of reducing this differential to one and a half times within five years. The British Government has refused to do this. The statement issued by Kevin McNamara on 2nd March 1988, referred to earlier, also stated:

"The Government has signally failed to take on board a number of crucial policies and detailed measures recommended in the SACHR report and urged on it repeatedly by the Labour Party; trade unions and other bodies committed to equality of opportunity in Northern Ireland.

The most worrying issue is its neglect to specify a target and a timetable for the reduction of the 2 1/2 times greater Catholic male unemployment rate compared with Protestant male unemployment. It has refused to accept the modest target and timetable proposed by SACHR."

Dr. Christopher McCrudden, a Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, and a member of SACHR, in The Irish Times on 9th March 1988, wrote in detail on deficiencies in the British Government's proposals. These included the failure to accept a target and timetable, and he stated that "progress towards fair employment cannot be delayed until there is more investment." He then listed as another shortcoming, the proposal that the responsibility to provide equality of opportunity and the power to engage in affirmative action will be detailed to a Code of Practice, to be prepared after the legislation has been enacted, instead of being in the legislation itself.

THE WAY FORWARD

In summary, we would make the following points:

1. There is widespread religious discrimination in Northern Ireland.
2. It has been condemned by the Irish trade union movement.
3. Early and strong legislation must be enacted by the British Government. This has been demanded by the Irish Congress of Trade Unions and by sections of the Trade Union & Labour Movement in Britain and the USA.
4. These demands and the campaign on the McBride Principles has moved the British Government but...
5. The British Government has not moved far enough, soon enough.

Accordingly, Pressure On The British Government Must Be Increased. The Campaign Must Be Stepped Up. This Means That Those Who Wish To See The Ending Of Discrimination Should Work Together.

- This requires an end to opposition from trade union sources to the McBride Principles and an acceptance that the campaign in support of them, especially in the USA, is progressive, contributes to the overall effort to compel the British Government into action, and is therefore a valuable adjunct to achieving the demands of the Irish Congress of Trade Unions.

- The debate at the ICTU conference in 1987, on religious discrimination in Northern Ireland and the adoption of the report prepared by the Northern Ireland Committee, marked a new phase in the on-going efforts of Congress to secure the trade union demand of fair play for all. The campaign must be developed.

- In Britain, within the Trade Union & Labour Movement, there is a growing realisation of the problem of religious discrimination in Northern Ireland. Further demands on the British Government from within Britain are essential.

- Internationally, we must increase the awareness that religious discrimination exists in Northern Ireland and calls on the British Government should be sought.

ADDENDA

Facts On Discrimination
A 1987 study by the independent London-based Policy Studies Institute, revealed that in Northern Ireland Catholic men were two and a half times as likely to be unemployed as Protestant men and that religion was a major factor in this differential unemployment rate.

In December 1985, the Belfast magazine "Fortnight", published the following figures of unemployment.

Male
Catholic	17.3%	30.2%	38.40%
Protestant	6.6%	12.4%	18.20%
Female
Catholic	7.0%	17.1%	18.19%
Protestant	3.6%	9.6%	11.12%

Figures from Fair Employment Agency reports of some major employers show the following:

SHORTS 7,000 workers, 400 Catholics - 5%
1,000 fitters, between 4% and 8.5% Catholic MACKIES 1,000 tradesmen, 10% Catholic
SCOTTS 100% non-Catholic
STC Of the 69 most skilled workers, only 6 were Catholic SIROCCO Of the 195 most skilled workers, only 32 were Catholic

The New York City Comptroller, Harrison J. Goldin, visited Northern Ireland in June 1985. In presenting his 42 page report in New York on 5th February 1986, he stated:

"We have documented meticulously a pervasive and systematic problem of discrimination in employment against the Irish Catholic minority in Northern Ireland. What we found is that pitifully few Catholics are employed, they are employed in menial and low-level jobs, they do not secure advancement opportunities, they are not adequately trained and they are treated poorly, like second class citizens."

Downey Decries Meese Decision

Congressman Thomas J. Downey (D-NY), a member of the Ad Hoc Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs, released the following statement on Attorney General Edwin Meese's decision to extradite an Irish political prisoner to Britain:

"Mr. Speaker, I rise today to protest the decision of Attorney General Edwin Meese III that Mr. Joseph Doherty should be deported to the United Kingdom and not to Ireland.

"Attorney General Meese, in making this ruling, admits that he is doing it at the behest of the Government of the United Kingdom. Now, ordinarily I would agree that we ought to accommodate our allies, especially when they are as devoted to our interests as Mrs. Thatcher has been, but this accommodation to Mrs. Thatcher comes at some expense to our own judicial and constitutional process.

"In several instances U.S. courts have ruled in favor of Mr. Doherty, but that apparently makes no difference to Mr. Meese, who holds English wishes above U.S. rights.

"Specifically, Mr. Doherty faces deportation for having entered the U.S. illegally after fleeing a British jail where he was held for killing a British soldier in Ulster. Mr. Doherty has been held in U.S. jails for five years without having been brought to court for violating any U.S. law. Saturday of this week, June 18, will mark the fifth anniversary of Mr. Doherty's extraordinary incarceration. Mr. Speaker, I should note here that Bishop John McGann, of the Diocese of Rockville Centre, and Cardinal John O'Connor, of the Archdiocese of New York, have both expressed their strong concern about Mr. Doherty's continued detention.

"Mr. Meese had already tried to have Mr. Doherty extradited to Britain, but he failed in that effort to please Mrs. Thatcher when a U.S. District Court held that Mr. Doherty's actions were covered by the political offenses exception in the extradition treaty between the U.S. and the United Kingdom.

"At this time, Mr. Doherty has a motion requesting political asylum pending before the Board of Immigration Appeals. Now you know, Mr. Speaker, that if he were an Afghan mujaheddin, a Cuban or a contra, Mr. Doherty would be granted asylum at the drop of a hat. But Mr. Meese does not want that to happen and so he is moving heaven and earth to have Mr. Doherty sent to England.

"Mr. Speaker, I strongly protest the continued detention of Mr. Doherty and I urge the Attorney General to reconsider his decision on Mr. Doherty's deportation. It is time to uphold the decisions of U.S. courts and to remind Mrs. Thatcher, politely but firmly, that our legal system is not to be trifled with."

Senator Speaks Out Against Inequality in North Ireland

By J. SCOTT ORR
Star-Ledger Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Sen. Frank Lautenberg (D-NJ) wants to make sure U.S. assistance to Northern Ireland is not being used to perpetuate discrimination against the Catholic minority there.

In a telephone interview from Belfast, Lautenberg said he will use his position as a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee to look into the use of $120 million in U.S. funds that goes to an international fund to help improve the economy of Northern Ireland.

"There are terrible problems with the economy of Northern Ireland and I want to make sure that that money is being used as effectively as possible and that it's not being used to further discrimination," Lautenberg said.

"I was always concerned about Northern Ireland," Lautenberg said. He added that "every group in the state and in the country feels they are not getting quick enough responses."

During the three-day visit to Belfast and Londonderry, Lautenberg, Coleman and Berry met with government officials, nationalists who favor uniting Ireland and Unionists who support continuing the existing arrangement with the British.

In addition to the problems caused by the split over government and religion, Lautenberg said the economy of Northern Ireland is in very bad shape and that unemployment is rampant.

"Unemployment is very high, especially for Catholics who have an unemployment rate 2½ times higher than the Protestant majority. Where Protestant unemployment is at 30 percent, for Catholics it may be 80 percent," he said.

"The Catholic community gets the short end of the stick in almost all cases. They need help desperately," Lautenberg added.

He said he supports the MacBride principles, modeled on the Sullivan principles for investment in South Africa, that establish anti-discrimination conditions for U.S. corporations operating in Northern Ireland. New Jersey already has passed legislation embracing the MacBride principles.

"We hope the senator will support legislation in the Senate that will ensure that U.S. companies do not support discrimination and that U.S. tax dollars do not go to perpetuate the system here," said Coleman.

Coleman added that the New Jersey Irish American Unity Conference does not support the violence that has been a part of the struggles between Catholics and Protestants.

"Neither side has an exclusive on violence," Lautenberg said, adding that he noted the presence of heavily armed police and military personnel in the streets of Belfast.

"The principal thing for me to do when I get back to the U.S. is to do whatever I can to help combat discrimination and to do those things to try and balance the equation," Lautenberg said.

FREEDOM FOR ALL IRELAND

British Justice Is Flawed

FR. DENIS FAUL
FR. RAYMOND MURRAY

In this pamphlet we examine the ways in which Irish people suspected of political offences are treated in England and the lack of safeguards that exists there.

PRE-CHARGE

Prior to charge, the Prevention of Terrorism Act allows for detention for the purpose of questioning for up to 7 days. Hundreds of cases are on record where detainees have suffered serious psychological damage as a result. The European Commission on Human Rights has within the last 4 months held the workings of the PTA to be in breach of the Convention. Since that decision there has been no attempt to remedy English practice. Solicitors have experienced large numbers of clients suffering from mental illness following detention, including one man having committed suicide.

PREJUDICIAL PUBLICITY

The period of 7 days detention is invariably used by police press departments to produce maximum prejudicial publicity until the moment they are committed to either charging or release. The recent example of 3 young Irish people charged with conspiring to murder Tom King is a typical case; the publicity has one effect, to prejudice the outcome of the eventual trial.

Were extradition proceedings to be implemented in the Irish Republic there is little doubt but the entire period would be used to run adverse and inadmissible copy in the English press until the arrival of the suspect in England.

COURT APPEARANCES

Appearances at court act as an extension of the prejudicial melodrama affecting the outcome of the case, taking over from the moment at which the case ostensibly becomes "sub-judice."

In the case of the 3 young Irish people charged in Wiltshire, their remand appearances are not even being heard in a court, but in a police station designated as an occasional court. There is not even a pretence at normality. Helicopters fly overhead, screaming sirens herald appearances and all local people (from whom juries will be drawn) talk of the "terrorists". In the Wiltshire case one sole lay magistrate (rather than the normal 3) is sitting and we have been told that her colleagues are either too frightened to appear or know Tom King.

At both remand appearances and at trial there are heavily armed police who pose for the press in military outfits and armed with double pump action shot guns. In the case of Dr. Maire O'Shea, an elderly woman charged with conspiring to cause explosions, even the court administrator conceded that the security had gone completely mad in its extravagance. The police blew up a car parked in the wrong place near the court and the lawyers had even the cheese in their sandwiches at lunch time poked through by police. Such an absurd bullet proof screen existed between the court and the dock that Dr. O'Shea could not hear anything and in consequence it became so embarrassing when she fell asleep all the time from boredom that she had to be brought to sit in front of the dock.

There has been little interest in trials of Irish citizens by the Irish Embassy throughout the years or in the conditions of detention (compare for instance German citizens who appear to have a weekly visit in English prisons from their Embassy).

PRE-TRIAL PRISON CONDITIONS

An example of wholly unparalleled conditions of detention can be found in the case of Martha Shanahan (the Wiltshire case). She is apparently the ONLY woman remand prisoner in England who is category A (there are many women remand prisoners at any one time who might be considered to be a danger to the community should they escape, but she is regarded as more dangerous than they). In consequence there is NO ONE to whom she is allowed to speak. Her family, from Dublin, travel overnight by ferry once a week in order to ensure that she speaks to another human being once a week. They have little money. Last year they were allowed a visit of 15 minutes before being told to leave. The solicitor involved approached the Irish Ambassador (as she also acts in the Birmingham appeal, which he was attending) about Ms. Shanahan and complained about her condition.

Ms. Shanahan is in prison in the North of England and on remand in the South. The journey is so long that she has to be brought down the night before a court appearance and housed in police cells overnight. She is locked in her cell 23 hours a day; she suffers from continuous migraines. In short, by the time of her trial she will be either seriously damaged physically or mentally or both; she will certainly not do justice to herself at trial (which might be nine months to one year away).

PROSECUTION OF THE CASE

The content of the charges themselves: Almost all cases involving Irish citizens charged with terrorist offences make use of the 'conspiracy' charge; often known as the most useful weapon in the prosecutor's arsenal. Conspiracy charges allow for evidence being introduced against a defendant which is otherwise inadmissible, including acts or statements of alleged co-conspirators. In the case of Dr. O'Shea the only evidence consisted of references to her in letters written by one co-conspirator to another. Also admissible are previous actions or interests of defendants unconnected with the case in point.

While there is discussion going on about the necessity for a PRIMA FACIE case what is not appreciated is the latitude allowed to prosecutors to amend the indictment or to fail to provide ingredients to show a PRIMA FACIE case.

In the recent case of Patrick McLaughlin (charged with conspiracy to cause explosions) the judge indicated that it was "rubbish" to make the point that the prosecution had not shown that a device was either viable or intended to explode — i.e. he withdrew from the jury the necessity of considering a central plan of the prosecution case. (In fact, in that case it appeared to have been a purely symbolically planted device, never intended to explode).

In the case of Michael Joseph McKenny, also heard in the past year, the prosecution failed to produce any evidence to support the charge that the conspiracy to cause explosions was to occur in the U.K. The judge allowed the matter to proceed to the jury without any such evidence.

In the case of Gilbert McNamee, the prosecution was allowed to amend the indictment AFTER both prosecution and defence closing speeches because (as with McKenny) they had clearly not established that the conspiracy was in the U.K. or aimed at the U.K.

In McNamee's case a new allegation, involving multiple murders in Hyde Park, was added to the conspiracy charge one week before his trial. The judge did not allow an adjournment to prepare for this.

JUDICIAL INTERVENTION

The extensive ability of judges to sum up their opinions together with the facts undoubtedly determines the outcome of trials. Prejudice frequently shines through. The judge in Patrick McLaughlin's case frequently referred to his Derry accent as a "disability" and said that he "only had himself to blame" if the jury did not understand him. He summed up the prosecution case 4 times and the defence case barely at all.

There is no constitution in England. Judges are not trained in constitutional thinking or the con-

I.R.A. Bombs My Home, Hume Tells U.S. Leader

WASHINGTON D.C. — Mr. John Hume, M.P., leader of the Social Democratic and Labor Party (SDLP) of Northern Ireland has told the speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, Mr. Jim Wright (D-Tx), that the I.R.A. has fire-bombed his home on a number of occasions. This extraordinary allegation was revealed by Speaker Wright on the nationwide T.V. political talk show, "John McLoughlin's One on One" (Washington D.C., Sunday May 15, 1988).

"When I first heard about this," said Fr. Sean McManus of the Irish National Caucus, "I found it hard to believe. So I got an official transcript of the program from Mr. McLoughlin's office. Here are the relevant excerpts:

Mr. McLoughlin: "I hear you had a fire in your office recently (May 5, 1988)..."

Speaker Wright: "...interesting thing, do you know with whom I was talking when that fire broke out?"

Mr. McLoughlin: "No, with whom?"

cept of right. Until last year there has never been an exclusionary rule. An attempt to introduce an exclusionary rule has foundered in practice; judges do not exclude improperly obtained evidence.

Speaker Wright: "John Hume of Northern Ireland... and he was telling me about the number of firebombs that the I.R.A. had put on his front doorstep, and I was thinking what a terrible thing to have to confront with your children going out in front of your house, and neighbors saying the British Army having to come yesterday."

McManus said, "This is the first time I ever knew that Mr. Hume claims that the I.R.A. has a policy of bombing his home. I checked with several well informed journalists in Ireland and they, also, were very surprised by Mr. Hume's claim.

"The point is this," continued Fr. McManus, "if Mr. Hume has never claimed over the years that the I.R.A. has a policy of attacking him, his family and home, why should he make this claim to Speaker of the House?"

"Speaker Wright," said Fr. McManus, "just happened to reveal Mr. Hume's claim because the program itself had nothing to do with Northern Ireland. But it makes one wonder what other sort of things Mr. Hume over the years has been telling U.S. leaders.

"It raises a serious question as to the credibility of the information that Mr. Hume feeds to U.S. leaders. Just exactly what is Mr. Hume up to," concluded Fr. Sean McManus.

Hope Expressed For A New Review for Doherty

U.S. Rep. Mario Biaggi (D-NY) said recently that the resignation of Attorney General Edwin Meese "may present an opportunity for another look at the case of Joseph Doherty," and he indicated that he would urge such a review once a replacement is named by President Reagan and confirmed by the Senate.

"At the present time, the last word in the Doherty case was the decision by Attorney General Meese ordering the deportation of Doherty to the United Kingdom," Biaggi said. "This was a decision that was made despite a ruling by an Immigration judge and the Board of Immigration Appeals, that Doherty be allowed to be deported to the Republic of Ireland."

"Meanwhile, Joe Doherty has begun his sixth year of incarceration without ever having been convicted of a crime in the United States," Biaggi added. "I would also seek to have this outrage reviewed by a new Attorney General in the hope that Doherty can at least be released on bail while his legal battles continue."

Biaggi, who is chairman of the Ad Hoc Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs, also reported on his new congressional resolution on Joe Doherty, H. Con. Res. 323, which calls for him to be released on bail and also urges that Doherty's application for political asylum in the US be approved. At the present time, the Biaggi resolution has been cosponsored by Rep. Thomas Manton (D-NY); Rep. Curt Weldon (R-PA); Rep. Robert Borski (D-PA); Rep. Norman Lent (R-NY); Rep. James Traficant (D-OH); Rep. Thomas Downey (D-NY); Rep. Robert Mrazek (D-NY); Rep. Raymond McGrath (R-NY); Rep. Hamilton Fish (R-NY); Rep. George Hochbrueckner (D-NY); Rep. Matthew Rinaldo (R-NJ); Rep. Joseph DiGuardi (R-NY) and Rep. Benjamin Gilman (R-NY), and is pending before the House Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees and International Law.

New Blockbuster Report Is Issued By Amnesty Int.

U.S. Rep. Mario Biaggi (D-NY) said a new "blockbuster" report by Amnesty International on excessive British security force violence in Northern Ireland requires an immediate American government response in the form of a call on the British government to institute immediate reforms to lessen the cycle of official violence in Northern Ireland.

He was commenting on the report issued on June 27 by Amnesty International entitled, "United Kingdom-Northern Ireland: Killings by Security Forces in Northern Ireland." Biaggi noted, "Amnesty International says such an inquiry is in their words 'vital to prevent future unlawful killings and to institute procedures to ensure that all disputed killings by United Kingdom security forces are promptly investigated and publicly clarified.'"

Biaggi said he will send a letter to Secretary of State George Shultz to urge that the United States "urgently communicate its concern about the issues raised in the Amnesty Report and to press the British government to agree to the judicial inquiry and to begin to institute necessary reforms."

HEARINGS ILUSIVE

Dear Mr. Henshaw:

Thank you for taking the time to contact my office to indicate your support for H.R. 722, the Northern Ireland Fair Employment Practices Act. I appreciate knowing your views on this important issue.

I have been a cosponsor of H.R. 722 since early last year. I believe that the requirements of the bill for American businesses located in Northern Ireland can be instrumental in breaking the cycle of discrimination. For far too long our government has refused to address the chronic denial of fundamental human rights in Northern Ireland. At the very least we can act to assure that American businesses do not add to this problem.

Regrettably, the House Foreign Affairs Committee remains unwilling to hold hearings on Northern Ireland. I have urged the Chairman of the committee, Rep. Dante Fascell, to focus attention on this problem. I will continue to do so in the future.

Thank you again for letting me know of your support for this important piece of legislation.

Member of Congress

GUIDE FOR IRISH IMMIGRANTS

Dear Mr. Henshaw:

As you know, America is benefiting from a new wave of Irish immigration. We estimate that some 200,000 or more young Irish men and women have come to the United States since 1983. Perhaps 20% live in the New York Metropolitan region.

Many of the new immigrants are not aware of the government and community services that are available to them free and without regard to their legal status. Hence, my Office has published a new booklet, "Guide for Irish Immigrants," which details those services. I enclose a copy. If you would like additional copies write to me at 1 Centre Street, Room 850, New York, New York 10007.

I hope the guide will help the "new Irish" take more advantage of free City and community services. That could make their adjustment to life in America a little easier.

READER DECRIES FORUM CHOICE

Dear Mr. Henshaw:

It was a great disappointment to read that a ruthless killer of Irish Americans addressed the Irish Forum '88 last April (May-June) issue.

I cannot understand how Irishmen could have given a notorious killer of the innocent preborn the honor of addressing the Forum. This man, who spoke to the Forum about justice and respect for the rights of all, works incessantly to promote the killing of the innocent preborn until the moment of birth and has assembled a staff of like-minded killers. As a legislator in 1970 he introduced a bill to legalize abortion through all nine months of pregnancy. As Governor he vetoed a bill to cut off state funds for abortion and he held up the state budget for 13 months because it restricted state funding of abortion.

next issue

This same killer as a legislator introduced bills to repeal "laws punishing unnatural and lascivious acts with another person; the law prohibiting fornication; the law punishing blasphemy; and the law prohibiting the crime against nature" which said that "whoever exhibits the abominable and detestable crime against nature either with mankind or beast...."

Other interesting actions of this killer as Governor are: he vetoed a law requiring children to pledge allegiance to the flag — the legislature overrode the veto; he was laughed out of court when he claimed the Reagan administration foreign policy in Central America was illegal; he condemned the bombing of Libya as illegal; likewise the liberation of Grenada and even the capture of the Achille Lauro terrorists.

There is more, but the point is obvious that whoever invited him to the Forum and reported his talk in the Digest reached into the gutter for Michael Dukakis. The AOH should be an inspiring, uplifting influence on our society; it should not demean itself by honoring such people.

Golf Digest

Dear Mr. Tarde:

I must take exception and voice a protest over an article which appears in the June issue of Golf Digest. That is the article by Peter Dobereiner titled, "The Role of the Irish at The Country Club."

Regardless of this writer's credentials, this piece is nothing more than trite, hackneyed stereotypical ideas of the Irish. This guy wrote this piece as a hack writer would.

This article is not restricted to the Boston area for teeing off the Irish and the Irish-Americans. The Associated Press picked it up and put it on its wire service. Now the whole world knows what a certain Englishman said in a prestigious magazine. Therefore, you now have 100,000 plus Irishmen to apologize to.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians is the oldest and largest Irish-American organization in the United States. Most of its members are avid golfers. It would be a shame that if at the National Convention which will be held in July '88, I had to mention this article to the general membership and suggest, recommend or whatever, the boycotting of your magazine for such undue prejudice. I know that if the article were about Blacks and/or Jews, that you would not be hearing from an Ass't Editor but from either the ACLU or some premier law firm screaming discrimination. Perhaps you would print a retraction concerning this article and an apology to the Irish and Irish-Americans of the United States of America, starting with the AOH.

IRISH DEFAMED

Mr. Jerry Tarde
Editor, Golf Digest
Dear Mr. Tarde:

Rarely is a person exposed to the thinly disguised ethnic hatred contained in an article which appeared in a recent issue of Golf Digest. To imply that nothing beyond humor was intended is nearly as much of an insult to the intelligence of the reader as the contents are to the Irish people. It does not come as a total surprise that such feelings would be harbored by a British writer, in whose country such degradation concerning the Irish would be better appreciated. However, it is incomprehensible to me that an American publication, whose sole purpose is to print stories on the sport of golf, could authorize the printing of such blatant racism. I, for one, was totally incensed by this article and feel that anything less than an unconditional retraction by Golf Digest, as well as immediate dismissal of those responsible for its printing, would be totally unacceptable to the Irish-American community.

The sixteen men were shot,"

Sixteen Dead Men, W. B. Yeats

The surviving participants of the Easter Rising were mocked by their guards and passers-by for several days before being marched to Kilmainham Jail. Thomas Clarke, then in his sixties, was stripped naked by a British officer and ridiculed. The execution of sixteen of the leaders of the Rising caused a ground swell of rage among the Irish people that ultimately led to freedom for the 26 counties that form the Republic of Ireland.

Birth of John Stewart Parnell

Charles Stewart Parnell was born into the Protestant Ascendancy at Avondale, his family's estate in Co. Wicklow, on June 27, 1846. His American-born mother was the daughter of a hero of the War of 1812. During his years at English boarding schools and at Cambridge University he developed a profound antipathy for the English and began to identify himself with the cause of Irish separatism.

He was first elected to the British

Past President Emerald Isle Div. Dies Suddenly

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Past President, Emerald Isle Division, AOH, Thomas W. Guiner died suddenly of cardiac arrest in his home in Hyattsville, MD, on June 10, 1988. Age 72, he was a retired lawyer with the General Accounting Office.

Brother Guiner was born in New York City. He graduated from St. John's University in New York and received a law degree from George Washington University. He moved to the Washington area in the early 1930s and joined the Federal Bureau of Investigation. In 1938 he began work for the General Accounting Office, retiring in 1974, when he entered into private law practice.

Tom's wake was held in Spring Lake, N.J. Plans for a memorial service for Brother Guiner are under way.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret Burns Guiner of Hyattsville, MD; one daughter, Margaret Sweeney of Navesink, N.J.; one brother, the Rev. Dennis Guiner and one sister, Florence Guiner, both of DeBarry, Florida, and one grandson.

Brother Guiner was a longtime member and supporter of the Emerald Isle Division. He will be greatly missed and remembered in prayer.

Daniel Corr, Sr., Dies Of Heart Ailments

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Daniel Joseph Corr, Sr., 66, retired personnel director with the Occupational Safety Review Commission, died of heart ailments May 29, 1988 at Georgetown University Hospital.

Brother Corr, who lived here, was born in Tollcross, Scotland, and moved to the United States as a child. He grew up in the Pittsburgh, PA area, and during World War II he served with the Army's 82nd Airborne Division in Europe.

He came to Washington, D.C., after the war, graduated from Catholic University and earned a law degree at the University of Baltimore. Earlier work places included the Interior Department's Office of Saline Water, the Naval Research Laboratory, the Navy Department's Bureau of Personnel and the Goddard Space Flight Center.

Brother Corr was a member of Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church, the Sacred Heart Council and St. John Neumann Assembly Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus. He was a charter member of the Prince George's chapter of Serra, a group that promotes religious vocations in the Catholic Church. He also had been a member of the choir at St. Matthew's Cathedral.

Survivors include his wife, Mary Anne Corr, and a son, Daniel Joseph Corr, Jr. both of Washington, D.C. Brother's Corr's Memorial Mass was offered at The Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament on June 11, 1988. The body of our beloved Brother Corr was given for scientific study. He will be greatly missed and remembered by his fellow Hibernians.

Parliament as a member of the Irish Home Rule party from Co. Meath in April 1875. Seeing that conciliatory tactics were ineffective, he developed a parliamentary obstruction campaign intended to force England to grant Ireland home rule. He told the Irish people that "We will never gain anything from England unless we tread on her toes; we will never gain a sixpenny worth from her by conciliation."

In the midst of the 1878-79 crop failure Parnell became president of the Irish National Land League. The League combined in one agrarian movement Irish nationalists of all kinds in an effort to end feudalism in Ireland. In his poem "Come gather round me, Parnellites," W. B. Yeats wrote that "He fought the might of England and saved the Irish poor."

For his efforts Parnell was arrested and imprisoned without trial in Kilmainham Jail from October 1881 until May 1882.

Parnell was Ireland's first truly national leader since Daniel O'Connell and by the end of his fundraising tour of the United States he was being called "the uncrowned king of Ireland." He died on October 6, 1891, and is proudly remembered for the spirit of defiance with which he voiced the Irish demand for independent nationhood. W. B. Yeats wrote:

"Mourn - and then onward, there is no returning,
He guides ye from the tomb;
His memory now is a tall pillar, burning
Before us in the gloom."

that "principle of consent is enshrined in your Constitution and is an essential part of ours." This from the government that in fact has no constitution and that ignored the 1918 Irish General Election results, while secretly arming right wing paramilitaries in the North. The Department of State officially ignored the release of Shoot To Kill by the International Lawyers Inquiry in June, 1985, which carefully documents how forces of occupation — not peacekeeping — caused the questionable deaths of 200 men, women and children. The hapless appointment of Ms. Heckler as Ambassador to Ireland later that year only seemed to underscore the official U.S. disinterest in the facts of British misrule in Ireland.

In 1986 it was apparent that appeasement was not enough and America would be called upon by England to collaborate in crushing Irish dissent. The unique extradition treaty adopted by the U.S. Senate put every freedom fighter in peril and disgraced Irish Americans proud of the Irish contribution to freedom in America. This was followed by U.S. funds to relieve the British taxpayer of the costs of Irish partition. Along the way the recently knighted Casper Weinberger awarded U.S. funds to the largest anti-Catholic employer in Northern Ireland — the government-owned airplane manufacturer Short Bros.; Edwin Meese has held Joe Doherty in solitary confinement for five years in service to the Crown despite repeated judicial and administrative decisions ordering his release or return to Ireland; and in 1987 our Ambassador to England publicly rebuked the MacBride Fair Employment Principles, the most rational and moral idea to come out of Northern Ireland in decades.

Only time will reveal President Reagan's contribution to world peace and freedom. However, we need not await the verdict of history to prove that President Reagan has done more than any of his predecessors to imprison Ireland in violence and to destroy the cause of its freedom.

Elections in Ireland

By DICK WALSH

Dick Walsh is the author of "The Party—Inside Fianna Fail"

The Irish interest in politics is as old as the struggle for an independent state. That struggle was conducted on two levels, one subterranean and revolutionary, the other more openly political though never quite orthodox, as British leaders of the nineteenth century had reason to complain when confronted by Daniel O'Connell and Charles Stewart Parnell.

O'Connell and Parnell, the first pushing for Catholic emancipation and repeal of the penal laws, the second for land reform and home rule, succeeded in rousing not only their contemporaries but the generations that followed, to whom they gave an abiding interest in political argument and parliamentary manoeuvres.

Parnell preached that no man had the right to set a boundary to the march of a nation and earned the right to his title of uncrowned king of Ireland, a landlord leading the landless in a powerful agitation. By dextrous deployment of parliamentary forces, he secured and for a time held the balance of power in the British Parliament at Westminster, thus forcing unwilling parties to confront the conditions of his people.

If the achievements of O'Connell and Parnell were temporarily overshadowed by failure to reach their ultimate goals, they contributed a legacy that survived through the bright and bitter decades in which the new state was born and shaped. This legacy took the form of respect for parliamentary democracy, an intense interest in how the system worked and admiration for leaders who were larger than life.

Respect for parliamentary democracy has been amply demonstrated by the determination with which people pledged loyalty to the first, revolutionary Dail and by their acceptance of the transfers of power that have taken place since the foundation of the state. Despite the remembered agony of civil war, those transfers have been smoothly and peacefully achieved, even when — as in the 1930s — there were those who feared that change might have been accompanied by turbulence.

Between the two major parties, Fianna Fail and Fine Gael, two sides of the coin spun by old divisions, there are no wide ideological differences. Their names, evocative of myth and homeland — Soldiers of Destiny, Family of the Gael — suggest their claims to represent all classes and creeds. We are pointed here in the direction of American rather than European politics, with parties standing on their records and refusing to define themselves as of the left or of the right. This is something which visiting observers find difficult to understand and the Irish electorate has only recently begun to question.

Ladies Florida News

The Ladies of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of the State of Florida extend their deepest sympathy to the family of Frances Hamre, Assistant Editor of the Digest.

Jane McCarthy, editor of St. Brigid Division 1, Pasco County, reported that her division held their yearly Mass and Communion breakfast on May 16 at St. Michael's Church. This was a joint venture of the AOH and LAOH. The membership in St. Brigid's has steadily grown and the Ladies are very active in local and national activities.

Plans have been made to send Annmarie O'Brien, Ester Condon, and Beverly Zwack to the 84th National Convention in Cleveland. Annmarie O'Brien is a past state president of Florida and was very active in the Irish Communities in New York. Ester Condon is a past president of St. Brigid Div. 1, and was state chairwoman of Catholic Action. Beverly Zwack, was vice president of Division 1, and is very active on many committees in the Division.

State President Mary Herbert presented Division 1, Palm Bay's Jackie Lepper, with an award for her dedicated work to the Hibernians. State Secretary Betty Boyle has made a quick recovery and is looking forward to dancing the night away at the National Convention.

The Vero Beach Irish dance school is in need of a dedicated teacher. Please send resume to Mary Herbert, 761 Becker Ave., N.W. Palm Bay, FL 32905.

The June Banquet of the LAOH, held June 1, was very successful. Immediately following the business meeting, a buffet was served and this was followed by entertainment by the Angels of Harmony. This year they were the "California Raisins", who knows what they will be at Christmas. During the evening, National President Sheila Clifford, presented the Irish Essay Awards to Patty Ann Molloy, who won on the Division, County, State and National level.

On May 23 Linda Galvin, division historian, and Sheila Clifford, national president, visited St. Mary's Grammar School to present the Grade School awards to the students that entered the Essay Contest. Sixth, seventh, and eighth grade students assembled in the courtyard where Sr. Crean, principal, and Sr. Joan Doolan, eighth grade teacher, participated in the ceremony.

Waterbury Kiwanis Club held their annual heritage day in Library Park, June 17. Helen Carroll, chairman of Missions, and Jacklyn Reilly, president, staffed the booth. As usual, they sold out of Irish Soda Bread and are looking forward to the 1989 event. September's meeting will be a Pot Luck Supper, and several trips are planned, one to Radio City Music Hall in N.Y.

Irene Ferguson Is 100 Years Old

A joyful and unprecedented celebration was held on Sunday, May 29, by New York County Boards, AOH, honoring Mrs. Irene Ferguson, who celebrated her one-hundredth birthday on July 31, 1988.

Mrs. Ferguson has been a member of the LAOH in New York County for twenty-five years and was presented with a plaque recording both this occasion and her birthday.

A native New Yorker and life long resident of New York City, she, like her contemporary, song writer Irving Berlin, declared she has loved every minute of it. She was elated to greet over fifty well wishers in the gathering.

A devout Catholic, steeped in Irish culture and traditions, she also maintained an abiding interest in fine china, garnered from her long working career in Macy's China Department.

Her devoted daughter, also "Irene," likewise celebrated her twenty-five years as a member of the LAOH. She is a New York City high school teacher.

Ladies New York State News

The Kings County LAOH will hold a luncheon in honor of State President Ann S. Healion on Sunday, November 6 from 1 to 5 p.m. at Andre's Restaurant, 86th St. and Ft. Hamilton Parkway, Brooklyn. Tickets are $25.00, from chairpersons Nora Egan (718)941-0315 and Lillie Magee (718)462-4757. Both Ladies and Men enjoyed a bus ride to the Marian Shrine in West Haverstraw in June to celebrate the Marian Year. Mass in the outdoor chapel, a lovely lunch, outdoor rosary and stations and an ending Holy Hour of Adoration comprised a spiritually fulfilling day.

Nassau County LAOH will commemorate the Feast of Our Lady of Knock on Sunday, August 21 with 9:15 Mass at Maria Regina Church, Seaford, followed by breakfast at Vinetto's Restaurant, Massapequa, at noon. A Fall Luncheon annual fund raiser is also set for Saturday, September 24 at New Hyde Park Inn, New Hyde Park from 12 noon to 4 p.m. Included will be a full four course meal, music and dancing.

The Rockland County Ladies sponsored a degree ceremony on May 1, which included members from the surrounding counties of New York, Queens, Orange, Westchester and Bronx. The Kings County Degree Team presented degrees to 70 members at the beautiful Marian Shrine in West Haverstraw. Father Peter Lappin, chaplain, presided at a prior mass and spoke of the LAOH's goals and history. A buffet supper followed, providing animated fellowship among the gathered Hibernians.

LAOH Michigan State News

The State Mass in honor of Our Lady of Knock will be held on Sunday, August 28 at the AOH Hall. After the festivities, the State Board will award a Shamrock Quilt.

The Michigan St. Brigid Degree Team was presented with a banner which was donated by the AOH Wayne County Board. James Kelly, president, made the presentation.

Rose Kennedy Division-Wayne, is planning the following events: 20th Anniversary Dinner Dance on September 24; a Card Party in October and a Halloween Party on October 29; a Christmas Gala Dinner Dance in December, which will round out the year.

Ethel Kennedy Division-Macomb, reports that the annual Garage-Treasure Sale was held on June 4 at the home of Macomb County president. The profitable event enables the division to contribute funds to favorite charities, while it provides a day for members to have lunch together and enjoy each others' company.

Members are getting ideas together in preparation for the 1989 State Convention to be sponsored by Macomb County in May of next year.

Did You Know?

ARCHEOLOGY

Did you know that the Irish were in America 2700 years ago? Archeologists are studying the remains of a Celtic settlement in New England that was established as far back as 800 B.C.

On Mystery Hill in N. Salem, New Hampshire, the ruins of an 800 B.C. burial tomb and oracle chamber are being studied, and in S. Woodstock, Vermont, an oracle chamber has already been identified.

Around Mystery Hill stand great stone monoliths mathematically aligned for viewing the heavens and such celestial events as the summer and winter solstice and seasonal star and lunar patterns. The parallel to Stonehenge and dozens of similar sites in Ireland is amazing. Ancient inscriptions on the stones have been identified as Ogham — the Celtic method of inscribing stone used in Ireland over 2500 years ago. Details of the preliminary findings are available in the book, America BC, by Dr. Barry Fell and should be available at local libraries.

Pennsylvania Remembers Mae O'Grady

MAE O'GRADY

Pennsylvania mourns the loss of another First Lady and a great Hibernian, Mae O'Grady, past state president. It was her late husband, Daniel J. O'Grady, a most active Hibernian, who influenced his wife to become involved with the Ladies AOH.

Mae served as Pennsylvania State President 1973-1977. Prior to that she held the offices of vice president, secretary and treasurer. Also, on the County level she was county president for multi terms, plus serving in every office and chairmanship. She was a member of the Allegheny County first Degree Team. For 15 years she was President of Division 11 — Pittsburgh. Since the 1950s, Mae attended every Convention, National and State. Her generosity to Hibernian projects, not only of her time and effort but of great financial support, was outstanding. This was exemplified by her great dedication to the orphans of Allegheny County. She organized the arrangements for every orphan of St. Paul's Orphanage and Holy Family Institute to be the guest at the County Annual Picnic. She was the secretary for arrangements for the AOH Annual Communion Breakfast. Mae is sorely missed by her nieces and nephew, friends and members. Her dedication and loyalty represents an era that Mae has taken along with her.

As many of us prepare for the 84th Biennial National Convention of the AOH and LAOH, we should reflect on the past, and think what is the future of our Organization.

During the past two years, as your National President, I have visited many states and talked to many of our members. We have established twelve (12) new Divisions of the LAOH during this period, and four Junior Divisions. Also, we have organized our first Division in Phoenix, AZ — we welcome them to our membership.

Since the last Convention, we have redesigned our jewelry; our Charter; our application form; our supplies; and our letterhead. They all now show our correct name — Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians. We participated with our Brother Hibernians in "The Trees for Ireland Project"; the Note Card Project; and two AOH Awards Programs. In addition to the above our members participated in many Catholic Action projects and Mission fund raisers for the Columban Mission Fund.

During the past six months, the AOH and the LAOH have been encouraged to increase Hibernian membership. Many of the LAOH Divisions have reported that their membership drives were successful, and that they plan to continue it over in the fall season.

To be a president of any organization is a great honor, but to be the national president of the LAOH has been a privilege and a pleasure. Being president means you are elected to preside over an assembly... but you cannot do it alone. I would like to thank the members of the 1986-1988 National Board LAOH for their help during the past two years; especially our Deputy National Chaplain Father Michael Healy, who was always available when we needed him; the AOH National President Nick Murphy and his National Board. Without total cooperation from these people and the membership our administration would not have been a success.

It is now my duty to turn over the gavel of my office to my distinguished successor. I have enjoyed the period of service and have prized the privilege of trying in some way to add to the effectiveness of our organization. I encourage each and every member to practice our motto "Friendship, Unity, and Christian Charity", and to cooperate with your officers on every level — National, State, County, and Division.

Rose M. Callan Dies Suddenly

New York County's Patrick J. Walsh Division 29 mourns the sudden, untimely passing of a devoted member of thirty years, Rose M. Callan, on May 26, 1988.

A graduate of Cathedral High School in Manhattan, her entire working career was with the Metropolitan Transit Authority.

At her wake on May 31 the Hibernian prayers were said by Sr. Monica Burke, immediate past president, New York State Board. Also attending were Margaret O'Rourke, New York County Board president, and Mary T. Hartnett, Division 29 president and a host of fellow Division members.

She was buried in the Callan Family plot in Calvary Cemetery.

She is survived by many cousins in the metropolitan area, in Ireland and Australia.

Rose M. Callan was a faithful attendant at all National and State Hibernian Conventions and made "Hibernianism" is cherished part of her life.

The American Revolution — In Queens County

By HARRY McGUIRK

The American Revolution grew out of a series of increasingly oppressive acts by England against the American Colonies. Various restrictions on manufacturing were imposed to force Americans to buy goods from the mother country. The revolution really began in 1764 when Parliament began to impose heavy taxes on refined sugar, tea, coffee, indigo, glass, paints, writing paper and other items. The Stamp Act of the same year forced colonists to buy a revenue stamp for every legal transaction. There was intense resentment. The government reacted by increasing the garrison in New York.

When the colonists boycotted the taxed articles, the English merchants suffered and prevailed on Parliament to withdraw some of the taxes; the tax on tea was kept as a symbol of Parliament's right to tax the colonies. In Boston the tea was seized by Americans disguised as Indians and dumped into the harbor.

A Continental Congress composed of delegates from the provinces convened at Philadelphia on September 4, 1774, to consider measures of resistance. They appointed committees in each state.

In Queens County opinion was divided; some felt the Congress was illegal and disrespectful; others felt the time for forbearance and moderation had passed.

The towns of Flushing and Jamaica and the towns now comprising Nassau County (Hempstead and Oyster Bay) were strongly Tory, supportive of the King and Parliament; only Newtown (Western Queens) was inclined to be Whig, as American patriots were to be called. Sixteen men from Newtown were chosen to attend the New York Committee; most declined and the delegates shrank to seven.

In 1775 there was a call for a second General Congress; a propaganda war raged in Queens between Tories and Whigs. Because of the overwhelming Tory sentiment in Queens County, the delegates to the second Congress were admitted only as advisors and could not vote.

The people were lorded over by the British officers. Officers both indoors and out demanded respect. A colonist had to tip his hat or hold it under his arm while addressing an officer or risk a whipping. Hessian officers were better mannered and less haughty than the British.

Although some supplies for the British army were brought from England, the major burden of supplying food and firewood fell on the farmers of Queens. They were required to furnish the greater portion of their hay, straw, rye, corn, oats, vegetables, and fresh provisions under pain of imprisonment or confiscation of crops. Service to His Majesty was everything, and to this every consideration of individual comfort and economy had to yield.

The commissary or barrack master weighed or measured the produce and gave payment according to prices fixed by the king's commissioners. The steady demands of so large an occupation force made staples exceedingly scarce and high priced. The winter of 1779, unusually harsh and cold, brought misery to the residents of Queens. Between forced sale and pilferage a farmer had less than enough to meet the wants of his family. The army's need for wood was insatiable. The soldiers used huge quantities of firewood to make their miserable huts endurable. Woodland owners had to cut and deliver their share of fuel, and if they failed, a detachment of soldiers was sent out to seize it. Fences in the villages and open fields rapidly disappeared; in the seven years of occupation, the once-extensive tracts of forestland in Queens were so cut over that by 1783 not a trace remained of the primeval forest.

The farmers had no liberty of movement. Some were forced to perform service for no pay; if they used boats to send produce to market, they had to secure a pass from the commanding officer, and no sailing was permitted at night. They could not carry home from Manhattan any goods, wares, or provisions for family use without first obtaining a permit from the military. These indignities aroused hatred, but there was no effective way to resist.

The British requisitioned all the larger buildings, which were the churches in most cases. The Presbyterian church on Queens Boulevard and Grand Avenue had its steeple sawed off, and it was then demolished for lumber to build huts. The Dutch Reformed church at the same place was turned into a powder magazine.

The Episcopal church survived because it was the king's church, and Loyalists and British personnel prayed for the king and the royal family at services. The Friend's Meeting House in Flushing was used successively as a prison, hospital, and hay magazine. For the farmers of Queens the hardest thing to bear was the thievery of the soldiers. Many a farmer kept a loaded gun in his house, and all outbuildings and barns were put under guard at night. There was a general sense of insecurity; no one knew at what hour some marauding soldiery might appear to plunder and perhaps murder. Instances of petty theft were almost innumerable — ducks, heifers, cows, corn, and potatoes. The civil courts were suspended during the occupation, and martial law prevailed as crime emanated to a great degree from the soldiery.

Although Generals Howe and Clinton had issued edicts against thievery, complaints against the soldiery by aggrieved farmers got nowhere, for the British screened their men and winked at the crime. Many residents preferred to have a British officer billeted in the house, for his presence deterred crime and his batman paraded up and down in front of the house with a loaded musket. An officer was required to pay twenty shillings a week for his board, which made his presence tolerable.

To guard Long Island from the raids of predatory Americans, the British raised a local militia of Loyalists and refugees commanded by general Oliver Delancey. Though nominally recruited to drive off hidden rebels and reestablish law and order, they had the reputation of being lawless and notorious thieves. The biggest threat to the British were the whaleboat men, Americans on the Connecticut shore who had commissions from the American commanders of New York and Connecticut to raid British vessels in the Sound. The number, boldness, and dexterity of these made them a formidable foe. They infested the bays and inlets, darted out and boarded market boats, and even cut off vessels in a convoy. WINNING FLOAT in the St. Patrick's Day Parade in the New Jersey town of Bridgewater, Raritan and Somerville — a production of the AOH/LAOH St. Patrick's Division 1.

The AOH, LAOH, and the AOH Ceili Group of Somerset County, St. Patrick Division 1, received two awards in the recent Greater New Jersey St. Patrick's Day Parade held in the towns of Bridgewater, Raritan, and Somerville.

The AOH and LAOH received the Second Place Award for the Most Original Float in the Line of March category. The float depicted part of a small Irish village — a general store, pub, and post office. The 40-foot float bed was decorated with a green skirt and green-white-orange ribbons, as well as large white lettering that announced to all the parade watchers that the float was made by the Ancient Order of Hibernians. To make the float really complete in detail, the rear section featured wooden signposts — in both Gaelic and in English — indicating names and distances of prominent cities and places of interest in Ireland.

The AOH Ceili Group received the Parade Judges Merit Award for its presentation of traditional Irish dancing which was performed along the entire route of the parade, with a Long Island they carted off British goods or seized noted loyalists to exchange for patriot prisoners.

Both Whig and Tory were indiscriminately plundered of their goods and money and tortured to reveal their wealth. A British guard ship was stationed off Riker's Island, and guards were posted on shore at Astoria and East Elmhurst to prevent landings and raids.

By 1782 it became obvious that American independence had been won. The Loyalists of Queens County who had lorded it over their neighbors sensed retribution. The British government designated the province of Nova Scotia as a refuge for Loyalists; to this asylum thousands of Loyalists from New York and other states flocked, the government providing free transportation. The British deliberately delayed evacuating troops from Queens until the Loyalists could be collected and embarked.

Late in 1783 the king's army marched along Woodside Avenue and the Brooklyn and Queens Expressway to Penny Bridge at Calvary Cemetery and then into Bushwick. Manhattan itself was evacuated on November 25, 1783. On December 8, special program for the Grand Marshal and other dignitaries in the reviewing stand.

The St. Patrick Divisions have a history of winning St. Patrick's Day parade awards, going back to 1984 when the Divisions first participated in the parades. The Divisions received the Best Irish Traditional Unit and Merit Award in 1985; placed First in the Best Appearing Float and Merit Award in the 1986 Somerville, Bridgewater, Raritan parades; and placed Second in the Senior Marching Unit Award in the 1987 Woodbridge, New Jersey parade.

Since 1984, the Ceili Group has been conducting traditional Irish ceili folk dance lessons at various skill levels, as well as seasonal ceili dances. Besides participating in parades, the AOH Ceili Group is very active in Irish cultural events both within and outside New Jersey.

Further, members of the Group have brightened the lives of the residents and staff at the Somerset County Nursing Home with their annual entertainment for St. Patrick's Day. Ceili dance lessons, by the way, are free; those of you who are interested in attending the ceili dance classes should contact Dennis Smyth at (201) 968-6667.

The Hibernians are presently looking into sponsoring Gaelic language classes, as well as Step Dancing classes, for children in the Central Jersey Area.

The St. Patrick Division is also working in concert with the Irish Immigration Reform Movement to assist the "new Irish" (illegals) in whatever way is practicable.

A family style picnic (really more like a mini-Irish festival) is being planned for the Eagles Aerie Picnic Grove and Pavilion (off Route 28 in Bridgewater) on Sunday, August 28, from noon to 6:00 p.m. All those interested in attending this function should contact William T. Cooper at (201) 725-4190 or P. Joe Mulrooney at (201) 725-1956.

President: Patrick J. Mulrooney and Jacqueline Bittles; Vice President: William T. Cooper and Bridget Lawn; Recording Secy: Peter J. O'Neill and Catherine Pasternak; Financial Secy: John L. Fitzmaurice and Jacqueline Bittles; Treasurer: John E. Hoey, Sr. and Barbara Cooper.

Celtic Chair Endowment Increase Planned by AOH

The Ancient Order of Hibernians and The Catholic University of America have made plans to increase the endowment for CUA's AOH Chair in Celtic Languages and Literatures and to create an endowment for CUA's Center for Irish Studies, national AOH President Nicholas Murphy has announced.

Established in 1896 with a $50,000 gift from the Hibernians, CUA's Celtic chair is an integral link in the study and understanding of Celtic culture and contributions. The campaign to increase the original endowment will help the work and services provided to the Irish community continue and grow.

The project is spearheaded by James J. O'Connor of Chevy Chase, Md., president emeritus of AOH's Emerald Isle Division in Washington, D.C. whose resolution to increase the endowment was passed at the Hibernians' convention in Albany in 1984.

James F. Moriarty, a Washington attorney and a CUA regent who hails from AOH's Elizabeth, N.J., division, and Robert Mahony, CUA's Center for Irish Studies director, coordinate the university's efforts.

James J. Herlihy of Virginia, an

AOH national director; Jerry Gorman, Virginia state Hibernians president; and Matthew J. Hannon, AOH District of Columbia board president, will also help organize the campaign.

The AOH and CUA commitment to Celtic culture and the fund-raising campaign will be discussed at the Hibernians' national convention in Cleveland in July. Funds will be solicited from AOH members nationally and from others, especially persons in the Irish-American community, who wish to maintain and foster Gaelic heritage.

The AOH Celtic Chair at CUA is the United States' oldest professorship devoted to the Irish language and literature and the history of Celtic Ireland. Since 1896, the chair has been supplemented at CUA by an extensive literary collection in these fields and by academic programs in Irish politics and economics and in Anglo-Irish literature.

With the campaign underway, prospects are bright that the Celtic chair, the centerpiece in CUA's longstanding commitment to Irish studies, will have a fitting endowment well before the chair's centennial in eight years.

UNDOING MISCARRIAGES OF JUSTICE

There is no adequate procedure for undoing miscarriages of justice. As is evident from the Birmingham pub bombings appeal, it has taken 13 years, an extraordinary development of international concern, 2 major television programmes and a book for them even to be afforded the opportunity to have the case looked at. Two years from the submission of new evidence elapsed before the Court of Appeal began to look at it. The Court of Appeal is a forum that has been heavily criticised (including by 2 senior law lords, Lords Devlin and Scarman) for its inability to undo clear cases of wrongful conviction, and its inability to respond to credible fresh evidence, either by ordering a retrial or quashing a conviction.

Other persons wrongfully convicted who have not achieved friends in high places are unlikely to ever have their cases looked at.

All observers at the Birmingham Appeal have been struck by the distaste expressed by the judges for evidence favourable to the appellants and the assistance afforded by them to prosecution witnesses in difficulties. This year is the first in which solicitors have ever asked for international observers at trials involving Irish suspects, and all have been shocked. Even and despite the presence of distinguished observers at the Birmingham appeal, an Old Bailey court reporter stated that one of the court attendants asked if he had "any bananas and nuts for the animals in the dock."

The adverse judgement of the Appeal Court in the case of the Birmingham Six was negative. It was not couched in the sober words one would have expected from three experienced judges considering a case decided 13 years ago. It contained unmeasured tones of language of denunciation of witnesses and castigation of coolly presented scientific evidence, a certain fury, an absolutist exclusion of all grievances, a refusal to balance opinions against each other, indicating that this was a polemic like the second Philippic of Cicero against Anthony rather than the wisdom of Solomon or Solon. It was the British establishment defending itself against the "Croppie Boys".

POST CONVICTION

If convicted, the situation for Republican prisoners is far worse than for other prisoners in English prisons and is undoubtedly operated in a discriminatory way. There is a basic principle (embodied in the Prison Rules) that prisoners should be encouraged to maintain long term contacts with their families and if possible should be housed in prisons near to those families.

Despite the fact that English prisons are desperately overcrowded and there is at least one new prison in the North of Ireland, purpose-built for high security cases, there is no movement whatsoever of Republican prisoners to prisons near their families. All the family circumstances we have investigated are impoverished. Each family is doomed to the prospect of travelling for many years (up to 35 years in some cases) to visit their husband/Father/brother. For children the prospect of bus/ferry/bus/train/bus to visit a prison is a daunting affair. For example, one boy (now 15) who had visited his father for 13 years in English prisons is clearly affected in his upbringing. During visits to his father members of his family have regularly been detained under the Prevention of Terrorism Act. One has been excluded from the UK in consequence.

Every family of every Republican prisoner has had members detained under the PTA, stopped and questioned, arrested and questioned, imprisoned and excluded. Every family travels in dread of this happening. Mothers have had to take legal advice about the legitimacy of threats handed out by police at ports that their children will be taken into care.

In the case mentioned above, the boy's father has been moved from prison to prison 60 times in 13 years. No sooner than the family discovers how to visit one prison, than he is moved again. Most Republican prisoners are subject to this. In several cases, where an impending family visit has been known about by the prison in advance, the prisoner has been moved DURING the visit (prison officers coming into the room and telling the family that the visit was being interrupted). For 2 days the family, who had come at great cost on a once yearly visit, could not discover that their relative had been moved to a prison at the other end of the country.

Nor is there available to prisoners the possibility afforded to all English prisoners of "accumulated visits" whereby they can once a year be moved to a prison near their home so visits can be had all in one go.

Visits in prison are known as "Irish visits" distinct from all other prisoners with prison wardens sitting in such close proximity that there is no possibility of personal dignity or privacy. Men are not allowed in a number of prisons to touch their families and special barriers have been constructed so they sit at a distance. Many children have developed behavioural problems.

There is only state benefit to assist travel in the North of Ireland for wives and children; families of prisoners without these get no assistance and families in the Republic of Ireland get no state assistance.

English families tend to visit their families twice a month, or enjoy accumulated visits. Irish families can afford only occasional contact because of the cost and travel involved. Were most of Irish prisoners to be housed in Long Kesh or Maghaberry prisons, families (especially from Belfast or nearby) could visit once a week.

There is no doubt that this whole procedure is operated in a way that is discriminating on the basis of

British Exposed Again Chronology of Minnesota MacBride Principles Bill

February 4, 1987 — Senator Jerome Hughes and Representative Rick O'Connor introduced 'The Northern Ireland Investment Bill' (SF 722 and HF 453) into the Minnesota State Legislature.

October 8, 1987 — A Legislative Luncheon was held at the St. Paul Athletic Club with all senators and representatives and staff members invited. Guest speaker was Oliver Kearney, Secretary of The Fair Employment Trust in Northern Ireland. Kearney was on his third American Tour (all organized and sponsored by the American Irish PEC) testifying before State legislatures for passage of MacBride Principles. Each time he came on his own vacation time at the expense of American Irish. For this he was fired — he dared to question British policy in Northern Ireland that promotes and protects discriminatory practices.

During these months up to the opening of the Session on February 8th, several people were actively visiting legislators — mainly Bill Gleason, Thomond O'Brien, Leo Cullen, many more were calling and writing letters. The British were also busy. James Eccles, a member of the British agency, FEA, appeared in town, visited the legislature and news personalities, namely a Tony Morely of the Minneapolis Star Tribune and John Finnegan of the St. Paul paper. Mr. Eccles is a used car dealer in Northern Ireland. The results of his last visit showed up in an editorial in the February 15th issue of the Minneapolis Star Tribune. The following day, another blast came from Roger Carrick, British Consul General in Chicago, reminding Americans of their great debt to England.

February 16th and 17th — The House Governmental Operations Committee heard testimony pro and con. Testifying for were: Father Sean McManus of the Irish National Caucus, Councilman Bill Wilson of St. Paul, State of Minnesota Treasurer, Mike McGrath, Dr. Charles McCafferty, St. Paul Psychiatrist and native of Derry, NI, Bill Gleason, Joe Roche, past National President, AOH, and Pat Doherty, Administrative Aide to Harrison Goldin, Comptroller General of New York City.

March 11th — It was announced that the British realized that their message was not being accepted — Carolyn Craycroft, vice-consul from Chicago and the entourage brought at British taxpayers expense were failing, so they resorted to hiring a lobbying firm. After three turn-downs by D.J. Leary; the Kelm brothers; and Larry Redman, the British were able to lure the company of O'Connor & Hannan for a fee of $100,000.00. It is understood

Did you Know?

IRISH MUSIC

Did you know that many songs which are considered to be of Irish origin were really written right here in America? When young America had no native music of her own, she borrowed many tunes from Ireland such as The Girl I Left Behind Me, which was used as a colonial fife tune, a popular stage song, a square dance tune, and a song of farewell used by western pioneers and at military departures. It is played at graduation ceremonies at West Point to this day.

The favor was soon returned and a good number of Irish tunes were written in America and became popular in Ireland, such as: Take Me Home Again Kathleen (1876), Rose of Killarney (1876), Sweet Rosie O'Grady (1896), My Wild Irish Rose (1899), Where the River Shannon Flows (1905), Harrigan (1907), Mother Machree (1910), When Irish Eyes Are Smiling (1912), Too Ra Loo Ra Looal (1914), A Little Bit of Heaven (1914), Eileen Alanna (1917), That Old Irish Mother of Mine (1920), Glocca Morra (1946), Galway Bay (194), Christmas in Killarney (1950), to name just a few.

Written by Americans, Irish Americans, and Irish who came to this land still dreaming of the land of their birth, they are part of a tradition that extends to this day. Johny Cash's Forty Shades of Green, Tommy Makem's Four Green Fields, and many other new compositions give a healthy indication that Irish tunes will continue to be written here and sent to Ireland in return for her lovely songs and in grateful appreciation of the rich musical heritage that she has given, not only to America, but to the world.

That several Irish pooled their resources and sent thirty pieces of silver to O'Connor.

March 17th — St. Patrick did not fail his people on this day. In the morning, the sub- and the whole Rules committee met. Again, Senator Hughes was victorious over Senator Moe and the Bill was easily voted out of committee. In the afternoon, the final vote was taken in the House of Representatives and passed 82-34.

Questions and Answers About Northern Ireland

What is this fighting in Northern Ireland about? For 800 years Britain has ruled part or all of Ireland brutally, causing the deaths and exile of millions. Resistance was constant and by 1922 the Irish Republican Army had freed 26 of Ireland's counties. Britain held on to 6 in the northeast where it had sent loyal English and Lowland Anglo-Scottish Protestants to displace the Gaelic Irish Catholics centuries before. This Loyalist or Unionist majority set up a police state similar to South Africa in which the Catholic Irish were deprived of basic rights, kept in poverty and killed. A peaceful civil rights movement was met by Loyalist violence and when the Irish Nationalists reacted the British Army intervened, allegedly to restore peace but actually (leaders later admitted) to stabilize the government and keep the state part of the United Kingdom. The Crown forces' record has included imprisoning thousands of people without fair trials and the use of torture. The IRA was resurrected initially to defend Nationalist neighborhoods but now all Nationalists recognize that there will only be lasting peace and justice when Britain ends this occupation of its first and last colony.

Won't the recent Anglo-Irish treaty improve things? Since it was negotiated against the will of the Loyalists, who threaten violence to disrupt implementation and since it ignores the desire of the Nationalists for a reunited Ireland it obviously will not bring peace. It only gives the Irish government the "right to make suggestions" for reforms, most of which have been rejected before, a powerless role which will not solve problems like the nearly 40% unemployment rate among Catholics. Britain's primary reasons for negotiating the treaty were to get Irish taxpayers to help more with the cost of its occupation and to qualify for up to half a billion dollars in U.S. aid by giving the appearance of reform. The pressure to do something, however cosmetic, was brought about by the IRA and the Republic (Nationalist) political party Sinn Féin ("shin fane").

Why does Britain stay in the North if it is so costly? It does not maintain nearly 30,000 security personnel (about the same number for 10 years) because it is trying to separate "warring factions," as it often asserts, since Crown actions have been primarily against Nationalists who have never desired conflict with their Loyalist neighbors. The real reasons range from access to cheap labor for British industry and to the best U.K. port at Belfast to the security for its west flank which Northern Ireland provides. Most important is national pride and not wanting to stir nationalism among the Welsh and Scots by giving the Irish freedom. However, despite censorship preventing them from understanding the situation, 75% of the British want to withdraw from Ireland.

Shouldn't the will of the majority in the North determine if there should be reunification? The so-called majority in the Six Counties (two of which have national majorities) is artificial, cut out from the province of Ulster's 9 counties when the results of the last all-Ireland election (1918) calling for a free and united island were rejected by England. The Loyalists were then allowed to manipulate this gerrymandered statelet so that Nationalists were deprived of even proportional power. Britain recognized the fact that the Loyalists are not rational or responsible enough on the question of relations with the Nationalists to be allowed to decide policy, which is why Britain instituted direct rule and negotiated the recent treaty against the will of Loyalists. Although the Catholic birthrate is higher (they make up 42% of the population and 52% of schoolchildren) majority status will not be reached because 70% of emigrants from the area are Catholic.

Wouldn't there be more violence if Britain withdrew? There would be no less security because British troops would be replaced by Irish or U.N. forces. Nationalists would certainly cause no violence after achieving freedom. Loyalists would try to prevent reunification but violence would fade after the fact because there would be nothing for it to feed on since Loyalism thrives on what it would be like to live among a Catholic majority as equals. Those not content with the reunited and secularized Irish state could maintain dual citizenship with Britain or leave altogether. Whatever the risks to Irish Nationalists they should be allowed the choice to take them.

John Barry Day — the Unknown Side

One of the neglected corners of American history is the apparent overshadowing of Catholic heroes in the Revolutionary War, be they Irish or not. During the month of September when we honor Commodore John Barry we rightfully grant respect to a genuine naval hero.

Monsignor Fink, a zealous student of the historical scene, cites an example of apparent neglect of Barry's exploits. At the Pan American Exposition of 1901 the guest speaker, Captain Richard Hobson, mentioned "a long line of majestic figures whose very names are an inspiration" (the naval history of the Revolutionary War). But in giving the names of twenty-one of those "majestic figures," did not include John Barry — the "Father of the American Navy."

Besides his heroics on the sea (winner of the first and last official battles of the war) and land (the crossing of the Delaware and the Battle of Trenton) and diplomacy (Barry carried back from France six million dollars from the government and French clergy for the completely depleted treasury of the rebel colonists), we must also cite his work in helping legislate the Constitution successfully.

In 1787, from June until September, Barry actively promoted the ratification of the Constitution in his home state of Pennsylvania. He even led a group of "compellers" in visitations of lethargic assembly members to drum them into the legislative assembly for the crucial vote. When the group finally elected for the Constitution, Philadelphia erupted into a chorus of cheers and ringing bells.

Admiral Morrison in his papers called Barry "the most popular Captain in the Navy." Washington went one step further; he gave him the first official commission in the nation's navy — a singular honor.

THE PRESIDENT of the UNITED STATES of AMERICA

To John Barry

I GEORGE WASHINGTON, President of the United States *reposing special Trust and Confidence in your Patriotism Valour Fidelity and Militia have nominated and by and with the Advice and Consent of the SENATE, appointed you Captain in the NAVY of the UNITED STATES, and Commander of the FRIGATE called UNITED STATES, to take Rank from The Fourth day of June one thousand seven hundred and ninety four. Hibernian Sports

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

Baseball — Somebody once said, "Baseball has been very, very good to me." This may be true. It may also be true for Billy Martin. As you must know by now, Billy didn't last even until the All-Star break as manager of the New York Yankees. George Steinbrenner let him go after the fracas in the topless joint in Texas and when the umpires more or less ganged up on Billy. Believe it or not, Martin ended up around Binghamton doing a little relaxing and a lot of fishing, compliments of Mike Klepper, a local who runs a truck leasing firm in Binghamton. His family and Martin's family are close, due to show horses.

Speaking of the Yank's owner, who has his business headquarters in Cleveland, he was quite critical of the Yankees who played in the All-Star Game in Cincinnati. He singled out Winfield and said he was too busy with his off-the-field commitments instead of paying attention to playing ball. Don Mattingly and Ricky Henderson were the other Yankees who received public denunciations by their boss. Oh well, when the boss is paying you that kind of money, he can say whatever his little heart desires. The rest of us will hear from our bosses about not being productive enough for a lot less!

All-Star Game — YR doesn't know what some reporters were looking for during the All-Star Game. It wasn't a slug fest. It wasn't a no-hitter. It was a good ballgame. There were a lot of ground balls. There was some great defense. There was some not-so-hot defense. ABC did some overkill with their interviews during the game. Outside of that it was a lovely way to spend a Tuesday evening. Al won, by the way.

Job Security — This doesn't seem to be part of a manager's contract. Managers have been getting the heave-ho this year quickly. The latest, as of the day this is being written, is John McNamara of the Boston Red Sox. McNamara was in a win-or-else position. The Red Sox had to be near the top and they weren't. You can't fire the whole club. Ergo, you get rid of the manager. It could be related to the sacrificial lamb theory. YR wonders, "Does this make Billy Martin and John McNamara eligible for unemployment benefits?"

Wrestling — Chris Cody, son of Leo and Mary Cody of Binghamton, who keeps winning all sorts of tournaments against international competition, is going to Colorado. Chris will be there trying to make the Olympic wrestling team. In his last time out in Atlanta, Chris was the object of poor officiating. He was disqualified. The first time ever for Chris. Now, he faces the uphill battle to make the team. Good luck, Chris. All your fans from Div 1-Broome County will be pulling for you.

Tour De France — Is without last year's winner Stephen Roche of Ireland. Roche injured himself prior to this race(?) and had to withdraw. YR is watching the Americans and the Canadians to see how well they do. Bicycle racing is big in Europe. It hasn't yet made an impact on the States, except for a few die-hards and few locations.

Golf — The Big News in golf concerns the U.S. Open which was held outside of Boston. This should have been just another prestigious tournament. It wasn't. Golf Digest had their special edition which featured many articles about the U.S. Open. One of these articles was written by an Englishman, a free-lance writer. This short article included every hackneyed, trite and misconstrued stereotype about Irish. Supposedly he wrote it as humor. The only humor about it was that he got paid for it. YR didn't see the article until after the fact. The Associated Press picked up the story about the protest by the Mayor of Boston, Ray Flynn and the Archbishop, Bernard Cardinal Law. YR checked it out. These are the facts:

Golf Digest did hire the guy. The guy wrote the article. Then the Boston Globe picked the article to be included in an advertising supplement on the U.S. Open. The Boston Globe maintained that it didn't hire the guy to write it; were ignorant of what the article contained. They also maintained they could not pull the 200,000 supplements that it was in off the streets. The Golf Digest is owned by the New York Times Company. YR wrote to each of these publications saying as how the AP had picked the story up, that now it was necessary to apologize to the other Irishmen and women in the U.S., especially the AOH. The Boston Globe sent a reply that rehearsed their stand, that they just purchased the article, that's all. They were not guilty of anything. It was all the Golf Digest's fault. The New York Times Company sent a very nice letter, apologizing for one of their publications using such a derogatory article against the Irish or any ethnic group. In this letter, the New York Times Company spelled out the steps being taken to correct this article and to make amends for poor judgement. Overall, YR was impressed by the New York Times Company, unimpressed by the Boston Globe. The Golf Digest did not reply to YR's letter. There are those who are sure enough of their position that they will admit that a mistake has been made and apologize for it and take steps to see it doesn't happen again. There are others who like Pontius Pilate wash their hands of the whole thing. Then there are those who think if you ignore it the problem will go away. So fans, draw your conclusions.

Nota Bene — The NBA 1987-88 season is over. The LA Lakers won the title. The championship play-offs were played or perhaps we should say this championship series finally ended in June. Practice begins in August. Enjoy the time off. All YR can say to this is, "Deo Gratias, Alleluia!"

What It Means To Be Irish

JEFF DAVIS

Binghamton, N.Y., Columnist

Stepping into Mike Heslin's kitchen is akin to gaining entry to Irish-American consciousness. Mixed with the humor and the gab is a healthy measure of passion and a profound understanding of pain.

Michael P. Heslin, 42 Whitney Ave., Binghamton, is a dedicated Hibernian. Heavily involved with Broome County's Ancient Order of Hibernians, Heslin writes for the National Hibernian Digest and has written for the Irish Echo, a major Irish-American weekly newspaper published in New York.

As St. Patrick's Day approached this week, I asked Heslin and his wife, Sheila, if we could meet to discuss what it means to be Irish.

Before the Tuesday evening session concluded, there had been a Pat-and-Mike story, a reference or two to the Bishop and some sobering talk about the English government's often brutal handling of the Ulster tinderbox.

"You have the same problem in the Middle East," Heslin said of the conflict in Northern Ireland, "only they get better television coverage."

Heslin said the British government encourages the simplistic notion that the troubles in Ireland are rooted in a centuries-old religious war. That pat approach obscures the economic ramifications of the conflict between Protestants and Catholics, he said. It also encourages a resignation to hopelessness.

"There is a history of job discrimination that goes back 400 years," Heslin said. "I know a man who came here from the North because he couldn't get work there as an electrician. He is Catholic, and each time he went for a job he was told, 'You can have a job as long as your father and grandfather held it before you.' Of course, there's no way that can happen for a Catholic."

"Also, the South doesn't want to take in the six counties of Ulster because of economic problems," Heslin added. "There are plenty of economic difficulties in the Irish Republic, too."

Because of those difficulties, he said the United States is faced with a serious Irish immigrant problem. Skilled Irish workers are making their way to the U.S. illegally to live and work here.

"We're not talking about cheap labor," Heslin said. "It's intelligent labor, but not necessarily legal labor. It seems to be Ireland's biggest export at this time."

As the conversation drifted on, it acquired an increasingly local flavor, which went well with the coffee Sheila Heslin was serving. Sheila said her heritage is Irish and German, in a 50-50 split. But, she added, her family tells her she got all the green genes in the pool.

On Tuesday, the Heslin home was still jammed with the remains of last Saturday's AOH-sponsored St. Patrick's Day parade in downtown Binghamton.

With bright sunshine, warm temperatures and a record crowd that Heslin estimated at 55,000 people, the Hibernians' parade was a success by anyone's standards.

Heslin said the parade was the city's 21st, and he saw it as a symbol of community for Irish-Americans in Broome County.

"My father was born in County Cavan, which once was part of Ulster," he said. "And my mother came from Clare, way down in the south. They met over here, got married and raised eight kids."

"My father came over here in the early 1920s. The Royal Ulster Constabulary barracks burned down, and the next day he was on his way to America."

"When I was growing up in Binghamton, I was brought up in a very Irish family. But there were no parades or anything like that. It was nice to see the parade Saturday. It makes you feel like we're part of the community."

Heslin graduated from Binghamton's St. Patrick's School in 1954. Employed by Universal Instruments Corp., he is bespectacled; his thinning hair is tousled and gray.

During his youth, Heslin said, Binghamton's Irish-American population tended to be self-contained in neighborhood enclaves, like The Patch on Binghamton's East Side.

"You're in the Patch now," he said as the talk returned to what it means to be Irish. There was a twinkle in Sheila Heslin's eye as her husband handed a visitor a photocopy of a scroll written in Old English text. The scroll, which was given to Heslin by a representative of the Irish government, said:

"I do not choose to be a common man."

"It is my right to be uncommon — if I can. I seek opportunity — not security. I do not wish to be a kept citizen, humbled and dulled by having the state look after me."

"I want to take the calculated risk; to dream and to build, to fail and to succeed."

"I refuse to barter incentive for a dole. I prefer the challenges of life to the guaranteed existence; the thrill of fulfillment to the stale calm of utopia."

"I will not trade freedom for beneficence nor my dignity for a handout. I will never cower before any master nor bend to any threat."

"It is my heritage to stand erect, proud and unafraid; to think and act for myself, enjoy the benefit of my creations and to face the world boldly and say, 'This I have done.'"

"All this is what it means to be Irish."

political belief and national origin. By doing this it breaches the European Convention on Human Rights which guarantees a right to family life (article 8) without discrimination (article 14). Republican prisoners are retained here as Rudolph Hess figures for political purposes.

MENTAL AND PHYSICAL DANGER IN PRISON

Injury and abuse to Irish prisoners (including the Birmingham and Guildford defendants) within prison is considerably documented. Others have been held in extended (almost limitless) conditions of sensory deprivation — solitary confinement, causing physical (ear and eye injury) and mental damage.

POST SENTENCING DIFFERENCES

A form of re-sentencing (effectively retrospective legislation) has been taking place in the past 3 years whereby prisoners serving discretionary life sentences (not for murder) have been told they cannot expect to be considered for release before they have served a minimum of 20 years.

In the case of the man referred to above (moved 60 times) this has led to absurd discrepancies as between co-defendants (4 were the last prisoners to be transferred to prisons in the North in 1976). What is clear is that totally different principles apply where a person has been convicted.

American Revolution

1783, there was a huge patriotic celebration at Jamaica Avenue and Parsons Boulevard, Jamaica, attended by all the Whigs in the county. Smaller festivities occurred at Dutch Kills and Astoria; thirteen candles were placed in every window in honor of the new thirteen-state nation.

The physical damage produced by the Revolution took years to heal — houses delapidated, fences destroyed, acres of timber cut — but the social damage was even greater — families split by divided loyalties and neighbor set against neighbor. Feeling ran so high against active Loyalists that many could not return for years; often death alone put an end to the alienations and enmities of the war years.

This proclamation of the Commander-in-chief of the British forces in Queens, General William Howe, promised to all Loyalists protection of person and property. The Loyalists wore red ribbons around their hats to indicate their disapproval of the rebellion and their faithfulness to king and country.

PROCLAMATION

By his Excellency the Honorable WILLIAM HOWE, General and Commander in Chief of all His Majesty's Forces, within the Colonies lying on the Atlantic Ocean, from Nova Scotia, to West Florida, inclusive, &c, &c, &c.

WHEREAS it is represented, that many of the loyal inhabitants of this Island have been compelled by the Leaders in Rebellion to take up Arms against His Majesty's Government; Notice is hereby given to all Persons forced into Rebellion, that on delivering themselves up at the HEADQUARTERS of the Army, they will be received as faithful Subjects; have Permits to return peaceably to their respective Dwellings, and meet with full Protection for their Persons and Property.

All those who chuse to take up Arms for the Restoration of Order and good Government within this Island, shall be disposed of in the best Manner, and have every Encouragement that can be expected.

GIVEN under my HAND, at Head Quarters on Long Island this 23rd Day of August 1776.

Government Bail Doesn't Work in Northern Ireland or Here!

"By Dawn's Early Light" War of 1812

By HARRY MCGUIRK

The Empire Builders of England had made a decision to return America to its previous status as a colony under the British crown. King George of England sent his powerful navy to harass American shipping to cripple the economy of the new republic.

Patriotic Americans who were anxious to build a powerful defense force of land and sea forces were called "hawks."

There was apathy in government under President Madison. History books record the nation's capital was ted of a terrorist offence to normal penal procedures.

CONCLUSION

In all, at every stage, concrete evidence exists to show that Irish suspects charged with "terrorist" offences enjoy a totally different prospect in relation to detention, trial and sentence from any other suspects. One would not want to suggest that the system of justice in England is any other than deeply flawed. There is no constitution, no proper safeguards for suspects, the announcement of the abolition of the right to silence, and an increasing attribution of those rights that exist. In that general context the worsened situation of Irish suspects is even more worrying. One can guarantee miscarriages of justice now that extradition has been implemented.

not defended. Worse still there was open treachery. Three New England states, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Massachusetts, decided to discuss secession from the United States and make a separate pact with England. This was called the Hartford Convention.

This young nation was demoralized by the success of British expeditionary forces which captured Washington, D.C., and burned the city including the White House.

The young American navy restored morale to patriot citizens. Three American frigates, the Constitution, the President and the United States, were fast and threw a strong broadside. On August 19, 1812 the British frigate Guerriere had an encounter with the Constitution about six hundred miles out from Boston. British canon balls bounced harmlessly off the famous American warship; but the British ship was left a pile of timberwood.

The Constitution was forever to be known as "Old Ironsides." Just three days before this happened, on August 16, 1812, American General William Hull surrendered his army to the British. After many a debacle on the land, the Battle of New Orleans saw a massacre of British redcoats. They suffered over 2000 casualties. The slain British commander-in-chief, Sir Edward Pakenham, was shipped back to England in a cask of rum (to preserve his body). Weeks after this fierce battle both sides heard of the truce which had been signed, the Treaty of Ghent.

What it is...

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAAOH members by 1953 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and the LAOH. In 1963, the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Bursary Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.

Bride Bill Gaining Momentum

NEW YORK: Activities of the three largest New York City pension funds demonstrate that American companies continue to resist equality in employment in Northern Ireland. New York City Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin states.

Acting on behalf of the New York City Employees Retirement System, the Teachers Retirement System and the Police Pension Fund, this spring Mr. Goldin submitted a record number of shareholder resolutions calling on corporations for the adoption of the MacBride Principles, a set of equal opportunity guidelines for American companies with facilities in Northern Ireland.

Shareholder support for pro-MacBride resolutions averaged 7.7% significantly more than obtains for most stockholder initiatives opposed by management. The Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal agency which monitors shareholder actions, considers votes that exceed 3% are significant, Mr. Goldin noted.

Although no American firms that operate in Northern Ireland have yet endorsed the MacBride Principles publicly, with many fearing reprisals by the British government, a number are making changes called for by MacBride.

"I hope our 1988 shareholder activity will help keep the pressure on the Thatcher government to put teeth into her government's pitifully weak anti-discrimination program in Northern Ireland," Mr. Goldin said.

The dollar value of the shares that voted for the MacBride Principles resolutions in 1988 was nearly $4 billion. Eleven religious groups affiliated with the Interfaith Center for Corporate Responsibility, as well as the New York State Retirement System, joined the City pension systems in sponsoring the resolutions.

Support for the MacBride Principles is growing in legislatures around the country, the Comptroller said. On the local level last year Detroit, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Wilmington, Delaware, joined New York City in adopting the MacBride Principles as part of their official investment policy. Also last year, Connecticut, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania joined New York State in mandating that official investment policy recognize the MacBride Principles. Previously, Florida, Minnesota, Illinois and Maine also became MacBride states. Legislation mandating that investments adhere to the MacBride Principles is pending in eleven other states.

Irish Immigration Issue Amidst Crisis

On March 15, 1988 the Kennedy/Simpson Bill (S.2104) passed the Senate by a vote of 88-4. The Kennedy/Simpson Bill, which is by no means an Irish Bill, would provide some alleviation to the Irish immigration crisis.

On June 22 hearings were held by the Immigration Sub-Committee of the House of Representatives. At these hearings several immigration bills pending in the House were discussed and testimony was heard from key players in the immigration campaign, namely Representatives Brian Donnelly (D-MA) and Joe DioGuardi (R-NY).

It was hoped by the Irish Immigration Reform Movement (I.I.R.M.) and the AOH representatives on the I.I.W.C.'s, namely Nick Murphy and Jack Irwin, New York, and Jack Meehan, Boston, and other Irish American organizations that companion legislation to S.2104 would emerge from these hearings. Such was not the case. It is the opinion of the I.I.R.M. observers at the hearings that little progress was made.

Up to Thursday, July 28th, little seemed to have been happening. On that date Congressman Rodino, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, introduced a favorable immigration bill, H.R. 5115, entitled Legal Immigration Amendments of 1988.

An analysis of H.R. 5115 manifests that it contains provisions favorable to Irish immigrants. It creates a new independent category with 150,000 annual visas encompassing three categories of immigrants.

- (1) Those of exceptional ability and members of the professions: 50,000.
- (2) Skilled and unskilled workers.

Exclusive to Hibernian Digest

Interview with Gerry Adams, President of Sinn Fein and Member of British Parliament

Conducted by SCOTT S. SMITH

What led to your involvement in the movement to end the British presence in Ireland?

I grew up in Belfast when polarization was peaceful but when I was at college I encountered my first experience with repression when the British paramilitary force, the Royal Ulster Constabulary, attacked a Sinn Fein headquarters. I was slowly led into the civil rights movement, based largely on that of blacks in the United States at that time in the late 1960s, to end discrimination against Catholics and to gain voting rights. The civil rights struggle led to a violent reaction against it, even though it was non-violent, because the British state could not concede the demands, and that commenced the struggle for national liberation. The British army were rushed to the streets to prevent the state from collapsing in 1969 and the stage was set. The conflict has been between those who want to see full sovereignty for the Irish people and those who oppose it.

Passive resistance was effective in India against the British. Why was non-violent direct action abandoned in Ireland and do you see its revival in the '88 committees?

Civil disobedience here is on-going in that republicans have removed their consent to be governed by the British state, as expressed by, for example, voting for Sinn Fein or refusing to answer questions put to them by British soldiers. The armed struggle is just a manifestation of British militarization of the situation and the British occupation force makes purely non-militant efforts unlikely to be effective. If there were a way to develop an unarmed struggle, republicans would be for that — we did not bring the gun into the political situation. The 68 Committees

Thanks, Mario

Dear Mario:

Twenty years ago the British government rolled tanks into Derry and Belfast in an effort to crush the civil rights movement through a systematic oppression befitting the Nazi's in Poland or the Russians in Hungary. Amongst America's nationally elected officials yours was the first — and for a long time the only voice — consistently raised against this tyranny.

What was at first a fair and politic thing for you to do, soon became a moral obligation; it was a matter of conscience to speak against British violence. Your courage and that of those who followed your leadership in the Ad Hoc Committee for Irish Affairs brought the British war machine to a grinding halt as Americans demanded answers to your probing questions. There are few Congressmen in my lifetime who stood tall and firm against the pin-stripe crowd at Foggy Bottom and said no to placing .357 magnums in the hands of the most discredited police force in Europe — the Royal Ulster Constabulary. There are many in the six occupied Irish counties who owe their very lives to you and the Members of the Ad Hoc Committee, who rightfully demanded that the other side of this conflict be placed before a free people for all to see and judge.

Throughout your tenure in Congress and as a true Irish-American leader, you have been vilified by the British propaganda machine and slandered for speaking the truth about British misrule in Ireland. This is perhaps your most enduring legacy to Americans who want an end to this conflict and to the British troops that prompt it. Many elected officials pushed out their St. Patrick's Day statements and were never heard from again and still others — most notably those with Irish names — would tiptoe on the condemnation chorus line without ever asking for American resolve to intervene. You, Mario, were there from Bloody Sunday, pricking the American conscience and drawing the lightning of British arrogance and hatred. In the words of Padraig Pearse "you were faithful and you fought."

God Bless you for your dedicated service to the people of Ireland. Until

President's Message

Teachtaineacht an Uachtaráin

By Michael J. Coogan, National President

At our national convention held in Cleveland, I was elected your National President. I wish to thank all the delegates for their faith in my ability to lead the order for the next two years.

I would also like to thank the Hibernians in Cleveland for the tremendous job they did in hosting the convention, the first held in Ohio in 104 years.

As a national organization, we must set goals which will be responsive both to the demands of a modern world and to the needs of our own members, who look to our organization as the foremost leader within the Irish-American community.

The first order of business of a new administration is the appointing and assigning of duties to members who will constitute the National Board. This has been accomplished and you will find their names listed elsewhere in this issue. I have instructed them to work and cooperate with all state, county and division officers. I request all state, county and division officers to give your fullest cooperation to the National Board. Only by working together can we accomplish our goals.

There are now an estimated 100,000 illegal Irish aliens in the United States. They come here fleeing political unrest and violence in the north and economic depression and unemployment in the south, seeking refuge in the United States as did our forefathers. Yet these young, well educated, well motivated emigrants have been denied legal entrance to our country because United States current immigration policy is restrictive and, in its very nature, anti-Irish.

A favorable immigration bill, HR 5115, entitled "Legal Immigration Amendment of 1988," introduced by Congressman Rodino of New Jersey, and co-sponsored by Congressman the final chapter of British occupation in Ireland is written, the name of Mario Biaggi will remain in our prayers for good health, and a long life, and in our hearts filled with gratitude for a job well done.

Michael Coogan
National President

Romona Mazzoli of Kentucky, contains provisions favorable to the Irish immigrant.

Your new National Director, Jack Irwin, whom I have appointed National Chairman of Immigration, urges all members to support this important piece of legislation. Call or write your district congressman; ask for his support of HR 5115 "Legal Immigration Amendment of 1988."

Since 1836 when the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America was founded, it has supported all efforts for an independent and free Ireland of 32 counties. We will continue this effort and I remind you that Ireland has but one enemy — the Government of England. I urge all members to support Martin Higgins, your National Chairman for the Freedom of all Ireland Committee.

One of the duties of this committee is raising funds to support families in Ireland in need of financial aid. I ask each division to hold one or two fund-raisers a year with all proceeds going to this worthy cause. Also we need your support in helping to secure the passage of the MacBride Principles. Past National President and Chairman of the Political Education Committee Joe Roche will welcome all your support in this effort.

Membership is the life-blood of all organizations. Under the energetic leadership of Tom Gilligan, your new National Organizer, we are looking for a net increase of 20 percent in membership over the next two years. Tom cannot do it alone. He needs the help of all state, county and division membership chairmen, along with the support of all members.

I have named National Director John McInerney Retention Chairman. His duties will be to contact all divisions and members who are behind in their assessment and dues; try to determine why they are losing interest in the Order and what corrections are needed to revive and keep their interest.

In future issues, I will highlight the work and needs of other committees on our National Board. Please pray that Ireland will soon become a 32-county, free Irish Republic. Because until then, there will be no peace.

investors and retirees: 50,000 visas.

(3) New "seed" immigrants based on a point system: 50,000 visas.

In addition, H.R.5115 extends Section 314 of IRCA 1986 (the Donnelly Visa program). H.R.5115 would allow for 10,000 visas each year for five years to be awarded in a lottery to immigrants from the 36 countries disadvantaged by the 1965 Immigration and Nationality Act. Irish immigrants did very well in the last visa lottery, capturing approximately 40 percent of the visas. It is expected that such would be the case under this new provision.

The I.I.R.M. has decided to support H.R. 5115 for the following reasons:

(1) The Bill contains provisions which would be favorable to Irish immigrants.

(2) H.R. 5115, unlike the Kennedy/Simpson Bill (S.2104), does not tamper with the family preference system. Much of the opposition to S.2104 came from Asian and Hispanic groups who opposed it on the grounds that it interfered with the family preference system. The fact that H.R.5115 does not so interfere increases greatly its chances of passage.

In fact H.R.5115 also contains provisions favorable to Asians and Hispanics. The Bill provides 800,000 visas for close family members of aliens legalized under the amnesty provision of I.R.C.A. and it also provides 200,000 visas to clear backlogs in the 2nd preference category.

(3) H.R.5115 was introduced by Congressman Rodino, Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, who is recognized as the most powerful and influential Representative on immigration legislation. H.R.5115 is also co-sponsored by Congressman Romano Mazzoli, Chairman of the House Immigration Sub-Committee. These factors dramatically increase the Bill's chance of passage.

(4) Senator Edward Kennedy is

I.I.R.M.

In the election year of 1988, it seems that this, the 100th Congress could be hesitant to pass legislation that would ease the Irish immigration crisis. We in the Irish American community must not regard the possibility pessimistically, but rather as a challenge.

We must get favorable legislation through in this Congress. Trojan work has been done by organizations like the Ancient Order of Hibernians, American-Irish Political Education Committee, Catholic Charities, The Emerald Societies, The Irish American Labor Coalition, The Irish American Unity Conference, The Irish American Business Coalition on Immigration Reform and the Irish Immigration Reform Movement to bring the immigration campaign to its present level. Congress is expected to dissolve in early October. If favorable legislation is not obtained in this Congress, then the entire legislative process will have to be initiated all over again. This may be a setback from which the Irish immigration lobby campaign might not recover.

The passage of favorable legislation is urgently and specifically necessary for the following reasons:

(a) to relieve the plight of the undocumented Irish in the U.S.

(b) to open up U.S. immigration to also delighted with the introduction of H.R.5115. Indeed it is believed that the persuasions and coaxing of Senator Kennedy were very influential in prompting Rodino and Mazzoli to move.

(5) The Irish Government fully supports the Bill.

(6) If the Bill has a successful passage through the House of Representatives, then a House-Senate conference will be convened where the Kennedy/Simpson Bill S.2104 and the Rodino/Mazzoli Bill H.R.5115 will be analyzed and a compromise bill will be produced which will be forwarded to the President for signing.

The successful passage of H.R.5115 depends on you to a large extent. There are only a few productive weeks left in this Congress.

•Please call your local Congressman and ask him to support H.R. 5115 Legal Immigration Amendments of 1988.

•Please encourage all your friends and members of your Division to call their Congressman to urge him to support H.R.5115.

The survival of the Irish American community and the salvation of a generation of Irish immigrants is now in your hands. We would be very grateful if you could mail any replies you receive to I.I.R.M., 33-01 Greenpoint Avenue, Long Island City, NY 11101.

the Irish again.

(c) to ensure the continuity of the Irish American community by revitalizing it with new influxes of Irish immigrants.

While the passage of favorable immigration legislation is necessary for these reasons it is also necessary in order to prove to ourselves as a community and to America, that the Irish American community is capable of acting as a united, organized, cohesive force and is capable of obtaining favorable federal legislation.

H.R. 5115 and S. 2104, which if enacted would be favorable to Irish immigrants, are currently being considered by the House Immigration Sub-Committee.

Please pursue the following course of action.

(1) Please call the member whose district is closest to you and tell him that Irish immigrants have contributed much to the very foundation and development of the U.S.

(2) Tell him that it is almost impossible for the Irish to immigrate legally to the U.S. under current immigration policy.

(3) Tell him that as an American voter of Irish heritage, this situation is unacceptable to you.

(4) Ask that he support and vote positively on H.R. 5115 and S.2104 or any legislation that would be favorable to Irish immigrants.

(5) Tell him that you want favorable immigration legislation passed in this Congress.

(6) Advise him that you will be monitoring his position on such legislation as it moves through Congress.

Favorable immigration legislation is essential for the Irish American Community. You have the power to ensure its passage. The future of the Irish American community is in your hands. Unity, organization, cohesiveness and political pressure is working for the MacBride Principles; let's make it work for immigration reform.

Vice President's Message

I want to take this opportunity to thank my brother delegates for the many courtesies extended to me and for the great support that you showed me at our recent National Convention in Cleveland.

The office of the National Vice President over the next two years will be quite active. From time to time you will be receiving many communications. My major goal over the next two years will be to remind

State, County and Division vice presidents that they are responsible for promoting the Major Degrees of our Order as well as the fact that they are in charge of promoting Junior Divisions under their jurisdiction. We ask that they take this job seriously.

In addition, we ask that Division Vice Presidents extend assistance to all appointive officers in the performance of their duties, and see that legal holidays of our Order are observed with dignity.

The office of the National Vice President will be publishing a directory of all Major Degree Teams and Hibernian Building Associations throughout the U.S. Correspondence on this last matter has already been sent, and we are requesting a return deadline of November 1, 1988.

National Officers Meet

THE TOP FOUR OFFICERS of the AOH National Board met for a weekend work session August 12-14 at the national secretary's office in Auburn, NY. Among the many items on the agenda were the questions of establishing a national board budget, duties of the various national board officers, establishing goals for each national officer, and implementation of resolutions passed during the recent convention. Each acknowledged that the prolonged session was exceedingly productive, making each more fully cognizant of the direction the National Board could be expected to take in the next two years. The leadership team, left to right, are National Treasurer Edward J. Wallace; National President Michael J. Coogan; National Secretary Thomas D. McNabb; and National Vice President Michael Carroll.

First Official Visit

WHILE IN AUBURN, NY, National President Michael J. Coogan made an official visit on August 12 to the local AOH John F. Kennedy Division 1. This was the first official stop by the newly elected national president outside his home state of Ohio. Welcoming the Order's new leader are, left to right, National Secretary Tom McNabb, Division President Michael Aldrich, Coogan, Standing Committee Member Donald Barry, Division Recording Secretary Joseph A. Donnelly, and New York State Organizer John M. Burns.

Phases of Irish History

By MICHAEL McCORMACK

This column will be a regular feature of the Digest to inform members of the activities of the National Historian's Office. Permit me first to thank President Mike Coogan for his faith in me, and to express my gratitude to all who extended their best wishes on my appointment. I shall do my best to be worthy of the honor. I have called this column "Phases of Irish History" in memory of our late past national president, Judge James J. Comerford, who authored a column of that name in the Irish Echo, newspaper many years ago. Judge Comerford was a friend, an inspiration, and a source of unlimited encouragement through my 16 years as Division Historian, 14 years as Suffolk County Historian, and 8 years as New York State Historian. My only regret is that he passed to his reward before seeing how this fledgling historian benefitted from his advice and encouragement.

The National Historian's Office has embarked on several projects, and hereby solicits support of all AOH historians as part of their official duties. Suggestions for future projects shall be gratefully accepted, and announced as they commence. Current projects include:

a. National Essay Competition — The competition will be run in conjunction with, and supplement the essay competition sponsored by the LAOH for elementary and high school students. Our competition will be for college and open (non-student) levels. Further, the subject matter of our competitions will be current events (tomorrow's history) and will provide source material for our National Order in their efforts at immigration reform and defeat of the Extradition Treaty. Historians at all levels are urged to promote and participate in this competition.

b. The Holland Project — The first working submarine and its prototype are presently in the rear of a museum in Patterson, N.J. These submarines, Holland I, and The Fenian Ram, were invented by John P. Holland of Liscannor, Co. Clare, and became the forerunners of the great U.S. Navy submarine fleet of today. This office feels that they deserve to be properly displayed. Similarly, over 10,000 personal documents of Mr. Holland are in the museum's possession, but cannot be viewed by researchers until properly catalogued and archived. These include original drawings, biographical material, and letters from such leading Fenians of the day as Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa, James Stephens, and John Breslin. The New Jersey State Board has accepted the lead on this project and, in conjunction with the Connecticut State Board and this office, will raise funds to catalogue the Holland papers, publish a pamphlet on his life, and create a suitable display for this remarkable collection of Irish and American historical material.

c. Books for Libraries — Individual divisions are encouraged to purchase quality hardcover books on Irish topics for donation to the public library in their communities. Several sources of reasonable, historically accurate books will be provided as they are determined. Two recommended sources are the Hibernian Readers Guild, AOH Books, 89 S. Broadway, Lawrence, MA 01843; and Devin Adair Publishers, Irish Books Division, 6 N. Water St., Greenwich, CT 06830. Presentation of the books should be scheduled for the 3rd or 4th week in February so that the combined nationwide effort can be publicized around St. Patrick's Day.

d. Monuments & Sites Project — Each state, county, and division historian is asked to compile a listing of Irish monuments, plaques, graves, buildings, and historical sites in their geographic area for submittal to this office. A brief explanation is requested, if available, with each submittal for compiling a directory for members who travel through various parts of the country, and for documenting these historical sites before they are forgotten forever. As a fundraiser, you may consider a local area map showing these historical sites and any Irish gift shops, restaurants, or other businesses in the area. Solicitations from the business people whose shops are included would help pay for the map and support the fundraiser.

e. Profiles in Patriotism — A monthly reading of Irish history suitable for use at meetings of the Order and focusing on an Irish patriot will be provided to any county and division historian requesting it. To be placed on the mailing list for this material, please make a copy of the official Form 9 confirming your name, address, and appointment as historian, and send it to the National Historian's Office, 37 Harrison Ave., Centereach, NY 11720.

RETURN OF A TRADITION

I am pleased to announce the Ancient Order of Hibernians National Essay Competition for 1988-89. I can think of no better way to insure the perpetuation of our beloved heritage than to promote the study and research of subjects associated with our noble race. We are running this competition in conjunction with the essay competition sponsored by our Ladies AOH in order to insure maximum participation at all levels. The Ladies competition will be for Grade School and High School while this competition will be conducted for College and Open levels. Since each competition is open to all, we encourage young men of Grade and High School age to participate in the Ladies Competition as we welcome the entries of the ladies in our competition.

All state, county and division historians are encouraged to promote the Essay within their regional areas as part of their official responsibilities. The following rules shall apply:

a. Division and/or county level historians are encouraged to advertise and solicit participation in local colleges, church organizations, and public forums. Entries in each category shall be accepted by the division or county historian no later than February 1, 1989. They shall be judged by an impartial panel of three or more, and two (2) entries in each category shall be forwarded to the state historian for consideration no later than February 15, 1989. Historians are encouraged to award prizes of recognition for those whose entries have been accepted for forwarding to the state level. A modest budget for postage and printing may be requested from their local jurisdiction.

b. State historians will accept no more than two entries from each subordinate jurisdiction which shall be judged by an impartial panel of three or more. Two entries in each category shall be forwarded to the national historian for consideration no later than March 15, 1989. State historians are encouraged to award prizes of recognition for those whose entries have been accepted for forwarding to the national level. A modest budget for postage and printing may be requested from their state board.

c. An impartial national panel shall select a first, second, and third prize. In each of the categories, notify the winners, and arrange for presentation of the awards through the local historians.

d. Essays should be typed or neatly handwritten on white paper, 8½ by 11 in size, written on one side only. Contestants shall not write name, address, local division, or any identifying mark on the essay. This information shall be on a separate sheet of paper and clipped or stapled to the essay.

Topics and Awards

Since today's happenings are tomorrow's history, the topics for this competition will explore current events in the hope that our contestants may furnish data that will aid the AOH in pursuit of immigration reform and repeal of the recent extradition treaty with Great Britain.

John Barry Exploits

Although the British under General Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown in October, 1781, Washington formally announced the closing of the war on April 19, 1783. On March 10, 1783, the last battle of the war took place on the sea between Captain John Barry of the "Alliance" and the "Sybille" under the British commander, Captain Vashon.

Captain Greene of the Continental ship, "Duke de Luzerne" was carrying a large amount of money for Congress and was in the company of Captain Barry. It was Barry's job to protect the "Luzerne." However, both ships were set upon by three British vessels, including the "Sybille" in the Gulf of Florida. Barry guided Captain Greene's bulky boat out of danger and in the meantime engaged in a spirited encounter with the "Sybille."

Captain Barry writes: "I have the pleasure to inform you that on the 6th of March, 1783, I sailed from The Havana in the company of Captain Greene with the Duke de Luzerne. . . . On the morning of the 20th we saw three large ships standing directly before us. . . . was a convincing proof to me they were enemy ships. . . . I then ordered the courses haul's up. . . . by bringing the enemy to action which I did in a few moments close on board for 45 minutes, then the enemy sheered off."

Captain Vashon, the "sheered off," — explains the encounter more thoroughly: "He never had received such a drubbing" and never before saw a ship so ably fought as the "Alliance" under Barry's orders. "The coolness and intrepidity, no less than the skill and fertility in expedients, which Barry displayed on the occasion are described in naval annals as truly wonderful; every quality of a great naval commander was brought out with extraordinary brilliancy."

Well spoken — by an Englishman! Good as a toast on September 13 — John Barry Day.

Ireland is famous for its crystal. Every piece is the product of rare craftsmanship and strict adherence to quality.

The same is true for Budweiser.

We brew our beer with the finest hops, rice, and barley malt. Then we age it with Beechwood, to aid the natural carbonation. The result is a clean, crisp taste that has been distinctively Budweiser's for over one hundred years.

For those who appreciate quality, this Bud's for you.

Dennis Long Presented The 1988 J.F.K. Medal

DENNIS PATRICK LONG of Sunset Hills, Missouri, with his John F. Kennedy Memorial Medal, awarded at the 1988 AOH National Convention.

CLEVELAND: Dennis Patrick Long, recipient of the 1988 J.F.K. Memorial Medal, addressed the gathered convention delegates here on receiving the prized award. His inspirational acceptance follows:

President Murphy, President-Elect Coogan, Bishop Pilla, Father Malloy, honored guests, fellow Hibernians: I am indeed proud and honored to receive this prestigious award. To me, it is very special, something I will forever treasure.

It is special because it bears the name of one of the greatest human beings of all time, John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

It is special because of the stature of the individuals who have received this award in the past.

And most important — at least to me — it is special because it comes from the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Our nation is blessed with several Irish American organizations, but few compare to the AOH. Few have established as strong a reputation as has the organization to which we all belong. To be honored by one of the world's most dynamic Irish groups is a thrill I shall never forget.

To be Irish is to be blessed, for — as is the case with most Irish Americans — my County Kerry heritage has provided me the incredible richness of Ireland's culture, adding depth and meaning to my life. At the same time, the many contributions that Ireland's sons and daughters have made to the United States have served as a constant inspiration.

Consider that in the field of politics, eight signers of the declaration of independence were born or their parents born in Ireland, and 17 presidents of the United States have traced all or a part of their ancestry to Ireland — from Andrew Jackson, to John Fitzgerald Kennedy, to Ronald Reagan. More presidents have been of Irish descent than any other nationality.

Consider such heroes as Captain John Barry — the father of the American navy; Major General John Sullivan, who compiled a distinguished record in the Revolutionary War, and William "Wild Bill" Donovan, who fought with the "Fighting 68th" in World War I and headed the Office of Strategic Services during the Second World War.

Consider such remarkable people as Eugene O'Neill, F. Scott Fitzgerald, John O'Hara and George M. Cohan.

Consider John L. Sullivan, who showed the world what an Irishman could do in the ring, Babe Ruth, Steve Garvey, John McEnroe, and so many other athletes who trace their heritage to the Emerald Isle.

And in business, consider the dynasties built by the Irish at the turn of this century, and the fact that more than 30% of the current chief executives of the Fortune 500 companies are of Irish descent.

Those are merely examples. Add to

Hibernians Institute the Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award

CLEVELAND, OHIO: At its 84th National Convention here in July the AOH instituted the Sean MacBride Memorial award by unanimous accord, creating the opportunity to honor the famous Irish Nobelist and to encourage others to follow in his footsteps where peace, justice and economic well being of Ireland is concerned. The granting of the award will be governed by the following rules:

SEAN MACBRIDE HUMANITARIAN AWARD

Section 1. To memorialize the Human Rights contributions made by Nobel Peace laureate, Dr. Sean MacBride, and to recognize the efforts of others who make similar contributions in the cause of peace, justice and the economic well being of the Irish people, the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America shall award bi-annually, at the National Board Meeting, a bust or likeness of Dr. Sean MacBride. The award will be conferred without regard to the nominee's race, creed, sex, religion, color or national origin.

Section 2. The award will be presented in the year between National Conventions.

Section 3. The National Vice President shall serve as the Chairman of the nominating and award committees. Other members of the nominating committee shall be all members of the National Board, both elected and appointed, all State presidents, all County Presidents and the National President of the Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, Inc. The same officers will constitute the election board for the award.

Section 4. The chairman of the Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award shall, in the first week of November of the year prior to the National Board meeting, send to all national officers, elected and appointed, all State, District and Provincial Presidents, Division Presidents and the National President of the AOH, a request that the aforementioned send to him, before January 15th of the following year, the name of one nominee for this award. The Chairman shall outline the requirements as indicated in Section 1 of this Article, and shall request that the nominator send a biographical sketch of their nominee, not to exceed 500 words and shall request that the nominator ascertain that the nominee, if selected, would be willing to accept the award at the time and place designated by the National Board.

Section 5. A ballot will be mailed to all eligible for voting, listing in alphabetical order the nominees. The first choice will be worth five (5) points, second choice four (4) points, third choice three (3) points, fourth choice two (2) points and the fifth choice one (1) point. The nominee with the highest number of points will be declared the recipient of the award. Any winner who declines the award at the time and place designated by the National Board will be declared ineligible, and the award will go to the nominee with the next highest number of points.

Section 6. The Chairman shall complete the election on or before March 10th, and he and the national President shall announce the name of the recipient of the Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award at a time they consider most appropriate for the good of the Order.

Section 7. The Chairman shall publicize the selection and granting of this most prestigious award in all sections of the media including the National Hibernian Digest.

Section 8. All travel expenses of the awardee as well as expenses of administration of this award to be paid by the National Board.

An interview with Mary Pike, the attorney for imprisoned Irishman, Joe Doherty, is a lesson in American history, respect for the law, and civil rights.

Joseph Patrick Doherty was arrested in New York City on the sunny Saturday morning of June 18, 1983. The charge: entering the U.S. using an invalid visa. Joe remains to this day, after more than 5 years, in maximum security custody of the Manhattan's Correctional Center in New York City. What makes Joe's story unique? It is a story of political intrigue involving a foreign government interfering in the American judicial system; it involves a scheming Attorney General of the United States who left his post tinged with scandal; it involves gross violation of our revered constitution by our administration in Washington; it involves government leaders ignoring decisions of Federal Judges.

On that fateful day of Joe's arrest a frenzied effort was made to find an attorney who would take Joe's case. The ancient Irish saints must have been watching over Joseph Patrick when Mary Pike, a law partner of Somerstein and Pike, arrived on the scene and took on the job of legally defending Joe Doherty.

On August 23, 1988, Mary Pike trekked out from Manhattan to Suffolk County (N.Y.), and spoke informatively about Joe's case. She had responded to a request initiated by Edward Romaine, Suffolk County legislator, to speak at a Public Information Forum held at the Shirley-Mastic Library at Shirley, N.Y. The story of Joe Doherty as the victim of gross injustice and of the interference into the American legal system by a vengeful British Government, sparked by the vixenish pique of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, left the audience trembling with hurtful indignation.

Joe's story is incredible. He is in prison. He has broken no U.S. laws. Mary Pike has carried forth his legal defense through the many courts of jurisdiction, including the U.S. Federal Courts. In every adjudged case initiated by the British and U.S. governments she has won the day for Joe, but he remains in jail. It has been a tough defense. Fortunately for Joe, Mary Pike has a streak of toughness in her character.

After a few minutes of conversation with Mary, I began to sense that I was experiencing something special. Mary is a very pleasant young woman, tall and pretty with the Manhattan chick of today's young professional. She very quickly acquainted me with the depth of her innate intellect, and her nimble perception of my probing questions. She is bright and clever. She is a sincere, truth-seeking woman. She is one in a million.

Mary hails from Cleveland, Ohio. She attended local Cleveland schools and started her formal education at Chatham College in Pittsburgh. After graduation from Chatham she earned a masters degree at American University in Washington, D.C., and finally her law degree from Georgetown University. She teamed up with a law school friend, Stephen Somerstein, and is now a law partner in the law firm of Somerstein and Pike in New York City. Somerstein and Pike are handling the Joe Doherty case and Mary has principal responsibility.

Mary has no links to political parties, or organizations. She responds to requests for speaking engagements from time to time — never missing a chance to speak out on Joe's behalf. She has worked on the case from the day of Joe's arrest and has no thoughts of letting up. She has dedicated herself to this fight for justice, and believes that her admiration and respect for the dignity and courage that Joe and his family have continually shown has inspired her in her work. She receives no fee and since much of her time is spent on Joe's case she must live modestly and has to forego the usual lavish lifestyle of New York lawyers. She has devoted much of her life during the past 5 years to her mission of pursuing justice (for Joe). Her sympathy for the suffering, oppressed people of Northern Ireland, and for that matter, any of the oppressed people in the world, was plainly evident to me as an interviewer.

During our conversation of about 45 minutes, I began to detect in Mary, a deep, sensitive compassion for the downtrodden, unfortunate people in this world of ours who have been victimized by thoughtless, or cruel and domineering political leaders. Civil rights was, to me, up to now, two loosely used words labeling people who carried placards and marched in places down South complaining about vague things and crying out about injustice. Mary Catholic ghetto surrounded by predominantly Protestant neighborhoods. As a boy, he saw loyalist mobs burn Catholics out of their homes and shoot and kill only because the victims were Catholic. He knew families with successive generations of unemployed fathers. He knew poverty. He watched the unmerciful beatings of his young friends while the Royal Ulster Constabulary ignored their misery and laughed at their bloodied heads. More often than not the RUC were the club wielders. He saw the homes of the innocent invaded, furniture heaved out and burned, and basic human dignity violated. During the terrible violence of the 1960s and 1970s, Joe's oldest sister was one of the first women interned. She was routinely insulted and abused. Another sister was strip searched 82 times before being released from Armagh Prison.

Joe was interned on his 17th birthday for five months without charge or trial. He joined the Irish Republican Army upon his release. A life of violence was his natural environment. It was not a chosen option, but, rather, a defensive reaction against the worst acts of human degradation perpetrated on a decent, religiously devout, helpless society. The oppression continues to this day, and it is a disgraceful history of unmatched bigotry. Diplock court justice (without the benefit of jury or realistic legal defense), contrived unemployment, and brutal subjugation by an occupying military force are the elements of governmental business as usual today as in the past.

It is no wonder that Joe Doherty fought back. He endured three periods of imprisonment for his IRA activities. In 1973 he was sentenced for possession of a firearm, and in

Joe Doherty was born on January 20, 1955 in Belfast, Northern Ireland. He grew up in the turbulent New Lodge Road area, a small

The Right to Read

AOH PRESIDENT MICHAEL COOGAN examines books of great interest to the Irish American community, which he hopes shall win wide circulation through the recently announced Hibernian project, Hibernian Readers' Guild.

Hibernian Readers Guild Announced by Nat'l President

Ancient Order of Hibernians in America National President Michael Coogan has announced the inauguration of the Hibernian Readers' Guild, commencing with this issue of the National Hibernian Digest. Under the direction of National Buy Irish Chairman David R. Burke of Essex County Division 8, Lawrence, Massachusetts, the Hibernian Readers' Guild will offer monthly Selections and Alternates of the finest in Irish books. The subject matter will range from history, political science and politics, to art, literature and special books for children.

Irish books offered by the Hibernian Readers' Guild would make outstanding quality gifts for Christmas, birthdays or graduations. They would enrich your own personal collection or that of the library of a school or municipality. Irish books are an excellent way to introduce children or grandchildren to some of the riches of the Irish culture which is their heritage.

While monthly selections will be offered, subscribers are encouraged to write to the Hibernian Readers' Guild, 89 Broadway, Lawrence, Massachusetts 01843, for more complete listings of available books.

The first two monthly selections are: Paddy's Lament and The Stalker Affair; the first two alternates are: Washington's Irish Policy and To Hell or Connacht.

Fundamental Freedom
In announcing the beginning of the Hibernian Readers' Guild, National President Mike Coogan stated, "The reading and owning of books is a privilege of a free people. While this may seem to be a fundamental right, a glance behind the Iron or the Bamboo Curtain, or indeed at the history of Ireland under English influence, will show that this is not a freedom to be taken lightly.

"By the purchase of an Irish book through the Hibernian Readers' Guild you will do more than exercise a basic American freedom; you will contribute to the enrichment of American life through the cultural enrichment of yourself, of your family and of anyone else with whom you might share the knowledge, experience and beauty gleaned from the pages of that book.

"The United States of America is unique in the history of man; we are building a new nation, E Pluribus Unum, from the contributions of every nation on earth. Irish culture and civilization is the oldest north of the Alps. We the American Irish can contribute more to the enrichment of American life to the extent that we, and our contribution, are more authentically Irish. We can do the same, in microcosm, for our families...."

Buying Irish books through the Hibernian Readers' Guild, is not only culturally beneficial and personally rewarding; it is also an investment in the writing and publishing of good Irish books and it benefits directly all programs of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

PADDY'S LAMENT by Thomas Gallagher

An electrifying account of the Great Famine and the subsequent tidal wave of emigration to America. No other event so changed the future of the history of Ireland, and no other book brings home so powerfully the full horror and impact of the Famine. Paper, 345 pp., index, bibliography, notes, $7.95.

Alternate Selection

WASHINGTON'S IRISH POLICY 1916-1986 by Sean Cronin

What has U.S. policy toward Ireland really been in the 20th century? Covering independence, partition, the 2nd World War years, neutrality, NATO, Northern violence and the Anglo-Irish agreement, journalist Sean Cronin shows how the U.S. has consistently viewed the Irish question through British eyes. Paper, $16.95.

October

THE STALKER AFFAIR by John Stalker

An almost incredible expose of cover-up at the top, STALKER is the true story of an English policeman whose investigation into Northern Irish deaths at the hands of the British turned up information the British government didn't want known—and earned him enemies in high places. Clothbound, $19.95.

HELL OR CONNAUGHT! by Peter Berresford-Ellis

This is the story of Oliver Cromwell's ruthless colonization of Ireland, a story still reverberating with cruelty and terror after more than 300 years. The executions, the mass deportations, the confiscation of lands and the banishment of Irish landowners to "Hell or Connaught"—are all here in this acclaimed account. Paper, 268 pp., $13.95.

STATE NEWS: Alabama American Heroes Honored

MOBILE, ALA. — The rarely remembered American hero, Commodore John Barry, the Father of the American Navy, was honored here on September 10 by the local division of the AOH. Also remembered was the poet priest, Father Abram Ryan, for whom the Mobile division is named.

At 10:00 a.m. a wreath was placed at the Statue of Father Ryan in his namesake Ryan Park. A motorcade to Cathedral Park followed, where a second wreath was placed at the monument. "To the Brotherhood-Of-The-Sea," a memorial dedicated to the known, and unknown, unsung Mariners.

A happy hour and banquet took place at 6:00 p.m. at Korbet's Restaurant. Division President John P. "Jay" Cornick was presented a proclamation naming September 10

John Barry Day by Patrick Kelly, representing City of Mobile Mayor Arthur Outlaw. Guest speaker for the occasion was Senator Bill Menton.

Winners of the division's Essay Contest were presented checks. A check was also presented to the Catholic Maritime Club — all in the name of Commodore John Barry and the AOH. Bernard O'Leary was Master of Ceremonies.

By Mr. William T. Malone

Q. Please inform me about the name TALLY? Thomas Talley, Olathe, KS.

A. Talley, O'Taithlaigh, derives from similarly sounded taithleach, meaning peaceable. The variations in modern spellings, Kelly and Kelley, most likely resulted when the name received its English spelling. Nomenclature orthography often results from errant or guessed spellings.

The former lords of Devonshire used the form Mac Taighligh. Subsequent generations showed their more distant relationship to the first Taithleach by changing the Mac (son of) to O (descendant of). Although most popular in Co. Fermanagh, the name is now quite rare.

Q. What is the origin and background of my name CULLINANE? Was there a Bishop and professor by that name at the Rock of Cashel over one thousand years ago? Thomas C. Cullinane, Bayside, N.Y.

A. Some trace your family back to Cormac Mac Cuileannain, King and Bishop of Cashel. Because he lived before the Irish used surnames he cannot properly be called a member of the Cullinane sept. What we assume as his surname, is his distinguishing trademark between him and his father. If he had a son named Cormac, the prince would be referred to as O'Cuileannain. The name is an Old Irish dialectic form meaning young puppy; we imagine a very spry young lad as the original owner of the name.

From the Cashel the family moved into both Cork and Wexford. The Wexford sept, showing its long history in that region, in accordance with the local dialect, changed the spelling of which the modern English variant is Quillane. The Cork sept formed a branch of the ancient Corca Laidhe clan and settled in Barryroe. From their barony they settled throughout eastern Munster. Two with this name from Kinalea fled to Spain after the Battle of Kinsale. Cullinane is the anglicized Munster name and Cullinan the Co. Clare name.

Cullen forms the modern name of the important sept from Tirconaill. With their seat at Mullinashee they shared a rich past with the O'Donnells. One sixteenth century Cullinan is better known for his pious sons. The eldest, Dr. John, Bishop of Raphoe, died in 1653 after years of persecution. His brother, Slaisne, Cisterian Abbot of Boyle, was a martyr.

Q. Kindly send information on the name McGinley. John McGinley, Philadelphia, PA.

A. McGinley or MacGinley are anglicized forms of similarly pronounced Mag Fhionnghaile. The initial Fh loses its pronunciation before the g, which replaces them in modern spelling. In the Donegal dialect, Mag Fhionnghaile appears as Ginnell in English and is related.

The name has always been popular in Ulster, but was not originally related to MacKinley, the Scottish form of MacFhionn Laoich. With so much movement between Ulster and Scotland, however, the names can be synonyms now.

The MacGinleys have produced several noteworthy religious and patriotic figures. The diocese of Raphoe include several clergy including John, Bishop of the Phillipine Islands and Dr. John B., first Bishop of Monterey, Fresno, California. Peter was a leading activist in the Gaelic League who wrote under the pen-name Cu Uladh, "the Ulster Hound." The Westmeath Ginnells included Lawrence (d. 1928) an early proponent of Sinn Fein and active in the cattle-driving campaign. Although for different political reasons, one cannot help but associate the famous cattle-drives of early Irish epic, such as the Cattle Raid of Cooley, with those escapades of Sinn Fein.

Q. Could you please send me information concerning the name Devlin? William A. Devlin, Pittsburgh, PA.

A. From the ancient Irish sept O'Duibhlin, pronounced similarly to anglicized Devlin come numerous famous figures. The oldest branch dwelled around Corran, Co. Sligo, where a Gillanane O'Duibhlin, was standard bearer to O'Connor. He died in action in 1316. Afterwards little is known about that sept.

In Co. Tyrone, probably descendants of the Sligo branch, another important sept flourished throughout the medieval and Elizabethan eras. Their principal seat was called Munterdevlin near Lough Neagh. This sept produced a Bishop of Kells who died in 1211. Much later, Patrick O'Devlin, a noted rebel, came from Portadown. The Franciscan friar of Prague, Czechoslovakia, Francis was a noted writer from Co. Tyrone who died in 1735. James is on record as having fought in our Revolution and died in 1825. Two modern Devlins, both Josephs, supported the cause of Protestant Northern Ireland. Joe (d. 1934) served as a brilliant Member of Parliament, while the younger Joseph wrote under the pen-name "Northern Gael." Almost 90% of today's Devlins hail from the Co. Tyrone area.

Unrelated to the Ulster sept, but an interesting character, is Anne Devlin (1778-1851), a loyal supporter of Robert Emmet. Even when imprisoned and tortured, Anne would not divulge any information against the insurgent leader.

Please forward questions to Mr. William T. Malone, Center for Irish Studies, The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064. Please include a check for ten dollars, payable to Mr. Malone, and a stamped self-addressed envelope. Mr. Malone is a doctoral candidate in Irish Studies at CUA.

National Secretary's Report

Several items of extreme importance will soon be facing Division Presidents and Division Financial Secretaries. The first is the filing of the Form #9 (list of new officers and their addresses) which gives us the ability to communicate with the proper individuals within each Division. Also, the Annual Financial Reports will be due by February 15, 1989.

During the month of October, the Division Financial Secretary will be receiving the up-to-date computer print-out of your membership as it presently appears. I ask that this be checked over for proper name spelling; correct addresses including zip codes; proper credit to those members who have received the Major Degrees; and finally, that all new members appear on your print-out and those who have been or need to be terminated are deleted. We intend to place a great emphasis on keeping as many members as we can. We should not be quick to terminate great numbers of members without first having used all avenues toward retaining those members on our rolls. We suggest that the officers of the Division be given the names of those in arrears and that personal efforts be made to keep these members active.

Since I will be preparing the 1989 membership cards based on the changes and information the Division Financial Secretaries supply to my office, I am confident that these cards will contain the correct information.

Remember, the 1989 membership cards will be mailed only to those Divisions who are current with their National Per-Capita Tax. I receive a great many phone calls from Divisions who do not receive their cards and I have to explain to them that their 1987 per-capita tax has not been paid. So, to avoid this incident, please make sure your Division is in the paid-up status.

Six Irish Way Scholarships Announced

JOHN P. CONNOLLY

On behalf of the National President and National Board we would like to congratulate the following: Pat McInnis and Mora Sheedy, both of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Erin Boursachs of Mercerville, New Jersey, who were this year's National Board Scholarship winners. Other scholarship winners were: William Judge of Brooklyn, New York; Martin Kenney of Salisbury, Connecticut and Margaret O'Donnell of Witney, New York, as well as the winners of the Hibernian Life Insurance Irish Way Scholarship.

Irish influence in America is dwindling. The general lack of concern in the U.S. for the problems of Northern Ireland is just one example. Immigration to this country has fallen off sharply in recent years and the Irish presence which once characterized some of our major cities has all but vanished.

Our fellow citizens — even some of us — know little of the Irish contributions to the U.S. or to the world. The membership of our Divisions is growing older and we justifiably complain that our young people lack an enduring pride in their heritage.

The situation will not improve unless we face the facts and act now. We must do something dramatic, something effective, something that will spark the enthusiasm of future generations of Irish Americans.

The National Board of the AOH pointed the way in 1978 when it offered a scholarship to the Irish Way program. Will your Division do likewise? Let us all strive to conserve Irish ways in the U.S., before the well runs dry.

State and County Boards interested in sponsoring a scholarship program on the Irish Way, please write to: John P. Connolly, 15 Green Street Terr., Watertown, MA 02172.

The AOH Program for the Irish Way is going to be much expanded. Correspondence on this will be sent to you in the near future.

GOP Stand on North Ireland Backed by King

Nassau Controller Peter King, who was a delegate at the Republican National Convention in New Orleans, said that he'll support the party's platform on Northern Ireland.

King, in a statement with Rep. Ben Gilman of Middletown, N.Y. said that the party's platform on Northern Ireland is a "significant victory for the oppressed Catholics of occupied Ireland."

A staunch supporter of the Irish Republican Army, King has called for the removal of the British presence in Northern Ireland. He said he backs the platform because it calls for peace and justice in the region and non-discrimination in employment.

"The Republican platform is stating that British rule in Northern Ireland causes Catholics to suffer injustice, inequality, and discrimination," said King, who is also the chairman of the Committee for Legal Justice in Northern Ireland.

BUY IRISH

By DAVID R. BURKE, National Chairman

The Buy Irish campaign of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America is more than an attempt to help the fractured economy of a partitioned country. It is also more than an attempt, as in the case of the Hibernian Readers' Guild, to propagate Irish culture in the New World generally and among our own families in particular.

Buying Irish is an opportunity to send a very special message that this gift is exceptional in quality because the recipient is such a very special person. Sure, it takes a little extra effort to buy Irish, but only a little. It means taking time to patronize the local Irish import shop and allowing oneself the luxury of looking over a truly quality stock of merchandise that you can't find just anywhere. It means finding a real selection of the kind of Irish music which strikes a truly responsive chord, which can rekindle memories until that next trip home. It means mail order as well, for those not living convenient to an Irish import shop.

Buy Irish is something which should also be encouraged of Santa Claus in those special requests which are sent to the North Pole in anticipation of Christmas. Buy Irish is happiness all 'round. So treat yourself and your loved ones to a quality treat, in Eireann go deant' (made in Ireland).

The 'Avis' of The AOH

By MIKE HESLIN

BINGHAMTON, NY — At the National Convention which was held in Cleveland this past July, National Secretary read the names of the ten largest divisions in the U.S. In first place was Watertown, MA. This is not that surprising as this division, YR is told, encompasses the greater metropolitan Boston area. Based on this fact alone, its base for membership should be quite extensive.

The 2nd division on the list is not one that you would expect. Division 1, Broome County is not located in a large metropolitan area. Division 1, Broome County is located in Binghamton, NY, which has a population of 59,000 people. Binghamton is located on I-81 and NYS Rte 17, 70 miles south of Syracuse, NY, 60 miles north of Scranton, PA and 59 miles east of Elmira, NY.

Binghamton and Broome County are no longer the farming area that down-state New Yorkers seem to think that anything north of Yorkers is. Binghamton and Broome County are considered one of the leading Hi Tech areas in the country, right behind Silicone Valley in California and Rte 28 in the Boston area.

What makes Division 1, Broome County so special? Its members? Its philanthropic generosity? Its laid back attitude? None of these and all of these.

Division 1, Broome County was founded in 1965 with the aid of Tom McNabb, who was at that time, the NYS Organizer, Bill Reagan of Syracuse and a few other dedicated Hibernians. The first few years of its experience, it stumbled from church to house to church holding its meetings and its affairs. In 1968, it moved into its first permanent home at 128 Henry St., Holmesy Wilson's old store. The membership at this time was someplace between 60 and 100 members.

The division remained at that address for almost 10 years all the while increasing its membership. In 1978, the division moved into its present home at 148 Main St. which it purchased. They had a grand gala opening inviting the then Consul-General of Ireland up from the City, among the dignitaries.

What does the "Avis" Division of the AOH do? The Division supports as many of the national charities as possible including the St. John of God Brothers, the Freedom For All Ireland projects and the Irish Way scholarship. The Division also supports the local Project Children committee financially, vocally, and bodily.

On the local scene, the Division supports Catholic education and its athletic programs through participation in Seton Catholic Central High School and Broome County Catholic Schools and also is a big supporter of the County CYO program which is headed by one of its members. It continues to support one of the many soup kitchens operated in the area through periodic donations of foodstuffs. It also supports the combined Catholic Charities-Broome County Council of Churches and the local Rabbinical effort called "CHOW". This program stocks various food pantries throughout the county to be used to those in need.

were formed to mark the 20th anniversary of the civil rights movement and to bring people back in to the struggle. But the British have never listened to the force of argument, only the argument of force.

What could "Constitutional" Nationalists do to play a constructive role?

First of all, they could face the British with the moderate and modest demand for Irish reunification. They could put it to the British government that the Irish people have a right to national self-determination. If the British say no to this they can then elicit international support for this objective. The elected representatives of nationalist parties should simply do what they were elected to do.

In your talks with John Hume and the SDLP are you finding any common ground where they and Sinn Fein can work together?

We have to wait to see how the talks turn out but they are continuing. I have the duty to exhaust any option that could bring about a solution. We are arguing to the SDLP that they should do what I have just said, that they should not be part of any British internal arrangement and should not assist the British in any way to stay and perpetuate the problem.

Sinn Fein has gone through a lot of changes in the 1980s since the Northerners came into leadership. How did this come about?

Ruairi O'Bradaigh decided to stand down from the presidency for a mixture of personal and health reasons. We persuaded him to stay on another year and then were unable to convince him to continue. The leadership was virtually forced on me in that context.

Did this North/South rivalry create bitterness that contributed to the 1986 split?

It is an exaggeration to say that was a split. It was a very, very small number who rejected the democratically expressed wish of our 1986 Ard Fheis, our party conference, to take seats to which our representatives might be elected in the Leinster House parliament in Dublin. They argued their case and did not persuade sufficient numbers of its correctness. I don't think there was any North/South rivalry. It was a pragmatic decision to take seats. Opponents had the right to disagree but should not have left the party. I hold no bitterness towards them and have felt sorrow more than anger. The occasional public utterances of those who left to form so-called Republican Sinn Fein attack us as much as the British, which gives comfort to our common enemy. No one can afford to lose supporters and we would welcome them back but the decision is up to them. We also cannot afford to be isolated from the vast majority of the Irish people who see Leinster House as their parliament. Abstentionism from taking seats for 60 years led to an elicism which allowed other parties to ostracize us.

Does that explain the low electoral support for Sinn Fein in the February, 1987, 26 county election?

We got what we deserved for not working with the people as we should have. The outcome was also due to the desire to get rid of an anti-working class coalition and form a stable majority government, as well as censorship and repression.

What about the drop in Sinn Fein votes in the June, 1987, Northern election?

It was a very small drop. Sinn Fein fights elections under great difficulties. People from areas where we are strong are expected to have passports or driving licenses to vote, which they often do not have and this cut very much into our vote. The hype of the Hillsborough treaty, the black propaganda campaign run by the entire establishment, and the moral blackmail of the Catholic hierarchy were all factors, as well as the fact that in certain areas the SDLP had the "stronger horses," candidates most likely to win and deny a loyalist the seat, so some republicans voted tactically. I think it is to Sinn Fein's credit that we did so well. We were told our vote would be halved, that we would lose the West Belfast seat, etc., and that didn't happen. Our voters showed great courage.

Given the tendency for Republicans in Newry/Armagh and South Down to vote for the SDLP representatives now to prevent a loyalist taking the seats, is Sinn Fein considering measuring its support in those areas by opinion poll? Is an election pact between the parties possible?

We have not and I wouldn't have much confidence in them. We are interested in an election pact to increase anti-unionist representation but the SDLP has so far rejected the proposal.

Are those who serve time for "political" offenses allowed to vote?

Not while they are in prison but afterwards, yes. But they are not allowed to stand for election.

You are not allowed a visa to enter the U.S. Why? Are you banned elsewhere?

I was recently banned in Canada, following the U.S. precedent. The reason given is patently contrived, superficial and inconsistent. Many political representatives who are hardly pacifists are allowed in the U.S. — our opposition in the North and in Britain, as well as representatives of many other militant struggles and regimes elsewhere in the world. The real reason, as opposed to the excuse, is the British do not want our alternative view of what is going on heard. They are denying U.S. citizens their right to information, they are disenfranchising those who elected me to express their views, and they are creating a dis-information campaign about the situation. They fear open debate. Perhaps a change in presidents would alter the policy, though it hasn't changed it in the past.

Are there plans to set up a Sinn Fein fund raising organization in the U.S.?

There were tentative inquiries being made but no plans as of yet.

What about charges that money given to Irish Northern Aid buys guns for the IRA?

That's nonsense. The money is entirely needed by the dependents of political prisoners and those killed in the struggle.

Why doesn't the SDLP provide support for prisoners, since so many are known to be innocent, due to the nature of the legal system in the North?

You'd have to ask the SDLP about that. I don't know.

What was prison like for you?

Obviously you are having your life severely limited in prison and what is important is not my experience but that there are hundreds of men and some women still in prison in Ireland and Britain. Those in Britain should be repatriated. Some of these prisoners went in at age 15 and are now in their 30s serving indeterminate sentences. Some of the women undergo the frequent humiliation and harassment of strip searching without any cause. Prisoners who are in as the result of the British presence are being held as hostages to try to extract concessions from the nationalist people.

What stands out in your memory from the hunger strike of 1981 and what impact do you see it having had?

The main memories are of the deaths of the hunger strikers and their funerals and the different ways the establishment parties in Ireland and the British government tried to dodge the main issue, which is whether political prisoners should live in those conditions. One should bear in mind that if the British government had had the integrity to live up to the agreement reached as a result of the hunger strike at the end of 1980, there would not have been the second and more tragic hunger strike. The immediate impact was to rejuvenate the whole resistance movement. It also led to the New Ireland Forum and then to the Hillsborough treaty to counter the rise of republicanism.

Part of your constituency is the hardline loyalist Shankill area. Do any of them deal with you?

Yes, a small but regular number of inquiries come in to help those in the Shankill and other loyalist areas and we pursue those.

What should the Republican movement be doing to win loyalists to its viewpoint and do you see any common ground? Also, is not the IRA alienating loyalists?

Sinn Fein should be representing the working class interests of loyalists but we would not suggest we could represent their political interests. We must remain dogmatically non-sectarian. The problem is that loyalism is based on perceived self-interest. The British prop must be removed to achieve equality. Yes, the IRA does alienate but if we seek to do nothing that alienates loyalism we would not be able to do anything. We would not have agitated for the right to vote in the 1960s.

The Catholic Bishops in Ireland have issued some hostile statements about the IRA recently. Has this had an impact on Sinn Fein and the IRA? Do you try to keep communication with the church leadership open?

The statements have had an impact on Catholic republicans or those thinking of joining the Movement but it is hard to gauge. The Church hierarchy — which is distinguished by many from the broader Church and faith — is perceived by many nationalists as pro-British. Historically, the bishops have been anti-radical and excommunicated some of those involved in the Fenian Brotherhood, in the Easter Rising, some who were in the IRA and later became statesmen. The hierarchy's role should be one of standing up beside its flock against injustice and the greatest injustice is the British presence, from which so many other injustices flow. And it is perfectly proper to speak out against injustices committed by republicans but the language that is used about British actions is weak in even the rare statements that are made — almost all the harsh statements are against republicans. I have answered these comments both in private and public and have engaged in lengthy correspondence with my Bishop, Cathal Daly, but received no satisfaction there. But we are interested in dialogue — listening as well as putting our views forth. I think some Church conservatives fear democracy in Ireland which would usher in an era when the bishops would have less influence with the legislature, something which can come about only by an end to partition.

What is Sinn Fein's assessment of the Hillsborough Agreement and the International Fund which supports it after almost three years?

The treaty is the latest in a long line of diversions pursued by the British to bolster up their interests here. Sinn Fein pointed out the undemocratic nature of the treaty, the way it copper-fastens the loyalist veto over the wishes of the Irish people as a whole, and that Britain would use the Dublin government through the treaty to insulate itself from international criticism. The International Fund has been administered to benefit pro-British interests to a large degree and enforce economic apartheid. A lot of absurd projects have been funded while deserving community-based projects get nothing.

26-County Justice Minister Gerry Collins claimed the IRA was trying to overthrow the Dublin Government, to justify the search of 50,000 homes for arms. What is your response?

He's talking nonsense. The IRA has stated on numerous occasions that it has no intent to overthrow the institutions of the 26 Counties. What Collins did was give a propaganda excuse to use his police force as an extension of the RUC, at Thatcher's behest. This was to dilute the response to the action which would have occurred had he been forced to be honest.

How do you compare the Haughey and Fitzgerald governments?

The difference between Tweedle Dum and Tweedle Dee.

Do you think Section 31 of the Broadcasting Act, censoring Sinn Fein, will be repealed? Does it affect private radio stations?

It affects all stations and we had the ironic situation where illegal stations had Section 31 imposed on them when they attempted to interview Sinn Fein members. Haughey recently said when he was in the States that it only affected live broadcasting, which isn't the case. The law not only affects SF but others who profess similar views. An Phoblacht, the republican paper, tries to overcome the effect of censorship as best it can.

What is your assessment of Irish newspapers?

Most papers represent the interests of the establishment but at times they are fair. The British tabloids are much worse. Only after an awful lot of pressure will editors of most papers print our viewpoint — and even they often will not. Voluntary censorship.

Why doesn't the general public demand an end to censorship?

Polls show it supports an end to Section 31 but many are so beset by other daily problems, health cuts, unemployment, etc., it doesn't rank as nearly as important. We have to show the connection between partition and the economic situation and the need for a government which represents their interests.

The bombing at Enniskillen which killed 11 civilians last November was devastating to the movement's image. Why did the IRA consider the bomb safe? Are we going to see similar tragedies in the future? Why should the IRA's claim that the British triggered the bomb be believed?

The IRA statement said it thought it had effective measures to prevent accidental triggering by British radio signal but I do not think it should have been placed where it was. It is up to the IRA to see that civilian casualties are minimized, in its own interest. As for who is truthful, even hostile journalists acknowledge that the IRA admits responsibility for even actions that are damaging to itself, whereas the British, from Bloody Sunday to the Stalker Report, have lied and covered-up and whitewashed constantly. This has been documented in a number of books and articles.

The claim has been made that the Whitecross massacre by the so-called South Armagh Republican Action Force was really the doing of the IRA. Has the IRA engaged in sectarian killings?

The IRA has consistently denied the Whitecross killings and have denounced sectarian killings in general. They certainly should play no part in the liberation struggle but there have been fringe elements and Catholic groups which have responded to immense provocation. The pro-British elements are responsible for the vast majority of sectarian killings and most of them pre-meditated. The IRA has also been blamed for actions of covert British agents designed to discredit the republican struggle. The Irish National Liberation Army, incidentally, has only a counterproductive role to play and should disband. Its horrendous actions are lumped together with the IRA in the public mind too often and it has no support.

Women in Ireland seem to have a subservient position in society. What about in the Republican Movement?

Women in Irish society are subservient and the Republican Movement reflects some of that as a part of that society but we are trying to change that. We have legislated against sexism and we have a policy of positive discrimination in favor of women so that they who are burdened by society with domestic responsibilities and so on can fully participate in the Movement, including positions of leadership.

How has your involvement affected your family?

Like every other family but given the suffering of families of prisoners and those who have died, I have no cause to complain.

Do you have any hobbies or interests or is it all work?

Like any normal person I have other interests — walking, gardening, reading and so forth but most are impossible to satisfy because of the situation.

What about the importance of the Irish language today?

It is vital to keep the spirit and identity of the Irish people alive and there is a fantastic renaissance of the language in the North, of course, where Britain has tried to crush the nationalist people and their native language.

It has often been said that today's IRA is different from the old IRA. And what about the claim that the old IRA had a mandate from the people?

There is no difference between the two except one could argue that today's IRA is going to finish the business left unfinished 60 years ago. The methods are the same and bravery and integrity are the same on the part of the Volunteers then and now. They used to say that the Fenians were different from those before them, that the old IRA was not as noble as the Fenians and so on. The mandate is from the British presence. Those who proclaimed the Republic in 1916 had no formal mandate from the people. The establishment said the same things then as it does today.

Resolution Asks Change In 1987 Extradition Act

CLEVELAND, OHIO — The following resolution was passed at the recent AOH national convention here, toward restoring the political offense exception to the Irish extradition laws, removed by the recent 1987 amended act.

Whereas, the government of Great Britain has for centuries consistently disregarded the welfare of the Irish people and thwarted their aspirations for a free and independent country, and

Whereas, the government of Great Britain has, in this century, enacted a system of laws which has deprived the Irish nationalist people of Northern Ireland of their civil rights and civil liberties and, in doing so, turned their courts into instruments of oppression, and

Whereas, the government of Great Britain has demonstrated its insensitive policies by condoning an obvious shoot-to-kill policy, which was investigated extensively by Mr. John Stalker from which his complete report proved such a policy, and which the government promptly suppressed, the denial of justice to the Birmingham Six and the Guildford Four, and the outright rejection of Irish government proposals to insure justice in the courts, and its refusal to take any meaningful action under the Anglo-Irish agreement to remedy gross injustices to Irish nationalists, whether in Northern Ireland or in Great Britain, and

Whereas, the Republic of Ireland has succumbed to pressure from the Council of Europe's Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism and has, therefore, in interpreting its own

Extradition Act of 1965 and the Extradition Act (Amended) of 1987, effectively removed the political offense exception, thereby prohibiting the Irish people from attempting to overthrow an unjust and oppressive foreign government, and allowing Irish people to be extradited to the United Kingdom, and

Whereas, the Republic of Ireland in passing the Extradition Act (Amended) of 1987 has prohibited and suppressed the legitimate political aspirations of Irish nationalists to change an unjust political and economic situation, and

Whereas, the political offense exception in extradition treaties has been firmly established and held sacred for centuries in international law, and

Whereas, the Anglo-Irish agreement recognizes the political nature of the civil unrest in Ireland, yet, under the Extradition Act (Amended) of 1987, the Irish nationalist striving for independence and self-determination can no longer be expressed, and there is no recognition of the legitimate moral rights of Irish nationalists to change an unjust political situation.

Now, Therefore, we, the members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, Inc., in National Convention assembled, express our profound disappointment in the adoption of the Extradition Act (Amended) of 1987 by the government of the Republic of Ireland with the approval of the Taoiseach, Charles Haughey.

Recognizing the legitimate right of a government to pass such laws as it desires, we must nevertheless object to such legislation on the grounds that no Irish man or Irish woman, as has been adequately demonstrated by the record of the United Kingdom, can expect to receive a fair trial in British courts. We must, therefore, consider extradition to any part of the United Kingdom to be a gross violation of fundamental human rights of the individual concerned, and a denial of one of the most basic of human rights, the right to a fair trial by an unbiased judge in an open, public courtroom free of political pressure.

We implore the Taoiseach, Charles Haughey, and the legislative bodies of the Republic of Ireland to restore the political offense exception and to repeal such parts of the Extradition Act (Amended) of 1987 which are in contradiction thereto, so that the basic moral principle of political offense exception may be restored.

Adopted at the National Convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, Inc., this 28th day of July, 1988.

AFL-CIO Urges Doherty Release

The New York State AFL-CIO in convention, unanimously passed the following resolution seeking the release of Joseph Doherty from prison.

Joseph Patrick Doherty
Submitted by: Troy Area
Labor Council

WHEREAS, Joseph Patrick Thomas Doherty began his sixth year in federal prison on June 18, 1988; and

WHEREAS, he has never been convicted of nor even charged with the commission of any crime in this country, and

WHEREAS, in the past five years, federal and immigration judges have consistently rendered decisions in favor of Mr. Doherty and against the government in every proceeding initiated by the government, and

WHEREAS, Mr. Doherty would never dishonor those who have supported him by failing to respect and scrupulously abide by any and every condition imposed on him in conjunction with the grant of bail:

RESOLVED, that the New York State AFL-CIO petition President Ronald Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese to take any and all steps necessary to accomplish Mr. Doherty's release on bail in order that his unconscionable imprisonment be brought to an end; and

RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution by transmitted to Mr. Reagan and Mr. Meese.

Catholic Bishops Quit Dem. Party

HARTFORD, CT — Two Roman Catholic bishops, including Hartford's Archbishop John Whealon, have announced they are quitting the Democratic party because of its support for the right to abortion.

Whealon wrote in his weekly column in the archdiocesan weekly that the party "has accomplished much for the nation" but it "has abandoned the Catholic Church" and he was "unable in conscience" to stay in it.

He said the party "is officially in favor of executing unborn babies whose only crime is that they temporarily occupy their mother's womb."

President Coogan Condemns Extradition of Irish Citizens

DAYTON, OHIO & ALBANY, N.Y.: Mike Coogan, national president of the AOH, denounced the Irish Government's extradition of Robert Russell and Gerard Harte (Irish citizens) as an "act of cowardice not worthy of a sovereign nation." "It is inconceivable," Mr. Coogan stated, "that any Irish citizen — no matter what he or she may be accused of — could be turned over to a nation with such a track record of treachery in Ireland." Is the Irish system of justice so inadequate that its citizens cannot be tried instead of handed over to an oppressor whose violence and injustice against the Irish people seems never to end?

and those who yearn to be free but with every act of collaboration promotes the very violence they claim to abhor. This act is all the more shocking because in the three years of the Hillsborough Deal there is not one action by England that would justify the slightest confidence in British justice and much to prove their malevolence, including the death of Aidan Mcanespie, the Birmingham Six and Guildford Four, the Stalker scandal, the release of Ian Thain, etc."

"I applaud the protest," Mr. Coogan concluded, "of men and women of good conscience in the Dail and elsewhere and urge them to continue for nothing less than the self-esteem of the Irish people is at stake with every citizen surrendered in this shameful manner."

BOOK REVIEW

In 1984, John Stalker, Deputy Chief Constable of the greater Manchester Police Force, was asked to undertake an inquiry into the deaths of six men which took place in Northern Ireland in late 1982. These six men were killed by officers of the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC). Their deaths produced enormous controversy and allegations that the police had a secret but official "shoot to kill" policy against suspected members of the IRA.

Stalker's investigation, although commissioned by the RUC, met resistance and obstruction at all levels. After two years' work, Stalker was abruptly removed from his job — at the very moment that he was about to gain access to material which would be highly embarrassing to the RUC.

The story of his suspension, the attempts to discredit him, and his eventual reinstatement, make eloquent reading. But the political scandal which the affair has caused; the allegations of a "shoot to kill" policy; the decision of the British Government not to prosecute the RUC officers involved; and the grave damage inflicted on Anglo-Irish relationships — all make this one of the most important books published this year.

John Stalker was Deputy Chief Constable of the Greater Manchester Police Force in 1984, when he went to Northern Ireland to investigate the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Throughout his investigation, suspension, and ultimate vindication, John Stalker has enjoyed an astonishing degree of public support. He has become a local and national hero, and his book tells the

Ireland Chamber of Commerce In U.S. Names First Chairman

NEW YORK, September 22 — James B. Malloy, President and Chief Operating Officer of St. Louis-based Jefferson Smurfit Corporation, has been named Chairman of The Ireland Chamber of Commerce in the United States of America (ICCUSA). Jefferson Smurfit Corporation is 78% owned by Jefferson Smurfit Group, Ireland's largest industrial corporation.

"It is a unique privilege to spearhead an organization that will promote and expand trade and commerce between this great country of ours and Ireland," said Malloy. "Our efforts in establishing an official presence in the United States has received the encouragement and good wishes of leading members of the Irish government as well as all the major political parties throughout Ireland."

"By encouraging the private sector within Ireland and the U.S. to broaden and enhance business ties, we can spur a new era of recovery and growth in Ireland. We can also further educational exchange programs that complement that mission," Malloy added.

In making the announcement, Patrick J. Marsh, president of IC-CUSA noted that Malloy "offers professional and personal characteristics that typify the Irish American contribution to American business." Marsh added that "Jim Malloy also represents the achievement of excellence in performance, ethical professionalism, and a strong reputation as a free enterprise practitioner."

story that many people are determined should be told.

REVIEWS

"Stalker is at least as important as Spycatcher in the vital debate about democratic and judicial standards under pressure.... Stalker recounts his story with a writer's eye for the significance of petty insults that echoes Gogol and Kafka. The book has the ghastly inevitability of Greek Tragedy." The Sunday Times (London)

"John Stalker tells his tale well... indeed it reads like a rattling good detective story, and no doubt will eventually be made into a popular film." The Economist

"Stalker tells a dramatic story very well. He has become a folk hero. The British government dare not prosecute him for his praiseworthy breach of the Official Secrets Act in writing this book." The Observer

"Stalker is probably the most honest account of life in the British police ever published." The New Statesman

"The image that emerges from this book of an honest cop, treading his way through the jungle of Ulster, hunting down the truth, is both disturbingly rare and deeply reassuring." The Spectator

"I started to visit him every five or six weeks, and from that we progressed to weekly reverse-charge phone calls, during which he encouraged me to speak Irish and slowly but surely I began to get there."

A teacher of Spanish in her home town, Oswego, Maria said, "I owe everything to Joe — it would have been impossible without him. I'm a teacher myself and I can tell you he's an excellent teacher — demanding but patient. He should know my good news by now; my mother should have told him when he rang. I just hope he's as pleased as I am."

Maria arrived in Ireland on July 15th on a five week holiday. She took the fainne examination and was delighted when she learned she'd passed the test.

FREEDOM FOR ALL IRELAND

Message from Freedom For All Ireland Committee Chairman

I am very grateful to our newly elected President, Michael Coogan, for affording me the opportunity to once again serve in the capacity of National Chairman of the very important Freedom For All Ireland Committee. I am very thankful to all the members who have so wholeheartedly cooperated with me throughout the years in our efforts to help our beleaguered brethren in Northern Ireland. Without your help and assistance, we would not have accomplished the good work that has been done through this Committee.

May I once again request that all division presidents send me the name, address, including zip code, of their Freedom For All Ireland Chairmen, and also ask that the Boards do the same. This will enable me to communicate with them directly on forthcoming events and projects.

In the not too distant future, I will be writing to all divisions requesting their help for the prisoners' families at the forthcoming holiday season. Meanwhile, I thank you for your cooperation and look forward to working, as always, toward our inevitable goal — "Ireland - United and Free."

Episcopal Church Convention Endorses MacBride Principles

DETROIT: Meeting here in General Convention July 2-11, the Protestant Episcopal Church, U.S.A., passed a resolution endorsing the MacBride Principles for employment in Northern Ireland. The resolution resolved as follows:

Resolved, That this Sixty-Ninth General Convention endorse the MacBride Principles for equitable employment in the north of Ireland and that it adopt the policy of divestiture with regard to companies doing business in the north of Ireland who do not follow the MacBride Principles; and be it further

Resolved, That this General Convention memorialize the 1988 Lambeth Conference to endorse the MacBride Principles for employment in the north of Ireland and that it encourage all members of the Anglican Communion to work for peace with equity and justice in that region.

EXPLANATION

The history of Anglo-Irish relations has been fraught with centuries of bitterness and misunderstanding. The Plantation settlements artificially created a Unionist majority in the north of Ireland, and that majority has consistently discriminated against the Roman Catholic minority in such areas as employment, housing, political leadership and civil rights. (MacBride Principles appended).

Statement made by the Most Reverend Dr. John Austin Baker, Anglican Bishop of Salisbury, when Chaplain to the House of Commons, during the Long Kesh strike in 1980.

"No British government ought ever to forget that this perilous moment before it, is the working of a history for which our country is primarily responsible. England seized Ireland for its own military benefit. It planted Protestant settlers there to make it strategically secure. It humiliated and penalized the native Irish and their Catholic religion; and, then, when it could no longer hold on to the whole island, it kept back part to be a home for the settlers' descendants, a non-viable

"Belfast Diary" Touching and Informative

A friend from Division #2, Babylon, NY, was thoughtful enough to pass along his copy of John Conway's Belfast Diary (Beacon Press, Boston, 1987), giving this non-fiction account a positive recommendation. So much about the Six Counties has recently been sensationalized, romanticized, and fictionalized that the resulting distortions just are not worth the effort.

Not so with the Conway book, which sets out to be an impartial account of the writer's life among the people in a nationalist neighborhood. Conway's conclusions as presented in the book's "Epilogue" indicate that his digging for the truth has brought him to some disturbing realities. To quote:

"The North today has the highest infant mortality, the highest unemployment, the lowest wages, the lowest standard of living, and the lowest life expectancy in the United Kingdom. It has more than double the per capita prison population of the mainland. The industrial landscape is so bleak (more than one out of four men is out of work, and in Catholic Strabane, the figure is one out of two, that the development authorities cannot convince even British companies to invest; British corporations will invest in the Republic, but not in the North.

"Unless you know where to look, and unless you care to look there, it is easy to believe that it is not a society in a state of suppressed war, but a society at peace which is plagued by a few 'Godfathers of violence' who will soon be sorted out by the police, the army, or the diplock courts.

"While the world finds the problem in the North complex, A teenager in Clonard or Ballymurphy sees it as elementary. He knows he will have no work, or if he does have it, it will not reflect his intelligence or pay him enough to escape the ghetto. He finds himself regarded not as a citizen, but as a suspect, and at some point in his young life he will probably have a confrontation with the army or the police that will convince him that those forces are not his protectors. Given his natural desire for dignity and his conviction that the system is unjust, it comes as no surprise when he assumes the role of the violent man...."

If we can take the time to reflect on these excerpted reactions from Conway, we might use this post-convention period within the AOH to re-dedicate ourselves as individuals and as an organization to fighting oppression in the north of Ireland and promoting national self-determination for all of Ireland's people.

"Talking to Congress" Addresses Justice Issues

AOH leaders of Suffolk County, N.Y., met with Congressman George Hochbrueckner on September 12, 1988 at the Saint Ursula Center of the Sisters of the Ursuline Order at Blue Point, N.Y. Many important Irish American political and government issues of the day were discussed at length.

Congressman Hochbrueckner, who is well informed on the more popular issues, was made aware of many less known disheartening and unfair conditions affecting Irish, and Irish American people. The Irish American position on the various topics was ably presented by Brendan Moore, State Freedom For All Ireland Chairman.

The Immigration Reform movement was addressed, and the Congressman explained the legislation action currently underway. The discriminating judicial system in Northern Ireland, the British influence on the Reagan administration, and the future leadership of the Irish American Ad Hoc Committee in the House were subjects of lively discussion.

The injustice of the Joe Doherty case, and the consequences of the infamous Extradition Treaty Supplement were passed on to Congressman Hochbrueckner who was in genuine sympathy with the concerns of the Irish American people.

Jack Flatley

The situation for those of us facing the threat of extradition is now entering a crucial and critical stage. The public generally have been lulled into accepting the necessity for extradition by politicians supported by the media. They have been deliberately fed a diet of misinformation designed to create the mistaken belief that safeguards exist and by implication that the political exemption clause that prevented the extradition of Irish Freedom Fighters would still apply.

This is not the case. We assert that collusion existed between the then Chief Justice Tom O'Higgins and the Fine Gael government to redefine the accepted interpretation of what constituted a political offence (in the case of Dominic McGlinchey), thereby establishing precedent and diluting the supposedly judicial independence of the Supreme Court. In the case of Robert Russell the precedent was followed; the Supreme Court ruled 3-2 against him on the grounds that because he was engaged in an attempt to overthrow the British occupation forces, he was also subverting the Irish Government's constitutional claim to sovereignty over the six counties. Therefore political exemption, according to the majority judges, did not apply. If we follow this simplistic and dangerous argument to its logical conclusion, then all who oppose the British presence in the six counties, or defend the Nationalist people from the sectarian attacks of the R.V.C. and U.D.R., would find themselves extraditable if seeking refuge in the 26 counties.

Robert Russell is now due to be handed over to the R.U.C. on completion of his sentence here in August. He is to be returned to the H-Blocks, the horror of which has been well documented and universally condemned. Republican prisoners incarcerated there are subjected to a systematic regime of ill-treatment, constant beatings, the loss of remission and solitary confinement for any infringement of the prison rules. Rules that by their very nature are anti-Irish and discriminate against nationalists. The playing of Gaelic sports is forbidden; the playing of Irish musical instruments is forbidden; all publications or letters with an Irish language content are forbidden; the wearing of the Fainne, in any shape or form, is forbidden; the use of Irish on visits is forbidden. Yet the authorities conceded that any other language, bar Irish, was allowed. We have witnessed the horrible conditions that led to the blanket protest and the Hunger Strikes, culminating in the death of ten men.

The catalogue of the British reign of terror in our country is endless, their contempt for the Irish people evident. Is it now to be the case that Irishmen, following in the path of Tone, Pearse and Connolly, are to be extradited to one of the most corrupt, bigoted and sectarian states in the world? It will be to the eternal shame of the Irish people if this is indeed allowed to pass.

William Donnelly Was An Active Hibernian

WILLIAM H. DONNELLY

On Sunday, May 29, 1988, William H. Donnelly died at the Waltham Hospital after an eight week illness. He is survived by his wife Ann, who is vice president of Division 14 LAOH; two daughters, Lucille and Diane; two sons, Tom and William, Jr.; and five grandchildren.

Mr. Donnelly held many offices in Division 14 AOH, including Maryland Mourns Death Of William Guerin, Sr.

The Maryland State Board, and Baltimore City Division 4, AOH, mourns the loss of its past state president and loyal Brother Hibernian, William J. Guerin, Sr. who passed away on August 2, 1988 at age 91. He worked 50 years for the Baltimore Gas and Electric Company.

Mr. Guerin was born in Baltimore, Maryland on August 26, 1896. His parents were born in Co. Tipperary, Ireland. His father, Richard Guerin, was from Templemore, and his mother, Nora Brolan, hailed from Thurles.

Richard Guerin was an active member of Baltimore City A.O.H. Division 6, which met twice monthly in St. John's Boys School on Valley and Eager Sts., an Irish enclave in the old tenth ward. He passed away in 1914, and soon after, William joined his father's old division. He was soon called away to serve in the A.E.F. in World War I in 1916, at 19 years of age.

He returned home in 1918, married Sarah Margaret Murphy, and became very active in the A.O.H. He even met Eamon DeValera in 1920 before the man became the first Prime Minister of the Irish Republic. The Guerins were blessed with 17 children — 4 daughters and 13 sons. He attended St. John's parochial school, Baltimore Polytechnic Institute, McCoy College and Johns Hopkins University.

William Guerin served as Recording Secretary of Division 6 until the close of 1928, when he formed a completely new Division, the Commodore John Barry Division 4 of Baltimore City on February 28, 1929. He served in a number of important positions including Division president, president of the Baltimore City Board, president of the Maryland State Board, member of the National Board of the A.O.H. and was a delegate to twenty National Conventions.

On March 17, 1959, an Honorary Life Membership was bestowed upon him by the AOH National Board in recognition of his long and devoted service to the Order.

On June 8, 1984, the Hibernian Brothers in the Commodore John Barry Division held a testimonial dinner to honor Mr. Guerin. In attendance were National President Joseph Roche, Treasurer Michael Coogan, John F. McBride, Michael Flannery, Deputy National Chaplain, Rev. Silvan Brennan, E.B., and Maryland delegate Gerald Curran, to name but a few.

Mr. William J. Guerin, Sr. was a member of the AOH for 74 wonderful years. Many of his sons carry on his legacy of activism in Baltimore City, Division 4.

Mr. Guerin is survived by his daughters, Cathleen King, M. Margaret Sites, Nancy Gillyooly (Shrewsbury, PA), Patricia Busky (Shrewsbury, PA); sons John, Emmet, Charles, William J. Jr., Albert, James (New Freedom, PA), Michael (St. Petersburg, FL), Denis; as well as thirty-four grandchildren, thirty-five great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews. His wife and five sons preceded him in death.

The Mass and Christian burial were celebrated in St. Matthews Church in Baltimore.

American lifestyle, so that we as a group are taken for granted. Have we fractionated our efforts into fraternal and religious organizations to the point where interests of Irish Americans have become ad hoc — instead of developing a unified, directed and controlled, power base.

I feel we have. I feel it is time for all Irish Americans to create a bond which brings us together, expressing and acting out what we share in our cultural heritage — while we are seeking what we deserve as both Americans and Irishmen.

To that end, I suggest an immediate effort. The major, or a least the most immediate issue confronting Irish Americans, and possibly the AOH as a group, is the estimated 100,000 Irish-born illegals currently living in America.

Through no fault of their own, these young people, the cream of Ireland's most educated generation in history, have been forced to leave their native land to seek, as thousands of our ancestors did, work and sustenance here in the United States.

The fact that they are illegal is a source of great sorrow. However, we can do much more than wring our hands. We can ensure that legislation is passed through the U.S. Congress that will allow these young people to banish the spectre of illegality which hangs over them.

In the name of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, I call on all dedicated fellow Hibernians to make this a major issue within their divisions, to write and lobby their local political representatives to ensure that the Irish voice is heard loud and clear on this issue. This is not an issue that divides Irish and Irish Americans; it is one that should bring us all together, in common cause, to ensure a better future for the young people of Ireland and to evidence the power of our people — here in the United States.

I also call on all Hibernians to use our most powerful weapon to help Irish people, worldwide. An effort connected with the very origin of our organizations' existence. We need to pray. We need to seek the help of the Blessed Mother, Our Lady of Knock — the Queen of All Ireland — and we need to do so through the rosary.

My fellow Irish Americans, God has blessed me with a wonderful wife, an incredible family — a life that is rich and fulfilling, and friends and associates like you. Now, I need to share what I have been given. I have an obligation to give something back.

That, I think, is a worthy goal. A responsibility, a duty, and assignment. And I urge each of you, each person in this room, whatever your role in life, to do the same for Ireland. I am not asking you to change your — or the AOH's — priorities. I am seeking to ignite your dedication to Ireland. Be it time or power or ability or money.

Let's not allow the wonders of our heritage and the pride of our ancestors' contributions to slip from our memory or our way of life. Let's not allow those who have found success to lose touch with their Irish roots and the memories of their families' struggles in this country.

Let's be proud of first being American, but let's not fully assimilate into mainstream America. Let's use the strength of our ancestors. Let's apply the leverage of our numbers. Let us use the pulse of the Irish blood that flows through our veins to make this life better for Irish Ameri-

IRISH YOUTH TEAM OVERJOYED

Dear AOH Friends:

We want to extend a huge thank you, on behalf of the Irish Youth Team, for your help in bringing them to America and enabling them to have the time of their lives!!!

We would like you to know that your generous dollars paid for their airfare, accommodations at Hofstra University, transportation to the Bronx Zoo, New York Aquarium, Jones Beach, Roosevelt Field, the flea market, tickets to A Chorus Line, the World Trade Center (to meet Governor Cuomo), and many other places that tourists dream of seeing. They were wine and dined in beautiful restaurants, hosted at cocktail receptions and treated like visiting royalty (which they were, to us). They received uniforms, to take home, which will make them instant celebrities. Best of all, they won 30 Gold, 1 Silver and 8 Bronze medals. These were worn, with great pride, to the airport when the team flew back home to Ireland.

We know, without a doubt, that the reception they received here far exceeded their dream!!!

The Lord Mayor, Dominic Kieran, is at this moment organizing the Irish Youth Team for the 1989 Games, and is working on bringing an American team to Ireland.

We want to thank you again, from Tracey Berney 14, Steven Donnelly 17, Helen French 21, Patricia Furlong 12, Tony Maloney 19, Carla McVitty 11, Decaln Monaghan 19, Edel Reck 21, Thomas St. Ledger 20, Anita Tighe 21, Seamus Wall 19, and Joann Wright 14, and to bring you the up-to-date as to how you have contributed to bringing so much happiness to these wonderful kids.

God Bless.

RESEARCH IN ORDER

Letters to the Editor
Houston Chronicle

The Chronicle recently published an editorial with evidently secondary research pertaining to the position of the I.R.A. in Northern Ireland. I just completed a primary research project of the criminal justice system and how it would affect our 5th and 8th amendments in Belfast during the first part of August. My findings are somewhat different than projected by the Editorial.

1. The Catholic Irish have forgiven the way that 3,500,000 men, women and children starved 100 years ago while under the English rule, and England let it happen.

2. The Irish remember the cruel treatment given the patriots by the cans — and Irishmen — in this land and in Ireland.

For what you will surely do and for this award, I thank you very much. I thank God for making me an Irishman and I ask him and the glorious Saint Patrick to bless us as a group — as Hibernians — and each of us, one at a time, as Irish Americans.
Slainte!

English when they sought their freedom in the early part of this century. Men were hung as traitors and terrorists to the crown.

3. The Northern Irish Catholic cannot own or purchase weapons so they can defend themselves from the English-controlled police or soldiers.

4. The voting districts have been so gerrymandered that the Catholic minority has little voting power.

5. In Northern Ireland, a man, woman, and boy can be arrested by the police and held for 72 hours for no reason at all. They can then be charged, taken before a Judge appointed out of London, and given a life sentence (without a jury).

6. Today in Northern Ireland, the Judges appointed out of London all have five or six bodyguards.

In spite of the fact that the Southern Irish have opposed the I.R.A. publicly because they dislike violence, they recognize the only protection the Northern Catholic Irish have is the I.R.A. They trust the I.R.A. and its intents more than they do the English. I suggest that a little primary research might make you alter your position.

FLAWED U.S. POLICY ON NICARAGUA

Aside from the on-again, off-again support for the Nicaraguan Freedom Fighters, there is one fatal omission in our efforts to make Nicaragua — as well as the rest of Central America — immune to Marxist contamination. The fatal omission is the absence of any emphasis on the recommendations of the Presidential Task Force Report entitled "High Road to Economic Justice."

This report emphatically encourages Employee Stock Ownership Plans and Debt Equity Swaps for Central American and the Caribbean. When President Reagan accepted the report on August 3, 1987, he stated, "Don't let anyone tell you we are relying on guns alone to carry the day."

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega knows that individual ownership of the means of production provides immunity to the false promises of the Marxists. He knows that power follows property. Currently his communist regime holds power; individual workers have none.

The ugly identifying birthmark of communism is the denial of individual ownership rights in the means of production.

It is most discouraging to see some people behaving as if Marxism were the moral equivalent of democracy. It is time that the free world representatives of the peace plan move to eradicate the fatal omission that distinguishes Marxism from democracy.

Hamburg Student Wins the Carew Scholarship

The New York State Board of the AOH in America is pleased to announce that the 1988 Austin V. Carew Scholarship has been awarded to Thomas R. Gilmartin of 129 Charlotte Avenue, Hamburg, New York 14075.

Mr. Gilmartin is a recent graduate of Hamburg High School and will be attending Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (R.P.I.) where he intends to study Electronics Engineering.

Tom is the son of Mary and Thomas F. Gilmartin of Hamburg, a suburb of Buffalo, where the father is a member of the Monsignor Toomey Division #2 of the AOH.

The scholarship is in the amount of $500.00 per year for four years of college study and is awarded each year to a member, son or daughter of a member, of the AOH on the basis of a combination of S.A.T. scores and the results of an examination on Irish and Irish-American history, culture and geography, administered by the New York State Board.

Invitation Extended to All Irish Pipe Bands

Buffalo, New York, extends an invitation to all Hibernian Pipe Bands to come to Buffalo for the Annual St. Patrick's Day Parade in March of 1989. The Parade is sponsored by the United Irish American Association of Erie County. It is held in Downtown Buffalo on Delaware Ave. A $500.00 first prize is awarded.

Buffalo's St. Pat's parade is not held on the Great Day — it is held on a Sunday.

For more details and information on the parade, write to Mr. Timothy J. Leary, 67 Ivanhoe Road, Buffalo, New York 14215; or telephone (716) 894-0098.

New York State Pro-Life Report

"Of Parties, Platforms, Candidates, And Where They Stand"

The summer before a presidential election is a time of excitement, "hoopla", and gearing up for the beginning of a vigorous campaign between candidates who often have different viewpoints. The major political parties also present differing views and this is often reflected in their platforms. As the major party conventions roll around this year and as the candidates speak with the "oft" catchy, glib, and articulate use of words, let us pause and reflect; let us ask ourselves from whence the parties and the candidates come; let us look beyond the surface and behind the image; and let us ask where is this party or that candidate leading us.

If we look at each of the major party platforms on the pro-life issues, we are faced with a clear choice as to whether we want to protect the lives of unborn babies or to go on killing them. The 1984 Republican Party platform was pro-life and it stated: "The unborn child has a fundamental individual right to life which cannot be infringed." In contrast the 1984 and most recently in Atlanta the 1988 platform of the Democratic Party stated a pro-choice/abortion position: "The fundamental right of reproductive choice should be guaranteed regardless of ability to pay."

Groups which represent a pro-life or pro-choice viewpoint have analyzed the candidates voting records and public statements over several years and these groups provide revelation as to where the candidates stand. The National Abortion Rights Action League booklet, entitled "The Right to Choose: A Guide to Presidential Candidates on Abortion Rights" and published in May, 1987, stated that the Democratic presidential candidate, Michael Dukakis "is a firm supporter of reproductive rights. He fully supports funding for abortion services." The National Right to Life Committee's President, Dr. Jack Willke stated in the NRL News (6/23/88) that "George Bush is a man with a consistently strong pro-life position; a man opposed to tax funding of abortions and supportive of reversing Roe v. Wade and the reestablishment of federal protection for human life from conception; a man who will respect traditional family values and the sanctity of human life."

And if looking at where the presidential candidates stand is not enough, then, look at the men who are running for the vice-presidency and who would be called upon to take

Catholic Action Trying to Understand Life

Christ is our Teacher. "You call me Teacher and Lord; and you are right, for so I am." (John 13:13).

All that the Catholic faith teaches is Christ's answer to us in our search for the meaning of life and in our desire to lay hold of what the heart longs for. The message of Christ is a message of joy to a world in need of hope.

This life is mysterious because it contains so much that is excellent and stirs up hope in our hearts and also confronts us with profound tragedies. We find here much that is true and good and beautiful and much that proves radically disappointing. Hope and joy, grief and anxiety are strangely intermingled in this world, and we cannot help asking ourselves: Why do we exist? Who are we, and why do we live in a world like this?

We need to understand the meaning of our lives because the span of our years is limited. To live intelligently and well we must grasp in time what life is for and what it means.

Catholic faith teaches that God Himself, the Lord who created us and all things, has become for us a Teacher of life. In and through Jesus Christ, God is our Teacher, and we are set free from doubts and anxieties by the light of His word.

One receives faith with the certainty faith brings, only as a gift of God. Yet God gives this gift to us in ways that respect our humanity and all the needs of our intelligence and heart.

When Jesus invited people to faith in Himself, He clearly respected their intelligence. The good news He taught was accompanied by many signs of its truth: the words He spoke rang true and appealed to their intelligence. They longed for a certainty only God could give them. He touched their hearts from within, and enabled them to share by God's grace in the light of God's own wisdom.

Thus Christ taught His disciples to pray for faith, and taught them that the certainty of faith was not merely the fruit of human insight into the signs that He gave, but the gift of the Father.

Christ has been in human history; how even now it shapes a family of faith sealed with exceptional marks of its authenticity and goodness.

over the presidency in a time of national tragedy. Senator Lloyd Bentsen's position is clear. Kate Michelman, Executive Director of the National Abortion Rights Action League (NARAL), stated in a Memorandum dated 7/12/88: "On the whole Senator Bentsen's voting record on our issue has been very good." The Republicans have not met in convention as yet and we will have to watch in the days ahead the position of their vice-presidential candidate.

The upcoming national presidential election provides us with a clear choice on the pro-life issues. Let us ask ourselves: Do we really want to halt abortions, to halt the killing of unborn babies? The choice is ours. Our vote and those of others can bring us life or death.

As we move toward election time do not be fooled by candidates trying to show how moderate or conservative they are. Ask yourself: Does the candidate support killing unborn babies or not?

Missouri Mourns Regina Carrigan

Hibernians in Kansas City and St. Louis are mourning the death of Regina Carrigan, who passed away on May 31, 1988. At the time of her death, Regina was serving as president of the Padraic Pearse Division. Regina joined the LAOH in 1971 and served the Order with dedication and devotion. She held the offices of secretary and treasurer of her division and was elected state president in 1981, serving two terms. In Detroit and Baltimore, Regina worked on the committee to revise the national constitution. Since joining the Order, she had attended every national convention and planned to attend this year in Cleveland.

Regina is survived by her sister, Margaret Carrigan. We shall miss Regina and know that God will grant her eternal rest. We shall meet again when we join her in Tir n'an Og.

Anne Conroy

Remembering Frances Hamre

By PATRICIA A. OBERRATH

Frances Hamre was a very unique individual, the first LAOH Assistant Editor I came to know personally, who helped me develop confidence in accomplishing the tasks assigned to me as a Hibernian.

When I was the chairman of Press and Publicity for the Ohio State newsletter, Frances would send me notes of thanks and encouragement. That was how we first met, through the mail. We finally met in person during my very first national convention in Buffalo, NY, when I had been assigned to her Press & Publicity Committee.

As several "experienced" delegates gathered for this meeting, Frances asked for a volunteer secretary to take the minutes. Of course, nobody volunteered, knowing what would later be involved! Frances turned to me and smiled; I knew I was sunk!

We later had a short conversation and to my dismay, I learned I was expected to type the report, find a place in downtown Buffalo to make copies of it, and read it in front of the entire LAOH delegation assembled. I stood looking up at her in shock for a moment and said with a lump in my throat, "Frances, are you sure I should be the one reading this? After all, you're the Assistant Editor and I think..." She cut me off and said, "Listen, kiddo, I think you will do a fine job up there and besides, it's getting awfully hard for me to climb on that stage." What could I do but comply. I still remember how she placed her hand on my shoulder for support as we continued our walk down that long hall together and her words still echo through my mind. "Who knows, kiddo, maybe you'll have my job some day and have to read those reports all the time!"

Frances Hamre was, in my opinion, Lovable, Ambitious, Objective, and Humble, which abbreviated, spells out L.A.O.H. She had a remarkable ability to give constructive criticism; you felt glad you could hear it from such a pro. Frances' influence on her fellow Hibernians will long survive her death.

New Jersey Hibernian Joins National Board

A newcomer to the LAOH National Board is Mary Paglione, who was elected to the office of National Chairman of Catholic Action at the biennial convention in July. A resident of the Roebling section of Florence Township, New Jersey, Mary learned about Hibernianism as a youngster in her family — her mother and two older sisters were members of Division 2, Florence. At age eight, Mary joined the Junior Division, remaining active until old enough to join the adults. When the Florence division disbanded, Mary joined other members in transferring to her current Burlington Division 3.

As presiding LAOH New Jersey state president, Mary Paglione has a strong background of service to the order. For her divisions she has been chairman of missions, historian, treasurer, vice president and president. On the county level she has been treasurer and secretary. Prior to her state presidency, Mary served as state historian and vice president. She has also twice co-chaired the state conventions.

Mary's grandmother, Annie Agnes Bolger, hailed from Carlow, Ireland. Nee Mary Foulks, she is married to Samuel O. Paglione, the mother of five children, Sam, Jr., Christine, Tom, Terri and Lisa, and grand-

Her busy schedule includes full time employment in the family real estate business, soloist with the St. Clare's Church choir and the Florence Township Community Chorus.

Minnesota Ladies News

Minnesota was well represented at the National Convention in Cleveland this past July by Mary Ann O'Brien, state president; Jean Cover, secretary; Leah Curtin, treasurer; Dorothy Schlen, Catholic Action; Mary Hanlon, scrapbook & publicity; Margaret Ransey, county president; Sister Patricia Hoveland, Minnesota 2 president; Mary Minton, past state president; and Mary Douville, past state president and national chairman of Catholic Action; and from the AOH Bill Gleason, president, Div. 4, Ramsey County; and John Curtin, financial secretary Div. 4.

The Feast of Our Lady of Knock was celebrated on August 28 at St. Thomas Church in St. Thomas. Rev. Ralph Hayden, chaplain, Div. 1, was the celebrant. The choir was comprised of AOH and LAOH members.

Plans are now being made for our Irish Heritage Fair which will be held November 19 and 20 at Cretin-Denham Hall High School, St. Paul. There will be booths and exhibits of Irish food, art, crystal, pottery, clothing and textiles, history, genealogy, music and dance.

It contains state and national convention and other LAOH activities. Creator of the scrapbook, Mary Hanlon is also the vice president of Division 1, Scott County. She previously won first place for her entry in the scrapbook competition at the 1986 Buffalo National Convention.

Resolution Committee Report

National Convention
July 25-28, 1988

The Resolutions Committee of the A.O.H. met on July 27, 1988, in the Rockefeller Room of the Bond Court Hotel, Cleveland, Ohio. The meeting was opened by Chairman Ann S. Healion, New York State President, at 8:40 A.M. Joyce Hennessy was appointed secretary.

We offer the following Resolutions:

1. That we hereby renew our pledge of loyalty, allegiance, and fidelity to Almighty God, and that we, as loyal citizens of the United States and Canada, representing thousands of men and women of Irish ancestry, renew our allegiance to our respective governments.

2. That the LAOH recognizing the value of human life, support efforts for global nuclear disarmament, realizing that the further production of nuclear armaments is destructive and in disharmony with nature.

3. That the LAOH, recognizing the most basic of all human rights is the right to life, urge the support of all members for human life amendments or any pro-life legislation consistent with the teachings of the Catholic Church protecting all human life; and

New LAOH National President Achieves Goal

The smallest city in the smallest state has produced a lady holding the biggest office. Dedicated veteran Hibernian Mary Bradley of Central Falls, R.I., has been elected LAOH National President. Mary has worked diligently toward this goal which started many years ago with an appointment.

In 1964, after attending activities held during the Albany convention, but not yet a delegate or member, Mary decided that this was the group for her. Since then, Mary has served her sister Hibernians as vice president and president on the division level, secretary on the county level and vice president and president on the state level. Mary is an outstanding leader; she has earned the respect of an entire nation of Hibernians in her climb to the top, starting as National Chairman of Missions. She prepared herself by mastering knowledge and experience in each office along the way. Thus, as national president, Mary Bradley is well aware of the capabilities of each of her board members.

Mary has a sister and two brothers. Her mother, Elizabeth Doherty Bradley, has been a Hibernian for 65 years and is a life member. Mary comes from a long line of Hibernians — her grandfather,

MARY E. BRADLEY

James Doherty, was a charter member of AOH Division 9 and her grandmother, Mary Brady Doherty, a member of Division 1, both of Central Falls. After receiving her degree in elementary education at Rhode Island College in Providence, Mary became a kindergarten teacher and is currently working in the Cumberland school district in Rhode Island.

Mary E. Bradley
National President

It is with sincere gratitude that I have the honor and opportunity to greet you in this column as your president.

The officers elected to help me fulfill my office are extremely capable women, well able to lead this organization.

The National Board is pleased to announce the appointment of Rev. George B. McCarthy of Newport, Rhode Island, as the LAOH Deputy National Chaplain.

Sr. Annella Martin, R.S.M., of Maryland, has consented to continue as the LAOH Legislative Coordinator. Sr. Annella would like to encourage all our members to become registered voters. This is most important if we are to have a voice in matters about which we have great concern.

Patricia Oberrath of Ohio will be the Assistant Editor of the Hibernian Digest. Pat has accepted the responsibility of keeping us informed on the national, state, county, division levels. To accomplish this successfully, she will need your assistance.

Each State has received a copy of the names and addresses of the National Board officers and appointments. Information should already have been received from them by this time. Know that we are sending — investigate if you are not receiving.

Some highlights of the 84th Biennial Convention: $45,000 was presented to Fr. James O'Brien of the Columban Missions at the final dinner. President of the University of Notre Dame, Fr. Edward Malloy, our main speaker, received a check for $5,000 for the Notre Dame Hibernian Fund. Finally, $1,000 will be donated to the Lillian E. Fay Scholarship Fund at Trinity College.

An organization is as successful as its smaller units. If leadership is to succeed, it will never be as a single individual or as a single board. Every member needs to exert the effort necessary to do a better job than ever. If we all meet the challenge of improving things a little, the entire organization will take a great leap forward. We cannot miss.

Dorothy Fowler New National LAOH Historian

Another veteran Hibernian, Dorothy Fowler of Kansas City, MO, was elected National Historian at the 1988 convention in Cleveland. Dorothy joined the LAOH in August of 1971, but was forced to put her LAOH activities on hold due to business and personal reasons. She returned to the limelight with a tremendous desire to make up for time lost. Dorothy has recently completed a two year term as National Chairman of Missions and is currently financial secretary of her division and state chairman of missions.

Aside from LAOH activities, Dorothy has been chosen by her sorority as Philanthropic Chairman, which involves working with the elderly and disabled. She also finds time to work with children in her community involved with the local 4-H Club eight weeks out of each year. Since her retirement in 1984, Dorothy now has time to care for her invalid mother and believes our greatest reward comes from helping others.

Convention Fun

YOU'LL "ROAR" AT THIS ONE!! Past National President Sheila Clifford wasn't able to attend too many Convention parties after the evening banquets. Why, you ask? For one, she felt she should return to her room to feed the animals and take them for a walk so she could get a good night's sleep! There was a rumor circulating that Sheila called for room service and said, "Send me some turtle soup — and make it snappy!"

Ladies Ohio State News

By VIVIAN LERMONDE

What a summer it was all around the Buckeye State. In July, the Cleveland Hibernians played host to the national convention; if you weren't there, you missed a wonderful part of history. Hats off to Ohio's Kathy Linton, newly elected LAOH national treasurer and to the Ohio Summit County Juniors, who walked away with several honors. Taking First Place in the national junior scrapbook competition was Kerri Wawrin, who was also named National Junior of the Year.

Lifetime membership was bestowed upon Betty Murphy, Mary Ellen Murphy and Loretta Prendergast by National President Sheila Clifford during the convention.

Irish culture was alive and well in Ohio all summer long. Cleveland, Youngstown, Dayton, Cincinnati, Columbus and Akron all hosted an annual Feis. Cleveland hosted its annual Irish Festival, a weekend of activity that followed on the coattails of the convention. In August, many Hibernians from across the state found their way to the Irish Festival in Huron on the shores of Lake Erie. The Irish love of the Blessed Mother was once again proclaimed across the state as each division hosted a Mass in honor of Our Lady of Knock.

The Jefferson County ladies honored their own Father O'Carroll, newly appointed Deputy National Chaplain, at a special covered dish dinner on July 28.

Columban Order Most Grateful

Dear Sheila,

It was a joy seeing you again in Cleveland. Thanks for your service to the Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians over the past two years. It was most evident at the Convention that you and the other officers put in much hard work and dedication to your responsibilities.

Thank you ever so much for your thoughtful preparations for my stay while at the Convention. I felt at ease and most welcome at all times. I sensed a real mission spirit there and must genuinely compliment you for a job well done.

The Convention was a grand success. Needless to say, the Columban Fathers feel most honored to be associated with the Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians and look forward to further collaboration in the years to come.

The Columban Fathers are deeply grateful for the immense generosity of the LAOH shown in the magnificent sum of the $45,000.00 donation. I also want to thank you for the $1000.00 donation for my expenses at the Convention. Everything went very well. Our Director, Fr. Edward Naughton, was extremely pleased and wishes to extend to all the Ladies the deep felt appreciation on behalf of all Columban Missioners and the people whom they serve in Asia and Latin America.

Be assured of our support and prayers for you and all the members of the Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Sincerely,
Fr. James O'Brien
Mission Education Director for the brevity of their reports and respectfully suggest future Boards follow the lead of brevity and conciseness.

22. That we give the 1986-88 National Board a rising vote of thanks.

22. That we express our gratitude to the Convention Committee and to all who arranged and participated in the programs, and especially to our National Chaplain, the Hierarchy and Clergy.

Respectfully submitted,
Ann S. Healion, Chairman, NY
Joyce Hennessy, Secretary, NY

Missouri State Board Meets

THE LAOH MISSOURI State Board met at the Holiday Inn, Lake of the Ozarks, earlier in the year. The decision was made to change the state convention from September to May to coincide with state conventions throughout the U.S. The next Missouri State Convention will be held in Kansas City in May, 1989. Attending were, left to right, first row: Dolores VanOsdol, state treasurer; Sister Francine, St. Louis; Sandy Christman, state secretary; Eileen Carty, state president; Dorothy Fowler, national and state chairman of Missions; and Imogene Donohue, state chairman of Irish History. Second row: Mollie Bullinan, Kansas City; Aileen Bell, Kansas City; Dorothy Castor, state chairman of Catholic Action; Margie Manning, state vice president; Linda Delaney, St. Louis; and Geraldine Ready, St. Louis.

Flatley's Corner

1974 for possession of explosives. In 1980 his IRA unit was attacked by an SAS (commando) force. A British officer was killed. Eventually, Joe and his comrades were captured and sentenced in the Diplock court to life. During the trial Joe escaped custody and made his way to the U.S. He lived quietly and peacefully in New York City until his arrest for entering the country illegally. Any illegal alien can be picked up like Joe, except that an informer was likely involved, and Joe's IRA history made for an attractive arrest. His offense is ranked lower than a misdemeanor. Immediately, the British demanded his extradition.

Two Federal Judges, John E. Sprizzo, and Charles S. Haight, Jr., and a Federal Appeals Court made rulings that Joe could not be extradited, with Judge Sprizzo determining that his wrongdoings were not considered to be criminal acts, but, rather, political activities — thus barring his extradition to the U.K. at that time. Pressure by the British, especially after President Reagan requested use of British airfields in 1986 for the deployment of F-111 bombers to the attack on Libya, resulted in revision to the extradition treaty by abolishing the political offense provision. What continues to be a "political offense" in 96 other countries is now an "extraditable crime" for anyone seeking political asylum from Britain.

In direct violation of the U.S. Constitution, which specifically forbids ex post facto laws and bills of attainder, the new treaty supplement was made retroactive so that it would apply to Joe Doherty.

So, the legal battle continues and Joe sits in jail with Mary Pike doing legal battle daily in the courts, fighting against his return to the U.K. by using every legal means available. The newest twist is that Joe can be returned to the Republic of Ireland (where he is likely to be extradited to the U.K.). Most recently, before his demise, Edwin Meese ruled that Joe is to be returned to Britain. His justification for ignoring the laws of his own government and the decisions of the Federal Courts was, "it would be prejudicial to the interests of the U.S." It smacks of a

Ireland's Only Queen

Someday, when the land of our ancestors becomes a thirty-two county nation once again, it will be Mary, mother of God, who will reign over Ireland. The Irish people will serve "no other Queen!"

Almighty God asked her to take up an awesome responsibility and in total obedience she accepted. Our Blessed Mother declared herself a servant and made no demands for her own personal comfort. She is a very special person indeed.

Unfortunately there are those in this world who actively work to discredit her role and her powerful intercession on behalf of those of us who run to her in our times of need. We as her children should always be ready to willingly and lovingly stand by her and defend her.

Our Hibernian family must become deal with Mrs. Thatcher. Mary Pike's legal response was typical of her resolute nature. She has argued a new motion to reopen Joe's request for political asylum before the Board of Immigration Appeals.

I asked Mary many questions. Her answers were quick, witty, adroit, and were typical of her intense energetic personality. A few are listed:

Question: What are your feelings about the troubles in Northern Ireland?

Answer: "Extreme sympathy for the oppressed; not a day goes by since June 18, 1983 that I have not thought of the troubles, and I will continue to think about it."

Question: What are Joe's chances?

Answer: "I don't know, I play it day by day."

Question: Why is Joe's case being singled out and highlighted by the State Department?

Answer: "Joe Doherty typifies the story of Ireland's sad history of oppression, and of the occupying and intimidating presence of English military in Northern Ireland. He symbolizes the struggle for freedom. A victory for Joe would be a blow to British authority and prestige. It is a reputation-keeping thing for them."

Question: What would happen to Joe if he is sent back to the Republic of Ireland?

Answer: Because of the Cross-border Jurisdiction laws he could be tried in the south for his escape from more involved in spreading Mary's message of peace and love to all who will listen. The Rosary should be promoted and the name of Mary should be included in every meeting and at every level of our Order. We at times seem embarrassed to pray together; but with the Blessed Mother's help we can bring others to come and pray with us and thereby increase the volume of our petitions to our Most High God.

The evils of war, abortion and discrimination are real, evil is the devil's hand and we need someone to intercede on our behalf. Why not Mary? Mary is always there, always willing to help. Our Lord and Savior put his confidence in her; why shouldn't we?

The following prayer is an act of confidence in Mary. I hope it does as the Crumlin Road jail. The intended effect of the Extradition Act, implemented in the Republic in December, 1987, is to insure that Joe Doherty would be extradited from the South to the North where his life would be endangered."

Question: What are your expectations regarding a new political administration in Washington in January, 1989?

Answer: "I expect nothing. I only want an administration that will have respect for the law and human rights."

Question: Has any other person been held in prison without being charged as long as Joe Doherty?

Answer: "No, Joe has set a precedent."

Question: What thoughts remain in your mind regarding U.S. laws after the experience you have had with the Joe Doherty case?

Answer: "In December, 1984 an American judge ruled that Joe could not be extradited to the U.K. The Reagan administration rewrote American history and American law by ignoring the court ruling. I am frightened by an administration that will not respect a legal decision by its own courts, and responds to the demands of a foreign government."

Question: Do you think that the Irish American community is supporting Joe to the level they are capable?

Answer: "The support varies within the community and Joe is counting on it."

Question: What message do you have for the Irish American people in the U.S.?

Answer: "I repeat the words of Joe Hill moments before his execution: Don't mourn, organize!" (Joe Hill was a famous civil rights labor leader who was executed in 1915).

the important question of Life.

As Hibernians, we must accept the challenge of Nellie Gray and her March for Life slogan, "Pro Life Talk Demands Pro Life Action."

On January 23, 1989 National President Michael Coogan and National Vice President Michael Carroll will lead a large delegation of Hibernians down Pennsylvania Avenue past the White House in the annual March for Life.

We would like as many divisions as possible, with banners, marching behind the tri-color.

For purposes of organization, I ask that all state Pro Life chairmen contact me either by phone or mail in order that we may set up a Hibernian Pro Life committee to insure the success of this effort.

The address is P.O. Box 252, Wayland, MA 01778. (608) 358-4569 day, 443-2876 evening.

May God bless all Hibernians as we are called to address this very important issue of Life.

ANCIENT ORDER OF HIBERNIANS IN AMERICA INCORPORATED

Is There Room In America's Heart For This Baby?

THOUGHTS ON THE CELEBRATION OF OUR CONSTITUTION AND THE DEATH OF AN AMERICAN GENERATION

We keep hearing the expression "freedom of choice" even though 20 million pre-born babies didn't have a chance or a choice.

The words of the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights will continue to be the graffiti of hypocrisy that defaces America until the rights of the pre-born are restored.

STATE NEWS: Florida

By NICK SCHNEIDER
For Florida Hibernians, the big news coming out of the recent National Convention was that our own Tom Gilligan of Fort Lauderdale, was re-elected as one of the six national directors. One of nine candidates, Tom's national popularity and effectiveness as a national director was reflected in the voting, as he was second in the total votes received by the six newly-elected national directors. Tom has not only been an asset to the order nationally, but to the state of Florida, right down to the division level. He is always right there to assist and advise any division, particularly those newly-formed. In the judgement of this reporter, Tom has earned the great Irish title of "HIMSELF."

Florida Hibernians attending the convention were State President Jack Boyle; State Vice President

John Cullinan; State Secretary Bob Schneider and State Treasurer Eamon Quinn. Broward County was represented by Division 1 President Martin McAndrew and their chaplain, Rev. Fr. Liam Quinn, son of State Treasurer Eamon Quinn. Brevard County Division 1 was represented by its treasurer, Tom Schneider; Pasco County Division 1 represented by its president, Tom Condon; and Manatee County Division 1, the newest Florida division, by its president, Paul Finerty. Also in attendance were Florida Hibernians Jim Crimmons, Tom Roherty, Al Murphy, Ed Zwich, Frank O'Brien and Bill Maroney.

Brevard County Division 2 plans to hold their Annual Irish Night on October 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the Palm Bay KC Hall on Dairy Road. The popular Irish band, "Shades of Green" will play from 8 to 12 midnight. Between sets, there will be American music. On September 20 Brevard County installed their county officers. Installed by State Vice President, John Cullinan, the new officers are President Bob Carroll, Vice President Art Bellingham; Recording Secretary Ernie Kees, Financial Secretary Ed Reilly, Treasurer Matt Mannix, Standing Committee Chairman Tom Donnelly and Marshal Dick Girard.

As divisions begin their activities, hopefully news of same will reach me, State Editor Nick Schneider, 240 Eyre Ave., Merritt Island, FL 32953, so that I can share with Hibernians all over the country what we are doing here in Florida.

As I indicated heretofore, when I lived in New York, there was an expression that Florida was the land of the newly weds and the nearly dead. Well, in my judgement, it may still be the land of the newly weds, but when it comes to the Hibernians and what we have to do to foster peace and freedom in Ireland, Florida is the land of the "Far from Dead!"

STATE NEWS: Virginia

Fifty members of the Virginia AOH and LAOH travelled to Cleveland Ohio, the last week of July to join a couple thousand of their brothers and sisters in the Hibernian biennial convention.

In a week of tough competition the Virginia Group concentrated on bringing the convention, 2,000 strong, to Virginia in July 1990. Pitted against strong convention sites in San Francisco, St. Louis, and the Poconos of Pennsylvania, Virginia won out.

Much hard work remains ahead to prepare for our guests. Virginia is more than "for lovers." Virginia offers a great convention packet in Crystal City, great historic sites, restful beauty of the state, and true friendly, southern hospitality. Come join us, "you all."

THE GREEN ARMY

The Green Army is a peaceful but visible protest against British presence in Northern Ireland. It demands no loyalty but to the cause of an Irish Ireland; requires no dues; and its only leaders are those who wear the green for Ireland.

Members of the Green Army must wear the color green every day in clothing, jewelry, or any other manner in which the color is visible.

PLEDGE

For those who fought and fight unseen;
For the heroes of Easter in dark '16;
For all who died to free Roisin' I'll always wear the color green.
To the memory of the widow's keen;
Of starvation, and the dread Gombeen;
Of the Rapparee slain on the cold breen;
I'll say a prayer and wear the green.

To the saints whose learning was supreme;
to the memory of what might have been;
'til the Shan Van Vocht* becomes a queen;
I'll always wear the color green.

And so to show the world I mean that England leave the Irish scene, and let her nationhood begin; until that day I'll wear the green.

Massachusetts State Board News

By DICK HICKSON
Deputy Director of Public Relations

The Massachusetts State Board is pleased that their own Past State President, Michael Carroll, was elected National Vice President of the AOH at our recent National Convention held in Cleveland. We wish him, our new National President, Mike Coogan, and all our newly elected officers much success during their terms of office.

The Massachusetts State Board Degree team under the guidance of State Vice President Joseph McHugh, recently held three Major Degree ceremonies, one hosted by Division 10 of Lynn. Another by Division 36 of Worcester, and a third held at the home of the division in Meriden, Connecticut.

Our State Banquet was held on June 4 in the Home of Division 8 in Lawrence. An overflowing crowd filled the largest Hibernian Home in the United States. The Most Rev. George E. Rueger, Auxiliary Bishop of Worcester, was guest speaker. State Presidents Bill Sullivan and Mary Dolan addressed those present marking the 150th Anniversary of the Massachusetts State Board. Music was provided by the Silver Spears Irish Showband; David R. Burke served as toastmaster.

The Annual John Boyle O'Reilly Memorial Exercises were held on June 18 in Holyhood Cemetery in Brookline, attracting the largest gathering in the past twenty years. Father Whalen, chaplain, Division 14, Watertown, celebrated the Memorial Mass; Al Madden of Division 1, Boston, served as General Chairman of this event.

It is with a great sense of loss and regret that we note the passing of Bill Donnelly, state treasurer, on May 29. His death is a loss not only to his fine family, but to his division and our state board as well. David R. Burke has been appointed state treasurer, and will serve in that capacity until our next state convention in May 1989 at The Colonial Hilton.

A large delegation of men and women from the State Board recently were guests of Channel 7 in Boston, appearing on the Sunday TV Mass sponsored by the Archdiocese.

All Massachusetts Divisions during September held events to commemorate Commodore John Barry Day, reported at the State Board meeting on September 25 in Worcester.

On the division front, word has been received from Division 1 in Newburyport of various successful Hibernian activities held during Yankee Homecoming week in late July and early August. Also Division 8 of Lawrence, the largest Hibernian Home in North America, was the scene of the Seventh Annual Merrimack Valley Irish Festival on September 17 and 18. Joe Sipsey served as General Chairman of this event. Division 10 of Lynn held a dinner in honor of their area clergy on September 23 which was well attended.

The O'Neill Family History

O'Neill is the oldest traceable surname in Europe — their story is your story and it is one you can be proud of. "Ancestral Videos" offers you the chance to discover your family's past and strengthen your ties to the people of Ireland, who, from the earliest days, could recite their descent from ancient kings.

Explore with us the beauty of Ireland — from a personal perspective — through the eyes of your ancestors. Visit the territory they ruled and the castles they built. Let us introduce you to "The Lord O'Neill of Shane's Castle," and some leading authorities on the O'Neill's, including Cardinal O'Fiaich.

Enjoy 40 minutes of drama, landscape and detail about your own family — find out why an O'Neill head was pickled and sent to London and what remains of the family heirlooms.

If you want a permanent record of your family history, "The O'Neill Family History" makes a very special gift to a relative or friend; it is also an exciting opportunity for you to acquire a professionally produced video of immense personal value to you and your family.

"IRISH BUSINESS PROFILE" is a program of the National Board, Ancient Order of Hibernians in America—Michael Coogan, National President and David R. Burke, National Chairman, "Buy Irish" Committee.

Hibernian Sports

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

Greetings Hibernian Sports fans!! A big Thank You to Mike Coogan, AOH National President, for reappointing YR to the position of Asst Editor again. It will be my pleasure to serve under him and work with Dave Henshaw. Thanks, guys! Now, let's talk sports!

Baseball — The NL East seems to be only a matter of time before the Mets clinch it. That should be a sure thing according to the bookmakers. The NL West seems to be LA. So be it.

The AL East is turning into its usual fall spectacular. Detroit began to fade. This probably doesn't make their owner too happy. Boston is making their run. The Yankees are chasing them. Interesting note about the Yankees; they beat up on the Tigers. Then went to Cleveland where they were done in. The pundits say they can beat the tough teams but have a tough time with the easy teams. But it will make for a fun-filled fall.

The AL West looks like Oakland. At this time they're 11 games ahead. Things like this make baseball look dull.

The interesting sidelights of baseball this season are the squabbles between the Yankee players and the owner, George Steinbrenner. YR believes that he, GS, is footing the bill and paying these guys and therefore is entitled to his piece of mind.

On the other hand, the players, if they are giving one hundred per cent, should not be harassed by a boss who shoots from the lip. A bit of trivia is to name all the managers that are under contract to the Yankees, including Billy Martin and Lou Piniella.

The other interesting fact concerns the Red Sox. Upper management, in the form of Mrs. Yawkey, so YR is told, decided that John McNamara had to go. The baseball men on the Red Sox staff tried to persuade against such a move. She persevered. McNamara was out and Joe Morgan was in. Since that day, the Red Sox have put on quite a show. They are in contention for the pennant. This action may be weighing heavy on some people's minds in Boston.

On the local scene, the proposed stadium got shot down by 4 Republicans and a maverick Democrat. In a manner of speaking, it was a sight! This gang of 5 kept putting up all sorts of barriers to the Mayor, the Honorable Juanita M. Crabb. She and her administration met and bettered most of them. She just couldn't get these guys to see that minor league baseball has become a money-making venture for those who get in with a solid game plan. The local paper in an editorial stated that all the 4 Republicans were doing was playing hard ball and down and dirty politics. Well, the stadium is doomed. Minor league baseball is not in Binghamton's future. One of these Republicans is running for the State Senate for the seat held by a man who had become the leading Republican in NYS. It will be interesting to see if this prestigious job goes to a guy with such small ideas.

Football — Notre Dame is off to a good start. They look quite impressive in their opener. Let's hope the rest of the season goes their way. It would be good to see them No. 1.

The NFL is having its problems with drugs. Very interesting! Especially some of the names who have been suspended for 30 days for substance abuse. YR knows from experience the effects of abuse. Yet, he also knows that a slap on the wrist isn't going to change a lot of guys' thinking. "Hey, Man! This is Good Stuuuuff!!!" YEEEEAAHHHH!!!" As long as these guys think they need this crap to play their best, they will keep on doing drugs. The NFL must either get a tougher policy with teeth in it or silently admit that it is afraid to punish these druggies because of loss revenues at the gate. Sorry, guys, it won't wash. If you believe in human dignity then you have to have a program that helps those who need help and punishes those who wish to break or even bend the rules. If it's just the money you're interested in, then in a few years, the NFL will not be the league that Art Rooney was so proud of. You can't have it both ways. Kicking

The Irish Connection

Chris Reid, an Irish American, dubbed the "Shamrock Express," has a professional career record of 20 wins, 1 loss and 2 draws. His people are from Stranochum, Co. Antrim, Ireland and Kildysart, Co. Clare, Ireland. He is a member of AOH, Div. 4, New York County and holds an honorary membership card from the N.Y.C. Police Department Emerald Society.

Chris was named one of the top 100 Irish Americans by Irish America Magazine; was winner of the 1987 "Sportsman of the Year" Award from the County Clare P.B. and S. Assn. of New York; fought in Kings Hall, Belfast, Ireland, on four occasions; marched in the N.Y.C. 1987 St. Patrick's Day Parade as an Honorary Marshal for the County Clare P.B. and S. Assn. of New York.

The young athlete has been traditionally escorted into the ring by the Men of the Pipes and Drums of the Sword of Light Bagpipe Band from Local No. 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (I.B.E.W.). He was honored to spend part of last St. Patrick's Day with the habit is not easy. It can be done. It must be done. It can't be done by substitution. It can be done by abstention! It can be done Cold Turkey. It's the NFL's and players' problems. Will the guys who don't do drugs stand up and make the league do something? Will the players union molly-coddle the offenders against the big bad owners? Will the owners say the union is meddling if the union comes up with a solution? Tune in next time for the continuing saga of The Inside Dope of NFL or should it be The Dope Inside the NFL?

The NFL is into its 2nd week of play. The Giants are winning without LT. Dent successfully sued and has been returned to active status with the Chicago Bears. Dent's case brings up an interesting point. To refuse to take a "drug test" because of what he thought was infringement on his personal rights, is one thing. If he refused because he was afraid that a foreign substance would show such as coke, heroin, or some other drug, in his specimen, then the NFL is in bad shape. If the NFL is in bad shape, then we, the fans, are being short-changed.

YR was never an athlete of note. Yet, YR has personally learned what substance abuse can do to a person. Not only do you short-change the team. You short-change your friends and supporters. But the biggest two you short-change, are your family and yourself. That's the tragedy of it all!

Hockey — Wayne Gretzky goes Hollywood. This should prove very interesting for the LA Kings who even changed their logo when this happened. The question is, "Can Gretzky survive Hollywood?" "Can the Oilers win without Gretzky?" The coming season will tell.

The Olympics — Have begun in Seoul, Korea. One of the remarks YR has heard on TV, on the radio and in the press, is the Koreans are called "The Irish of the Orient." This is based on some very bad stereotypes. The two most stupid ones are that the Irish and the Koreans are both heavy drinkers and brawlers. This doesn't speak well of either ethnic group. By the time you read this, the Olympics will be gone. The names of the medal winners will be forgotten. The only thing that anyone will remember is that the Irish and the Koreans both drink and brawl. Let's see if we can't change these stupid stereotypes which keep coming back

SHAMROCK EXPRESS
CHRIS REID

Maureen O'Hara, the Hollywood starlet who appeared with John Wayne in the movie classic, "The Quiet Man," a story about a boxer who returns to Ireland.

Reid married the former Elaine Giles. Mrs. Reid is a native of Blackrock, a suburb of Dublin City in County Dublin, Ireland.

The days of Dempsey, Tunney, Tommy Loughran, Mike McTigue and Chris Reid's idol, Billy Conn, when an earlier wave of Irish immigrants dominated the fight game, has long since passed. However, there is a new wave of Irish immigrants and they love boxing, as do most Irish Americans. They want a new hero and will argue loudly that Chris Reid is not the last of a dying breed. For the Shamrock Express, it's all aboard!!!

It was noted by the host of a local Irish radio program that the Irish Tri-Colour during the opening ceremonies was carried by a Protestant from Belfast. She seemed fascinated by this. YR could have told what his father told him many years ago, that the struggle in the occupied six counties of Northern Ireland was not about religion but occupation by a foreign nation and economic stability for both Catholics and Protestants.

The Olympics are causing their own set of problems in the international sporting arena. U.S. boxers being disqualified for not being where they should. U.S. boxers being named losers in bouts by the referee only to have that decision overturned by a committee after filing a protest. This should be a very interesting Olympiad.

The End — One final comment on the NFL this year. YR is having a hard time adjusting to the "Phoenix Cardinals". It just doesn't sound right! That's it from the Cardinals this time until next time. Keep sending YR those sweet little love notes. YR will print them. Send them to PO Box 156 ESS, Binghamton, NY 13904.

Federal Express Comes To The Rescue of Derby Champ

By JIM DETTLING
Beacon Journal staff writer

Dave Leslie of Federal Express doesn't look much like a leprechaun, but he granted an Irish wish Tuesday when he offered to ship a Soap Box Derby car back to Northern Ireland free of charge.

The offer was immediately accepted by members of the Akron Hibernians.

The car has been sitting in the group's Kenmore Boulevard building since Aug. 14, when Liam Muldoon, the 14-year-old Irish derby champ, returned to Ireland after competing in the All-American race in Akron.

The Muldoons could not afford to have the green racer with the gold shamrocks shipped back to their hometown in Jonesborough, Northern Ireland, so the Hibernians took it in and started a fund drive to pay to ship it to young Liam.

A story on the youngster's plight appeared Monday.

"I saw the article and thought, 'How unfortunate that this kid went to all the trouble of building his racer, coming to Akron to race it and then having nothing to show for it,'" said Leslie, manager of Federal Express' Akron office.

"We have an international service and ship to Ireland, so I checked and found we could fit it into our system," he said.

"I checked with my senior manager, Steve Ricca, and he liked the idea, so we contacted the Hibernians and went from there."

Mike McNulty, who headed up the fund drive for the Hibernians, said the club "really appreciated Dave's offer."

"We had already collected about $400 in donations and pledges," said McNulty.

"What we would like to do is keep that money and any other donations we receive and use it next year to help pay the traveling expenses of the Irish derby champ."

"Liam has a younger brother who may race in the Soap Box Derby next year and it would be nice if the money could help him," McNulty said.

He said anyone who has donated so far could get a refund.

"We plan to call everybody that has donated and make that offer," he said.

News coverage of the story also provided an unexpected bonus.

"We got a call from the BBC (British Broadcasting Corp.) and they are going to patch us into a talk show in Northern Ireland today where we can talk to Liam about his experiences here in Akron at the All-American and the friends he made here," McNulty said.

"It looks like everything worked out just super in the end."

funds for this parade are raised by members of Division 1 — Broome County, AOH and LAOH and Division 2 — Broome County, LAOH. The Division receives no grants-in-aid, donations from local corporations or federal, state or municipal funds. It is strictly a local AOH function.

This parade has become the largest single day spectator event in Broome County. Last year, over 50,000 people came to see this Parade in beautiful downtown Binghamton. It was at this parade, that "CHOW" had the largest intake of donated foodstuffs for one day in its history, over 13 barrels of food was donated in that one hour and fifteen minutes of Parade. These barrels are the 44 gallon variety.

Does this mean the Division is without problems? No. Division 1 — Broome County has the typical problems which beset the other

D.C. Friendly Sons Grants Scholarship

The Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick of Washington, D.C., has named John Colbert of Bethesda, MD., the winner of a full-tuition scholarship to pursue graduate work in Irish studies at The Catholic University of America.

The nation's capital Friendly Sons Society and CUA's Center for Irish Studies announce the award, made to an entering M.A. candidate in English or politics who specializes in Irish studies at CUA. The scholarship, applicable for one year, may be renewed for a second.

Colbert, 21, is the son of Jerry and Eileen Colbert, also of Bethesda. He is a 1988 graduate of Holy Cross College in Worcester, MA, where he majored in history and played on the varsity baseball team.

Open to undergraduate and graduate students, the CUA Program in Irish Society and politics in which Colbert is interested sends a selected group of students to Dublin for a semester to work as research assistants to Irish Parliament members and pursue coursework in Irish studies.

Colbert is the second winner of The Friendly Sons' Scholarship, which was established at CUA in 1986. Patricia C. Kelly, a 1981 CUA graduate and native of Lakewood, Ohio won the first award to study for an M.A. in English.

divisions throughout the country, lack of volunteers to bartend, to serve on committees, to solicit funds, ads, etc. Division 1 — Broome County has its share of members who mean well and have all sorts of great ideas but want others to carry out their schemes. By and large, Division 1, Broome County adheres to "Paterno's Law of 80-20." This law states that 80% of the work is done by 20% of the membership. This doesn't relate into that many bodies. But they do get things done.

Will Division 1 — Broome County ever overtake Watertown, MA for the #1 spot? Probably not, due to the base from which each works. Regardless, YR is proud of the work that is being done by Division 1 — Broome County, its officers and members.

The Division sponsors and supports the largest AOH St. Patrick's Day Parade within a 130 mile area. This parade, held on the Saturday preceding St. Patrick's Day, has grown from a group of 20 members of Division 1, Broome county AOH and Division 1, Broome County LAOH and a solitary piper to a parade which takes one hour and fifteen minutes, comprises over 70 marching units which include at least 3 Irish War Pipe Bands, and every politician and politician's son or daughter within that 130 mile area. YES! THERE IS A HIBERNIAN LIFE INSURANCE FUND

OF MINNESOTA
790 South Cleveland Avenue
Suite 221
St. Paul, Minnesota 55116
(612) 690-3888

What it is...

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAAOH members by 1953 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and the LAOH. In 1963, the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Bursary Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.

President's Message

Teachtaineaí An Uachtaráin
By Michael J. Coogan, National President

The Council of Presidents met recently to assess where we are and where we want to go in our efforts to lobby the Congress on behalf of vital Irish issues confronting Irish Americans. I quote from the enlightening statement issued by the Council:

"Discussions are currently underway with Congressional leaders and the Government of Ireland on America's role in the Anglo-Irish conflict. Specifically, we hope to expand and improve our means of addressing issues of the conflict before both Houses of Congress and the White House. The decade that lies ahead will present many new and different opportunities for positive American action. We wish to be prepared to respond to these issues in a timely and effective manner."

"In our statement adopted two years ago we called for a fundamental change in America's policy toward the Anglo-Irish conflict. We are convinced such a policy change will reduce violence, enhance the prospects for peace, and painlessly bring about the re-unification of Ireland in our lifetime. A new Administration and Congress must be convinced that facing this challenge will serve the interests of peace and prosperity in Ireland. We hope to begin a process that will ultimately expand that dialogue in Washington. We hope to announce by early next year how we feel this might best be accomplished."

Recent events have increased the urgency of dialogue among all leaders and citizens. I refer to the British government's escalation of repressive measures against the people of Northern Ireland. Douglas Hurd, British Secretary of State, has decreed that the right of detained persons to remain silent while in police custody is to be abolished. To remain silent would be considered similar to an admission of guilt in a criminal case. This action, unthinkable in most civilized societies, must be viewed in the context of the martial law measures to which the people of Northern Ireland are already subjected. The fact that any person can, for any reason whatsoever, be picked up by the police and interrogated for up to 48 hours, incommunicado and without access to a lawyer, makes the right to remain silent essential. After this period of time, an individual may be held for up to seven days for further interrogation without being charged.

Hurd also abolished the right of free access to all media to certain groups, including the legal political party, Sinn Féin. It is now against the law for British electronic and print media to broadcast or report "direct statements" from supporters of what it considers extremist groups.

The British government has also expanded the Prevention of Terrorism Act to permit the seizing of the assets of individuals or organizations "suspected" of aiding terrorist groups, without due process of law.

Twenty years ago, the civil rights movement in Northern Ireland was in the process of being beaten and shot off of the streets. Today, British army regiments in ever increasing numbers continue to patrol in full battle gear the streets and glens of a civilian population. The repressive and desperate actions of the past month are further proof that the situation is totally out of control and that the British position in Ireland is untenable. The British government must do the right thing and it must do it now — it must announce a specific time-table for the total withdrawal of its troops and government from Ireland.

Right to Remain Silent Severely Threatened

Criminal Evidence In Northern Ireland

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, The Rt. Hon. Tom King MP, gave the attached answer to a question in the House of Commons on 20 October. His comments on the announcement are also included.

Summary

Courts may attach whatever weight they think proper to the fact that a suspect remains silent when questioned.

Courts may draw inferences from a suspect's silence in four circumstances: Two are dealt with by provisions that have the same effect as provisions recommended by the Criminal Law Revision Committee in 1972. The first is the 'ambush', where having remained silent during police questioning the accused offers an explanation of his conduct for the first time at his trial when he might reasonably have been expected to offer it when being questioned. The second provides that once the prosecution have established that there is a case to answer, the accused should be warned that he will be called to give evidence and that if he should refuse to do so the court may draw such inferences as would appear proper.

The other two situations are covered in provisions which have the same effect as provisions in the Criminal Justice Act enacted by the Irish Parliament.

It is proposed that legislation will be introduced on this subject for England and Wales.

The government's review covers not just terrorism but racketeering and other serious crime.

There is a tendency for suspects to exploit the "right to silence." Justice is being thwarted by the absolute refusal of suspects to answer questions.

Rights of persons detained for questioning have recently been strengthened under Part II of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1987.

I have today laid before Parliament a draft order in Council which proposed amending the general criminal law of Northern Ireland relating to evidence both before and during trial.

The provisions of this draft order would allow the courts to attach whatever weight they think proper to the fact that someone remained silent when questioned; for example, where circumstances were such that an innocent person might reasonably have been expected to protest his innocence and draw attention to facts which served to establish it.

The draft order proposes amending the criminal law to permit the courts in Northern Ireland to draw whatever inferences would be proper from the fact that an accused remained silent in four situations.

Ireland Redux

P.A. MAGNIER

A nutshell non-sense analysis

Which is to say that while I am not 100% for any one group, I am 100% against two of them. I don't intend to waffle or be mealy-mouthed; or be considered no better than the mass media on both sides of the Atlantic, dependent on establishment dish-outs. I can't accept the two cowardly bullies having the power and using it crushingly. Least of all I am on the side of the occupation troops operating from the safety of barbed wire fortified barracks; and when patrolling the streets, from behind caged personnel carriers, armored cars and helicopters. And whose bosses, visiting from London, have to be protected night and day with maximum security. Ongoing now for twenty years! This is democracy? Compare Afghanistan. Confer Helsinki.

I hold no brief for any of the three main warring factions in truncated Ulster (six of a nine-county province): Irish, Orange and English. Colman McCarthy in the Washington Post describes the trio inaccurately, using religious connotations, but otherwise correctly:

"Ulster is a three-sided conflict; the Catholic minority, the Protestant majority, and the British government. It's two against one, with the two having the power and... using it crushingly."

My sole purpose is to present the total picture with all the salient facts and ramifications and historical background. I seek to stress the basic principle that no nation has any right, human or divine, to occupy by force any part of another.

People need to be disillusioned about the present situation in Ireland. Injustice anywhere is injustice everywhere and all peoples should be concerned. Recognition of who belongs where was neatly illustrated by an incident this year in Belfast. A British soldier shouted at a US Congressman (J.K.): "Why don't you go back to your own country?" The American shot back: "Why don't you go back to yours?"

The originator, instigator and perpetrator of the present murderous mess is the ruling faction. It is none other than the London puppeteer who pulls the strings of the one-man gauleiter ruling the roost with the aid of SS or SAS stormtroopers daily elbowing the citizens off the sidewalks. It is this faction that restarted the Troubles (dormant since 1922) in 1968 by their cowardly and brutal onslaught upon thousands of men, women and children participating in a peaceful civil rights march from Belfast to Derry, inspired by Selma and born of desperation. The Troubles is a euphemism for all the wars in Ireland since Easter Week 1916.

Since that event the British government is responsible for deliberately killing and maiming more innocent civilians than the other two factions combined — beginning with that fateful day in 1968, and compounded three years later in Derry with the cold-blooded gunning down of fourteen young civilians, most of them teenagers and

MacBride Principles Bill Introduced in Indiana House

A coalition lead by Ned Delaney of Kokomo, Indiana, is working to have a MacBride Principles bill introduced in the Indiana legislature. State Representative Brad Bayliff said that he would sponsor the legislation, requiring that U.S. companies operating in both Indiana and Northern Ireland adopt the MacBride Principles or explain in writing why they did not.

The state would discontinue doing business with the firm if it failed to provide that written explanation.

Along with Delaney, the coalition consists of the Ancient Order of Hibernians; the Irish Northern Aid Committee; Robert E. Connolly, an attorney and author from Ft. Wayne; and Charles Rice, a professor at Notre Dame University; and others.

Editor's Note: The National Irish Caucus reports that the MacBride Bill will be introduced into the state house of Wyoming in the New Year by newly-elected Donald J. Sullivan from Cheyenne.

MacBride Wins Michigan Senate

By JOHN MARTIN CAHILL

(Story taken from the Michigan Hibernian)

The long and difficult struggle to pass the MacBride Principles in Michigan took a giant step in early June. By a vote of 30-3 the Michigan Senate approved a MacBride Principles Bill. The bill is a substitute bill for the original proposals sponsored by Senator John Kelly and Walsh Division member, Representative Michael Bennane. It was submitted by our wonderful "friends", Senators Rudy Nichols and John "my grandmother was Irish" Engler.

The journey of Senator Engler from a reactionary Thatcher conservative to an Irish Republican is a curious story. It is well documented that Senator Engler had fought the MacBride Principles Bill at the behest of the British Government. Only last January he had ordered Senator Nichols to kill the bill and not allow a hearing. Just prior to St. Patrick's Day, Senator Engler brought in British cabinet minister John Stanley for a press conference to support his anti-MacBride position.

Engler Embarrassment
The Stanley stratagem ended on a sour note for Senator Engler when Minister Stanley was questioned by IAU President Blair McGowan. Recent news reports had romantically linked Prince Andrew to a Belgian Catholic princess. The British tabloids raged about the romance because British law requires that anyone who marries a Catholic must renounce all rights to the British Crown.

McGowan asked Minister Stanley if this was true. He further asked why Irish Americans should believe that the British government will address anti-Catholic discrimination in the North of Ireland when it discriminates against Catholics at the highest level of its own government. Clearly flustered, Minister Stanley tersely stated that he did not discuss matters of the Royal Family. He then bolted from the room before any other embarrassing questions could be asked.

This exit followed an opening to the press conference that had also embarrassed Senator Engler. The Senator had begun by stating that the press conference had been called because of his desire to have a "full debate" on the MacBride Principles. He stated that he wanted all sides of the issue to be presented. He said that he had brought Minister Stanley to Lansing to contribute to that "full debate."

Minister Stanley then stated that he would deliver prepared remarks, but that any answers to questions thereafter could not be quoted. After the laughter of the reporters had died down, Senator Engler was forced to explain that, in America, reporters ask questions and the answers given are reported in the newspapers. Minister Stanley's confusion was understandable since

The Honorable Paula Hollinger
206 Senate Office Building
Annapolis, MD 21401

Dear Senator Hollinger,
I understand that you, as a member of the Maryland Senate, will soon be considering Senate Bill No. 663 entitled "Retirement and Pensions Systems — Northern Ireland Investment".

The Bill, as originally introduced in the Maryland Senate, required US companies in Northern Ireland to subscribe to a set of demands known as the MacBride Principles. We told members of the Senate Budget and Taxation Committee of the reasons why the British Government and every political party in Northern Ireland, except Sinn Féin, the

First of all I would like to wish all my Brother and Sister Hibernians a Happy and Blessed Christmas. May 1989 bring us all true happiness and peace.

I would like to thank all my Brother and Sister Hibernians on the AOH National Board, the Massachusetts State and County Boards, as well as the many members of Divisions across Massachusetts who attended the testimonial in my honor given by my own Division 36 in Worcester. It was an evening that my family and I shall remember for many years to come.

In response to the questionnaire that was recently mailed to all Hibernian Building Associations in September concerning a Hibernian Directory of all Hibernian Homes in America, the following have responded so far: Lawrence, MA; Lauderdale Lake, FL; Bristol, PA; Waterville, NY; East Islip, NY; Pittsburgh, PA; Worcester, MA; Massapequa, NY; Detroit, MI; Malden, MA; Akron, OH; Monroeville, PA; Lynn, MA; Brooklyn, NY; Newport, RI; Dayton, OH; Auburn, Albany and Selden, NY. If you have not returned your questionnaire yet, we ask that you do so by the official deadline, since we are planning to go to print right after the first of the year.

A questionnaire was sent to all major degree teams. To date the following have responded: the Massachusetts State Board; the Round Tower of Brooklyn; Brian Boru of Woodbridge, Virginia; and Tara Court of Dearpath, New York. If you have not yet responded to date we ask that you do so before the official deadline, so we may publish this information in our new directory.

We would like to congratulate all those Brothers in Worcester, MA and Meriden, CT who recently took their degrees. In the future we ask that degree teams please inform the office of National Vice President of the time, date and locations when degrees are given, so note of it can be made in our column.

With regards to Junior Divisions, please remember that is the duty of the vice president on the state, county and division level to promote this. The future of the AOH lies with our youth. They will be the leaders of tomorrow.

On the Sean MacBride Award please remember that all nominations are due in the office of the National Vice President before January 15, 1989. Complete information on this has been sent to all county and state presidents. Criteria on this award also appeared in the last issue of the Hibernian Digest.

A Nice Place to Visit

VINCENT J. SCULLY

National Chairman, Catholic Action

Have you ever really examined the church you attend?

It is common practice to walk in and worship and meditate, or just sit in quiet repose; but most of our churches offer an enormous amount of beautiful art that lends added dimension to our spiritual life. When you get the opportunity, look around your church. I think you will be pleasantly surprised!

My parish church is St. Clement's in southwest Philadelphia. It is a beautiful and friendly place to visit. The statuary and design (it is built in the shape of the cross) are really something special! The stained glass windows depict the wedding feast at Cana and Jesus preaching and teaching on the Mount and by the sea, among other very beautiful scenes. If you wish to, you can let your thoughts and prayers drift back some 2000 years and imagine how wonderful it must have been to see and hear our Lord and Saviour go about his Father's work!

The refraction of light at different times of day and the changing of the seasons adds to the beauty and message contained in each panel.

The crucifix on the main altar was thought to be modern by many parishioners; but it is the penal crucifix that takes us back to the very inception of the AOH in Ireland. It was a time when our priests were hunted like the wolf, with a bounty on their heads. Their courage became a symbol of Irish determination to survive and spread our Catholic faith. They did their job well!

Of course the most important part of any church community is the congregation that makes up the body of the faithful and here, too, my church is a nice place to visit! You'll feel welcome here!

Our congregation is Irish, Italian, Polish, German, Black, Hispanic, oriental and you name it. Rich and poor, young and old. Hard working people who step out to shake your hand and share the sign of peace in true christian spirit. The neighborhood is slowly running down outside; but inside the world is beautiful and I think a credit to the Roman Catholic faith.

If ever I move from this place, my hardest decision would be leaving St. Clement's parish! On second thought, if the Cardinal in New York still considers himself a part of St. Clement's, just maybe you can take some things with you, and just like Father O'Connor, I may find it a great place to visit!

Your church is probably just as beautiful as mine and has the same kind of beauty in its art and in its people as mine; and it's probably as nice a place to visit as mine; so enjoy it and take a friend with you. God bless you.

Irish Way Program

JOHN P. CONNOLLY

National Chairman

The Irish Way is a unique training program for American high schoolers in both public and private schools throughout the U.S. It fills them with pride of heritage; inspires them with a clearer knowledge of their people; introduces them to history, geography, literature, art and music of Ireland.

The program is centered at the Franciscan College in Gormanstown, County Meath. Irish Way students spend six weeks at Gormanstown each summer in a program which combines study, touring and family experience. They return to the U.S. with new enthusiasm for the Irish Way. These are the Irish Americans of the future. Aren't they worthy of a solid investment?

Now in its tenth year, the Irish Way program has more than doubled in size since it began. But that's not enough. We are still only skimming the surface. Most of our young people need to know more about Ireland. The future of the Irish Way of Life in America depends on what we do for our young Irish-Americans.

Emigration from Ireland to the U.S. has been almost completely shut down. The burden — and the challenge — falls upon the young. And our responsibility is to give them what they need in order to carry on. Your Division can do nothing better to prepare for the future than to commit itself now to raising a minimum of one full scholarship. You can't fault the young! The survival of our heritage demands our decision to commit ourselves to the future now! In as many other ways, we could learn a lot from our Jewish fellow citizens.

State and County Boards interested in sponsoring a scholarship program on the Irish Way, please write to: John P. Connolly, 15 Green Street Terr., Watertown, MA 02172.

STATE NEWS: New Jersey

TOMS RIVER, N.J. — A project to collect books on Irish history, culture and politics and place them in the Ocean County Library has been launched by members of AOH Division 1 of Ocean County, now known as the James J. Howard Division.

The project, which is being aided by other local Irish organizations, is being directed by Brian Phillips, political action chairman, and Ralph Hodges, secretary of the division. Also participating are the women's unit of Division 1, the American Irish Club of Whiting and the Jersey Shore Irish-American Club.

The books will consist of those donated by members and those in the community and new publications purchased with funds raised by the book drive. Full cooperation has been received from officials of the county library.

The division was renamed the James J. Howard Division last summer in memory of the late New Jersey congressman who was a member of the division. He died suddenly last March.

Brian Phillips is filling the role of the late Bernard Mackle, a charter member of the division who died suddenly last June 22. Mackle was also political action chairman of the Mid-Jersey Chapter of the Irish American Unity Conference. Phillips and member Jim Lowney will serve as division delegates to the Seaside Heights St. Patrick's Day Parade.

LOUISVILLE, KY — Hibernians of Fr. A. J. Ryan Division 1 attended the recent installation of Our Lady of Limerick mosaic in the Church of St. Louis Bertrand, here. The blessing of the mosaic, enshrined in a niche of the church facade, 50 feet above the main entrance, brings together two traditions—that of the statue of Our Lady of Limerick in the Church of St. Saviour's, Limerick, Ireland, and the mosaic recently installed here in the neighborhood of Limerick. The mosaic also symbolized the varicolored ethnic mix of the American Catholic Church—Irish green next to the blue of South America, the brown of Africa and the red of Poland.

The same is true for Budweiser.

We brew our beer with the finest hops, rice, and barley malt. Then we age it with Beechwood, to aid the natural carbonation. The result is a clean, crisp taste that has been distinctively Budweiser's for over one hundred years.

discrimination under the Fair Employment Act of 1976. Senator Kelly inquired what the penalties were against employers who were found to have discriminated. She stated that they could lose their charter to do business with the British Government. Senator Kelly then asked how many times that penalty had been invoked since 1976. Fiona answered "None" as the room erupted into laughter.

The hearing closed with brilliantly effective remarks from Councilman Jack Kelly. Kelly told Senator Nichols that the only thing wrong with the bill was that the British were embarrassed by it. "They should be embarrassed!" he thundered while Senator Nichols blanched. Senator Nichols' discomfort increased as Kelly's unique blend of passion and humor entranced the room. Quietly speaking and pointing directly at Senator Nichols, Kelly stated, "Rudy, we would hate to have to run someone against you in the next election."

The Resolution

Senator Engler now had a problem. He wants to run for governor in Jack Cahill "blows away" Senator Nichols.

1990. He was alarmed by the public outcry about the MacBride Principles. He initially had thought that he could kill the MacBride Principles and the general public would not notice it. Now he knew the voters were watching. He knew that if he killed the bill in 1988 it could be quickly reintroduced in 1989. That meant during his campaign for governor he would be asked embarrassing questions about the MacBride Principles. Running as the anti-Catholic, anti-Irish candidate for governor was not a pleasant prospect.

John Cushman with Fiona Cassidy and an unknown associate.

Senator Engler now knew that a MacBride Principles Bill had to be passed in 1988. He decided to write his own bill. That bill passed the Senate in early June by a 30-3 vote. That bill preserves the MacBride Principles intact, but weakens the enforcement provisions. It now goes to the House of Representatives for approval. If passed in its present form by the House it will go to the governor for signing. This

Eleven AOH Teenagers Win Ireland Scholarships

ST. PAUL, MN: Eleven high school students with AOH "ties" have been awarded scholarships by the AOH and other groups for the annual Irish Way Program and will be part of a group of 144 American teenagers from 26 states visiting Ireland for nearly six weeks this summer.

The Irish Way, which began its 13th year July 4, is sponsored by the St. Paul-based Irish American Cultural Institute (IACI). The holiday and study program offers a look at Irish history and literature and a variety of social, cultural and recreational activities, including attending a play at Ireland's national theatre, seeing a hurling match, taking part in a traditional Irish dance, and playing sports matches against local Irish teenagers.

The Irish Way completes its introduction to Irish life and culture by placing each student with an Irish family for a home stay and by offering a sampling of hotel living during a tour of the island.

The program's home base is a secondary school at Gormanston, 25 miles north of Dublin near the Irish Sea. The 51-acre estate includes modern recreational facilities and a medieval castle and is located in one of Ireland's most historic areas. By sharing Gormanston with teenagers from various European countries, Irish Way participants also have the opportunity to learn about more than one culture during the program.

Many of the students going on the Irish Way already know what to expect from the program because their brothers and sisters are some of the more than 1,350 alumni from the program's 12 years. There are now more than 200 families who have sent at least two members on the program and more than 50 families that have sent three or more.

The Irish American Cultural Institute, which administers the program, is a non-profit, non-political organization working for a more informed view of Ireland. It also brings lecturers and performers from Ireland to a dozen or more U.S. cities six times each year as part of its annual Irish Perceptions series and also sponsors the Trees for Ireland reforestation project.

This year's AOH winners are:

AOH National Board Winners

Erin Bauersachs, daughter of Leonard and Ann Bauersachs of Mercerville, N.J., will be a 10th grader this fall at Hamilton North High School. Erin's parents own a store selling Irish imports and she is an accomplished Irish step-dancer. She plays on her school and township soccer teams, plays the violin, and maintains a solid "B" average.

Patrick McGuinness, son of Sarah McGuinness of Philadelphia enters 11th grade at Father Judge High School this fall and is the second member of his family to go on the Irish Way. Patrick lived in Ireland for a year and a half and is a member of his local Boys Club. He plays on his school's football and baseball teams, collects baseball cards, fixes broken games and toys as a hobby, and plays the accordion.

Maura Sheedy, daughter of Christopher and Margaret Sheedy of Philadelphia, will graduate from St. Basil Academy next spring. Maura is the vice president of her AOH junior division and treasurer of her school's environmental club. She is involved with Community Service Corps, plays piano, is an Irish dancer and is a "B" student.

AOH Flatbush Division 35, Brooklyn Winner

William Judge, is the son of William and Frances Judge of Brooklyn and will be in 10th grade at Xavierian High School in September. An altar boy and Boy Scout, William plays a variety of sports and also collects baseball cards. This will be William's 3rd visit to Ireland and follows a summer working for his aunt in Georgia.

Katheryn Kenney of Southbury, Conn., moves into 11th grade at Pomperaug Regional High School this fall. Martin played varsity football last year and played trombone in his junior high school band. He's learning the guitar and carries a "B" average in school.

AOH Broome Co., NY, Div. Winner Margaret O'Donnell is the second member of Paul and Margaret O'Donnell's, Whitney Point, New York family to participate in the Irish Way. A senior at Chenango Forks High School next year, Margaret is on her school's prom committee and in the language club. She plays soccer and is captain of her school's volleyball team.

Hibernian Life Insurance Fund Of Minnesota Winners

Michele Hannah is the oldest child of Robert and Dae Hannah of Minneapolis and will enter 11th grade this fall at Totino-Grace High School. Michele has studied guitar since she was six years old and also plays bass, drums and piano. She plays in her own rock band in her school's jazz band, has a "B" average, is a member of LAOH Division 9, Hennepin County, and has won a Hibernian Life Insurance scholarship for her high school tuition.

Shannon Kennedy, daughter of Michael and Rosann Kennedy of Chetek, Wis., is the granddaughter of James Kennedy of Eagan, Minn., former president of AOH Division 4, St. Paul. A senior next fall at Chetek High School, Shannon is involved in 4-H, VFW Jr. Ladies Auxiliary, and Future Business Leaders. She is also yearbook editor and a member of the volleyball and basketball teams and the marching band's flag team.

Other Scholarship Winners

Francis Connolly is the fourth member of Joseph and Mary Connolly's Naugatuck, Conn. family to take part in the Irish Way. He will enter 11th grade at Sacred Heart High School and is a competitive swimmer and bicyclist. Francis plays in the school band, is an altar boy, and works through his school's Key Club to help his community. Francis received his financial award from the Wild Geese of Greenwich, Conn.

Eileen Miamidian's sister went on the 1987 Irish Way and Leon and Patricia Miamidian of Norristown, Pa., are happy to send Eileen. In 11th grade at Mount St. Joseph Academy this fall, Eileen is a member of Amnesty International, a handbell choir, Community Service Corps and many other clubs. She writes for the school paper, plays piano and flute and carries an "A" average. Eileen's grandparents, John J. & Gertrude Kearney, are members of AOH Division 4 and LAOH Division 3, Camden, respectively. Eileen's scholarship came from the Philadelphia Chapter of the Irish American Cultural Institute.

Sean O'Connor is the son of John and Patricia O'Connor of Bexley, Ohio, and he'll be a 10th grader at Bexley High School next year. His father is the president of the Columbus AOH division. Sean is an Irish step-dancer, runs track, and acts. He is a member of the Boy Scouts and the Order of the Arrow and he collects coins and builds models in his spare time. Sean won his scholarship from the Shamrock Club of Columbus.

Dan O'Kennedy and Oliver Kearney.

James Phalen - Walsh Div., James O'Kelley - Wayne Co. President and Joseph Roche, Past National President.

Nat'l Legal Counsel Appoints Assistants

National Legal Counsel George Clough announced the appointment of two Deputy National Legal Counsels to assist him. One is National Home Fund Chairman Jim Shannon of San Diego and the other is Kevin McDermott of Nassau County, New York. Kevin is president of Division 15 and serves as Assistant District Attorney of Nassau County.

Clough also said he would be giving a full report in the next Digest on the suit against the Justice Department over the denial of a visa to Gerry Adams. The Order has joined the suit as a party plaintiff.

IRISH PHONIES for immigration. Taking a page from the telephone company's "Reach out and touch someone," ladies from the Arlington, VA AOH Division and the Washington DC Immigration Support Committee, set up their own "Irish Reach Out." They made over 700 calls to the Washington area Irish, asking them to call their representatives to support the Rodino-Massoli Immigration Bill. Heard through an open door at one of the Reach Out Centers was a thick Irish brogue saying "It's spelled M-HAY-ZED-ZED-OH-LYE." Left to right are Erin Herlihy, Maria Herlihy, Elaine Foley, Shelia Curtin, Anna O'Neill, Martina Tobin, Anne McDonald and Vicki Curtin.

Congressman Ray McGrath (R-Valley Stream, N.Y.) said recently that a bill which gives a boost to Irish immigration to the United States was approved in the final days of the 100th Congress. The bill also allows for an extension of expired temporary visas for foreign nurses, already in this country, until the end of 1989.

"Just when all hope seemed lost for this bill, the Senate finally relented," McGrath said. "We have made substantive progress" towards correcting a gross inequity in our immigration laws."

Overall, the bill directs the State Department to make available 15,000 visas in each of fiscal years 1989 and 1990 to the 37 countries designated by the State Department to be "adversely affected" by the first immigration act passed in 1965.

The Immigration Reform Act passed in 1986 included an amendment adding 5,000 visas for each of those 37 countries, including Ireland, but the time limit on obtaining those visas expired this past October 1.

Another provision of this bill includes an additional 10,000 visas for other underrepresented countries for the years 1990 and 1991.

McGrath cosponsored the immigration legislation last year calling for a permanent change in the selection system by adding an additional independent category, thus aiding "adversely affected countries." The bill was passed after many thought the issue would have to wait for the next Congress because of House-Senate differences.

"After many years we have found a workable solution," McGrath said.

THE DREAM — THE CHALLENGE — THE REALITY

March 17, 1987 proved to be an especially fortuitous day for the "Wearing of the Green" when it brought together two very special people, Susan Gordon Ryan and Dominick Kiernan.

During an ordinary dinner conversation they conceived an exciting idea. It was an idea that was to grow into a dream of hope and fulfillment for a group of Irish youngsters who competed in the New York State Games for the Physically Challenged and returned to Erin's Isle proudly holding aloft their gold medals.

They won the gold for Ireland, but, most of all, they won for all the young, lovable, handicapped Irish youngsters who can now also hope and dare, and compete in all the challenges of life. The Irish Team athletes are real heroes. God bless them all.

The idea, together with the dedication of Susan Gordon Ryan, Executive Director of The N. Y. State Games for the Physically Challenged, and the perseverance of Dominick Kiernan, the former Lord Mayor of Wexford, Ireland, brought to reality the dream of the 1988 Irish Team members:

nelly 17, Helen Efrech 21, Patricia Furlong 12, Tony Maloney 19, Carla McVitty 11, Declan Monahan 19, Edel Reck 20, Thomas St. Ledger 20, Anita Tighe 21, Seamus Wall, and Joann Wright 14 — twelve physically challenged youngsters who touched the hearts of the thousands of people who touched them, who loved them, and who cheered them on.

The tireless efforts of the AOH and many Irish societies and individuals raised the funds needed to bring the Irish Team and their chaperones to America. The funds raised paid for the air fare, housing, special buses, food, uniforms, entertainment, and sightseeing. The Team arrived at JFK on May 28, 1988, with beauty of face, heart and spirit. They charmed the people of Long Island and New York City with their beguiling brogue. They made lifelong friends. They were the best ambassadors of goodwill Ireland ever sent. They tweaked the hearts of everyone they met. They won many medals at the Games — 30 gold, 8 silver and 1 bronze. The dream became the challenge.

never left their small towns. The Lord Mayor, knowing well that he could depend on the generous American Irish, set out and traveled throughout the North and South of Ireland. He scouted the special athletes who were to represent all of Ireland in the N.Y. State Games for the Physically Challenged. His efforts paid off. His choices were excellent. He brought over a well trained, winning team.

The dream became a reality. Again in 1989 we will endeavor to offer the "Dream" to a new team of fifteen physically challenged Irish athletes. With a bit of Irish luck the Irish youngsters will be able to come to America and compete in the "Games". They will be able to meet new friends, see the sights of New York, have the time of their young lives, and return to Ireland happy and triumphant, and with fond memories.

The Lord Mayor called the physically challenged "Magic People." He said there is magic about them. He is right. However, these wonderful magic youngsters need the magic wand; they need the magic words; they need the magic fairy dust sprinkling down on them. They need the magic money.

The Challenge is before us. We must raise the funds for 1989. Please help us by opening your hearts and pockets to the Irish Youth Team of 1989. The athletes have been chosen and are waiting for their dream to come true. They want to share the fulfillment of the 1988 Team. They deserve the lifelong happiness the trip to the Games will bring to them. You deserve the happiness of making it possible by your generous donation.

You can bring the dream to reality.

Please make checks payable to: "Physically Challenged Irish Youth Team." Send all donations to: Jack Flatley, AOH, Public Relations, 32 Mobile St., Sayville, N.Y. 11782.

THE PROGRAM

The New York State Games for the Physically Challenged is presented each year and funded for N.Y. State resident athletes by The N.Y. State Office of Parks, Recreation, and Historic Preservation (Susan Gordon Ryan, Executive Director). The Games will be held this year from June 1 through June 4, 1989, at Nassau Community College and at the Mitchell Field Athletic Complex, Uniondale, Long Island, New York. The Games offer a program of competition in track and field, swimming, equestrian, and table tennis to junior athletes 5 to 21 years old who are challenged by being blind, deaf, and spinal cord injured. Also included are amputees, youngsters with cerebral palsy, and les autres (muscular dystrophy, dwarfism, arthritis, spinal bifida, etc.). The program is designed for success and each athlete competes in his or her own age group, physical challenge, and degree of ability. Gold, silver, and bronze medals are awarded for the top scorers, but everyone is a winner and leaves with a badge for having participated.

The aim of the program is to promote confidence and a positive image in the young athlete which will carry over to other parts of their lives as they grow and mature.

The first Games were held in August, 1985, and 240 athletes competed. The number of competitors has increased dramatically each year. This year we can expect 1600 physically challenged athletes.

Respect Life!

God's way of saying the world should go on.

● Right to Life March ●

On January 23, 1989 Pro-Life Americans from all walks of life will converge on Washington to hear words of encouragement from President George Bush in our ever continuing search for the right to life. Hibernians from all over this great land will meet in Washington and march as a unit behind the tri-color.

Jim Herlihy (703-536-8628), our Washington Pro-Life Chairman, will be in the southeast corner of the ellipse, across from the White House, holding high the tri-color, and it is requested that all Hibernians muster at this location at 12 noon on January 23rd. President Michael Coogan and Vice-President Mike Carroll, together with officers of the association, will lead the procession past the White House, Capitol, to the Supreme Court building.

The cause at hand is no less critical than American independence or the freeing of slaves. Each year 1.5 million babies are killed in this nation. They go to their deaths largely unnoticed and unmourned.

Pregnant women seduced by the sweet lies of feminism must be made to understand, in the poignant words of a rescue activist, "Abortion never makes you unpregnant. It only makes you the mother of a dead child." If Operation Rescue can advance this perception it will merit heaven's blessings.

Units and individuals are urged to contact Bill Farrell, National Chair, Hibernian Right to Life Committee, 508-443-2876 or 508-358-4569.

NATIONAL PRESIDENT Michael Coogan and Pro-Life Director William Farrell are pictured in a meeting with Dr. and Mrs. Wilke. Dr. Wilke, who is president of both the National Right to Life and the International Right to Life Association, has proposed memberships in the international to many AOH divisions. Bill Sherwin of County Cork is executive secretary of the international, which operates out of headquarters in Rome. A drive to obtain the memberships will begin early in 1989.

BOOK REVIEWS

The O'Brien Junior Biography Series by Moriarty and Sweeney.

At long last an important need is being met through the publication of a new series of historical and contemporary biographies of notable persons in Irish life and culture. Biographies may abound for adult readers, but younger readers have not had the same access to material more appropriate for their age group. It's very satisfying to know that now there is a new series of Irish biographies for the younger reader, in this case the 9-13 year old age group.

The first two books in the O'Brien Junior Biography Series have just been released. Theobald Wolfe Tone is a 64 page paperback giving the exciting story of Wolfe Tone, one of the founders of the United Irishmen, and his fight to get Napoleon's help in sending a fleet to aid the Irish rebels in their fight against the Crown forces. Tone's aim was to "break the connection with England," and to unite "Protestant, Catholic and Dissenter." After the unsuccessful 1798 Rising, Tone was captured and taken to Dublin, where he took his own life. His courage and his patriotism will endear him to all who read his story. $7.95.

W.B. Yeats presents the story of Ireland's most famous poet, winner of the Nobel Prize for literature and active participant in the early days of the famous Abbey Theatre. Yeats felt that Ireland and her heroic past must be the subject of his poetry, saying he must express "certain ardent ideas and a high attitude of mind which were the nation itself." His life-long love for Irish patriot Maud Gonne was also subject material for his poetry. In all, he is considered near the top (if not the top) of all 20th century poets. Paperback edition, 64 pp., $7.95.

Future titles in this series include Granuaile and Bob Geldof.

Ireland of the Proverb by Liam Mac Con Iomaire.

There are few things more insightful into the wisdom of a culture than proverbs. They enable us to peer through the half-door, as it were, and glimpse the attitudes, folk-memories and philosophies of a people. As Francis Bacon said, "The genius, wit, and spirit of a nation are discovered in its proverbs," and nowhere is this more true than in Ireland.

Ireland of the Proverb is a beautifully crafted collection of over 130 traditional Irish proverbs, given one to a page — first in Irish, then in English, and accompanied by mostly full-page black and white photographs, one for each proverb. Explanations are offered regarding the proverb's meaning in Irish life and culture, and the proverbs are grouped into categories which include types of people, youth and age, friends and neighbors, women and marriage, drink, death, work, hereditary nature, humorous sayings, and more.

Discover the Ireland of your ancestors through these remarkable, wise and witty sayings. Large format paperback, 231 pp., $14.95.

Jenny Mitchel: Young Irelander by Rebecca O'Connor.

John Mitchel, the fiery rebel of the 1848 Young Irelanders, was equally matched in every respect by his beautiful wife, Jane Verner Mitchel. Here is the life story of a valiant woman — in a certain sense, the woman who made the rebel. What a life rebel man and rebel wife led!

Here is the chronicle of the love-at-first-sight elopement through the turmoil of John Mitchel's trial for treason to the Crown; her 15 to 20 week voyage — with their five children — to join her husband in Australia's prison colony; their plucky escape to San Francisco; Mitchel's career in New York City journalism; their life in Washington and Tennessee; the agony of the (U.S.) Civil War; ultimate victorious return to Ireland — and death.

In this true tale, romance and pathos blend equally in the intimate lives of two rebel Irish. The scene is world-wide, the characters men and women of nobility. It's a story of love, courage and adventure across three continents. Paperback, 453 pp., $21.95.

An exciting new series in the nonfiction, children's area, presenting concise, accessible and illustrated biographies suitable for 9-15 year olds. Choose between THEOBALD WOLFE TONE, the rousing story of the man who persuaded Napoleon to send a fleet to help the Irish rebels fight the Crown forces in 1798, or W.B. YEATS, the life-story of Ireland's most famous poet. Each book is 64 pp., paperback, $7.95.

JENNY MITCHEL: YOUNG IRELANDER by Rebecca O'Connor

In 1875 Irish and American well-wishers donated the astounding sum of $30,000 to a fund for the widow of Irish patriot John Mitchel. Here, after many years, is the story of Jenny Mitchel, nee Verner, the woman they held in such high esteem, and of her friends and fellow exiled Young Irelanders, among them William Smith O'Brien, Thomas Francis Meagher and John Blake Dillon. It is a story of love, courage and adventure across three continents — the story of an extraordinary Irishwoman of her time. Paper, 452 pp., $21.95.

D.C. and Baltimore Irish Festivals Draw Large Crowds

From all over the United States, California, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C., as well as Canada, the Irish came to the Nation's Capital Feis earlier this year. They were greeted by a warm letter of welcome from President Ronald Reagan. They enjoyed a marvelous competition in the beautiful city of Washington D.C. and they won beautiful medals and trophies for every competition, awarded right in the "back yard" of the president of the United States.

It was a wonderful exciting day of competition and friendship. The day began with Mass, celebrated by Rev. Fr. John Hurley, on the south lawn of the White House, President's Park; then the dancing began. There was something for everyone: a baby contest for the "Best Irish Eyes". There were Irish games, such as tug-o-war and soccer, available all day.

While some were doing the jig and the reel, others were playing flute, fiddle, accordion and the harp in instrumental competition. Prizes were awarded for arts and crafts as well. Notable friends in the community came to visit, including Mr. & Mrs. Tom Breenahan; Mr. Breenahan is president and general manager of WMAL Radio; Mr. & Mrs. Declan Kelleher, of the Irish Embassy and Mr. & Mrs. Jim O'Connor, of the Emerald Isle Division, AOH. All were involved in awards presentations.

The Feis was preceded by a video session of Irish Set Dancing on August 27th, and followed, on August 29th, by a marvelous workshop in Irish Dance, taught by the "Dancing Master", Anthony Nolan, from Limerick, Ireland.

Bono,

I am an 18-year-old long following U2 fan, aware of your presence since December 1980 when I first read about you while on an Aer Lingus flight to Ireland. I've seen you evolve from various perspectives. These include my four trips to Ireland (North & South), my living in Scandinavia and my permanent residence in the United States. The intensity with which I've followed you from Red Rocks, to Live Aid, to Amnesty International and beyond has been viewed by others around me as slight insanity.

I am one who is also very sympathetic to and appalled by the situation which Northern Ireland's Catholic population lives under. I was, to say the least, thrilled at hearing of "Sunday, Bloody Sunday's" release in 1986. Thanks to your music the tragedy of Bloody Sunday is now a household word in many concerned American and Swedish homes. Even though you were not advocating physical resistance (as I do in this situation), I thought the song did a great job for oppressed Catholics. I had no problem with your not mentioning violence as a way out in the song, because taking up arms is your own personal prerogative.

However, I was bordering on tears after seeing "Rattle and Hum" this weekend. Although you're not personally into violence, I thought it was quite irresponsible to cry out, "F the revolution!" I myself believe in exhausting every means of peaceful protest in order to achieve freedom, but in Belfast and Derry that has been tried and it has not worked. It has however, as others would argue, worked in places like India, and in the United States concerning Blacks. These situations must be looked at however as compared to that of Ireland. India only gained its independence after England had been through a second world war. They could not hold on to 750 million people in Asia along with rebuilding their own country and the rest of Western Europe. The Reverend Martin Luther King (whom I deeply respect) and his peace movement were successful because the president at the time (John F. Kennedy) was sympathetic to their cause. Even though he was a non-violent protester, in essence Martin Luther King had the U.S. Army behind him, which is under the President's command.

In contrast Northern Ireland's Catholics have Margaret Thatcher, her national army, and a blind American government against them. Peaceful protest before the IRA's involvement in Northern Irish affairs brought only internment policies, police beatings, and Catholic civilian deaths at the hands of the British military. The world didn't care about what was happening. America would never step in as long as they needed Great Britain as an anti-Soviet ally. Forced with this oppressive situation at the hands of foreign troops, along with world ignorance, the Catholics of Northern Ireland's ghettos and industrial centers took up arms as a means of self-defense.

Since U2's formation in 1978, IRA attacks have always been aimed at legitimate military targets and not civilians. Sometimes civilians have gotten caught in the line of fire, which is tragic but a consequence of any military conflict. This is however nothing compared to the countless targeted attacks by Britain's security forces on Catholic civilians. Such names as Carroll-Anne Kelly, Julie Livingstone, and Sean Downes come to mind. Both Carroll-Anne Kelly's mother and Sean Downes' widow have visited my house. I also know and have visited with the family of Bobby Sands and other citizens of such Belfast townships as Twinbrook and Andersonstown. Every civilian death caused by the IRA (which have not been many) has been explained by an operational error, compared to the intended deaths at the hands of Thatcher's troops and other Protestant paramilitary forces which are backed by Britain. Some of this information never reaches the public. Evidence of this comes out in the film. You talk about the bombing in Eniskillen as IRA "terrorism." In case you didn't know, that bomb was scheduled to go off 4 hours later during a military show of strength at that same spot. British forces unfortunately hit the same frequency code as the IRA was using for some equipment of theirs and the bomb went off at the wrong time during the civilian march. It's sad this ever happened but it was a total mistake which every military organization eventually runs into. Yet this is another example of the true story about the IRA not getting out.

It was inaccurate to accuse us supporters of "glorifying the revolution." I and those in Ireland and elsewhere who sympathize with resistance do not see any glory whatsoever in the struggle. We see it as something that has to be done, and when it's over, it's over. The only glory we hope for is equal civil rights and an end to 80% unemployment in many Catholic ghettos. You talk of how the majority of your country (The Republic of Ireland or Free State) does not support resistance. Your 20 counties don't deal with the British day to day like those in the northern six. If you go into any Catholic areas of Belfast or Derry, you will get a very different story. These are the people who live with the reality of British troops every day.

Nobody wants to infringe on the rights of Protestants. We only want economic and social equality between the two. Protestants and Catholics have not had a history of conflict in the Republic of Ireland. Even in the North the conflict is between British troops, Radical Protestants (which are not many) and downtrodden Catholics. Only through British interference and segregation is there a conflict, one which when you look at the facts can only be solved by force. Imperialist Britain will understand nothing else. Were it not for justified violence of this kind, you and I would both be living in British colonies today. We're not asking you to endorse violence or turn "Sunday Bloody Sunday" into a rebel song or anything like that; we only ask that you not treat so harshly those who are fighting for the same principles that freed both you and me from British rule. I respect you all greatly but this only recent cursing at those fighting for justice has forced me to think deeply about you, Edge, Larry, and Adam, who have been my inspiration for years. I hope for the sake of Ireland and for the sake of U2, that you seriously reconsider your statement. Thank you and please respond. 26 plus 6 equals 1.

Harris Miller Reflects on Immigration

By PATRICIA JAMES

In a recent interview Irish Immigration Reform Movement (IIRM) lobbyist Harris Miller noted that while the overriding goal of trying to make a more fundamental rewrite of the entire legal immigration system was not achieved in 1988, it was not a failure of the Irish American effort, but simply a more fundamental inability of Congress to come to grips with the entire issue. However, it is clear that the groundwork has been set for a more comprehensive rewrite of the legal immigration system in the 101st Congress beginning next January.

In terms of what was achieved on the positive side, given the inability of Congress to come to grips with the comprehensive rewrite, they at least did recognize that the Irish Nationals have suffered under the rewrite of the 1965 Immigration Law and that the purpose of the 1965 Immigration Law to assure ethnic diversity in our immigrant population has not been achieved by the changes in the 1965 law. At least on an interim basis, the extension of the NP-5 or Donnelly visas gives citizens of Ireland and other countries such as Poland and Italy, which have been disadvantaged by the 1965 law, an opportunity to get their nationals into the immigrant stream. Therefore, passage of that bill (H.R. 5115) in the last hours of Congress was a significant achievement.

Miller stated that immigration is a very, very sensitive issue in Congress — it always has been and it always will be. It is an issue over which you do not normally have powerful economic interests competing in the Congress. Instead it is really a question of grassroots political support and how well that support demonstrates itself in terms of Congress.

Miller commented that the Irish groups showed an amazing amount of unanimity of purpose and objective in the lobbying of legislators on the importance of the issue to the Irish community. Given that this was in some sense the first time around for everyone to work together and to pull in the same direction, everyone did remarkably well. Certainly we have to hope that this is a basis for improved cooperation and coordination in the 101st Congress, as immigration reform legislation comes up again.

Miller believes that there will be another attempt, and he hopes a successful attempt, at a fundamental rewrite of legal immigration reform. The Senate had developed a broad consensus on the way to move and the House was coming close to it but in a larger sense they just ran out of time because they got started fairly late. There are some unknown factors, particularly Jack Brooks becoming Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. But Miller feels that the Irish did lay a lot of groundwork and that there was a strong commitment out of people like Congressman Mazzoli and Congressman Fish and others to move ahead with a comprehensive bill. If the Irish American community continues to approach the issue constructively, Miller thinks that they can have a major impact in terms of what ultimately comes out of the Congress and in terms of rewriting legal immigration law.

In terms of the other issues the Irish American community is concerned about, what to do about the status of the currently undocumented Irish who are in this country and who might have benefited from proposed legislation by former Congressman DiGuardi, we are really at a much more preliminary stage. We have not yet made the argument successfully that something needs to be done and there really is not a clear vehicle to do it. The whole idea of legalizing undocumented aliens is a very controversial issue, a very difficult task.

1968: Hopes and Dreams That Were

By JOSEPH PATRICK DOHERTY

This year, 1988, we commemorate the events of twenty years ago. 1968 was a memorable year. Paris riots, the Tet offensive, Soviet armies advancing on a Prague Spring, and the loss of Dr. King and another Kennedy to assassins' bullets evoke stunning memories. 1968 was a year of jubilation and change mixed with defeat and disillusionment. To many, it was a turning point — a year of decision-making and an opening to awareness of a vast, changing world. Two decades later, we still return with a searching eye and probing mind to that yesteryear.

In Ireland, and particularly in our 'troubled' northeast, the year of peace signs, protest, and social transformation was much in motion. Hope, dreams, distrust, resentment, doubt and despair affected a growing, energetic Irish generation. Most of the significance of the social turbulence was lost on me, but I became a part of '68 — its effects and its aftermath. My story is not unique. It is a story of the beginning of a new era in contemporary Ireland and a partial explanation of the tragic events of today.

Twenty years ago, I was a young thirteen-year-old Belfast boy and typical of most ghetto youth in segregated, impoverished, Nationalist Catholic Belfast. The future seemed uncertain, yet unchangeable, as our lives were laid out, as were the lives of our parents and their parents before them.

January 20, 1955, was the date I entered this world. Unknown to me, as I let go my first scream in natural birth, I had committed an offense against the state. You see, I was born an Irish Catholic in British-controlled northeast Ireland. Naturally, I was unaware of my political illegitimacy and disenfranchised role in this Anglo-created society. But, being of an underclass, indigenous people, one gradually develops an awareness of social inequalities, especially when one is at the receiving end of discriminatory measures, judicial imbalances, and a police baton.

My seventh year of boyhood was an introduction to British racial bigotry. An Irish Catholic death in Dallas, Texas, brought much sorrow to our ghetto. "Jack Kennedy was one of our own," people whispered. Kennedy's victory as the first Catholic president was a revelation, as were the successive victories of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. against racial discrimination in the following years. But I was bewildered, as Unionists — those who embraced British rule of the North — jeered our prayers for Kennedy, and I wondered in dismay at their blind and unwarranted hate.

As years passed, the reality of Unionist-British rule began to take shape in my young mind. I cautiously took notice of the abnormalities of everyday life around me. "A Protestant government for a Protestant people" was the Unionist's cry. Not empty rhetoric either. Too young to appreciate the intricate complexities of Unionist quasi-apartheid rule, I could not help but observe continuously our differing environments. They, the Unionists, permanently controlled all aspects of government (through means democratic) and, in turn, all other facets of society. Partition of the country and gerrymandering insured the Unionists a permanent majority, and they managed and manipulated the commerce, the media, the law, the courts, and all security forces. In other words, it was their government, their factories, their law and forces of law. We Nationalist Catholics lived in a separate, outcast world. Our ghetto existence consisted of poor housing, high unemployment, and inadequate socio-educational facilities.

Even before the present war, the police would patrol heavily armed and seemed alien to our surroundings. We did not have police stations or precincts. Instead, sandbagged barracks sprawled across the cities and countryside. No police authority in Europe had such weaponry or extra-judicial power at its disposal.

Beneath the alienation and physical violence of our subjugation were the psychological despair and indignity of second-class citizenship. Being despised, spat upon, and taunted because of my nationality and religion at a young age nurtured my will to resist systems of injustice for years to come. My concern and compassion for South African Blacks, West Bank Palestinians, and Soviet Jews came from a personal abhorrence of racist violence and discrimination.

Even within the family, Unionist repression had its effects. My father and mother sought to rid me of Belfast and their failure to provide a secure future for their children. My father persisted that I concentrate on trade classes in school as to prepare myself for emigration to a foreign shore. "No work here for Nationalist Catholics," he'd say despairingly. "No chance in life with this government. Look at your cousins. Even an education is useless." were my father's words of regretful advice. "Go to America, Canada, your Aunt Ann in Sidney. Work hard. Bring a family up decent with self-dignity," he'd preach. Most Nationalist youth were pained with these sermons.

But in 1968, my last year of school, hope replaced despair, as parents began to think that perhaps emigration was not the answer, perhaps real political change at home was possible. I began to take notice of the growing movement for political change, but I was really unconcerned and confused about these things called "civil rights" and "civil disobedience." All the grownups, however, seemed caught up in the whole affair. One could not help feeling the emotion, the cautious hope, and the anxieties during those months.

We were gaining political ground with newly-founded organizations such as the People's Democracy and the Northern Ireland Civil Rights Association. New, formidable leadership took the headlines: Bernadette Devlin, Michael Farrell, John Hume. Their youthful, positive and non-violent energy gave us the inspiration we needed to move forward. The days of the old Irish rebel were closing as a new dawn of enlightened reformation of the state was taking hold.

But as the world watched, basic demands for civil and political reforms were met with the full violence of the state. Police banning orders, arrests, and beatings of peaceful marchers showed the reactionary and predictable response of a regime that was undemocratic and politically bankrupt. The violent reaction of the Unionist government only reinforced the surge forward. The people were now on the move.

Why such a lack of responsibility or accountability by the government for such basic and quite reasonable demands for reform? These demands were not revolutionary or impractically extreme. There were no calls for the downfall of British sovereignty or revengeful cries about 800 years of British misrule and oppression. Nationalist Catholics were submissively stating their acceptance of British rule, their head of state, flag and culture. All we asked was an equal status of citizenship and justice within the system. What we received was a reactionary period of violence and intransigence in meeting with reforms.

Unlike the United States, we in northeast Ireland had no Lyndon B. Johnson to send in federal troops to uphold constitutional law. We did not have a constitution nor a bill of rights nor a government willing to address issues of discrimination and injustice.

"Those who make peaceful revolutions impossible," said Jack Kennedy, "will make violent revolutions inevitable." Patient attitudes were running out, and I became a part of that impatient upcoming generation. Each peaceful march was met by further state violence. Time was running short for a gradual transitional change, creating the precondition for violence later to come. The reluctance of London and Dublin to take steps to alleviate the deteriorating situation paved the way to an all-out confrontation that has plagued Ireland and Britain to this day.

Twenty years have since passed. There is not much to celebrate in these years that have brought suffering and sadness to many. Death, heartache, and despair cross both communities and both sides of the Irish Sea. The daily symptoms of violence that one sees highlighted on television screens hide the true issues underlying our ancient problem. The colonial nature of British presence is denied, covered up, and painted over for international consumption.

Britain's unwillingness to accept its responsibility and to admit fault in creating partition and an undemocratic, unjust and immoral statelet in northeast Ireland points to the ultimate solution it must face. The Act of Union, 1801, the Home Rule Bills of the late 1800s and early 1900s, the Act of Ireland Bill, 1921, the restoration of Direct Rule in 1972, and the recent Anglo-Irish Accord are all failed British initiatives, failed because premised on continued connection with Britain. Clearly, these initiatives have not worked and direct us to Britain's final and only option: a phased British withdrawal.

There are no other alternatives. We must look to the reality of that of the nation's leading experts on immigration reform legislation. Mr. Miller has previously served four years as a top aide to Congressman Mazzoli (D-KY), chairman of the congressional subcommittee that drafts immigration legislation. Mr. Miller has published several articles on immigration and lectured widely about the new law. He also lectures frequently to senior Federal employees. He served for three years as a senior U.S. Senate aide and held a high level Administration position. He is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, and has a graduate degree in political science from Yale University.

day. If not, twenty years from now, new generations shall inherit the hate, the distrust and the fears. Can we afford the pain?

We look back on 1968 as a year of great hope for the future. That generation marched and sacrificed that coming generations would live in a peaceful, just and egalitarian society. We are a diverse people in the roads we take to achieve that freedom. But ultimately, our paths shall finally meet in a free and united Ireland.

Hopefully in the year 2008, twenty years on, our children shall benefit from all our sacrifices. History will judge our pain and our faults.

Companies Facing Stockholder Resolutions on North Ireland

NEW YORK — At annual meetings this year, a record number of companies having operations in Northern Ireland will face questions and proposals by shareholders about their equal employment practices in that troubled region. Seventeen Northern Ireland resolutions are on the 1988 agenda of U.S. companies shareholders' meetings. This considerable increase over the 10 resolutions debated at last year's meetings reflects the growing concern and action on discrimination in Northern Ireland by U.S. church groups and state and city pension funds. It also reflects the momentum of legislative action on the MacBride Principles in states and cities across the country.

Shareholder proponents have asked 11 companies to implement and/or increase their activity relating to the nine MacBride Principles for fair employment. Three companies have received resolutions asking them to review their Northern Ireland operations and report to shareholders on their equal opportunities policies and practices. Boeing and Lockheed companies have been asked to examine their Northern Ireland subcontractors' adherence to non-discriminatory policies. Ford has been asked to have independent monitoring of the fair employment principles it adopted last year.

The proponents of the proposals include church groups belonging to Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility, the New York City Employees Retirement System, the New York State Common Retirement Fund, and the Christian Brothers Investment Services. This is the first year that the New York State Common Retirement Fund and the Christian Brothers Investment Services have joined the other proponents in submitting such proposals.

"During this time of increased violence in Northern Ireland, we have to find many more non-violent ways to establish justice and equality in that country," said Sr. Regina Murphy, spokesperson for the church groups. "Support for the MacBride Principles would be a peaceful step toward a just solution to the inequality of job opportunity experienced by many in Northern Ireland. As shareholders in American corporations operating in Northern Ireland, we cannot stand by and do nothing."

Discrimination in employment has been cited by the International Commission of Jurists as one of the major causes of conflict in Northern Ireland. Church members believe that, as equal employment opportunity increases, violence will decrease. A climate will be created which will encourage new and expanded investment in Northern Ireland, providing much needed fair employment for the 26% of Catholics and 10% of Protestants who are currently unemployed.

The MacBride Principles for fair employment opportunity are named after one of their four original sponsors,

The Anglo-Irish Agreement Succeeds

In the November 1987 Irish America, Barry White, author of a biography of John Hume entitled Statesman of the Troubles, assessed the then two-year old Anglo-Irish Agreement. He started by telling us that the "historic Agreement" represented a U-turn in British policy, gave "the Irish government a say in Northern Ireland affairs as never before", and laid "the basis for a final Irish settlement, however long it may take to achieve." But he then concluded by saying that its record in practice suggests "the Agreement will come to be regarded like direct rule itself — unloved and low in achievement, but part of the constitutional furniture that is impossible to move."

Subsequent events have underscored his comment on the Agreement's record in practice with a vengeance. Yet they also support sors, Dr. Sean MacBride, an international crusader for human rights and peace, who died earlier this year in Dublin. Dr. MacBride was a founder, in 1961, of Amnesty International and Secretary General of the International Commission of Jurists in Geneva, Switzerland. He was the only person to be awarded both the Nobel Peace Prize and the Lenin International Prize for Peace.

In less than four years after the promulgation of the MacBride Principles, five states and seven cities in the U.S. have already passed legislation which links their investments to a company's equal opportunity practices in Northern Ireland. Another eleven states have Northern Ireland legislation pending.

In March 1988 the British government announced new proposals on "Religious Equality of Opportunity in Employment." In outlining the proposals, British officials acknowledge that the Fair Employment legislation of the last 12 years had failed to end discrimination against Catholics in Northern Ireland. Both government officials and outside analysts stated that the MacBride Principles campaign in the U.S. had influenced the British to take a more aggressive stand against discrimination.

New legislation, however, will not be enacted until sometime in 1989. "We need to see the action of change," said Inez MacCorrack, a Belfast labor union official and another one of the four original sponsors of the MacBride Principles. Brian Lenihan, Foreign Minister of the Republic of Ireland, has stated that the proposed legislation must bring about concrete change as measured in employment statistics. Latest figures reveal that unemployment is more than twice as high among Roman Catholics as among those belonging to other denominations. The Catholic community's disadvantage in employment obtains throughout the Province, even in areas of high employment and persists despite progressive convergence of educational attainment between the two communities.

"Passage of Northern Ireland resolutions by the seventeen companies involved," said Sr. Patricia Daly of Christian Brothers Investment Services, "will help to rectify these unjust imbalances in employment."

his belief in its future. Spectacularly "low in achievement" where things like "giving the Dublin government a say in Northern Ireland affairs" are concerned, the Agreement endures apparently unshakable. Indeed, Charles Haughey's reaction to each new British bombshell includes still another reaffirmation of Dublin's commitment to the Agreement. It almost seems as though every contemptuous British dismissal of Irish concerns makes the Agreement stronger.

White's readers may wonder, given all this, why it is impossible to move an Agreement that is so low in achievement. But if they conclude that this is merely an example of the irrationality of the governments involved, they will miss the point. The Agreement is impossible to move because in its own terms, it is an almost total success.

This may seem contradictory. But White gives us the key to understanding the Agreement's success, and indeed the Agreement itself, in his summary of its low achievements. In spite of lack of progress in the courts, human rights, the "security forces," or the job market, he discovered two heartening successes. One of them was tangible:

At the same time, better cooperation between the police, north and south has made life more difficult for cross-border terrorists, and several impressive arms and explosives finds have resulted.

And one intangible:
The nationalist population feels good about it — if only because the unionists feel so badly.

No one familiar with the language used to puff the Agreement will be surprised that the intangible one lies closest to the root of its success. Nationalists were happy because Loyalists were unhappy; as the Loyalists were unhappy over the Agreement, the Nationalists were happy because of it, and come to regard it, and by extension its purposes, as their own. So too, for comparable reasons, the whole "constitutional" Irish side. And out of this transposition come the tangible benefits. Thus the Dublin government accepts preventing attacks against the British as one of its own prime objectives — to the point where not long ago it called up its reserves to enable it to commit 7,000 soldiers and gardai to the largest security operation in its history, a joint sweep of the border, at an undoubtedly enormous cost, at a time when its economy was in ruins and an estimated 150,000 young Irish had illegally entered the United States as economic refugees.

No international agreement that can so re-order the priorities of an independent country can be regarded as anything but a spectacular success.

The sublime beauty of the Agreement is in achieving this. In the Agreement itself, in essence, the Irish side makes concessions to the British, in return for the obligation, through the machinery established by the Agreement — to make more concessions. Thus the Dublin government recognizes the legitimacy of British rule, in return for an arrangement for discussing Northern Ireland with British officials, the terms of which commit it to supporting British security efforts (note Agreement section F 9). And this pattern, so established, reproduces itself throughout British-Irish relations. Thus John Hume agrees that too much equal opportunity threatens Northern Ireland's economy, and Charles Haughey accepts an extradition treaty worse than the infamous U.S.-U.K. treaty, to insure continued cooperation against "terrorists."

Of course, as noted, the Agreement has resulted in few improvements for Northern Ireland Nationalists. It has achieved even less as a "first step" towards reunification, a subject that doesn't even seem to come up any more. But this shouldn't be held against it. It never promised any such things.

On this, the turgid prose of the Agreement must be read carefully. But so read, it is clear. Most of the components of the oppressive Northern Ireland system are referred to, or seem to be — we are told respect for the human rights of all is necessary for peace, for instance — but in no case does the Agreement recognize that there is a problem with them involving the way the system works. Thus there is talk that a bill of rights might be considered "in some form" — but no mention of juryless courts, suspension of habeas corpus, or coerced confessions, as measures with human rights implications. Nor is there any mechanism set up specifically for dealing with such questions.

Not so security matters. The Agreement stipulates "cooperation against terrorism", thus defining "terrorism" as a problem. By contrast, it stipulates "promoting . . . respect for human rights", a wording which does not presume any human rights violations, and does not stipulate cooperation to end human rights abuses. And it orders a "program of work" for security officials starting with threat assessment and information exchange. Needless to say, it orders no such program on human rights.

So why are Ian Paisley and company so unhappy? Well, they're only so unhappy — they have not, for instance, undertaken an open-ended general strike as they did against the Sunningdale Agreement. But to the extent that they are indeed unhappy, it is perhaps due to a characteristic they seem to share with the other Irish — a willingness to elevate symbol over reality, when British approval is involved. They are outraged that Dublin has a role in "their" affairs, insinuating itself between them and the Queen, despite the fact that the role only really involves helping the British and supporting the British position. Dublin, likewise, is pleased to have gained such recognition, and the "constitutional" northern Nationalists are happy to be part of the status quo that works so pervasively against them (or at least their working class brethren).

When Margaret Thatcher signed the Agreement she declared "I am a Unionist and a Loyalist." The various Irish should realize that the British don't always lie.

Right to Remain Silent

racketeering. It is a matter of concern and frustration to the majority of decent people in Northern Ireland, to the police and prosecuting authorities whose lives are put at risk by their job of protecting society. That the absolute refusal of large numbers of people to answer questions cannot be taken into account by a court, justice is being thwarted. The rights of persons detained for questioning in police custody in connection with terrorist offences have recently been strengthened by the provisions of Part II of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1987. They will be further protected when similar provisions are introduced for persons suspected of non-terrorist offences in the forthcoming police and criminal evidence legislation. However, these necessary safeguards have to be balanced to take account of the cynical, planned, exploitation of the criminal justice system by those involved in organized crime, led by those involved in terrorist crime. The government has therefore decided to propose legislation that will help to redress the balance by enabling a court to take account of the fact that an accused person has remained silent when questioned and to allow the court to draw whatever inferences appear proper from that fact."

New York Council Responds To Assault on Freedom

City Council Majority Leader Peter F. Vallone, Council members Walter McCaffrey and June Eislund, and former City Council President Paul O'Dwyer have condemned a move by the British government to abolish the right of defendants in Northern Ireland to remain silent during police questioning. Vallone said the full Council will vote on a resolution condemning the proposal being pushed by the administration of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. She holds a parliamentary majority in the British House of Commons and the proposal could become law in Northern Ireland by early next year. "We are in no way condoning the senseless violence that has marked the troubles in Northern Ireland," Vallone said, adding: "But we firmly believe that all suspects are entitled to the basic right of self-protection, which the British legal system created and has recognized for centuries.

"The City Council wants to add its voice to those across the globe who are concerned that this proposal will strip away an essential freedom, and do nothing to stem the violence or promote the peace we all desire."

The proposal, announced October 20, would allow judges in Northern Ireland to "draw inferences" from a suspect's silence to help facilitate the convictions of those accused of terrorism, racketeering and other serious crimes.

Vallone continued: "Overzealous law enforcement is as deplorable as the criminal acts it seeks to eradicate. It would be a major blunder, these necessary safeguards have to be balanced to take account of the cynical, planned, exploitation of the criminal justice system by those involved in organized crime, led by those involved in terrorist crime. The government has therefore decided to propose legislation that will help to redress the balance by enabling a court to take account of the fact that an accused person has remained silent when questioned and to allow the court to draw whatever inferences appear proper from that fact."

Resolution

Resolution condemning a proposal to abolish the right of a defendant to remain silent in Northern Ireland and calling upon the British Parliament to reject this proposal.

By the Vice Chairman (Council Member Vallone):

Whereas, On October 20, 1988, a measure was proposed to the British Parliament by the Thatcher government which would abolish the right of a defendant to remain silent during police questioning and during trials in Northern Ireland, a proposal which may also be applied throughout other parts of Great Britain; and

Whereas, The proposal will allow a judge to draw a negative inference from the fact that a suspect or a defendant has refused to provide information or testimony in four situations:

1. If a suspect refuses to account to police for his movements;
2. If a suspect refuses to explain certain specified facts such as suspicious stains on his clothing;
3. If an accused person refuses to answer police questions and subsequently seeks to produce an alibi in court; or
4. If a defendant refuses to testify in court; and

Whereas, The proposal is virtually assured passage in the House of Commons where Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher maintains a parliamentary majority and could become law in Northern Ireland by early next year; and

Whereas, The purported reason for the abolition of the centuries old English Common law right to silence is to facilitate convictions of those accused of terrorism, racketeering and other serious crimes; and

Whereas, From this English Common Law was derived the right against self-incrimination embodied in the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution, a right which has long been cherished as an essential element of any free society; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the Council of the City of New York condemns a proposal to abolish the right of a defendant to remain silent in Northern Ireland and calling upon the British Parliament to reject this proposal.

Council of Presidents Invites A Broad Cross-Section Input

The resignation of Congressman Biaggi as Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee for Irish Affairs presents an opportunity to re-examine our lobbying voice in Congress and to prepare for a new administration. Discussions are currently under way with Congressional leaders and the Government of Ireland on America's role in the Anglo-Irish conflict. Specifically we hope to expand and improve our means for addressing issues of the conflict before both Houses of Congress and the White House. The decade that lies ahead will present many new and different opportunities for positive American action. We wish to be prepared to respond to these issues in the most timely and effective manner possible. It is important to take time to develop this mechanism because the very future of Ireland and human lives are dependent upon our action.

Resolved, That the Council of the City of New York condemns a proposal to abolish the right of a defendant to remain silent in Northern Ireland and calling upon the British Parliament to reject this proposal.

In our statement adopted two years ago we called for a fundamental change in America's policy towards the Anglo-Irish conflict. We are convinced such a policy change will reduce violence, enhance the prospects for peace and painlessly bring about the re-unification of Ireland in our lifetime. A new Administration and Congress must be convinced that facing this challenge will serve the interests of peace and prosperity in Ireland. Today we begin the process that will ultimately expand that dialogue in Washington. We hope to announce by early next year how we feel this might best be accomplished.

FREEDOM FOR ALL IRELAND

Message from Freedom For All Ireland Committee Chairman

As of this writing (November 11th), I am still looking forward to the receipt of your donations to our annual Christmas Relief Fund, the proceeds of which will be forwarded to the Green Cross and An Cumann Cabrac for distribution to the families of the prisoners in Northern Ireland for Christmas. I hope that your donations will enable us to send a sizeable contribution, and I will be able to elaborate on this in the next issue of the Digest. As of the present time, I am sorry to say that 300 Divisions have NOT responded to this worthy cause. Although this is very discouraging, I hope and pray that things will improve and that I will be able to report some exciting news later on.

Approximately four weeks ago I wrote to every Division and asked that I please be notified of the name and address of the Chairman of the Freedom for All Ireland Committee from that particular division. To expedite matters and to make things very convenient, I enclosed a stamped, addressed post card which I asked to be filled out and returned to me. Again, I am disappointed in the response since there are over 300 Divisions who have not answered.

This information is very important because it enables me to communicate directly with the Chairman, thereby promoting the efficiency of this Committee in its operation. Please, after you read this message, make a telephone call to the member you feel best qualified for this position and send his name and address to me. I will take it from there.

It is quite understandable that we all get caught up in this busy world of ours, but we must never forget those less fortunate than we, and our unfortunate brethren in Northern Ireland should be on top of this list when it comes to help. Let's make this a banner year. Get your donations to me at the below address, even if it's after Christmas.

Make your checks payable to the Freedom for All Ireland Committee — better late than never!! And, don't forget to return the post card to me listing the name of your Chairman for the FFAIC thereon. Thanks for your anticipated cooperation and have a Happy and Holy Christmas and a Peaceful and Healthy New Year.

Doors of Hope Support Self-Help Projects

The Doors of Hope is an American initiative committed to support those self-help projects and job-development, cultural, and educational centers in nationalist communities of Ireland which are being victimized because of racial, religious, and political discrimination.

Northern Ireland is a sectarian and corrupt state; the plight of these community projects is further proof of the fact. These groups are systematically denied access to international and local funding; their staff and workers are harassed and arrested; their homes and their community centers are frequently raided and ransacked. These people have neither access to government nor recourse to law or justice.

When The Doors of Hope was founded over a year ago, we were generally motivated by the personal inspiration of Fr. Desmond Wilson in West Belfast and Mary Nelis in Derry's Bogside. At the time, there were groups in America acting independently in support of Fr. Wilson's Springhill Community House and Conway St. Education Centre and Mary's Dove House and other Derry City initiatives. Nevertheless, the situation was desperate.

Periodic fundraisers and isolated efforts were not sufficient to forestall the imminent prospect of having to close down. When the Northern Ireland Office took away the last crumbs of government and international support during the summer of '86, the end seemed only a matter of time.

It was obvious that an umbrella organization was needed to coordinate the American relief effort and help to spread the word about what was going on in the northeast of Ireland relative to the people's self-help struggle for economic, cultural, and educational, self reliance. The Doors of Hope's principal purposes and associated goals grew out of this need.

Our primary purpose at this time is to raise sufficient funds to keep the community projects going. All that they are asking for is a fair chance and it is obvious that they can't get that chance without our financial support. Psychologically, they also need to know that they are not alone in their struggle and that we in America care about their survival.

Our goal is to provide enough financial support now, when they need it so desperately, so that they can achieve economic, political, and psychological independence and self-sufficiency as soon as possible.

The other purpose of The Doors of Hope is more long term and could best be described as educational. As long as the system in N. Ireland is aggressively working against over 40% of its people, remedial and progressive initiatives from the people themselves can be only minimally liberating and effective.

We believe that the more Americans know about the plight of the nationalist people and government misrule, the more likely it is for America to influence the political and economic changes necessary to see justice done.

American taxpayers have a $250 million stake in the economy of the troubled northeast and border counties of Ireland (this was our governments contribution in support of the Anglo-Irish Agreement.)

If religious and political

British Misrule

Attention: State, County, Division FFAI Chairmen

These are particularly difficult times for Irish nationalists in the Six Counties. Mrs. Thatcher's latest attempts at silencing Sinn Fein have for once been accurately assessed by the media as obviously oppressive. Certainly the question must be asked: If the British are really gaining the upper hand, then why such desperate measures? Perhaps the perception is dawning on Downing Street that the world, and particularly the United States, is learning far too much about British misrule in the North of Ireland.

The following statement is intended to prod our own elected officials along and, at the same time, keep up American pressure on the British:

TO THE HONORABLE
SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES OF THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF

WE HEREBY CALL UPON YOU TO EXPRESS YOUR GRAVE CONCERN TO THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT REGARDING ITS LATEST EFFORTS TO FURTHER CURTAIL CIVIL LIBERTIES IN THE NORTH OF IRELAND. THE THATCHER GOVERNMENT NOW SEEKS TO DENY IRISH NATIONALISTS THE MOST FUNDAMENTAL OF FREEDOMS: FREEDOM OF SPEECH, FREEDOM TO REMAIN SILENT, FREEDOM TO SEEK ELECTIVE OFFICE WITHOUT BEING IMPEDED BY SELECTIVELY IMPOSED CONSTRAINTS. THE BRITISH BAN ON SINN FEIN, A LEGALLY RECOGNIZED POLITICAL PARTY, SENDS AN OBVIOUS MESSAGE: EVEN THOSE WHO CHOOSE TO WORK WITHIN THE ELECTORAL PROCESS CAN BE CUT OFF FROM PUBLIC DEBATE.

discrimination continues to be the hallmark of the Six County Statlet, Americans have the right to know and to take whatever action they feel is appropriate.

Combatting Injustice in North Ireland Addressed

BABYLON, NY: On Friday evening, October 14, Oliver Kearney, National Secretary for Fair Employment Trust, Northern Ireland, delivered a forceful, informative speech at the Irish Culture Center, sponsored by the AOH Division 2, here.

Addressing three important points, Mr. Kearney spoke to the Irish American audience of their need to concern themselves with legislation, particularly the MacBride Principles here in the United States. He pointed out that injustices such as the denial of visas to persons critical of the government in Northern Ireland coming on speaking engagements is non-feasible and is in fact a denial of the American citizens' right to be informed.

Speaking to the Joe Doherty imprisonment, he cautioned that acceptance of such unjust State Department policies in this instance can lead to others more personally felt, or as he put it, "It might be your son the next time."

The third point Mr. Kearney made referred to the MacBride Principles by advising those present that they must become aware that state funds such as money paid in employee pensions are being invested in, as he put it, "the worst system of economic apartheid possible," comparing Northern Ireland with South Africa.

Sharing the evening as a guest speaker was John McGrath, Professor of Law and Criminal Justice at Mercy College and a former member of AOH Division 2. He gave an impassioned account of the political history of Northern Ireland, describing the formation of the Irish Republican Army and the reason for its existence.

Those responsible for the planning and execution of this successful evening include Mollie Love and Willie Quinn, The Freedom for All Ireland Chairpersons of Division 2; Brendan Moore, N.Y. State Chairman Freedom for All Ireland; and Kathleen Holmes, Chairwoman, American Irish Congress.

Thomas Conway

PLANNERS AND PARTICIPANTS in the recent Babylon, NY, Irish Cultural Center program were, from left, Gerry Coleman, Irish American Unity Committee; Brendan Moore, AOH Freedom for All Ireland, Babylon; William Quinn, AOH Division 2, Babylon; Mollie Love, Ladies AOH, Babylon; Oliver Kearney, speaker from Ireland; Professor John McGrath, Mercy College; and Kathy Holmes, American Irish Congress.

CATHOLIC ACTION

Dear Senator:
The evils of discrimination have tortured the Irish Catholic people in Ireland for generations.
The Catholic population in Northern Ireland is still denied basic freedoms; such as equal employment opportunity in the land of their birth. (At one time any Irish Catholic person caught attending the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass was put to death by the crown).

I believe the MacBride Principles can help remove some of the barriers from my Brothers' and Sisters' path to peace and unity. Please support MacBride legislation in Pennsylvania! Please support a non-violent solution to one cause of violence in Northern Ireland by going on record against the ongoing policy of religious bigotry and discrimination, as practiced by the Loyalists against the Irish Catholic people of Northern Ireland.

You may have seen the demonstration of hatred directed toward our Holy Father Pope John Paul II by Dr. Ian Paisley. Imagine how an ordinary Irish Catholic lay person would fare under rulers such as he. Scary, isn't it? Please give MacBride Principles a chance! Thank you.

Vincent J. Scully

Nat'l Chair, Catholic Action AOH

P.S. The British government has no regard for the Irish Catholic at all!

One glaring example is the acquittal of the British S.A.S. Forces in Gibraltar. Three unarmed Irish volunteers were slaughtered and the killers walked away free with the blessings of the Thatcher government. Yet eight Irish volunteers received life sentences with no remission in the death of a British S.A.S. officer on Irish soil, who, armed with an automatic weapon, went around kicking in doors looking for Irish people to kill. He got himself killed instead!

One of those convicted of murder (by the British Diplock Court) is Joseph Doherty, presently incarcerated in New York City.

The courts have ordered Joe Doherty's release and the Attorney General of the United States has defied the courts and ordered Joe's extradition to the United Kingdom. What is going on? Are we still a British colony? Doherty should be as free as the S.A.S. Forces on Gibraltar are. So should the seven other volunteers. So, if someone tells you we do not need MacBride Principles legislation, that things are getting better, please put yourself in the shoes of an Irish Catholic in Northern Ireland.

Thank you and God bless you.

BASEBALL IN IRELAND

Dear Editor:

A few years ago my wife and I took a tour of Ireland. This was in September as the baseball pennant races were charging down to the wire, and I was amazed that we couldn't get any news of them in the Emerald Isle.

I continue to wonder why baseball has not taken hold in Ireland. The mere fact that it has not yet done so in England would lead one to think that the Irish would establish the game in their country and get a jump on the English. The Irish in America adopted baseball more than a century ago, and such stars as Mullane, Galvin, Delahanty, O'Neill, Donovan, Keefe, Kelly, and McGinity let the way. The modern era has included names like Ryan, Collins, Cronin, O'Brien, Flannery, Butler, Fitzsimmons, Flanagan, and McGwire, to mention but a few.

We know that summers can be damp in Ireland, but no more so than in many parts of the U.S. Once properly introduced it could very well gain great popularity there, as it has in Latin America, Japan, and more recently in Italy. It has even started in Russia. Why not then in Ireland, from where so many of our finest players trace their origin?

'TIME' AND THE IRA

An article in the October 5 issue of Time questions what Britain should do to curb the I.R.A. The British Conservative Party's 19th Century colonial view of the problem in Northern Ireland is that it is a security problem. As such, they consciously choose to ignore the real causes of "the troubles."

The root causes of the unrest and violence are Britain's economic and judicial apartheid policies. The political issue, while real, is overridden by the immediate human and civil rights issues. Remember, twenty years ago when the passive civil rights demonstrators protested the discrimination against Catholics in housing, jobs, etc., there was no active I.R.A.. In fact, Britain brought the gun into this socio-economic situation. The I.R.A. resurfaced in response to the Orange Order paramilitary and British army beatings and killings of the unarmed civil rights advocates.

One solution to the Northern Ireland problem then as now, should focus on British-initiated economic and social opportunities for all, human and civil rights for all, termination of Britain's long-standing military support of the bigoted Orange Order, and a phased pullout with appropriate compensation for damages and for reconstruction. The British approach of internment, plastic bullets, elevated reconnaissance towers, electronic surveillance of residences and S.A.S. "shoot-to-kill" terrorists against the Catholic community is nothing short of barbaric.

The net result of Mrs. Thatcher's policies in Northern Ireland over the past twenty years are more graves and a new generation of hatred. Her administration is strongly similar to that in South Africa, but without the bad publicity. The subservience of the U.S. news media in regurgitating British press releases on Northern Ireland denies U.S. citizens their right to an objective view of this conflict, and, the lack of investigative reporting into Britain's oppressive actions in civilized western Europe is unconscionable.

History is repeating itself as Britain seeks stronger internment measures and legislates to emasculate the Nationalist Sinn Fein Party. British legislation has traditionally followed a pattern of introducing more stringent legislation whenever it appears that disenfranchised groups in British society attempt to alter the status quo by means outside the normal legislative process, the very process from which the groups feel excluded. I believe it was Elie Weissel who stated that when a segment of society believes that they can no longer legitimately resolve a problem with a repressive government, they feel that their only recourse is to turn to the gun. The progressive transition from peaceful marches to stones, to guns, to bombs by the oppressed has been occurring in Northern Ireland over the past twenty years.

British Lobby Against Bill

political wing of the Provisional Irish Republican Army, were opposed to the campaign in this country to force US companies in Northern Ireland to subscribe to the MacBride Principles. The Bill now before you has been heavily amended and all references to the MacBride Principles have been deleted.

At first sight, the amended language appears to remove all possible objections to the Bill. Requiring US companies in Northern Ireland not to discriminate on the grounds of race, colour, religion, sex, age or national origin in fact imposes no further obligations on those companies than the legal requirements by which they are already bound. Indeed, discrimination on political or religious grounds is already totally illegal in Northern Ireland. Under the 1976 Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act, there are extensive statutory arrangements, including an independent Fair Employment Agency with legally enforceable powers, for promoting full equality of opportunity in Northern Ireland.

We share your concern about the situation in Northern Ireland, and well understand your wish to send a supportive signal. We too are determined to bring about change, and have set in motion the machinery which will enable us to do this. We sincerely hope that US legislators will accept the Government's good faith and commitment to fair employment for all in Northern Ireland.

I therefore urge you to consider carefully the effect that this Bill will have on the people of Northern Ireland. If the people of Maryland really want to help, the best way to do so would be to encourage investment — and new jobs — not to create a political climate in which the opposite might actually be the case.

As you consider this legislation, please ask yourself, in the light of recent tragic events in the province, one simple question: will new laws of this kind from Maryland and other States really help generate the confidence and jobs which the people of Northern Ireland so desperately need?

IN MEMORIAM

Ed Kalbfleisch's Death A Great Loss to AOH

ED KALBFLEISCH

The passing of Hibernian Edward J. Kalbfleisch leaves a great void in the lives of his fellow Hibernians and the order itself because the AOH was Ed's avocation and he gave unstintingly of his time and energy to its growth.

Born in 1911 in Brooklyn, New York, Ed died at age 77. He is survived by his wife Dorothy "Fin-negan" Kalbfleisch, son Bruce and brother Robert. He was a 1929 graduate of Brooklyn Jesuit prep school.

Lockport, NY Mourns Member's Sudden Death

The members of the William Ryan Division 4 of Lockport, N.Y. mourn the loss of their Brother, Paul B. Tracy. Paul was 58 years of age and died unexpectedly July 27, 1988. He was the son of the late Jerry and Angela Byrne Tracy.

Paul Tracy was elected president of the Division five times from 1974 through 1978. His father, Jerry, was president from 1937 to 1940 and from 1958 to 1960. Two of Paul's brothers, John and Robert, are Hibernians. Paul was instrumental in maintaining the Division, as it was down to about 12 members early in his presidency. The Division now boasts 226 members and growing.

He was also a Past Commander of the American Legion Post 410 in Lockport and was very active in the Boy Scout Program of St. Patrick's Church for 20 years.

He is survived by his wife, Sheila Fitzgerald Tracy, sons Daniel of Rochester, N.Y., Kevin and Jeffery

A veteran of World War II (USGG), Ed aided in the capture of German saboteurs who came ashore from a submarine at Amagansett, Long Island. He was a retired executive of Cities Service Oil Company, who moved to Florida in his latter years.

Ed was a past president of AOH Division 2, Westbury, Long Island, and the founder of Division 7, Wantagh, and Division 15, Massapequa, N.Y. He was also past president of the Nassau County Board.

In Florida, Ed founded and was president of James J. Comerford Division 1, St. Petersburg, and brought the AOH to the whole west Florida coast, with four divisions.

He was Florida state vice president and state president, AOH deputy organizer, and a regular delegate at national conventions. He marched in fifty St. Patrick's Day parades in New York City and was an aide to the Grand Marshal in 1970.

Never one to just tag along, Ed was always way up front in any church, fraternal or civic organization he joined. He enjoyed life membership in the Knights of Columbus and the AOH, and was an active member in the V.F.W., Irish American Society, and B.F.O.E. He was head usher in Holy Cross R.C. Church, St. Petersburg and St. Brigid's R.C. Church, Westbury, Long Island.

Donations to the American Cancer Society in his name will be appreciated by his family. Ed will be sorely missed. Rest in peace.

"... DAYS THAT ARE NO MORE"

I could have been three or three and a half — it was St. Patrick's Day, anyhow, so the half is valid —
Father and I had made the rounds — all the rounds and the same again, if you please!
I was the albatross, sent to inhibit ordained drunkenness, mother's appropriation of funds rendered insignificant in the light of reputation-inducing credit — credit sacred among fellow Irish saloon keepers who, I think, laughed secretly at father, while padding his tabs — talking all the while of ancient, ethereal, Mother Ireland —
Macree and Macushla,
Mavourneen and Molly Brannigan,
"Sure I'll never be a man again" — jealous, I'd say they were,
that he could do so — jealousy as only like has for like — he, smiling and playing the eejit, knew, as they knew he knew,
cut from the same ambitious bolt — in days when Whist was played,
beer was a nickel, and mysterious women were hidden in juke boxes to accept your requests — how were they fed? — did they sleep in there? — did they — you know! —
Uncle Tom, who owned our last stop, Club St. Joseph,
said, like good women,
they were available any hour, day or night —
and I joined the laughter he caused by his puzzling remark — all the men did!
but, mother slept at night though remembered creaking springs remind me of Tom's appraisal —
Uncle Tom was special and real lucky — mother said his sheets were never cold — even when Aunt Theresa was in the hospital!

At last, under protest, we launched sail from Newark to Elizabeth — there was some confusion about
(my) father's keys, because his new friends were trying to take them away — they didn't know father! — he roared, mentioning Jesus several times, and, by intercession, I guess, retrieved his rightful keys —
the music stopped, change was scuttled across the bar,
and out he went, to whispered silence, trailing me like a wayward spinnaker — on the sidewalk, we heard the faint music resume —
then, the laughter —

The coupe was uncooperative and paid in kind — sworn to a reluctant, coughing start that became a roar of exhaust fumes obscuring our departure — the coupe launched its assault on late afternoon traffic — complacent foes soon passed out by father's derring-do maneuvering — coupe responding wide-eyed, cowering and coughing,
balking and questioning,
then rushing forward with a lover's impatience, impetuous, fool-hardy,
weaving through its kind with disdain, utter disregard! —
I knelt up, thrilled to wetting, just in time to witness the now aroused coupe couple with another of its species — parked and anticipating — the dashboard rushed up to my skull, as if to protect me, while father's anxious foot found the clutch pedal less responsive than the brake pedal — fiddle machine!
fractured me!

BUY IRISH

By DAVID R. BURKE
National Chairman

NOLLAIGH SHONA AGUS
BHEANNAICHE DUIT
To Our Brother and Sister
Hibernians

CHRISTMAS 1988: This Christmas Brother and Sister Hibernians should avail themselves of the opportunity of at least attempting to purchase a quality Irish product, whether it be in china, crystal, clothing or in the publishing or recording fields. This will go a long way in helping Ireland's economy.

Each and everyone of us has the opportunity to become a salesperson for Ireland. When you think of the high quality goods and items that are available through the many different department stores, it is hard to imagine why they do not carry Irish merchandise. Why not simply ask the salesperson or department head to consider carrying Irish products; should they need assistance simply notify the Chairman of the Buy Irish Committee, and we will put them in touch with the proper authorities from the Irish Export Board.

NETWORKING: Maybe you have a friend, a neighbor, a relative, a fellow parishioner, classmate, alumnus, who may be a buyer for a large store or chain. Make that call. Ask them if they would consider some of the quality products that Ireland has to offer. That's what networking is all about, making a call here or there.

SAINT PATRICK'S DAY ACTIVITIES: County Boards and Divisions who will be planning their Saint Patrick's Day Activities, could prevail upon their committees to have Irish spirits. Many of our Divisions are having fund-raising activities. Some of these are raffles, Award Programs and dances. Why not have a quality Irish product as the prize?

So this Christmas and Saint Patrick's Day, and all year round, treat yourself and your loved ones to a quality treat, in Eireann go deant (made in Ireland). Buy Irish!

and is washing my forehead —
she is not (my) mother but sounds like (my) mother —
"Poor child," she says — and
"Is it any wonder?" —
"Weren't they great friends to let him drive?" — father, of course, being so popular, had a great many people around him, all talking at once and pointing — one woman in curlers was very excited! — she must have known father —
And there he was — not father — on the other sidewalk, quietly smoking and watching —
I thought I had seen him earlier buying cigarettes at Tom's — but, just watching — detached — and smoking —
curiously, not watching the cars' divorce — (It was only the fenders that locked — money was exchanged!) — no, he was watching me, I thought, though I was dizzy and fuzzy and sometimes he was more than one — father came for me, answering the nice lady with a look I knew,
and we watched a frowning policeman park father's car — father respected policemen so I guessed that was why he gave him the keys —
when I looked again, the man smoking was gone —
Most, though, I remember that was the day
I got to ride in a police car!

Business Profile

Gaelic Conquest is a new and exciting family board game based on Ireland. The idea for the game comes from Denis Deegan, a 25-year-old Irish lawyer who together with a colleague, John Dunleavy, formed a company in Ireland called Eblana Games Limited to market and distribute the game.

Gaelic Conquest is designed to familiarize both adults and children with the great wealth of Ireland's heritage. It provides a means to enjoy learning about Ireland and should find a place in the family heirlooms of every Irish American Household. Gaelic Conquest will evoke a strong sense of Irish culture and history in those who participate in the game.

Gaelic Conquest is the first product to be launched by Eblana Games Limited. However, the company has ambitious plans to bring many other similar type products to the market. "Ireland is an ideal country to establish a toy manufacturing plant," says Denis. "Ireland's membership in the European Economic Community provides easy accessibility to a market of over 200 million people. With a corporate tax rate of 10% and a strong national resource of young talented people, the Emerald Isle is not just a pleasant place to visit but is the ideal environment in which to locate one's business," he adds.

Gaelic Conquest combines chance and skill and involves players throwing special dice to choose quiz card topics from a selection based on Irish history, geography and literature.

The board is divided into four Clans (Vikings, Celts, Normans and ancient Milesians). Each clan has four conquering counters which advance around the board enjoying advances and suffering setbacks as they converge on the crown in the centre to become High King of Ireland!

'Irish Business Profile' is a program of the National Board, Ancient Order of Hibernians in America — Michael Coogan, National President and David R. Burke, National Chairman, "Buy Irish" Committee.

An Irish Welcome

'Twas Christmas Eve at St. Mary's and the Pastor Father Gibb, Was watching Michael the sexton, as he carefully fixed the Crib.

The sheep and the oxen were standing guard—the straw was neatly piled And Mary and Joseph were kneeling admiring their tender Child.

The star that guided the Magi flooded the stable with light. "Tis beautiful, Michael," the Pastor said, "It looks like that First Holy Night."

"Ah, faith, and I think it is terrible," the sexton replied with a frown; "The way that Our Saviour had to be born, in that miserable pagan town."

"Sure, there isn't an Irishman living, much less is there one in the grave, From County Derry down to Kerry that'd let Him be born in a cave."

"If the Irish were living in Bethlehem, Joseph need not have knocked; Sure, Mary and He could have walked right in, for our doors are never locked."

"And if they had come to my cottage, they'd have found the door full wide—'Cead Mile Failte,' I'd say to them, 'God bless ye and step inside.'"

"I'd shake up the old turf fire, and make them as warm as could be, And I'd have my wife, God rest her, make them a pot of tea."

"And if the soldiers of Herod came after the Baby, the fakes; Me and the neighbors would rout them, like Patrick drove out the snakes."

"Tis a pity, Father, I tell ye, without a word of lie, That there wasn't an Irishman livin' when Mary and Joseph passed by."

Pennsylvania Ladies Attend Barry Memorial

Pennsylvania State Board and Allegheny County Board sponsored a memorial service honoring Commodore John Barry. AOH State President Ronald Bryan chaired the ceremony.

Mass was celebrated by Rev. William J. Cheatham, pastor of St. Anslem Church in Swissvale, a suburb of Pittsburgh. A full pipe band preceded the members into Mass and escorted them from the church.

The band then led the procession, which included members of the United States Navy and a contingent of the National Guard, to the War Memorial. Justice John Flaherty expounded on the virtues of John Barry, the father of the American Navy. While the band played Amazing Grace, the Justice laid the wreath. Ron Berger sang the National Anthems of United States and Ireland. A reception brunch was held at the AOH Hall in Homestead following the formal ceremony.

The Ladies AOH was represented by Sally Mains, Allegheny County treasurer and state chairman of Missions, and Mary Ellen Ponticel, Division 47 president.

Besides State President Bryan and Allegheny County President Dave O'Connor, other dignitaries present were Tim Finnerty, AOH state solicitor, and Judge Donald Lee.

Ohio Hibernians who were proud to receive their degrees from the LAOH Michigan Degree Team during the national convention were Geri Corcoran, Mary Ellen Glending, Corrine Ginley, Patrice Kearney, Angela Kerrigan, Margie Lackey, Margaret McNeely, Kathy Murphy and Nancy Murphy.

On September 11 Sheila and Bob Crawford represented the Irish community in the One World Day Parade of Nations. The celebration is sponsored by the Cleveland Cultural Garden Federation and was held in the Yugoslav Garden.

In October Cleveland Division 10 was proud to have lifetime memberships conferred on three of its members, Mary Ellen Murphy, Loretta Prendergast and Betty Murphy.

Many Hibernians supported a MacBride Principle Rally on October 21, at which an enthusiastic welcome was given to Oliver Kearney of County Antrim, Northern Ireland.

The November 5 LAOH Ohio State Board meeting was held in Steubenville with good attendance. The mass at beautiful St. Peter's Church was inspiring. The dinner and social following afforded much-enjoyed fellowship. President Kathie Linton expressed appreciation for the support of the board's fund raising endeavors. The main prize was won by AOH National President Mike Coogan of Dayton.

Maryland Awards Education Grants

Funds from the Maryland Educational Assistance Fund have been awarded for the 1988-1989 school year. Two grants in the amount of $500.00 each were awarded to Charles Dillman and Karen Shaffer.

Charles is a Junior at Cardinal Gibbons High School and the grandson of Beverly Sherin of Baltimore County Division.

Karen is a member of Division 7 in western Maryland and attends Allegany Community College in Cumberland where she is working toward her B.S. degree in nursing.

Maryland members of the LAOH, their children and grandchildren, who maintain a "C" average are eligible to apply. Applicants must be Maryland residents, though they may be attending schools out of state.

Division 2, LAOH, of Palm Bay in Brevard County, in conjunction with the men's group, held its annual Irish Night on October 22nd. Genuine Irish music was provided by "Shades of Green," with traditional Irish dancing provided by the spirited attendees.

Four Thanksgiving baskets were contributed by the division to be shared by four local Catholic churches.

Certificates for ham or turkey were included.

Plans are in the works for the annual family Christmas Party, and the St. Patrick's Day Parade and Dance.

At the conclusion of the individual monthly meetings, the joint groups auction off various items; the funds are set aside for a building fund.

As I look around all the signs of Christmas are appearing. The stores are decorated in red and green, the carols are playing on the radio and trees and window candles are being turned on each night.

It is the time for planning, shopping, cooking, decorating and all the other activities that have become traditional. Adding all of these activities to an already busy schedule can easily cause one to despair of completing everything on time, but it also makes it very exciting.

Treasured memories of past holidays remind me now that it was only through the efforts of others that the holidays were so very special. Like most young children I believed that everything was done by a form of magic — the Christmas tree that suddenly appeared all decorated, the special gifts that appeared on Christmas morning, the dinner that was served as family and friends gathered to celebrate the day, and even Mass that could be held at midnight instead of the morning.

Still today, my effort is aimed, at least in part, to continue the traditions of the holiday as I have known them in the past. It is an opportunity to express love for our family and friends. It is the chance to express good wishes to neighbors and acquaintances.

So while we rush around remember that the effort and love shown may make the season a bit brighter and happier than ever before and create many new and lasting happy memories.

Maryland Hibernians seem to always be wearing their traveling shoes. Division 4 is off to the Poconos; Division 14 to the Big Apple; and Division 1, Baltimore Co. is sponsoring a trip to Longwood Gardens and the Brandywine Museum in Chadds Ford. Jane Carter of Div. 4 recently returned from three weeks in China, and will be visiting her daughter and family in England. Eleanor Lukowski attended a 50th anniversary of her high school graduation in Boston.

Eleanore, who is Baltimore County

Board president, is finalizing plans for the County Convention scheduled for April. Many Baltimore Ladies were active in the recent Baltimore Irish Festival.

The annual memorial Mass for deceased members in November was well attended by both AOH and LAOH. The guest speaker at the reception following mass was Congressman Ben Cardin, who works closely with National Legislative Coordinator Sr. Anella Martin on Irish issues.

LAOH Pennsylvania News

The Pennsylvania LAOH State Board and the entire Pennsylvania membership congratulate the newly elected National Officers and wish them the best for their 1988-1990 administration. Our state is proud that Margaret Cooney, state president, was elected as National Chairman of Missions.

Allegheny County, Mary Margaret Maurath, president: The second year of this administration began with an Executive Board meeting held as a dinner meeting at Smithfield Grill in Pittsburgh. In honor of Our Lady of Knock, a Mass was celebrated at St. Mary's at the Point in downtown Pittsburgh. After the Liturgy, members of the seven Divisions attended dinner. Then came the Irish Day Picnic at Kenneywood. The Fall County Meeting was held at the beautiful Croghan-Sylvan Room, one of the Nationality Rooms of the University of Pittsburgh.

Castle Shannon Division 21, Kathleen Parker, president: Getting an early start on fund raising, this Division held a Dessert Card Party at St. Anne's Harkins Hall. Division 21 expressed appreciation to those members supporting the quilted wall hanging of Irish symbols. It was awarded to Louise Briggs of Pittsburgh.

Dauphin County, Division 1, Harrisburg, Margaret McGinley, president: Bus trips have proved so popular that the Division has sponsored three tours to the Three Little Bakers in Wilmington, Delaware. Now plans are made for the same trip on St. Patrick's Day. Irish Festivals have been another major interest. At the Scotch and Irish Day Festival in Donegal Mills the Division sold Irish soda bread, potato candy, scones, and Irish products. And to Baltimore, Maryland, another bus trip to an Irish Festival was taken.

Lackawanna County, Division 3, Carbondale, Margaret Speicher, president: Although it was a busy summer, two outstanding religious ceremonies were held. The Lighting of Candles for Peace was marked by the entire membership attending Mass at St. Rose of Lima Church. Our Lady of Knock Feast was celebrated with Mass, followed by a continental breakfast. A three-day trip to Washington, D.C. was enjoyed. Included in the itinerary were a show at Kennedy Center and delightful Luncheon Cruise on the Potomac.

Lehigh County, Division Tir Na Nog, Ellen Foley Trexler, president: It was a slow down with a house party meeting instead of the school-structured environment. Then it was a family picnic joining with the men's group to meet the Irish children who were visiting in the area. A school for Irish Dancing was sponsored both for adults and children. Columbus weekend in October was marked by joining the city of Bethlehem in a "Celtic Fest." The Division's speciality was painting colorful design on faces.

Luzerne County, Janette Wydo, president: The County recently held elections for the following officers: Janette Wydo, President; Ann Metz, Vice President; Claire McNelis, Secretary and Treasurer, Helen Lavan. The installation was held at the Spinning Wheels in Wilkes Barre. It was followed by a dinner dance with the Teachers from Ireland as guests.

Freeland, Division 2, Claire McNelis, president: The Teachers from Ireland who attended college in this area were entertained. The feast of Our Lady of Knock was celebrated with Mass and Rosary at St. Ann's Church in Freeland.

Westmoreland County, Greensburg Division 3, Margaret Carr, president: This Division is maintaining its membership despite many handicaps. They are saddened by the death of a great Lady Hibernian, Josephine Murphy, one of the Division's original members.

STATE NEWS: New Mexico

The Hibernians and the Ladies AOH united recently to give an assist to the children of Northern Ireland. Their project is called "Operation Humanity," which stands for "Hibernians Unite Minnesota in Assisting Northern Ireland's Troubled Youth." Their goal is to try to give the children in Northern Ireland a little happier Christmas in 1988, and also to assist the teenagers in training for and in securing better-paying jobs throughout the country. Both Hibernian groups are concentrating on the months of October and November with their money-making projects, but contributions are welcome at any time, according to Bill Gleason, President of Division #4 of the AOH. The Minnesota Irish Heritage Fair, scheduled for November 19 and 20, at Cretin-Derham Hall, provided many opportunities for people to extend a helping hand. Father Desmond Wilson of Belfast, Northern Ireland, and founder of "Doors of Hope," supervised the distribution of funds.

Other organizations and their representatives who are helping to promote this project are: Ladies AOH, Mary Ann O'Brien; Division #1, AOH, Don Lamm; Irish Northern Aid, Thomond O'Brien; Twin City Irish American Club, Wes Hallman; Minnesotans United for Ireland, Michael Whelan; Irish American Unity Conference, Leah Curtin; and State Board, AOH, John Gregory O'Connell, and Brother H. Lewis Twohig, State Chaplain.

IRISH NIGHT in the city of Albuquerque was part of SummerFest '88, with a different ethnic group represented on Saturday nights in the Civic Plaza. Folks were treated to live Irish entertainment, dancing and traditional Irish food. Left to right are Tim Dowling, fund raising chairman; Brother Mathias Barrett, founder of the Little Brothers of the Good Shepherd and recipient of the 1984 AOH JFK Medal; and Brother Justin Howson, Brother General of the Good Shepherd Brothers. The trio received a check from Dan McDonnell, Division 1 president, Albuquerque.

Those wishing to make a donation at this time may send their check to: Hibernians, c/o William J. Gleason, 790 South Cleveland Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55116. Most of the groups listed above also had a booth at the Minnesota Irish Heritage Fair, where people made their donations. Present plans call for most of the money to go for the purchase (in Northern Ireland) of food, clothing and toys for the youngsters of this troubled land.

Irish Information Center Opened in Albany, NY

ALBANY, N.Y. — Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, co-founder of the Irish civil rights movement and Irish political immortal, took time Monday from a busy speaking schedule to inaugurate the Capital District Irish Information Center, calling it the first facility of its kind in the country.

On an American speaking tour marking the 20th anniversary of the civil rights movement, which ushered in the current generation of the Irish Troubles, Mrs. McAliskey noted the importance of the Center as an alternate source of information about Ireland to combat the British disinformation disseminated through the American media. Speaking to reporters and television cameras at the store-front facility at 114 Quail Street in Albany, she also expressed the hope that Irish Americans in other communities would initiate similar centers.

Incorporated by a cross-section of the Irish American community, including members of the AOH, INA and the Cultural Institute, the non-profit Information Center will emphasize current newspapers, magazines, books, pamphlets and other informational publications of Irish interest, also featuring Irish music, crafts, clothing and other items.

After the opening, Mrs. McAliskey promoted the Information Center at each of her area speaking engagements, using the example of former New York Times reporter Jo Thomas to illustrate the British manipulation of the media and thus the importance of the Center. Jo Thomas, with whom Mrs. McAliskey had shared a dais the previous weekend, was fired from the N.Y. Times for digging too close to the truth in Ireland.

Included in Mrs. McAliskey's Capital District schedule were addresses to standing-room-only crowds at the Knights of Columbus and Siena College, editorial board meetings with the Evangelist and the Albany Times Union, extended coverage by Metroland Magazine, a reception benefiting Fr. Des Wilson's Doors of Hope, an Albany AOH reception, and two hours on two local radio talk shows, including WGY, whose 50,000 watts carried her comments to 30 states on Monday evening.

Mrs. McAliskey's remarks, a personalized history of the 20-year struggle, reflected the hope and despair of an oppressed but risen people. Particularly poignant were her first hand accounts of Bloody Sunday and the Milltown Massacre. She told of being "young, brave and very, very stupid" on that Derry nians. Following the AOH and LAOH business, the groups enjoyed a dinner and dance, and the music of "Shades of Green" Irish band.

Broward Division 1 has elected the following officers for 1989: President Martin McAndrew; Vice President Don Fortune; Recording Secretary Don Hartnett; Financial Secretary Bill Maroney; Treasurer Ed McCready; Chairman of Standing Committee Eamon Quinn and Sentinel Jim Lawless. Members were urged to flood their legislative sub-committees with phone calls about the immigration bill, and their outrage over the assaults on freedom being enacted by the British government.

Brevard County Div. 1 reports its new members, Jerry O'Shea, Steve Ryan, Bill Rothamel, Sal Vitale and Bill Wren are already taking an active part in division activities. Manatee County Div. 1 is the newest and also the most aggressive chapter, which is proud of the addition of three O'Sullivan's, father and two sons. President Paul Finnerty also reports that his wife is having success in forming an LAOH unit.

Brevard County Div. 2 President, Bob Carroll reports a large amount of community activity to be shared in the next issue of the Digest. This seems to be the most productive, active and fast growing division in the state.

All divisions are urged to send information to Nick Schneider, 240 Eyre Ave., Merritt Island FL 32953, or call (407)453-3424.

Sunday in 1972, refusing to believe British paratroopers would actually fire into a peaceful crowd until she saw the 13 who could not crawl to cover. At Milltown Cemetery, she offered to help away an elderly lady, who refused, pulling her old coat about her shoulders and remaining to bury her dead. She recalled with awe the young people at Milltown, pursuing unarmed their pistol-shooting, grenade-lobbing attacker, knowing what they had to do though they might be, and were, killed. She wondered how the British could now penalize a people who were not afraid to die in pursuit of their freedom and their dignity.

STATE NEWS: Ohio Irish Champ's Soap Box Car Shipped Home

Quoting Jim Dettling of the Akron Beacon Journal: "When Liam Muldoon, the Irish National Soap Box Derby Champion, left Akron after the All-American race, he took with him a lot of fond memories back to Northern Ireland. What he didn't take back was his green derby car with the gold shamrocks."

Liam was under limited sponsorship for the trip and had no funds to ship the racer back. So the car would be on display in the Club rooms of Akron's Mark Heffernan Division of the AOH.

A committee, headed by member Mike McNulty and Division Vice President Horrace Phillips enlisted the Akron Beacon Journal and on August 29th, a feature story (with picture) explained the situation to the community.

Akron and the Hibernians responded beyond expectations. Within two days the score stood at: Cash $273, pledges some $200 more, and three offers for free shipment to Liam's home.

Federal Express, the first volunteer, through David E. Leslie, Akron Manager, and Steve Ricca, District Senior Manager, was accepted as the carrier.

Thanks also are due the other two volunteers: Wayne Stock of Little Tykes Co., Hudson, Ohio's toy makers, and Chris Gary of D.H.L. World Wide Express. It's nice to have such good friends.

So, Liam Muldoon gets his racer back, and the Hibernians get a problem! What to do with $500 plus in donated funds.

Mike McNulty wants to earmark these funds as a supplement to the expense fund for next year's Irish National Champion. Mike is now in the process of contacting all individual contributors for approval, and promises a full refund to any contributor on request.

Project Children Receives $6,000

Cleveland's Irish Cultural Festival committee wishes to announce it has advised Mr. and Mrs. John P. Coyne, co-ordinators of Project Children, that $6,000.00 has been set aside from festival proceeds to bring children from Northern Ireland in 1989.

This was made possible because of continued community support for our annual festival.

all of them shot in the back by crown forces (shades of the brave Black-and-Tans). They were moved down in broad daylight and many more maimed for life by government "security" forces! To add salt to the wounds, Her Majesty later decorated the officer in charge. Even the Crown Coroner described it as "unadulterated murder."

The British propaganda machine, recognized as having few if any equal, is credited with having invented disinformation. US Ambassador to the UN Andrew Young, for his forthright statement to that effect, had to apologize, not in the cause of truth but in the interests of international diplomacy. Dr. Liz Curtis (English historian) pinpointed the influence of the machine on world opinion by the title of her book on Northern Ireland (1984) — Ireland: Propaganda War. "Disinformation Rampant" would have been a suitable subtitle.

The Derry massacre of 1972 will forever be linked with the Boston 1770 and Sepoy 1857 massacres as three of the blackest pages of infamy in Empire history. Englishman Christopher Hibbert in his book The Great Mutiny describes the Indian carnage as an example of "the English lust for atrocity." It continues today unabated in what is left of the jolly old conglomerate on which the sun was never to have set.

Those are the stubborn facts, already passed into history, allowing of no honest contradiction. They explain the ghastly anomaly that is "Northern Ireland."

The British prime minister is the present prime mover, instigator and executioner (remember the ten hunger strikers, sons of other mothers) who insists on perpetuating the annexation of Ireland (Act of Union 1800) on which honest Prime Minister Gladstone commented: "There is no blacker or fouler transaction in the history of man." The Orangemen feel no such shame in glorying in the dark and foul reminder. They like to be called Unionists.

To describe Mrs. Thatcher as a "formidable champion of liberty" is a statement likely to provoke the anger of much of the population of Northern Ireland, where, as I remember, a state of martial law exists. Britain also has the worst history of human rights violations in the European court, and consistently refuses to act upon the courts' rulings. (The American Spectator, Sept. 1988).

Early this year BBC tapes on N. Ireland were ordered seized by Mrs.

Thatcher. Cheers for the BBC! Even that august body must not overstep the limits of truth embarrassing to Whitehall.

Meanwhile, back in the occupied Six Counties, a travesty of justice goes unchecked. The Diplock courts have long since out-kangarooed the Kangaroo version in the dispensing of summary (in) justice — officially! Concentration camps supplement the overflowing jails and prisons. Former Irish Foreign Minister Peter Barry said: "I think the life of a Nationalist in the North is unequaled in its misery anywhere in the world."

Occupation policy is to shoot systematically anyone who gets in their way or appears suspect. The shoot-to-kill order, given to the soldiers on the street in riot gear and with guns on the ready, is now under investigation—proceeding reluctantly and very slowly—as are the SAS Gibraltar murders. "Justice delayed is justice denied" means nothing to judges paid and appointed by the ruling faction.

The Iron Lady of No. 10 Downing St. imposes her will on Washington, Amsterdam and even Dublin. She demands that escaped POWs and suspects must be extradited back to England — to a fate worse than death. Joe Doherty, acquitted six times by US courts, is a prime example of the old Mother Country's long arm and power still to dominate.

II

The Orange faction, witting tool of the government is more indiscriminate. The objects of their assassination squads are not only their armed counterparts, but any man, woman, or child known to be a Catholic. One of their favorite graffiti, "To Hell with the Pope," translates into personal hatred for every Papist in the land. Some of their leaders have actually called for the burning alive of Roman Catholic priests. Witness too, their wanton destruction of schools, churches and thousands of homes, especially but not solely during pogroms; and decide where lies the bigotry. They equate nationalism with Catholic. The targets of the Irish side are always military and political and on occasion commercial. Religion is never a factor.

In spite of the absurd efforts of the media and the paid politicians to give the impression that one side is as much to blame as the other, fanaticism is entirely one-sided. Government press releases make sure that the occupation army is perceived as a peacekeeping force.

One of the more ferocious of the pro-British paramilitaries is the RUC (Royal Ulster Constabulary) — described variously as crown mercenaries or local gestapo, on the London payroll. Their tortured and torturing mentality is catching up with them. According to Apartheid (A Parallel and A Comparison) up to 1985 more than 50 of the RUC and UDR had taken their own lives. This information will not be found in official news dispatches.

Khomeini and Ian Paisley are a pair and their followers are a similar breed. Their ilk can be only physically subdued or mentally civilized. The Orange group have the longer and fouler history. Their ugly animosity does not stop at the grave. Their frequent desecration of Catholic funerals is eloquent testimony — to the extent of tossing hand grenades among the mourners. Even during those ghoulish exhibitions the "security" forces stand idly by, if not actually abetting the hooligans. Unbelievable, you must think. I agree. BBC tapes covering two such attacks were ordered confiscated. The truth must not out.

Orange intransigence — no surrender, no sharing — has had method in its madness. Bigotry, too long an obsession and a badge of privilege (jobs, housing etc.) was and is carefully fostered by a government that can then pose as the guardian of law and order. The wily Winston Churchill exposed his hand, when in an unguarded and rare moment of candor, he counseled: "Play the Orange Card." All the fanatical hatred and government complicity cannot be natural. It is man-made, manufactured and contrived by London. Is there any other logical conclusion?

III

Portraying the conflict as sectarian is high on the list of dirty tricks of the media and the establishment. It is the reddest of red herrings. It has nothing (repeat) to do with religion. Neither side wants to convert the other. In fact one of the country's noblest patriots was Protestant and an English gentleman, Erskine Childers. Southern leader Douglas Hyde likewise was a Protestant.

Precisely and simply stated it is an international dispute — national sovereignty versus foreign occupation. One sure formula for world peace is that all occupied countries be unoccupied. Internal political conflicts will always be with us — like the poor. World recognition of national boundaries would make world war impossible, and could bring existing international conflicts to a speedy end.

It does not make sense to argue that 60% of the north's population do not want a united country, and welcome the occupation. Why should that gerrymandered percentage which is 25% of the total population be able to keep the island divided? In 1918 the one and only free national general election was held, in which all of Ireland voted. The result was an overwhelming majority for an independent united Ireland. England reneged on her promise to abide by the decision of the total population, and imposed partition. Lloyd George threatened resumption of an intensified Black-and-Tan reign of terror unless partition were accepted. Civil war ensued 1918-22, with Britain arming and backing the pro-partition party against De Valera's Fianna Fail.

There once again are the facts, — complicated and undistorted — the whole truth as history, generations hence, will record them, concerning the imposed and unnatural division of one of the oldest small nations of Europe, for whose freedom WWI was allegedly fought!

Not to be hoodwinked, every fair observer of the Irish scene should first give an honest answer to the question: Who has the better (or the only) right to bear arms in his native land — the native, or the soldiers of an army of occupation? The only sincere answer is as true today as it was in Vichy France or Quisling Norway or at the present time in Afghanistan. Must Ireland always be the exception? The irony is that in its case a mighty dishonest pen seeks to justify a mightier sword — proving, conversely, it is no match for truth.

In a word: who are the real terrorists in northeast Ireland? It has been established that the English and Orange sides are the only ones to have deliberately killed innocent civilians — by lead, rubber, and plastic bullets. (Because they are lethal, plastic bullets are illegal in England. In the occupied Six Counties they are legal. The Irish are expendable!) The killing of civilians by Irish militants is never intentional. They can be attributed to bungling or even monumental stupidity. It is in their code of honor always to admit responsibility for mistakes; and to give them their due, apologies are always forthcoming. Can they be blamed for sticking to their guns, literally and figuratively?

Their opposites never offer apologies; their victims are always "caught in the crossfire!" Why should they? Since the deaths are fully intended — to teach the natives a lesson. Herein lies a clear point of difference and indicates again the one-sided bigotry. While the Irish target police barracks, military posts and border checkpoints, they leave untouched schools, churches, and private homes. The Orange gangs have no respect for sacred places. They and their masters are clearly the aggressors and the real terrorists; "having the power and using it crushingly." Two against one. Two Goliaths against David. The handwriting on the wall says the one is winning.

Resentment is building in Britain that so many of her sons are returning from Belfast and the continent in coffins. It does not soften the blow to know that they died ingloriously to uphold and defend the cruelest and longest tyranny of all time, not just in the past 700 years but in the preceding 700. During the Famine years it took on the dimension of genocide. Only a week ago (Aug. 8) another casket from Europe soon after the three in May, occasioned the Prime Minister, usually calm and cold, to blurt that the IRA has to be "annihilated!"

It would have made far more sense

if the good lady had demanded the annihilation of the sickly system in the Six Counties. Here is her chance to make honorable history by emulating what is being done right now in Afghanistan, by another evil empire, — pulling out, lock, stock and barrel.

The Irish and the English could be the best of friends if only the government would listen to the vox populi. Polls increasingly show that the English people want their troops out of Ireland immediately. Not just a phased withdrawal. If so would there be a bloodbath? There exists already a constant bloodbath, year in and year out. The final quote that concludes this paper is from the executed Patrick Pearse, whose parents were English.

On the principle that a bully is always a coward, it can be assumed that there would be no escalation of the Troubles. Remove the backing of the English faction and army, and the Orange gangs will quickly pull in their horns, faced with the stark reality of the inevitable. London armed the Orangemen; let it now disarm them. Should that happen, the Irish armed units have pledged that they will call a cease fire.

Serious political scientists agree that in such an eventuality peace could be restored in one week. Or, if UN troops were to replace the British, it would require only a matter of days. A solution Britain studiously and stubbornly avoids. Ignoring it will not make it go away. In the meantime all casualties of the unnecessarily protracted struggle are its responsibility. In a letter to The Times of London in 1971, Graham Greene wrote: "Now . . . when deaths and tortures have gone on long enough to blacken us in the eyes of the world . . . there will be a roundtable conference . . . Why not now rather than later?"

"If Ireland is not a nation, there is no such thing as a nation." — G.K. Chesterton. He explained that England's barbarity toward the Irish is due not so much to hypocrisy as to stupidity.

"Ireland unfree can never be at peace." Ireland restored — a nation once again — can.

make! And what an enjoyable opportunity they present for our children to learn about Ireland. Painstakingly illustrated and written, this is a series of five different books, each with a different focus on Ireland. Each page of each book contains exquisite illustrations which children may color in, plus a very readable accompanying text. Adults will enjoy reading the text to younger children; older children will want to read it themselves, and to make the books permanently theirs by artfully coloring in the lavish pictures.

Titles in the series include Discover Ireland (historic roots, Gaelic games, traditional dancing, castles and street vendors); Dublin (from Viking to modern times); Irish American Heritage (immigration to success); and Ireland's Folk Legends (The Children of Lir, Dermot and Grania, Deirdre, Fionn MacCumhail, Cuchulainn).

With full-color covers and black and white illustrations within, the series is in large format paperback. The set sells for $30.00 for the five books, or each can be purchased individually for $6.50.

For school use or home use, the Original Story Graphics Books are highly recommended. We predict the series to be a bestseller in the Irish community across the U.S. for years to come.

STATE NEWS: Georgia Hibernians Honor Navy's 'Father'

By O. KAY JACKSON

One of the occasions celebrated by the Ancient Order of Hibernians is Commodore John Barry Day. And while nationally the organization gathers on the anniversary of Barry's death, September 13, the Savannah chapter got together October 2.

"We set it back due to the extreme heat then . . . it's amazing the difference two weeks makes," said Hibernians President E. Graham Harold.

Sunday's weather was perfect for the picnic at Fort Pulaski National Monument attended by nearly 60 members of the oldest Irish Catholic lay organization in the United States.

Hamburgers and hot dogs sizzled over coals, ice in coolers cradled soft drinks and beer, and parents kicked back to enjoy Irish music provided by balladeer Jamie Keena of the Savannah Folk Music Society. The children played ball, hide-and-seek, and their own kind of war games.

Particularly fierce was young warrior Daniel Regan, armed with a plastic sword, who hid beneath palmetto fronds and attacked unwary passers-by. In the background Keena's rich voice celebrated ancient warrior kings "with standards of green unfurled . . ."

Harold handed out copies of "Echoes of Irish History" written about Commodore John Barry by AOH National Historian Mike McCormack and containing a eulogy by Dr. Benjamin Rush, stating "He was born in Ireland, but America was the object of his devotion and the theater of his usefulness."

Barry fought in the first and last naval battles of the American Revolutionary War. In between the two he captured the British ship "The Edward," the first American war prize, assisted George Washington in the famous crossing of the Delaware; captured an armed British vessel when ammunition was scarce and a supply ship when food was at a premium.

In 1794 Washington asked the popular naval hero to form and train a class of midshipmen to be commissioned as ensigns, forming the nucleus of the new American Navy. Barry was named ranking officer, being granted commission number one.

"Commodore John Barry had many firsts to his credit from being the first to fly the new American flag in battle to escorting America's famous ally, General Lafayette, back to France, but the first that he should always be remembered for is his position as Father of the American Navy," McCormack wrote.

The Irish-heritage proud Hibernians agree and keep Barry's accomplishments, and those of other Irish heroes, alive with such celebrations, thereby instilling Irish pride in their own offspring.

"I'm going to join (the AOH) when I'm old enough," said Tim Fallon, 13. "My two brothers already belong."

Major Degrees Exemplified in Babylon, N.Y.

Candidates became "Confirmed Hibernians" on October 9, when Tara Court Major Degree Team exemplified the Major Degrees of our Order. The degree was held in the new St. Patrick's Division 2 Irish Cultural Center, 27 Locust Ave., Babylon, N.Y.

We're proud of our team and are pleased to have provided the opportunity to confer the Major Degrees to Hibernians all over our country, as well as in Ireland, on the occasion of the National Convention 1978.

County Presidents, if you have not sponsored a Degree recently, why not consider it now? Members should be provided the opportunity to take the Major Degree at least annually, as mandated by our national constitution.

For information on having our team come to your area, please contact: Joe Roddin, 51 Ellensue Dr., Deer Park, N.Y. 11729. Tel. (516) 667-2474.

Hibernian Sports

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

Greetings Hibernian Sports Fans. It's the Blessed Season of Christmas. May each and everyone of you experience the joys and blessings of this Holy and very merry season. Let's make like a yacht and sail in. Boole!

Football — ND has been looking quite impressive in its outings against Pitt and Miami. They also had the luck of the Irish with them in those games, thank God! In the Pitt game, Pitt's Dickinson couldn't hang on to the ball as he crossed the goal line. He fumbled it and then tried to pick it up twice. ND finally fell on the fumble. In the Miami game, Miami gambled on going for a two point conversion which ND broke up nicely. Please do not get the idea that YR is down on ND; he isn't. He's thrilled that they are doing so good. He would like to see them go undefeated for the season but each week it gets a little tougher. No matter what his staff, Coach Lou Holtz and his staff, the entire ND team, and the student body deserves the praise and recognition that they are earning. Keep up the good work!

YR was dismayed about some of the antics that he read about prior to the ND—Miami game on both sides. He realizes that there apparently isn't much good will between these two schools. What he takes exception to is some of the harassment and/or attempted harassment of the coaching staffs on each campus by telephone calls from members of the student body. Maybe it's part of the football mentality. Maybe it's just youthful enthusiasm gone astray. Whatever it is, YR doesn't like it. Let's get out of this 80's Yuppie mentality where one plays all sorts of mental "psyche" games with his opponent before the game or match. Then lords it over his defeated opponent in a loud, rude and boisterous manner. Whatever happened to good sportsmanship. YR knows what Leo Durocher said, "Nice guys finish last." YR thought that was part of a Catholic education. Is he wrong?

The NFL does have a problem. YR caught an interview with Terry Bradshaw, the former QB with the Steelers. He stated that he didn't think the league or the owners really had the players' best interest in mind with the NFL substance abuse policy. He thought players who tested positive should sit out at least a year, not the 30 days as it is now. He also thought that the league and the clubs both had an obligation to secure the best rehabilitation program for the players who are caught using drugs. He said he realized that it was a weakness and/or a sickness. He stated also that he didn't think playing golf instead of football was the ideal method of kicking the habit. YR agrees wholeheartedly with him. The NFL league and owners will not address this problem this year. They may not address this problem next year. What they will address is gate receipts and television monies, etc. That's why this NFL substance abuse policy is the way it is. They feel they need these players in the game to draw the crowds, be it in the seats of the stadium or before a TV screen. What this policy does is send the wrong message to very impressionable young adults and teenagers who look up to these athletes. The message that is being received, is "It's OK to do drugs or to abuse your body with steroids or alcohol; just don't get caught. If you're caught, you're only going to sit out 30 days. It ain't that bad!" That's the wrong message, gentlemen.

In another interview on the Larry King Show, the question was raised that back in the days of Ruth and other bygone heroes, the media covered up the exploits of these stars. The media in those days was only the press and radio. It was claimed that the reporters of that era never mentioned anything about the booze these guys drank. Supposedly on the grounds that the reporters and the stars hung out together and drank together and did other things together. That some of these stars did have serious drinking problems which were covered up is true. The point was that the problem of substance abuse has existed since sports came into being. Today it's just a different substance that these athletes are using.

Being objective, YR has to agree that the foregoing statement is technically correct. Being subjective, YR feels this is playing another form of a mental game called, "It might have been..." Let's face it. None of us can go back and correct the mistakes of the past, our own or somebody else's. You learn from these errors in judgement and move forward.

Baseball — As the guy said, "Baseball's been very, very good to me!" This season two teams were being touted as The Teams. The teams that would meet for all the marbles in the World Series. These two teams were the Oakland A's in the American League and New York Mets in the National League. As the play says, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," a funny thing happened on the way to and at the World Series.

The National League Championship Series matched the Mets against the LA Dodgers. To be honest, YR still feels they committed a mortal sin when they moved out of Ebbetts Field in Brooklyn for the sunny climate and laid-back lifestyle of L.A. On paper, the so-called experts called the Mets a very strong team. They won 100 plus games in the league. The Dodgers on the other hand, were the weakest team. These experts figured that the Mets should blow them away in 4 straight. Well, it didn't take them 4. It took 7 games. When dust cleared, it was the Dodgers, not the Boys of Flushing, who were going to the Series.

In the meantime, in the American League, the Boston Red Sox and the Oakland A's met to determine who would be the AL rep at the World Series. The dyed-in-the-wool Red Sox fans were praying for a miracle, YR's older brother among them. Oakland just went out and won 104 games. In typical fashion, if you lived in the East, the media paid little attention to the West Coast. So when these two teams played in the Championship Series, the A's lived up to the expectations of the experts and blew Boston away in four straight.

That set the stage for the World Series. These same "experts," who in this Hi Tech age do not use crystal balls anymore, but crystal chips in their computers, predicted it would be Oakland. In fact, they were looking for Oakland to sweep the Series in 4 straight also. As a poem, called, "Maude Miller" says, "Of all the words of tongue and pen, the saddest of these, 'It might have been!'" That's the way it went for Oakland. On paper, they were the winningest, the strongest, the best hitting team in the Series. The lowly LA Dodgers had nothing but a pitcher and a bunch of hurt, old veterans who had seen better days. When they didn't have veterans, they had rookies who would choke under the pressure of the World Series.

Gaelic Football in U.S.A.

IRELAND'S national game, Gaelic football, has come to this nation's capital. The new Washington Gaels met their first foe, Monaghan from New York, on the playing field of Gonzaga College High School. The final score, Washington Gaels 4-13, Monaghan 2-5.

On October 20, approximately 12:00M, the Cinderella bit struck again. The LA Dodgers behind their ace hurler, Orel Hershiser, had done in Oakland's A's. It was a sight to be seen. Hershiser looked tired in the 8th and 9th innings but ended the game and the Series on a high note, a strike out! Hershiser won the Series MVP. He had won the ALCS MVP earlier. Thus he becomes only the 3rd player to win both MVP awards in one season.

The Dodger triumph also brought these Bible quotations to mind — "The first shall be last and the last first... The lowly shall be exalted... The mighty shall be brought down... The proud shall be humbled." All of them fit nicely when talking about this Series. And so, we did a fond adieu to baseball as our ship sails out into the sunset.

Olympics — Broome County in which YR resides now has its first-ever Olympic Medal winner in a Seton Catholic Central High School student, May Peio. Believe it or not, this young lady won her medal in Tae-Kwon-Do, one of the martial arts. YR isn't up on these martial arts. So he cannot describe exactly what is involved. All he can tell you is it isn't a sport you would readily associate with a young high school junior who is a candidate for Prom Queen. Congratulations, May! The Mayor of Binghamton, the Honorable Juanita M. Crabb, gave her the key to the City. The County Exec, Carl Young, gave her a proclamation. The school gave her an assembly. The nuns gave her homework. Just kidding, Sisters!

Hockey — Would you believe it's hockey season! The NHL opened its 1989-90 season in October. The interesting things so far in this young season are Wayne Gretzky playing in LA for the Kings and Guy Lafleur coming out of retirement to play for the NY Rangers. Supposedly the Patrick Division has so much parity that any club in it could win it. The other divisions do not have this parity. Time will tell.

The NHL must do something to curb some of the violence that has taken place on the ice in the name of Hockey. If some of these actions took place in the stands or on the streets outside these arenas, these players would be charged with attempted murder, aggravated assault, assault and battery; just to mention a few crimes. The least thing they would be charged with is committing mayhem. This isn't hockey. YR realizes that many people go there just to see the bloodshed. They're not fans. It's that type of mentality that shouts for a person sitting on a ledge to jump. It's also that mentality that is drawn to the scene of an accident or fire, not to give aid, but to see the carnage. If the NHL thinks they need this type of fan, then perhaps, it is time to change the format of the game. The team that has the most players able to stand at the end of 3 periods wins. Forget about scoring goals! Forget about making assists! Forget about passing! Forget about penalties! Just let the two teams flay away at each other with their sticks. An injured player could come off the ice for medical aid, if he could make it that far. To insure that the proper amount of blood was spilled, helmets and face masks would be declared illegal. The referee, if they decided to use one, could sit in a chair above the action. A player who left the ice either by his own free will or another player's will, could not be addressed in competition. He would have to return to the ice before engaging in competition. Let's hope it never comes to this.

NYS Sports — Don O'Hara, the NYS AOH Sports Chair, sends along this information. The 1988 AOH Softball Tournament was held at Auburn, 8/27-8/28. Teams competing were Auburn, Babylon, Camillus, Oswego and Niagara Falls. Camillus' infield averaged 65 years plus. In the Open Division, 1st place went to Auburn with Babylon being the runner-up. In the Over-40 Division, Auburn was 1st again with Niagara Falls coming in 2nd.

In the NYS AOH Golf Tournament which was held at the State President's golf course, Frear Park, it appears that the club travelled farther than the ball. Don O'Hara reports that again this year, rain plagued the tourney. Don Cunningham and John O'Hara, the golfer, not the novelist, took high honors for distance. Don O'Hara stated that next year, there is talk of playing under a Carley/Considine Handicap system. If it rains, Carley and Considine get hung. The fierce competition was followed by a great steak dinner at the Troy Hall. Well done? Gentlemen?

The NYS AOH Bowling Tournament will be held on the 3rd weekend of April in the Capitol District. Please make your plans. O'Hara says he can promise that no game will be called on account of rain during this tournament.

Finish Line — That's it for sports for now. Keep sending those cards and letters to YR at PO Box 156 ESS, Binghamton, NY 13904.

Rhode Island Division Holds Annual Tourney

The AOH Division 1, Newport, RI, held their annual golf tournament on October 15 at Jamestown Country Club, Jamestown. Starter Leo "pink-tee" Mistowski insured that the tournament ran like clock-work. Leo was assisted by his two sons, Joe and John, and the Division gives them a tip of the hat for a job well done.

Chairman Harry Winthrop announced the winners at an awards dinner after the tourney. Awards were presented to the winning team in a "best ball tourney", to Kevin Carty, Brian Sullivan, Neil Sullivan and Norman King with a score of 6 under par.

Individual awards were presented to John Spingler for longest drive, Martin Shea for closest to the pin, Peter Bolhouse for the longest putt. A special award was presented to Neil Sullivan for the "shortest drive."

Harry Winthrop also chaired the AOH Summer Golf League. The results of the four divisions are not available due to play-off competition. Division A, Kevin Carty vs. Charles Burns; Division B, Cliff Wilson vs. Tom Kane; Division C, Charles Toracenti vs. Joe "bean-ball" Lalli; Division D, Bob Kinsella vs. Norman King.

Leo Downey of Newport served as head chef at the awards dinner. Assisted by his son Mike Downey, Bob Kinsella, Ed Murphy, Jim Nolan, Russ Seibens and a host of other volunteer members, Leo Downey can put this one in the WIN column.

Thanks to Harry Winthrop for an enjoyable season of golf.

NEIL SULLIVAN, past state president, Rhode Island AOH, and two-year Division 1, Newport president, receives a tournament prize for the "shortest drive" as well-wishers look on.

Irish Institute Awards $63,000 to Arts

ST. PAUL, MN — The Irish American Cultural Institute (IACI) announced grants and awards totalling $63,000 at ceremonies September 8 in Dublin's Shelbourne Hotel. "This is the largest one-time disbursement of funds in our history," said John P. Walsh of New Vernon, N.J., the recently elected chairman of the 26-year-old organization.

Dignitaries attending the awards presentations included The Hon. Margaret Heckler, U.S. Ambassador to Ireland; Tanaiste Brian Lenihan, Ireland's second-ranking official; Martin Dully, head of Bord Fáilte-Irish Tourist Board; the AICI's three Irish directors; and four American directors in addition to Walsh: Bernard Croke of Philadelphia, Paul Gillespie of Boston, Kingsley Murphy, Jr. of Minneapolis, and the Institute's co-founder and longtime chairman, Dr. Eoin McKiernan. Some of the leading figures in the Irish arts scene also attended, including Chieftains' leader Paddy Moloney.

Two Butler Literary Awards of $10,000 each were presented, the first by Tanaiste Lenihan to Seamus Heaney, who accepted the award on behalf of The Field Day Anthology of Irish Literature, a comprehensive project for which publication plans are well advanced. Others associated with Field Day are Brian Friel, Seamus Deane, David Hammond and Thomas Kilroy.

The Institute works to foster the arts in Ireland and to promote a more informed understanding of Irish culture in the U.S. In addition to its annual awards in Ireland, its programs include the publication of Eire-Ireland and Ducas; the Irish and the Irish Perceptions series, which arranges regular U.S. tours for Irish speakers and performers.

What it is . . .

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAAOH members by 1953 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and the LAOH. In 1963, the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Burse Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.

AD HOC Committee Selects New Leadership

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The bipartisan Ad Hoc Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs began its work in the 101st Congress with the selection of four Co-Chairmen to lead the committee. The new Co-Chairmen are Reps. Hamilton Fish, Jr. (R-NY), Thomas Manton (D-NY), Benjamin Gilman (R-NY), and Bruce Morrison (D-CT).

The Co-Chairmen were selected as the Ad Hoc Committee, first established in 1977, met on the second day of the new Congress. The Ad Hoc Committee has over 100 House Members and Senators.

Rep. Fish was the acting Chairman of the Committee following the resignation of former Chairman Mario Biaggi (D-NY) in August of 1988. Fish serves as the Vice-Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and is the author of the House legislation calling on American firms doing business in Northern Ireland to adopt the MacBride Principles of fair employment. Fish has also been very active in the cases of Joseph Doherty and the Birmingham Six. Fish is beginning his 11th term in the House.

Rep. Manton serves on the prestigious Energy and Commerce Committee in the House. He has been a leading voice in the Congress on Northern Ireland and was a main co-sponsor of the MacBride Principles bill. Manton will shortly reintroduce a House Resolution calling for Irish political prisoner Joe Doherty to gain political asylum in the U.S. Rep. Manton is beginning his third term in the House.

Rep. Gilman is an original member of the Ad Hoc Committee and has been one of its leading spokesmen. He is a senior Member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and serves on the Subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East, which has direct jurisdiction over Ireland and Northern Ireland. Gilman is credited with including conditions in the 1986 legislation providing first-time U.S. economic aid to Northern Ireland to ensure that the aid benefits both communities. Gilman will lead efforts to monitor the aid which is now in excess of $100 million. Rep. Gilman is beginning his ninth term.

Rep. Morrison is a leading Member of the House Judiciary Committee and also serves on the House Banking Committee. Morrison, as a Member of the Judiciary Committee, will pay particular attention to the Doherty case, as well as Irish immigration matters. He also authored a resolution in honor of the late Sean MacBride, a Nobel Peace Prize winner and founder of Amnesty International. Morrison is beginning his fourth term.

The Ad Hoc Committee will shortly announce the formation of an Executive Committee and intends to hold its first meeting within the next month. The Ad Hoc Committee has also announced that its long-time staff coordinator, Bob Blancato, who worked for Rep. Biaggi from 1972-1988, will remain. Moya Benoit, another long-time Biaggi and Ad Hoc Committee staffer, will also remain active.

Historic First Lady Grand Marshal To Lead N.Y. Parade

NEW YORK, NY — Ancient Order of Hibernians history was made on Tuesday, January 31, 1989 at the Sheraton Center, here, when the St. Patrick's Day Parade delegates selected Dorothy Hayden Cudahy to be the first woman Grand Marshal in the parade's 227-year history.

Dorothy Hayden Cudahy will lead the 228th parade up Fifth Avenue on St. Patrick's Day, March 17, 1989. An historical event for Irish women and the AOH, the selection of Dorothy was made over a worthy contender, Mary Holt Moore. (The tally was 256 - 233).

There was great jubilation in the Cudahy camp when the winner was announced. Dorothy bubbled her joy and gratitude to everyone for bestowing upon her such a great honor. "It will also be in honor of your mother and my mother and all those sisters who invigorate all things Irish!" she declared.

A member of Queens County LAOH Board, the new marshal is also known as "first lady" of Irish radio. For over 40 years she has been host of a weekly talk show, Irish Memories, which she took over as a young girl on the death of her father.

Her Father, James A. Hayden, a native of County Kilkenny, Ireland, was one of the pioneers of radio in New York City. Her mother, Delia Brennan, also deceased, was a native of Curry, County Sligo.

John Cudahy, Dorothy's husband, is a member of Division 3, New York County, and a past president of the Clare Society. Other family are a son, Sean, a sister, Ann Cuggy, and brother, James Hayden, all natives of New York City.

Dorothy's radio program, The Irish Drive-In Show, can be heard on car radios each Friday from 6:15 to 8:00 A.M. on station WNWK (105.9 FM).

Grand Marshal Cudahy will be escorted by twelve elected aides, ten from the County Board jurisdictions of the AOH, one from the United Irish Counties Association and one from the Grand Council of Emerald Societies of New York. The twelve aides are:

Al Burke (Manhattan); John Cummings (Bronx); Owen Dorothy (Brooklyn); Alice Jones (Queens); Peter Shaughnessy (Staten Island); Thomas Flynn (Westchester); Patrick Fogarty (Rockland); Patrick J. Doyle (Orange); John Boyle (Nassau); John Mullen (Suffolk); Frank Feighery (United Irish Counties); and Joseph Fitzpatrick (Emerald Societies).

The great day starts with the traditional Mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral with Cardinal John O'Connor as principal celebrant. At 11:30 A.M. Parade Chairman Francis Beirne will blow his whistle and the hundred thousand strong paraders of the 228th St. Patrick's Day Parade will march into history, led by the first "Lady Grand Marshal" Dorothy Hayden Cudahy. It's a safe bet that in contrast to the few names of male marshals the Irish will remember, the name of Grand Marshal Dorothy Hayden Cudahy will never be forgotten.

President's Message

Teachtaineacht an Uachtairin
By Michael J. Coogan, National President

It is now going on six months since our National Convention. I will try to give you a brief update on some of the activities of your National Board.

On January 23rd, the Pro-Life March will be held in Washington, D.C. Your National Pro-Life Chairman, Bill Farrell, has been working hard at assembling the Hibernian contingent for the March. I look forward to seeing many of you in Washington. Doctor Wilke, national chairman of the Right to Life Crusade, has asked the AOH to raise a minimum of $10,000 for the international Right-to-Life. This office is in Rome, and is managed by William Sherwin, from County Cork, Ireland. Any division that donates $100 will be given affiliation with the International Right-to-Life Society. Our goal is to obtain membership from at least 100 divisions. If the Pro-Life Chairman of each division would canvas the membership, I am certain they could raise the $100 without tapping the Division treasury.

John Holland, born in 1841 in County Clare, Ireland, is the inventor of the submarine. He built two, the Holland and the Fenian Ram. Both boats, along with about 10,000 of Holland's personal documents, are located in the back of a museum in Patterson, New Jersey. Because of their condition they cannot be displayed. National Historian Mike McCormack, along with Brothers Joe Sullivan of New Jersey and Jim Gallagher of Connecticut is organizing a committee to raise funds in order to restore these submarines so that they may be displayed. This committee is sponsored, but not necessarily funded, by the AOH. However, any support you can give this worthy cause would be appreciated.

The president of our division in Mobile, Alabama, John P. Commick, has written me that their division is going to place a plaque in the battleship USS Alabama to honor John Barry as father of the U.S. Navy.

Michael Foister is chairing this committee, and has asked me to present the plaque on John Barry Day in September.

Congratulations to National Organizer Tom Gilligan and all of the brothers who helped him organize nine new divisions since July. The new divisions are located in Erie County, New York (2); Philadelphia County, Pennsylvania; Browder County, Florida; and Los Angeles County, California (6). Now is the time for each division to start a membership drive. It is proven that in fraternal organizations you will lose an average of ten percent of your membership each year. If each division president would work toward twenty-five percent growth, you would realize a net increase of fifteen percent. Remember, active divisions attract new members, and new members make active divisions!

In closing, I want to wish everyone a blessed and happy St. Patrick's Day.

THE APPARITION

At about 8 o'clock on the Thursday evening of the 21st August, 1879, the Blessed Virgin Mary, St. Joseph and St. John the Evangelist appeared at the south gable of the church at Knock, County Mayo, Ireland; beside them and a little to the right was an altar with a cross and the figure of a lamb, around which angels hovered. There were fifteen official witnesses to the apparition — young and old. They watched it for two hours in pouring rain and recited the Rosary. Two Commissions of Enquiry accepted their testimony as trustworthy and satisfactory in 1879 and 1936.

Today, Knock ranks among the world's major Marian Shrines, having enjoyed the full approval of the Church for many years. It has received privileges from four Popes. The most recent privilege was the visit of His Holiness, Pope John Paul II, on the 30th September, 1979.

payment penalty $50.00. Single supplement, $20.00 per day.

Alternative Arrangements: Scheduled service is available on Aer Lingus to Shannon or Dublin, air fares from $479.00 plus $13.00 tax, payable in full by February 28. Late payment penalty, $155.00. Also Pan Am service to Shannon. The above tour dates are extendable either way. Please ask for details and for add-on fares from outlying cities.

Car Hire Rate: A special rate of $235.00 (incl. vat) is available from Dan Dooley Rent A Car, for compact car per week. Full rate sheet available on request.

All AOH members and their families and friends are invited to attend the Pilgrimage Ceremonies at Knock on July 1, whether participating in the above tour or not.

To join in the above tour, call your local AOH Division today, or call or write to O'Connors Fairways Travel, 900 Second Ave., New York, NY 10017, Tel. 212-861-0650, or Nationwide, 1-800-288-7609. (Ask for Brian Nolan).

1989 Irish Way Now Open to Applicants

ST PAUL, MN — A group of 150 American teenagers won't be greeted by fireworks when they land in Dublin, Ireland, this 4th of July but they won't mind at all because they will have more than five weeks in Ireland on the annual IRISH WAY summer program still ahead of them.

Sponsored by the Irish American Cultural Institute, a non-profit public foundation which has administered the program since 1976, the IRISH WAY is accepting applications for its 14th year.

A sure sign of the program's success is the impressively large number of the more than 1,400 alumni — nearly one-third — who have had a brother or sister participate in the previous 13 IRISH WAY programs.

The IRISH WAY provides American high school students with a comprehensive introduction to Ireland through a mix of study, travel, a live-in experience with an Irish family, and a variety of cultural, social, and recreational activities. Students are exposed to Irish history, literature, music, sports, and current events.

They see a play at a Dublin theatre, attend a match of Ireland's fast-paced national sport of hurling, dance to jigs and reels at a "ceili" (Irish dance), and play friendly sports matches against Irish teenagers. They also take field trips, live with an Irish family, stay in hotels during a nearly week-long tour, put on their own skits and shows, share a 61-acre campus with a castle and with students from Ireland and other European countries, and more.

The Institute provides some financial aid for the Irish Way program, as do a number of Irish and Irish American groups.

To obtain an application and more information, write IRISH WAY, Irish American Cultural Institute, 2115 Summit Ave., College of St. Thomas (Box 6026), St. Paul, MN 55105, or call (612) 647-5678.

Special Meeting Scheduled for AOH Chaplains

National Board chaplains and all state chaplains of the AOH are asked to come to a special meeting in Beverly, Ohio on Tuesday, April 18, 1989.

Airports serving this city are located in Parkersburg, West Virginia, Columbus, Ohio, and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Individual instructions will be sent to each chaplain in the near future.

Chaplain's Message

Teachtameac An Seipimáca

Rev. Donal O'Carroll, Deputy National Chaplain

My Dear Bishop Drury, Fellow Chaplains and Brother and Sister Hibernians,

The joyous season of Christmas has passed and a sense of new expectations again fills our hearts and minds in anticipation of a bright new year. We again turned our attention to the Judean Hills — to Bethlehem and the still unsettled Holy Land, as God sent his son made of a woman so that we might receive the status of adopted sons. (Galatians 4:4-15).

The realization of the Christmas message was brought home to me in a very real way. It was a new experience for me, a loving insight into what Christmas should be for most Irish men and women. Christmas in our Fatherland is still, thank God, a predominantly religious celebration.

The occasion I write about was a recent Irish concert at Parkersburg, West Virginia, given by Phil Coulter, the master of Irish music, with his accompanying vocalist, Maura O'Connell. I had the great privilege to introduce these good will ambassadors of Irish music and culture from Ireland to the audience.

Phil and his orchestra held their mostly non-Irish audience spellbound all during the first part of the concert; but the best was yet to come in the Christmas theme. Listening to Phil do the Christmas narrative from scriptures and "one solitary life" with musical background, and Maura singing Holy Night, Away In A Manger and Angels We Have Heard On High brought tears to many eyes. Never before at any concert did we feel such a presence and meaning of the Christ child's coming as in that awesome event. What boggles my mind, however, was two of Ireland's most renowned musicians bringing us a real sense of peace. Even when this is still a much-needed entity in Northern Ireland, Phil Coulter told us much about it in one of his theme tunes, The Town He Loves So Well, his native Derry. This was his concluding song.

We Irish men and women seem to be able to respond to the needs of so many other peoples; we are well motivated; full of Christian idealism in helping others. This of course is the Gospel message and we heed it well. However, when it comes to ourselves in dealing with other Irish people we fail so often in putting the motto of our order, Unity, Friendship, and Christian Charity, into practice.

Phil Coulter and Maura brought a Christmas message to Parkersburg, to the hills of West Virginia — the message of peace from the land and people of Ireland, from the broken and divided City of Derry. What did we do this season of Christmas for Derry and the other cities of Northern Ireland? Or for that matter for the broken homes around the Irish countryside bleeding from the immigration of the gifted and the best.

What are we Hibernians doing about the economy of Ireland (all of it); about setting it on a sound and secure footing? What are we doing for the new Irish, the best educated of any country in Europe who, yet, have to come here or go elsewhere for employment.

Many questions are asked and many answers to the problems are given. All have some solution, but to have a solution that will work, that is plausible, is another question.

Did it ever occur to us that Phil Coulter and Maura, in bringing the Peace of Christ to us in music and song, yes and the Christmas message itself, that God has blessed us as a people in our adopted country; that we should be a very, very thankful people. Maybe some of us have to experience the want and pain of others so that we learn to be a thankful people, and to understand our own want and pain.

The message may never come or it may come slowly or partially; we still have hope. But if it does, let us immediately resolve that we are going to pray, even fast, and be reconciled ourselves so that we can then reconcile others.

How about going on our hands and knees and joining others on their hands and knees in prayer — yes, with a special focus on the elimination of an artificial border (so costly to keep) that will probably mean very little after the Euro-Market Enactment in 1992 anyway.

How about joining some of us as we tour Europe next time and going on our knees at Knock, Loughderg (St. Patrick's purgatory), or Fr. Neal Carlin's Columba House in Northern Ireland. And, let's make some visits to other historical spots of interest and take some time to enjoy Irish life and culture. Thus during the coming year, as we practice more resolutely the hallmarks of our Order, Unity, Friendship and Christian Charity, these virtues will begin to flow from us and begin to be part of the understanding of life of the "folks at home" in the land of our birth and our forefathers.

Certainly, if the master of Irish music, Phil Coulter and Maura O'Connell, could bring us such happiness in song and story in a short evening at Parkersburg, West Virginia, can we not return the favor in our "we" prayer and good wishes to the people in "towns we love so well" in the Emerald Isle.

HOLLAND PROJECT. On Jan. 20, National President Mike Coogan and National Director John McInerney met with our Holland Submarine Committee at the Patterson Museum where the two original submarines built by inventor John Holland of Co. We also showed him the file of approximately 10,000 papers, most in Holland's own writing, that are part of the Holland Collection, which we would like to microfilm, document, and make available to historians. We then met with the museum management to discuss the plans and cost factors of such a project. The National President was very impressed with these treasured relics of Irish-

Book Review

NORTHERN IRELAND
The Political Economy of Conflict

By Bob Rowthorn and Naomi Wayne
In this book, Bob Rowthorn and Naomi Wayne provide a clear and incisive analysis of the politics and economy of Northern Ireland, from the partition to the present day. They outline options for the future of the province and argue for the withdrawal of British troops and the reunification of Ireland.

The book focuses on the development of the economy of Northern Ireland, comparing it with economic development in the Irish Republic and the UK. The roles of foreign investment, international trade, and British government subsidies are examined. The authors also analyze the causes and effects of discrimination and inequality, documenting their differential impact on Protestants and Catholics. On the bases of these analyses, they assess the likely consequences of British withdrawal and specify measures that might be taken to minimize violence and improve living standards.

THOMAS DAVIS

Few events in Irish History are as tragic as the death of Thomas Osborne Davis. A rare man, his impact on the history of Ireland has never been truly appreciated.

Born in Cork in 1814, the son of a British Army surgeon, he was educated at Trinity College and called to the Bar in 1838. But Davis heard another call — the call of Ireland. He heard it in the voice of Dan O'Connell when the Great Emancipator visited his home town of Mallow in 1842, and asked a crowd of 400,000, "Where is the coward who would not die for Ireland?" This was a fiery young O'Connell, not the parliamentarian of later years, and he raised the consciousness of the Irish to a new spirit of nationalism. Men like Davis, filled with the fire of that patriotism, joined his cause.

O'Connell however, fell short of the goals he inspired in other men when he opted to negotiate in the Parliamentary arena. Davis, on the other hand, fired by O'Connell's early speeches against the tyranny of England, never changed direction as had his mentor. The young Protestant barrister with two colleagues, Charles Gavan Duffy and John Blake Dillon, founded The Nation, a newspaper that would propagate patriotism and a love for Irish national literature like no other tabloid of its time.

The Nation became a great power whose place in history is that it rekindled the dying flame of Wolfe Tone's nationalist doctrine. Since the abortive risings of 1798, England's suppression of Irish nationalism had all but stamped out the memory of the great Tone and his sacrifice. It was The Nation that revived that sentiment and inspired a lasting tradition, due in no small part to the nationalist writings of Thomas Davis himself.

It is truly written that the bullet of the patriot is soon forgotten while the words of the poet are immortal. Davis was brilliant with words and verse; his poetry captured the nation's imagination. He lionized Ireland's tragic heroes and gave her some of her most inspiring ballads. His style was articulate as well; his American history, and authorized this office to raise funds to assist in publicizing John Holland and his contribution to America. A subscription campaign will shortly be officially underway.

VIDEO HISTORY. As promised, video tapes would be made available to supplement organizing or education efforts. Those presently available are:

a. 1987 dedication of the Thomas J. Clarke Homesite in Manorville, Long Island, by the AOH (Excellent Quality/Color) — $10.

b. Ireland Rediscovered, a series on Irish History by Eoin McKiernan, which was saved from oblivion by the University of Minneapolis Library. The black and white video quality is poor to fair, but the sound is excellent. 12 half-hour programs on 1 six-hour cassette — $15.

MONUMENT SEARCH. State, County and Division historians are urged to document and provide a brief writeup on any Irish monuments, public plaques, or historical sites in their geographical area. Those sent will be mentioned in this column as they are received.

poem The Fate of King Dathi became the model for Tennyson's Charge of the Light Brigade written ten years after Davis' death. His lament for the great Chieftain Owen Roe O'Neill, who was poisoned by a pawn of the English in 1649, seethes with fury:

Did they Dare, Did they dare to slay
Owen Roe O'Neill
Yes they slew with poison him they feared to face with steel.
May God wither up their hearts, may their blood cease to flow,
May they walk in living death, who poisoned Owen Roe.

His memorable poems about Fontenoy, the Clare Dragoons, and Wolfe Tone were on the lips of every Irishman of the age. He drew to his philosophy such talented future leaders as John Mitchel, Speranza, William Smith O'Brien, Michael Doheny, Clarence Mangan, D'Arcy McGee, and Thomas Francis Meagher. His followers became the Young Irelanders, and their impact on history was considerable for they carried Davis's philosophy into the origin of Ireland's greatest nationalist movement — the Fenian Brotherhood. Unfortunately they did so without the master for Thomas Davis, at the young age of 31, succumbed to a fever brought on by an exhausted condition, and he died at his mother's home in Dublin on Sept. 16, 1845.

The death of Davis, the brave young hope of his country, was a greater disaster for Ireland than she has ever realized for he was the bridge between Tone and Stephens; between United Irishmen and Irish Republican Brotherhood. It was he who insured that the nationalism of Tone was not interred with him in that green grave at Bodenstown which Irishmen cherish as their most prized possession.

The only consolation we have is that his songs are with us still. Who has not marvelled at the bold courage displayed in The West's Awake; and who is not moved — to this very day — by the nationalist sentiment in the song he wrote to express his fondest desire — A Nation Once Again.

Ireland is famous for its crystal. Every piece is the product of rare craftsmanship and strict adherence to quality.

The same is true for Budweiser.

We brew our beer with the finest hops, rice, and barley malt. Then we age it with Beechwood, to aid the natural carbonation. The result is a clean, crisp taste that has been distinctively Budweiser's for over one hundred years.

For those who appreciate quality, this Bud's for you:

STATE NEWS: Ohio

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO — On December 10, 1988, Joseph T. Nally Division No. 6 installed new officers for 1989 at its annual Christmas party. Joining the festivities and administering the oath of office were State President Thomas Murphy and State Chaplain Rev. Thomas O'Carroll. The new officers include President Patrick J. Donlin, Vice President Thomas Carney, Treasurer Charles Byrne, Financial Secretary Thomas Durkin, Recording Secretary Robert O'Connell, Sentinel Dennis Jones, Marshal Hugh McLaughlin and Chairman of the Standing Committee David McGuire, Jr. Pictured in the photo from left to right: Father O'Carroll; outgoing president, James Cahill; State President Thomas Murphy and new President Patrick J. Donlin.

DAYTON, OHIO: National President Mike Coogan installs the new officers of John F. Kennedy Division 1, Montgomery County. The ceremony followed Mass at St. Joseph's Church, with dinner served in the Club Room. New officers are President Thomas Roach, Vice President Bernard McGovern, Recording Secretary John Mulhern, Financial Secretary Frederick Kelley, Treasurer James Kelly, Marshal James Combo, Sentinel Patrick Dunnigan, and Standing Committee Chairman John G. Kiley.

NAVY SALUTE: The U.S. Naval Reserve salutes "The Sullivans." Their courageous spirit serves as an enduring inspiration to all veterans who have fought to defend our great nation. Albert, the only married brother, was survived by his wife and son James.

WATERLOO, IOWA: The home town of the five Sullivan Brothers gave still more recognition last November to the courage and ultimate sacrifice the men made in defense of their country. In ceremonies surrounding the rededication of the Civic Center in honor of the Sullivans, the local AOH Five Sullivan Brothers Division 1 played a major part. The National Hibernian Board was represented by President Michael Coogan.

Following an open house at K of C Council 700, on November 10, a reception was held at the Civic Center for the many dignitaries and committee members involved in the dedication programs. Coogan was presented with a key to the city by the president of the Ambassadors of the Waterloo Chamber of Commerce.

At the dinner and program which followed, two of the five surviving members of the USS Juneau were present and honored: Lt. Cmdr. Lester Zook and Wyatt Butterfield. Chairman of the committee and master of ceremonies was Edward J. Gallaher, Jr., attorney, and brother Hibernian.

Still to come in the celebration was a Mass, parade and ceremony the following day. Site of the Mass was the home parish and school of the Sullivan brothers, St. Mary's. Celebrant was Rev. Donald Hayes, a boyhood friend of the Sullivans, who is now the pastor. Bishop William Franklin and Frs. Clarence Raker and Robert Hilmer were also in attendance.

The parade began from the Sullivan Brothers Memorial Park, led by the Great Lakes, Illinois, Navy Band, followed by high school bands and floats, veteran organizations, as well as boy scouts and school groups of the community. A drill team from Great Lakes and a Navy Jazz Band performed, to the delight of the onlookers.

Prominent in the parade was AOH Five Sullivan Brothers Division 1, carrying the Irish and "Erin Go Brae" flags. The division preceded National President Coogan riding in a restored Model A Ford, owned and driven by brother Jim McElmeel. President Coogan greeted the crowds standing in the rumble seat of the car, followed by several Hibernians, including Division President Larry Duggan. All were wearing navy issue "USS the Sullivans—DD-537" caps. The DD-537 is on display at the Buffalo and Erie County Naval and Servicemen's Park in Buffalo, N.Y.

After the parade a 21-gun salute was presented by a local Marine and Naval Reserve Unit followed by taps by Columbus High School bugler, Keri Ludwig. The dedication services were held inside the Civic Center at which Michael Coogan, the first speaker, gave a short talk on Irish participation in all the wars in which America fought.

With Your Help 'Irish Television Chicago' Aspires To 'Irish Television America'

It's been a long time coming," smiles Tom Looney, Executive Producer of a new television show seen in Chicago and its suburbs. "The Irish community in America, in spite of the tremendous contributions it has made to the growth and prosperity of this country, has been without any real source of televised programming in the past. It's our aim to bridge the gap."

And to reach out to the entire country with a little help from The Ancient Order of Hibernians.

The show, Irish Television Chicago, made its debut last May and has steadily gained in popularity as more Chicagoans tune in. A magazine format, hour-long adventure in Irish news, sports, and entertainment, the show airs on cable television and currently reaches over 300,000 homes.

The fast-paced show not only features the best of Ireland's musical talents with groups like The Furey Brothers and Davey Arthur, Patrick Street, The Wolfstones, and The Dublin City Ramblers; it covers the gamut of Irish life segueing quickly from items like a report on shark fishing off the coast of Mayo, to an interview with an 84-year-old Irish step dancer (complete with a surprisingly impressive demonstration), to coverage of the Young Scientists' Exhibition in Dublin, to a stroll through Yeats country.

A recent show, one that aired on December 26th, St. Stephen's Day, featured a young local boy reciting the Wren Day drohling. The five minute segment resulted in a flood of nostalgic and appreciative mail and phone calls from viewers.

"We want to combine the elements of excitement and tradition," declares Looney. "We want the show to be so interesting and attractive that the general population, as well as the Irish American community, will tune in, give us an hour of their time, and let Irish Television America show them the real Ireland."

"The only view of Ireland most Americans see on a regular basis is coverage of the strife in the North. We'd like to show American viewers the Ireland that we know."

A Clare man himself, Looney is no stranger to taking risks and winning. He formed Cablecom Corporation in 1973 and assisted in the design and construction of one of the largest Catholic Television Networks in the United States, CTN/C of Chicago. Cablecom went on to design, install, and maintain one of the largest private cable distribution systems in the country. When Cablecom sold most of its cable-related assets to TCI/Chicago Cable Television in 1987, Looney was intrigued by the possibility of Irish television in America.

After working on the technical end of cable television for over twenty years, Looney admits that never in his wildest dreams did he ever think he'd find himself in front of the camera as a host. "Especially with such charming co-hosts," he grins. His guest co-hosts, past and future, include Elizabeth Coghlan, the 1988 Chicago St. Patrick's Day Queen; Larna Canoy, the 1987 International Rose of Tralee; and Jean Michael Conroy, the 1988 Chicago Rose of Tralee.

"Our problem now," says Looney, "is to get the show out to the rest of the country. We're set to hook-up for satellite distribution, but persuading cable systems and individual cable operators to pick up the show is going to require a real grass roots kind of effort. We're letting the public know what we've got and asking concerned Irish Americans across the country to help us convince cable operators to give Irish Television a chance."

"After all," Looney adds, "the more than 47 million Americans who are of some Irish extraction represent a market with quite a bit of potential."

According to Looney, because he has several key elements already in place, a national satellite hook-up could become a reality very quickly. That means if a cable operator in Boston or L.A., for example, agrees to pick up and re-broadcast the show, Boston or L.A. cable viewers could be watching updates on Gaelic football, a look at the changing Irish economy, or a video tour of the Galway area within a short period of time.

"If members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians can aid us in just getting the initial contact information for their local cable operators and systems, we'll be months closer to providing them with Irish programming."

Sitting on the set of Irish Television, in a modest studio on Chicago's north side, Looney takes a break from the grueling schedule that he and his fledgling production company maintain. "This is much more than entertainment, although it certainly is that. Irish Television America is a way for the Irish here to have an instant voice on both the local and national level in the American community, and the show is the beginning of a new source of pride and support for those who wish to see that Irish culture and tradition is not only remembered, but flourishes and becomes vital on both sides of the Atlantic."

STATE NEWS: Illinois

President John McGuire of Chicago's John F. Kennedy AOH Div. 59 recently named State Representative John McNamara "Man of the Year." Representative McNamara was honored for his leadership and dedication, resulting in enactment of the Illinois MacBride Principles bill.

Chicago's Div. 59 is a booming, exciting organization under the leadership of President John McGuire. Realizing that to attract new members one must have significant and ennobling goals, and that goals are achievable only through sufficient membership, John has concentrated on both simultaneously. Prospective members are advised, with good reason, that Div. 59 is the fastest-growing Irish-American organization in Illinois and is a leader in the following:

1) The Illinois Free-Doherty campaign.

2) The Pro-Life campaign.

3) The campaign for clemency for Robert John MacBride.

4) Congressional review of the International Fund for Ireland.

5) Support of the Ad Hoc Committee for Irish Affairs.

Div. 59 will resume work for immigration reform once IIRM presents its new strategies.

The Christmas Party was the most successful yet. Santa Mike Noonan's basso "Ho Ho Ho's" enchanted adults and children alike. Chief merriment-maker was Chaplain Tony Barrett, from Bangor-Erris, Co. Mayo via Kenya; a newly-minted Ph.D. in linguistic anthropology from the University of Chicago.

Recent election results are as follows:

President John McGuire; Vice-President Anthony Noonan; Recording Secretary Connie Sullivan; Financial Secretary Frank Brown; Treasurer Martin McDonnell; Chairman of the Standing Committee John Buckley Jr.; Marshal Eamonn Gaughan; Sentinel Francis Gorey; Chaplain Rev. Tony Barrett; Historian Dan Corcoran; Organizer Dan Curran; Chairman of Charity and Mission Funds, Tony Noonan; Chairman of Catholic Action Kevin Cahill; Chairman of the Freedom-For-All-Ireland committee Tom Healy; Liaison Officer Chris Fogarty.

President McGuire, a youthful leader in Illinois, will resume his organizational efforts upon his return from Bush's inauguration. While in D.C. he will visit our political representatives to press for action on our concerns.

STATE NEWS: New Jersey

Somerset County's St. Patrick Division recently elected new officers for 1989: William T. Cooper, president; Dennis J. Smyth, vice president; Patrick J. Mulrooney, recording secretary; John E. Hoey, Sr., financial secretary; Peter J. O'Neill, treasurer; and Brian P. Rogan, marshal. The new officers were sworn in by Edwin Cosgrove, New Jersey AOH State President at a special reception for new division members.

This AOH division was organized in 1983 through the efforts of its first president, Thomas J. Lavin. The division has been very active in Irish cultural events both within and outside New Jersey and with the Irish Immigration Reform Movement.

The Hibernians have been sponsoring ceili (Irish folk) dancing lessons since 1984. Ceili lessons are free; those interested should contact Dennis Smyth at (201)968-8667. They also sponsor intermediate and advanced Irish language classes (contact J. Ken O'Brien (201)231-1695; and tin whistle classes (contact P. Joe Mulrooney (201)725-1956).

NEW OFFICERS of St. Patrick Div. 1, Somerset County, NJ, left to right, Recording Secretary Patrick J. Mulrooney, Financial Secretary John E. Hoey, Sr., Marshal Brian P. Rogan, Vice President Dennis J. Smyth, and President William T. Cooper are congratulated by New Jersey State AOH President Edwin Cosgrove. Missing due to the untimely death of his father, is Treasurer Peter J. O'Neill.

N.J. Division Leads Drive to Donate Irish Books to Library

James J. Howard Div. AOH
So. Toms River, NJ 08757

Most Worthy President,

We are writing to inform you of a most exciting project our Division has championed and has actively encouraged all other Irish organizations in Ocean County, NJ, to support.

We have noted that our county library system has a severe lack of books on Ireland, its history, culture, politics and the vast contributions the Irish people have made in the building of this great nation, America. Our Division resolved to commence a book drive to correct this situation by purchasing hardcover books for donation to our library system. Our Division members have reached out to every Irish organization within Ocean County and successfully gained their active support and participation. We are pleased to inform you that all Irish groups in our area are united in a common cause to insure that future generations of Irish-Americans and all those within our area have adequate resources available to discover the richness of Ireland's history, heritage and culture. When the Irish are united and working together nothing can halt the progress we can make. We hope to be able to place between 150 to 200 books regarding Ireland in our county library system. Such a contribution would give the Ocean County library one of the finest Irish collections in the state of New Jersey.

In addition to contributions from the various Irish groups we have developed a press release and a fund-raising letter which is to be sent to each member of the Irish groups, civic leaders and other community groups within our county. We are also willing to receive donations of hardcover books from any individual's personal collection. The response to date has been most encouraging.

We must also take this opportunity to thank Brothers McNabb and McCormack for the work they have done to aid us. The Brothers named have given us many contacts for the purchase of Irish books.

We encourage other Divisions to consider embarking upon similar projects within their own communities. The Order has always been actively concerned about the furtherance of Irish culture and history. Wherever a Division is organized the AOH should see to it that the local library contains adequate books on Ireland. Such a project is also a service to the various communities in which we live, a fact that is usually not ignored by the local press.

Enclosed please find a copy of our fund raising letter.

We would appreciate any help or advice you or any other Brothers can give us. We are having considerable difficulty in finding hardcover or clothbound books regarding the situation in British Occupied North-east Ireland. We are most concerned that our library system contain a good collection on the present struggle of the Irish people for freedom.

We would be most willing to offer our advice and aid to any other Division that may wish to undertake a similar project.

STATE NEWS: Pennsylvania

On January 7 a State Board meeting was held at the Holiday Inn in Carlisle. Fourteen brother members traveled from all parts of Pennsylvania in very inclement weather. Presiding was State President Ronald Bryan, assisted by State Vice President Vincent Scully; State Secretary Daniel Deasy and State Treasurer David W. Fleming. Also in attendance were Allegheny County President David O'Connor, Lackawanna County President Robert Coleman, Philadelphia County President Patrick Mulrooney, St. John Neumann 11 Division President John Bonner, Black Jack Kehoe Division President Michael Williams, along with Tony Mielecki. Also representing St. John Neumann 11 was Joseph Clark. Representing John F. Kennedy Division 1 were State Chairman of Missions and Charities Paul Finnerty, Treasurer Joseph Murrin and John Kane.

A program has begun in the state to help raise funds for the retirement of Catholic nuns and the Christian brothers, along with financial support of the Parochial School system. All three projects, when you think about it, are woven into one. If you can remember when you were young and had a Parochial education, it was the good nuns and the Christian brothers who gave us that education in a Parochial school. Now their day has come. It has been reported that some nuns are homeless, and the pension fund for the Christian brothers exhausted, and the closing of Parochial schools a frequent occurrence.

Allegheny County reports they will have their annual County Board John F. Kennedy Memorial Mass and Communion breakfast on Sunday, March 5, 1989. The breakfast

PRESIDENT BOB COLEMAN, Division 2, Carbondale, PA, presents checks to Sister Marian Denise Walsh, left, of the St. Joseph Center, Scranton, and Mrs. Diane Keller, United Cerebral Palsy, Scranton. will be at Duranti's Park Plaza, following 9:00 A.M. Mass in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Philadelphia County reports that the annual St. Patrick's Day parade will be held on Sunday, March 12, 1989. Divisions and other Irish organizations from Southeast Pennsylvania are invited.

John F. Kennedy Division 1 held its installation of officers on November 5, 1988 and the following officers were installed by State President Ronald Bryan: President Bruce Cunningham, Vice-President Tom Kerrigan, Recording Secretary John Kane, Financial Secretary Robert Roche, Treasurer Joseph Murrin, Chairman Standing Committee Thomas O'Malley and Sentinel William Osborne.

Division 1 Bucks County hosted the Round Tower Degree Team from Kings County N.Y. on October 16, 1988. Fifty-eight brothers received their major degrees in the ceremony held at the division home in Bristol.

All divisions are urged to send information to John Kane, 2731 Pittsford Ave., Scranton, PA 18505.

STATE NEWS: Massachusetts

On Saturday evening, October 15, 1988 National Vice President Michael Carroll was honored at a testimonial given by Division 36 of Worcester at their home, the Irish Club. National, State, County and Division officers were in attendance along with members from throughout the great state of Massachusetts. To a standing room only crowd, Vice President Carroll expressed thanks for their attendance and noted that it was a night that he and his family would long remember.

On Sunday, October 16 Bill Farrell, National Chairman of the AOH Right to Life Committee, along with various State Officers from the mens and ladies State Boards led a large delegation of members from throughout the state of Massachusetts in the Right to Life March held in Boston. Well over 7,000 marchers participated in this event. Brother Farrell hopes to lead a large delegation of Hibernians to Washington, D.C. in January for the National Right to Life March.

In November the Massachusetts State Board held their first annual Sweepstakes for the benefit of their charities fund at the home of Division 14 in Watertown.

Divisions across Massachusetts are now in the process of electing officers for the upcoming year. Early returns show that the status quo will prevail in many Divisions with veteran officers returning for another year of service.

On the Division front, the following events are noted: Division 1, Newburyport, held an Irish Party in October at Salisbury Beach and their annual turkey raffle in late November. Division 36, Worcester, continued their weekly entertainment and meat raffles at their Division Home. North Attleboro Division 1 enjoyed a dance to the music of Noel Henry's Band in November and their annual Christmas party in December. Division 8, Lawrence, was pleased with the results of their annual Shamrock Sweepstakes held in November, and their annual family members Christmas party.

Fifty-Year Members

FIVE MEMBERS OF DIVISION 10, Lynn, MA, were honored for attaining 50 years of membership in their division. They are John McWalters, Walter Cuffe, Sr., Joseph Keaney, John Finn and John Richardson. Citations were presented by local, state and national dignitaries. Division 10 presented each with a cap, a clock, and a 50-year pin. Each honoree spoke of what Hibernianism has meant to him through the years. Present were National Director Mike Carroll, Mass. State President William Sullivan, Essex County President Jack Hatch, State Chaplain Fr. James Champion, Division Chaplain Msgr. John Carroll, Mayor of Lynn, Albert Divigilio, State Senators Walter Boverini and Francis Doris, State Congressman Nicholas Mavroulas represented by his aide Pat Carney. Pictured above seated is Joseph Keaney, a past division president; and from left, standing, Joseph Kidney, who was master of ceremonies, John McWalters, Walter Cuffe, Sr., William Sullivan, and Fr. James Champion.

Watertown Charities

WATERTOWN, MA — At a recent AOH Division 14 reception, the Mass. State Board presented checks totalling $4500 to four charities. Pictured is the grant to the AOH National Fund for Dependents of Political Prisoners in North Ireland, administered through the National Freedom for All Ireland Committee. At center is State Board President William Sullivan, presenting a check to AOH Past President John P. Connolly, who accepted on behalf of Martin Higgins, National FFAI chairman. Looking on, at left, is State Board Treasurer David R. Burke, and at right, State Board FFAI-Immigration Chairman John J. Meehan, Jr. Others presented checks were the Boston Irish Pastoral Center, an outreach program to undocumented Irish in Boston; the Cancer Research Unit of St. Anne's Hospital in Dublin, Ireland; and the Irish Way Scholarship Program, St. Paul, MN. An additional $4000 will be donated to other charities in the near future. Funds are drawn from a highly successful fund raising program of the Mass. State Board.

LOCAL CLERGY of Greater Lynn, MA, were honored by AOH Division 10. Speakers at the event included National Vice President Mike Carroll, covering the National Convention, the Notre Dame Scholarship Fund and the new goal for the Catholic University Fund. Division President Joseph Kidney highlighted the division's charities, and with Ladies President Ellen Sanderson, offered membership to the clergy present. Remarks were also offered by State President Bill Sullivan, Mass. Ladies State President Mary Dolan, State Chaplain Fr. James Champion, Essex Co. President Jack Lawless, and LAOH President Maryellen Pellitier. They are pictured above, left to right, first row, Fr. James Champion, Ellen Sanderson, Mary Dolan, Mike Carroll, Maryellen Pellitier. Second row, Joseph Kidney, James Gately, vice president Div. 10; David Johnsen, chairman of event; Fr. Dan Bowen, former both Mass. state chaplain and deputy national chaplain; and Bill Sullivan.

STATE NEWS: Rhode Island

Testimonial Held for William J. McEnery

More than 400 friends, associates and family members joined in a recent tribute to Past National AOH President William J. McEnery at an Early Retirement dinner-dance sponsored by the AOH Wm. J. McEnery Division 12 of Providence, held at the 1025 Club in Johnston, R.I. Bill left the Providence Journal Company as Personnel Administrator after 40 years of dedicated service.

Bill served the AOH as National President in 1964-66 and is currently the AOH State President.

Gov. Edward D. DiPrete said in part in his proclamation

"WHEREAS, Bill McEnery has been with the Providence Journal for some forty years, most currently serving as Personnel Administrator, and has also written the Veteran's Column for the past thirty-seven years and will continue to do so in the future; and

WHEREAS, Bill McEnery is a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, of which he previously served as the youngest National President in the one hundred and fifty-two year history of the organization, being elected at the age of thirty-four, and currently is the State AOH President; and

WHEREAS, Bill McEnery, father of Joan, Eileen, Dennis, and Dr. Kevin, and lifelong resident of Providence, Rhode Island, has earned the deep respect and admiration of his colleagues for the dedication and professionalism he has continually displayed; in the state of Rhode Island and call on all citizens to join me in congratulating this remarkable man on the occasion of his Early Retirement, and wishing him a happy, healthy, future. . . ."

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Edward D. DiPrete, Governor of the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, Do Hereby Proclaim

Rt. Rev. Msgr. Salvatore R. Matano, Vicar of Administration Co-Chancellor, read messages of congratulations from the Most Rev. Louis E. Gelineau, Bishop of Providence; the Most Rev. Kenneth A. Angell, Auxiliary Bishop of Providence and the Most Rev. Daniel P. Reilly, Bishop of Norwich. Monsignor Matano said in part,

"You are a man of high moral character and a man of great faith; faith in God and faith in His Church. You have exemplified this faith in your dedicated service to the Ancient Order of Hibernians and I am sure that you will devote even more time to your charitable works. You have been an example to all who have known you. You are a true Catholic gentleman of whom we are all proud. . . ."

The national AOH and LAOH were represented at the testimonial by National Vice President Michael Carroll, National Ladies President Mary E. Bradley and the Rev. George B. McCarthy, LAOH Deputy National Chaplain and State AOH Chaplain. Among the AOH guests from outside the state were Past National President John P. Connolly, National Buy Irish Chairman David Burke, Massachusetts LAOH President Mary E. Dolan and Deputy Director of Public Relations Dick Hickson. The Providence Journal Company was represented by Howard G. Sutton, vice-president-Administration and John C.A. Walkins, Chairman emeritus and retired Publisher and President. Richard Reynolds, retired Journal Sports Editor, was master of ceremonies. Patrick J. Fallon, skipper of the WRIB Irish Showboat, was chairman with Joseph E. Fanning, treasurer and Norbert B. Stamps, secretary, assisted by members of Division 12.

Citations and resolutions were presented at the event by Rep. Irving H. Levin from the House of Representatives; Sen. Victoria Lederberg from the Rhode Island Senate; Att. Gen. James E. O'Neil and State Treasurer-elect Anthony J. Solomon. Certificates and plaques

The outgoing leader has served as chairman of the house committee, vice president two years and president two years. While his accomplishments might go unnoticed by many members, Molloy's common sense and untiring work have left the division in a stable and solvent condition, for which all members express appreciation.

STATE NEWS: Texas

Jim Foley — Grand Marshal

HOUSTON, TEXAS — Jim Foley, Houston Rockets radio broadcaster who has been involved with the parade since 1973, has been named Grand Marshal of the 30th Annual Houston St. Patrick's Day Parade. The parade is set for downtown Houston on Saturday, March 11, at 10 A.M. A unique blend of the many cultures of Houston, the parade, believed to be the largest of its kind west of the Mississippi River.

in that city where in the late 1940's the local government was turned over to the Irish for St. Patrick's Day. With authority to levy fines for indiscretions such as not wearing green, the Irish raised funds to help the poor of the area. Foley's late father, John, served as honorary Irish mayor for several years and later was elected the real mayor for a four-year term in 1973. Mr. Foley died on St. Patrick's Day in 1984, while Foley's mother remains in LaSalle. This year's Grand Marshal's great-grandfather, John, was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, in 1838 and came to the United States in 1857, settling in LaSalle at that time.

A member of the Dick Dowling Division of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and of St. Teresa's Parish, Foley has served as Master of Ceremonies at many Irish events, including the St. Patrick's Day Queen Contest for 15 years. He and his wife of twenty years, Carolyn, reside in Houston's Memorial area.

Texans Launch MacBride Effort

An Ad Hoc committee met in San Antonio, Texas, to coordinate a campaign to legislate the MacBride principles into law. The Committee was formed by the Irish American Unity Conference and the AOH. Mr. James Delaney and James Brown, both from San Antonio, were selected co-chairmen of the Committee. Mr. Kevin O'Connell of Austin was appointed legislative liaison and will coordinate the bill's progress and enactment at the State Capital. Mr. Patrick Patton of Houston was appointed Public Relations chairman and will be spokesman for the committee. Mr. Delaney will coordinate budget and finance activities for the committee and lobby support. Mr. Brown will direct the grassroots campaign throughout the state.

THE FRENCH IN MAYO AND THE FICKLE IRISH WEATHER

The visiting tourist sightseeing in Ballina, in the County Mayo, may pause and look in the center of the town at the imposing statue commemorating liberty and honoring the French and Irish soldiers, led by General Jean Joseph Amable Humbert, who fought the forces under British General Cornwallis (of Yorktown fame) in the year 1798.

Until recently, little was known of the men who fought and marched through Mayo during the "Rising of '98". A great story it is, indeed.

On August 22, 1798 General Humbert landed his force of 1,100 men at Kilcummin Strand on the Head of Kilcummin, which juts seaward between Lackan Bay and Killala Bay on the north coast of Mayo. Humbert's force marched the 14 miles to Ballina, where he was joined by several thousand Irish volunteers. With Killala and Ballina captured, off they marched to do battle at Castlebar, where a numerically superior English army was defeated in spectacular fashion. This battle became known in history as "The Castlebar Races," describing the rapid retreat of the Redcoats.

Unfortunately for the French-Irish fighters, General Cornwallis collected and grouped his many regiments of English and Scottish soldiers and advanced on the rebel-invaders. Humbert's force was driven from Castlebar in September and was doggedly pursued to Foxford and Swinford in Mayo; to Collooney in Sligo; and on to the towns of Dromahair, Drumkeeran, Drumshanbo, Carrick, and Cloone—all in Leitrim. Finally, Cornwallis forced their surrender at Ballinacorney in County Longford.

Cornwallis was not only stung by the defeat at Castlebar, but also carried the shame of his defeat by the Yankees in the American Colonies. He knew well that many of the Yankee soldiers were Irish born. He was determined to never again suffer disgrace in battle.

When Thomas Flanagan published his novel The Year Of The French in 1979, interest in the "Rising of '98" was renewed and the historical events of the Franco-Irish entente were brought to light. The fame of Theobald Wolfe Tone and James Napper Tandy was rekindled in the pages of this epic, historic novel, and the tragedy of the Irish recruits who fought with Humbert was retrieved from the dim pages of Irish history. All the Irish patriots were executed and the tragedy of the Irish recruits who fought with Humbert was retrieved from the dim pages of Irish history.

As usual, in the way of the Irish rebellions, the people were not a bit interested in the politics and the military maneuvering. The reason, in 1798, was the pitiful poverty of the Irish peasants—and most Irish were peasants in those days. Hungry farmers were not concerned with the niceties of revolutionary ideology. Jean Louis Jobit, one of Humbert's captains, wrote in his diary: "One thing which surprised us greatly was the extreme poverty we encountered everywhere. Never before had I seen a more wretched country; the men, women, and children go about hungry and half-naked with no shelter other than their poor, cramped little huts which do little to protect them from the ravages of weather."

It is ironic that the root causes of the "Rising of '98", poverty and despair, were, in fact, the reasons the people could not, in their helplessness, rise up and support the rebels.

A frightful storm prevented the first French expedition (6,000 strong) from landing at Bantry Bay in 1796. Wolfe Tone, on board one of the French ships of line recorded in his diary: "England has not had such an escape since the Spanish Armada of 1558, and that expedition, like ours, was defeated by the weather." Two years later the landing force at Killala was understrength for the scale of its mission and was doomed to eventual defeat.

In Wexford, under Father John Murphy, the rebel Irish struck the British hard and fought bravely. Father Murphy was killed at the head of his column while charging forward with his pikemen. Many other uprisings and skirmishes were successful for a brief time during the summer of 1798. If Humbert's landing had resulted in a successful campaign; had the storm of 1796 not occurred—the politics of the early 1800's may have taken a more favorable turn. At the time, Ireland had a population of 8.5 million. It was the most densely populated country in Europe for its size. Unfortunately, the "Rising of '98" brought misery, slavery, occupation and torture down on the already suffering people and started the massive emigration phenomenon which continued unabated for the next 100 years.

PASS BY OLD IRELAND

The gray castle stones weathered, cracked, crumbled down. Aged monuments on parade left over from the olden times. Skeletal remains of historic grandeur enduring silently.

Stone cottages tumbled in on forgotten lives. Forever a barrow of sires dust. The shroud of mossy green a timeless tapestry.

The graceful mistle thrush skims the waving ferns. Searching the sacred spots and grassy mounds. Dips quickly for a morsel from the lichens. The traveler pauses ever seeking a Celtic link. The past is always here not much else. Old Ireland, dear old Ireland is passing by.

Maryland Division Invests in Children

ANNAPOLIS, MD — Officers of the Commodore John Barry Division, AOH, were installed at the division's Christmas Party held at the Radisson Annapolis Hotel in December. The Division continues to invest its energies in promoting and supporting the local and international efforts of the Children's Friendship Project for Northern Ireland. This project brings together Catholic and Protestant children from strife-torn areas of Northern Ireland to the U.S. where they spend the summer with American families as well as with one another in a non-confrontational environment.

Nat'l Organizer Announces Year-Long Membership Drive

Since leaving the National Convention in July, the organizing team has been established and hard at work. To date we have new Divisions in Florida, New York, Maryland and California. Reports indicate that future Divisions are forming in Oklahoma, Wyoming, and possibly South Carolina. As you read this report, the state of Louisiana will be back in the ranks of the AOH, with the possibility of two Divisions.

The National Convention stressed the importance of building membership not only through new Divisions, in locations where none currently exist, but also through the existing Divisions. To stimulate the growth of existing Divisions, I am pleased to announce a year-long membership campaign especially for that purpose. The entire year of 1989 will be used to compile the figures that will result in an award at the National Convention. This award will be presented to the Division President whose Division has the highest number of new members; another award will be given to the Division that has the highest percent increase for the duration of the contest. To determine the winners we will use the form 9 filed in 1989 and 1990.

Several other new areas are currently being explored that will aid all Divisions and will lead to more visibility for our grand and noble Order. This includes, but will not be limited to, paid advertising in certain areas of the country. Rather than a shotgun approach, which I used effectively in 1984-1986, we will use a selective approach. Targeting certain areas and working them to the fullest extent to establish strong leads that will eventually lead to the establishment of new Divisions.

In the near future we hope to implement a monthly article of current events and topics that will be sent as a press release to various Catholic newspapers. These articles will address issues that we are currently working on in various parts of the country. It is hoped that they will provoke readers' interest, prompting them to explore membership in our Order.

In order for the next two years to be productive every member must be a part of the organizing team and work towards bringing in new members. In a few short weeks we will be at the peak of Irish awareness, and we must take advantage of that. In the spring and summer we have many festivals available to inform people of our Order; displays and other publicity items are available for your use.

Please Become Involved In This Organizing Effort... Every Member Is On The Organizing Team! Your Suggestions Are Always Welcomed.

In Florida MacBride Principles Effort Obtains Major Endorsement

National Director Thomas E. Gilligan of Florida reports that in his state the MacBride Principles have received the endorsement of Catholic Charities USA. Gilligan reports that through the efforts of Helen Gorman, a Director of Catholic Charities in the Archdiocese of Miami, we were able to obtain this important endorsement.

Gilligan met Helen Gorman while working the bill to a successful passage in Florida. "Helen was a terrific supporter and a key player in the passage of the bill in Florida. Her many contacts with religious leaders of other faiths, as well as her contacts in the other dioceses of Florida played an important part in our success," Tom explained. He went on to report that Helen is also concerned and active in other important activities such as immigration reform, and the undocumented, especially the Irish.

"This should help those states still working the bill, and provide yet another group of people to help towards successful passage," said Gilligan. Those states currently working the bill are encouraged to contact their local Catholic Charities to seek assistance and support.

SUPPORT FOR THE MACBRIDE PRINCIPLES

Whereas: The Catholic Church in the United States has long been in the forefront of fair employment practices and has led the way against discrimination of any kind; and

Whereas: American monies, including pension plans, are invested in companies in Northern Ireland; and

Whereas: Discrimination in employment opportunity in Northern Ireland is perhaps the most significant contributing factor to the growing strife and violence in the area; and

Whereas: It is generally recognized that Catholics in Northern Ireland suffer from discrimination insofar as they are denied access to regional employment; and

Whereas: The MacBride Principles:

- Increase representation of individuals from underrepresented religious groups in the work force including managerial, supervisory, administrative, clerical, and technical jobs;

- Provide for adequate security for the protection of minority employees, both at the work place and while traveling to and from work;

- Ban provocative religious or political emblems from the work place;

- Require all hiring to be publicly advertised.

- Develop training programs that will prepare substantial numbers of current minority employees for skilled jobs, including the expansion of existing programs and the creation of new programs to train, upgrade, and improve the skills of minority employees;

- Establish procedures to assess, identify, and actively recruit minority employees with potential for further advancement;

- Provide for the appointment of a senior management staff member to oversee the company's affirmative action efforts and the settings up of timetables to carry out affirmative action principles.

Therefore, be it resolved that:

1. Catholic Charities USA express its opposition to economic and social injustice by supporting the MacBride Principles; and

2. That Catholic Charities USA encourage its membership to support to the fullest extent, by written communication to their state legislators or city officials, legislation that would have the effect of adoption of the MacBride Principles by states and cities in which such action is pending; and

3. That Catholic Charities USA encourage its membership to support to the fullest extent, by written communication to their senators and representatives, "The Northern Ireland Fair Employment Act" (SB 229 and HB 722) which is now before the United States Congress, sponsored by Senator Alphonse D'Amato (R-N.Y.) and Congressman Hamilton Fish, (R-N.Y.) with 75 co-sponsors.

Vocations: A Call to Serve!

The world has become so overwhelmingly materialistic that I am afraid we are heading for a great fall. Our church will be there to help us back to our feet; but will our church have enough clergy to minister to our need?

The need for vocations to religious life is serious and grows daily. Our priests, nuns, brothers and dedicated laity, the backbone of our spiritual and educational well-being are hard pressed in trying to reach out to the Christian community. Many areas of our own nation suffer a decreased ministry because of a lack of men and women in service to Christ.

I remember my Catholic education and I am thankful for the nuns and brothers who took the time from their lives to educate me. It is a debt I cannot really repay; but I can help other Catholic boys and girls by trying to encourage increased vocations to religious life.

My education was not free, although it didn't cost me anything. The people in my parish and throughout our archdiocese paid for it with their hard-earned nickles, dimes and dollars. Those little weekly envelopes so faithfully used, paid my way and paid the way of thousands upon thousands of my brothers and sisters.

Now it's our turn to serve our Holy Church by asking our children and grandchildren to seriously consider a life of service to our Almighty Father. What vocation could be more honored or successful? What career can offer as much reward as the religious life offers? We tend to measure success by money and prestige in today's world; but we had better start thinking about the eternal world we seek as Christians and make some real effort to restock the vineyards that Jesus has planted for our salvation.

Financial success has its place, but it should not be the yardstick of our station in life. We can't throw money at a broken heart or a troubled soul. We certainly need money to pay for vocations; so I don't deny its value and if we use money for good then it can help spread the Gospel and aid those of our world who have need of it.

Success can also be measured by serving the Lord, and assuring the Drive Against Irish Defamation Continues

St. Patrick's Day will soon be upon us. Throughout this great land we will witness the normal display of St. Patrick's Day cards with some despicable reference to the Irish as stupid and drunkards. Some will involve sex and smut; some will display the true meaning of March 17, a Holy day, a day of worship and celebration honoring the patron Saint of Ireland.

The past number of years the AOH has protested the production and display of these degrading cards. It is my understanding that Bro. Bill LeFevers of Kansas City has been in constant contact with Hallmark Card Co., with great success in changing their cards to a religious format effective 1990. They work one year in advance, therefore they could not change the 1989 production. Other card companies will produce and display demeaning cards. We must continue to filter the many stores and places cards are for sale. If we find any cards offensive, we must ask the establishment to please remove such negative and slanderous cards from their display. If necessary, purchase these cards and forward them to this office for further action.

I wish to thank Bro. Randy Lynch, chairman, Public Relations, New York State Board and Brother Joseph Kidney, Mass. Anti-Defamation Chairman, for their interest and concern in continuing the effort to protest these blatantly defamatory cards.

St. Patrick cards are not our only concern. We should be on the lookout for organizations using the "Irish" for fund raising opportunity. This office is investigating a promotional gimmick from a West Coast group requesting contributions benefiting a cancer fund. A $10.00 contribution will entitle you to four chances to win a $5,000.00 "Irish Sweepstake." Are these promotions legitimate? These types of schemes must be investigated as well as the cards.

We in Texas wish you and yours a Holy and Joyous St. Patrick's Day.

Notre Dame Fund Now Over $300,000

George J. Clough, Jr., National Legal Counsel and National Chairman of the Notre Dame Hibernian Fund has just released the Annual Report of the Fund. The Fund has now exceeded the $300,000 mark. The amount is the largest sum ever raised by the Order.

During the present school year nine sons and daughters of members are receiving scholarship assistance from the fund while attending the University of Notre Dame. Over 25 students have received help.

This year the annual Hibernian lecture was given by Dr. Timothy Meagher. Each year the fund makes available a Hibernian Research Grant to a post doctoral scholar for work in the area of the Irish in the United States. One of the past recipients of a grant has just edited a book The Exiles of Erin which was published this year by Notre Dame press through the auspices of the fund. The book is the first in a series to be published dealing with the Irish experience in the United States.

Anyone with outstanding pledges or donations to make or who needs information on the Fund should contact Sally Murphy, Fund Secretary, at 130 Stanmore Road, Baltimore, Maryland 21212.

Extradition — A Violation of National Sovereignty And Constitutional Policy on Partition

Extradition strikes against the whole historic aspiration and conception of Ireland as a thirty-two county entity, part of whose national territory is under occupation by a foreign power. (This position is enshrined in the major historic and constitutional declarations of the Irish people.)

As the late Sean MacBride, SC, pointed out in his introduction to a collection of constitutional documents, published under the title 'Ireland's Right to Sovereignty, Independence and Unity Is Inalienable and Indefeasible', "... partition was imposed on Ireland against the wishes of the overwhelming majority of the people of Ireland" and "The imposition of partition has led to a permanent insurrectionary situation in the six North Eastern counties of Ireland."

At the end of his introduction, Mr. MacBride quotes the Most Reverend Dr. John Austin Baker, Anglican Bishop of Salisbury, a leading Anglican theologian, who was also chaplain to the British House of Commons. At the time of the 1981 hunger strikes, this eminent Anglican bishop said of Britain: "Our injustice created the situation; and by constantly repeating that we will maintain it so long as the majority (in the Six Counties — IAEC) wish it, we actively inhibit Protestant and Catholic from working out a new future together. This is the root of the violence, and the reason why the protestors think of themselves as political offenders." (Our emphasis)

Sean MacBride makes the point that the major constitutional documents of the state here repudiate all British claims over any part of the national territory. As he puts it, "Neither Britain nor a small minority selected by Britain has any right to partition the ancient island of Ireland."

It is worth quoting from these documents. Even leaving aside the Easter 1916 Proclamation and the 1919 Declaration of Independence, which were adopted before partition and obviously assert our national unity, we can still look at the 1937 Constitution adopted by the people of this state and the Unanimous Declaration of Dail Eireann of May 10, 1949.

Article 2 of Bunreacht na hEireann states, "The national territory consists of the whole island of Ireland, its islands and the territorial seas." Article 3 speaks of the reintegration of the national territory and the right of the Parliament and Government established by the Constitution to exercise jurisdiction over the whole of that territory.

The 1949 Declaration, adopted unanimously on the joint proposition of An Taoiseach John A. Costello and Leader of the Opposition Eamon de Valera states:

"Dail Eireann, "SOLEMLY RE-ASSERTING the indefeasible right of the Irish Nation to the unity and integrity of the national territory,

"RE-AFFIRMING the sovereign right of the people of Ireland to choose its own form of Government and, through its democratic institutions, to decide all questions of national policy, free from outside interference,

"REPUDIATING the claim of the British Parliament to enact legislation affecting Ireland's territorial integrity in violation of those rights, and

"PLEDGING the determination of the Irish people to continue the struggle against the unjust and unnatural partition of our country until it is brought to a successful conclusion;

"PLACES ON RECORD its indignant protest against the introduction in the British Parliament of legislation purporting to endorse and continue the existing Partition of Ireland, and

"CALLS UPON the British Government and people to end the present occupation of our Six North Eastern Counties, and thereby enable the unity of Ireland to be restored and the age-long differences between the two nations brought to an end."

That declaration was sent to the governments and the parliaments of all countries with which Ireland had diplomatic relations. It is the only unanimous declaration of the Dail on the partition issue. What a huge step backwards, then, it is for the present Fianna Fail administration to be extraditing people to the North!

There can be no doubt, from all the above statements and the whole litany of oppression endured by the northern nationalist community since partition, that the conflict in the North is political. As Congressperson Joe Kennedy stated after his recent visit, he was in no doubt that people resorted to arms because of the intransigence of the British and their role in the North.

Given that there is a political conflict at the root of violence in the North, and that Britain's presence is the root of that conflict, and in violation of the feelings of the majority of the Irish people (and also against the feelings of most British people), and in violation of the major constitutional documents of this state, it is totally wrong for any Irish Government to extradite people to British "justice".

How can you extradite people to a foreign power whose very occupation of part of your national territory you are opposed to?

In point of fact, extradition explicitly recognises the right of Britain to be in Ireland, to impose its will and its laws in our country by force of arms, to flout our aspirations and the constitutional positions of this state, and to imprison, torture and kill Irish citizens. Extradition is a total betrayal of Irish national sovereignty. It is saying that Britain is right to be in the North and has always been right in being there, and that anyone who resists their presence is a common criminal.

Clearly, there is now a total rejection of Patrick Pearse's famous dictum that freedom for Ireland meant "... not the freedom of a geographical fragment of Ireland, but the freedom of all Ireland, of every sod of Ireland." And what of Mr. Haughey's 1986 declaration that Northern Ireland is a failed political entity?

The whole extradition process simply turns the courts, judiciary and police, and the political institutions, of this state into part of the whole conveyor belt system of British injustice in Ireland.

The independence of this state becomes further eroded. And it is clear that the more which is surrendered to Britain, the more Britain will demand. At the end of this process, will there be anything left of our national aspirations and the constitutional documents in which they are enshrined? Will there be anything left of our independence? Will there be anything left that any Irish person can be proud of?

The time to stop this process is now.

Rather than handing over Irish citizens who are engaged in trying to resist Britain's presence — i.e. people who are actively seeking to implement the positions of the majority of Irish people and of Article 2 of the 1937 Constitution and the whole 1949 Declaration — the Irish Government should abolish the 1987 Extradition Acts and begin doing all it can to pressure the British to leave Ireland, thus creating a framework in which peace and justice can be achieved.

Profiles in Patriotism Easter Rising 1916

THOMAS J. CLARK

Every nation honors the memory of Patriots whose personal sacrifices contributed to their freedom. In our United States, George Washington looms up larger than any other figure. In Ireland, the American Revolution, although Sean Nathan Hale a martyr for its cause, the Easter Rising of 1916, a mark rising that led to today's Republic and Concord of Irish history — when against the might of England for the first time, the men of Easter Week, is the personification of the Easter Rising to many, yet the sacrifice of that rising who gave his life in its cause was Thomas J. Clarke.

Thomas Clarke was born in 1857 and the landlord-dominated Irish population bordering on serfdom. In 1878, he joined the Fenian Irish Republican Brotherhood, a secret revolutionary organization not unlike our own Sons of Liberty. In 1881, his activities caused him to flee to America. He settled in New York, and became an active branch of the Fenian movement. On a trip to England in 1883, he was captured and sentenced to life in penal servitude for Fenian activities. He was eventually driven insane under the conditions. Clarke persevered, however, and was eventually released to the U.S., married Miss Katie Clarke returned to Fenian activities. An American newspaper edited by John Devoy — the most powerful figure in Clan na Gael at the time, he endured for Irish freedom, Clarke became one of the Clan's most trusted members.

In September 1906, Clarke retired to improve his wife's health. Though prematurely aged at 48, Clarke was not put out to pasture. In December 1907 he was called to Ireland to rejuvenate the Irish Republican Brotherhood. As the trusted link between the Irish exiles of Clan na Gael and the IRB in Ireland, he was appointed to the Supreme Council of the IRB and was one of its most powerful advocates of revolutionary action. He plotted a course with young IRB organizer, Sean MacDiarmada, to replace inactive militants, and attract new blood into the movement. In 1913, Clarke spoke at a commemoration ceremony at the grave of Irish patriot, Wolfe Tone — a ceremony which became an annual event of considerable nationalist significance. Within a few weeks, the young school teacher, Padraig Pearse, had joined the IRB.

As the most constant advocate of revolutionary action, Clarke himself set the course that led to the Easter Rising. With the start of the Irish Volunteer movement in 1913, Clarke insured that IRB men were on the Volunteers provisional committee, and between the two groups. In May 1915, Clarke established a Military Council of the IRB; by year's end, they had set a date for a rising. In January, Clarke brought the council, thereby insuring the support of the Irish Citizen Army — a group formed to protect workers during strikes. In February, Clarke informed Clan na Gael that a rising would take place in Dublin on Easter Sunday and signal the start of a nationwide rebellion.

The confusion of events caused by the late discovery of the secret plans, upset the original schedule and caused the historic decision to rise on Monday. It was not the rising that was planned, but a braver and more hopeless one in military terms. Yet, it altered the course of the rising. The Easter Rising was led by Clarke, Sean Connolly, Eamon Ceannt, Sean MacDiarmada, Joseph Plunkett, and Thomas MacDonagh — all of whom were executed for their dreams of these leaders for their mentor was rising, when the Proclamation of the Irish Republic was drawn up, the man given the honor of having his name affixed first was the veteran Fenian, Thomas J. Clarke.

In 1983, a single sentence found in an old biography of Tom Clarke referred to his relocation to Suffolk County, Long Island, and the Ancient Order of Hibernians set up a committee to locate that historic homestead. Intensive research through old books, records, and conversations with recognized experts in the field, revealed little. Finally, a search of thousands of deeds in the Town of Brookhaven produced not one, but two. Deeds showing that Thomas J. Clarke of Brooklyn, New York, had purchased 30 acres in Manorville in 1906, and an adjoining 30 in 1907. The name on those deeds is the same as that found in the primary of considerable historic significance; the site a Historic Landmark, and erect a suitable monument. On May 8, 1987, 71 years and 5 days after his execution, a 2-ton obelisk was erected on the land Tom Clarke walked in life. It stands today as a permanent reminder of the sacrifice of one man for the welfare of many.

England's Hidden War In Ireland

By MIKE CUMMINGS

Ireland's "troubles" are often portrayed by England as an ancient religious quarrel which is sustained by those who failed to accept the benevolence of British partition and by nostalgic Americans who give aid to the Irish Republican Army (IRA), the prime militant resistance to that benevolence since 1920. Thus Ms. Thatcher uses the IRA as scapegoats for an Irish hatred used by British interests for centuries. In this way the Prime Minister seeks to draw public attention away from British policies which have failed to change England's original role of occupier since Parliament adopted the Better Government of Ireland Act in December, 1920. The evidence of that failure can be seen in the military fortresses in Fermanagh, the garrisons at Lisburn and Antrim, and the beachhead and state of siege atmosphere of Belfast.

To reinforce this simplistic notion of the IRA as the cause of the conflict, British Information Services (BIS) in the U.S. widely promotes and rapidly distributes their version of the carnage of the conflict. More and more Americans are beginning to understand, however, that a 70 year struggle endures because for every soldier of the IRA there are thousands who feel the pain and witness the tragic effects of British rule but whose protest is not as dramatic as a bomb at Ballygawley. For obvious reasons their protest will not be a part of any BIS media information packet. There are, in fact, many stories of people who have been victimized by English treachery in Ireland and their only crime has been to possess extraordinary courage, a professional integrity, or a Christian conscience. Here are but a few examples of England's hidden war in Ireland.

The Policeman

John Stalker, a Senior Manchester Constable used by the Home Office to buy time after the public furor over the 1986 release of Shoot To Kill, a report by the International Lawyers Inquiry. The report documents the pattern of innocent civilians killed by British forces in the North. Stalker's two-year highly professional investigation of four of those killed found evidence of official bribery and murder, the destruction and manufacture of evidence and all manner of official misconduct and deceit. Stalker came too close to MI-5 and SAS operations and high-level cover-ups, so a baseless slander campaign was created and he was removed from the inquiry. His flawless career was ended by a government that had become a factory of lies. Thatcher publicly admitted misconduct but refused to release Stalker's report, and praised RUC Chief John Hermon who masterminded the cover-up. Michael Tighe, a 17-year-old Irish kid with no involvement in militancy, was brutally murdered and all John Stalker wanted was the truth about his death.

The Priest

Rev. Des Wilson is a dynamic priest whose service and organizing of the Catholic ghetto of West Belfast earned him the wrath of the late Bishop Philbin, probably the only Bishop in the world to expel Mother Teresa from a diocese. In January, 1973 Fr. Wilson's parishioners began Ballymurphy Enterprises, a highly successful work skills and cottage industry program desperately needed in the purposely deprived areas of high Catholic population. The program then became the Whiterock Industrial Estate Ltd., on the slopes of Divis Mt. and without government sponsorship, employed 120 people in skill building. Fr. Wilson's leadership in giving hope to those 5th and 6th generation unemployed made him at once an "enemy of the State." Whiterock's buildings were mysteriously torched, power was mysteriously interrupted and then when it appeared that wouldn't stop him Whiterock was occupied and confiscated by the British Army without notice or compensation. It is today an army fortress. Undaunted, Fr. Wilson started Conway Enterprises in an old flax spinning mill in Belfast which not only continued the skill building and training but added day-care services and Gaelic classes

The Professor

Robert Miller, a Queens University instructor and consultant to the Fair Employment Agency (FEA) in 1979 when an evaluation began into anti-Catholic discrimination in the Civil Service. The studies he conducted for the FEA in 1982 showed clear statistical evidence of anti-Catholic bias in the younger appointees, i.e., those who had been appointed after imposition of direct rule by the British Government. The 1983 release of the final report by the FEA differed radically from what Miller submitted. It included a number of conclusions based solely on unsubstantiated research done by the Civil Service, the very agency which was under investigation. Naive enough to think the government was interested in the truth, Miller submitted his research conclusions in an article to the Journal of Social Policy in April, 1987, and was threatened with criminal prosecution by Mr. Cooper, head of the FEA. The effect of this public threat has been to blacklist Miller from further research despite the fact his method and conclusions have never been challenged. His career effectively ended when he failed to conform his research to official conclusions about anti-Catholic discrimination.

The Journalist

Jo Thomas a senior reporter for the New York Times whose assignment to London began with lunch at the Savoy with publisher Sulzberger and abruptly ended in February, 1986 with her reassignment to America for "paying too much attention to Northern Ireland." Ms. Thomas was a skilled investigative reporter who, as Miami Bureau chief for the Times exposed the excesses of South America dictatorships, and was not content with Home Office handouts and London briefings on the mounting death toll in Northern Ireland. Doors that were once open to her when it was assumed she would play ball now were closed as she searched the North and compared eyewitness accounts with official reports. She concluded, like Stalker, that official deceit was the coin of the realm. Unable in all honesty to use the Home Office buzzwords, her last dispatch revealed not the lunacy of terrorism but a state-of-siege power struggle where violence is an official tool of social control. Thomas left the Times realizing her career was over. The Times has now returned to its coverage of the "normalization" of life in the North in keeping with the Home Office dictates.

The Priest

Rev. Des Wilson is a dynamic priest whose service and organizing of the Catholic ghetto of West Belfast earned him the wrath of the late Bishop Philbin, probably the only Bishop in the world to expel Mother Teresa from a diocese. In January, 1973 Fr. Wilson's parishioners began Ballymurphy Enterprises, a highly successful work skills and cottage industry program desperately needed in the purposely deprived areas of high Catholic population. The program then became the Whiterock Industrial Estate Ltd., on the slopes of Divis Mt. and without government sponsorship, employed 120 people in skill building. Fr. Now the Northern Ireland Office was desperate. NY City Council Condemns Removal of Right to Silence

By RAY O'HANLON

The New York City Council has unanimously passed a resolution condemning the move by the British Government aimed at abolishing the right to silence of suspects during police questioning.

All 35 members of the Council added their voices to the considerable criticism that has already been directed at the British initiative which could be in force in Northern Ireland early next year.

"The City Council wants to add its voice to those across the globe who are concerned that this proposal will strip away an essential freedom and do nothing to stem the violence or promote the peace we all desire," Council Majority Leader Peter Vallone said.

Vallone described the passage of the resolution as an expression of outrage by the greatest city in the world. And he said that City Council resolutions in the past had been adopted by Congress. He hoped this latest action would spark a similar kind of response in Washington.

"I find the move by the British Government to be mind boggling. The right to silence is the cornerstone of the U.S. Constitution and I hope free people throughout the world will express outrage at the British action," he added.

The City Council initiative was welcomed by its former Council president Paul O'Dwyer, who said such acts by the British Government were creating havoc in Northern Ireland. "They are the ones who have established the example of a government being violent and lawless," he said.

'Times' Critical of British Prime Minister in Editorial

The moves by the British Government to ban Sinn Fein and other organizations from the airwaves and remove the right to silence from suspects has drawn strong criticism from the New York Times.

Referring to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, the Times in an editorial said that "when she is right nobody is more impressive. And when Britain's Prime Minister is wrong, her zeal compounds the damage and embarrassment."

The Times continued: "Now she is spectacularly wrong with a new limit on journalistic freedom and a proposal allowing criminal defendant's silence to weigh as evidence against him."

"In political terms," the Times

— a red flag to the British overseers. Prime industrial/commercial space in Conway Mill was now labeled no-go or red-lined by the government local Enterprises Development Unit (LEDU) so that no funding would be available for private initiatives. But hope and private American donations kept Conway Mill still going.

Now the Northern Ireland Office was desperate. They opportuned Bishop Cahal Daly and used his appetite for control, power and money to create Cathedral and Townsend Enterprises, essentially Catholic Church slush accounts, to disperse the American Fund's dollars to "safe" areas, i.e., those that vote SDLP. The government's objective was to slowly suffocate the Conway

The British action was also condemned by council member Jill Eislund at the press conference before the resolution was passed in City Hall. She described it as one more nail the coffin of a system that was discriminatory.

The City Council resolution both condemns the proposal to abolish the right of a defendant to remain silent in Northern Ireland and calls on the British Parliament to reject the proposal. Meanwhile, Councilman Sal F. Albanese of Brooklyn, has sponsored another resolution in the council calling for the British Government to reverse its recent ban on broadcasting interviews with representatives of Sinn Fein and other groups in Northern Ireland.

Albanese said the ban would fuel the fire of discontent in the North, Gerry Adams was a duly elected member of parliament and president of the Sinn Fein Party. To ban interviews with him was to cut off the voice of the people and it could only lead to further frustration and trouble.

The Albanese resolution was not passed with the other one but is being considered by the council's International, Inter-Group and Special Events Committee chaired by Councilman Wendell Foster.

A spokesman for Albanese, Fred Maley, said that in order to generate movement on the resolution in the committee it would be a good idea for people to write to Councilman Foster. Letters to him should be addressed to Council Member Wendell Foster, City Hall, NY, NY 10017.

(From the Irish Echo)

adds, "the plan may backfire. Leaders of Sinn Fein can now mischievously pose as defenders of liberty. They can also point to legislation soon to be put before parliament that would let Northern Ireland's courts take adverse account of the silence of a defendant. Doing so would erode a venerable English common law privilege against self-incrimination, one prompted by revulsion over Star Chamber tribunals in the 17th century.

The Times concludes: "Britain's good name as mother of parliaments and seedbed of political freedom is an asset more precious than the crown jewels. How bizarre for it to be tarnished by a Conservative Government."

Mill Enterprise and the determination of its employees to be free of government control. The irony is that the British are using U.S. dollars to destroy Fr. Wilson and the very self-sustaining programs which Congress sought to encourage.

Personnel Manager

Oliver Kearney as a Personnel Officer for the Northern Ireland Housing Authority was forced to resign for trying to improve job opportunities for Catholics at the Authority. He then became the premier spokesman for the MacBride Fair Employment Principles, named for the late Irish statesman and Nobel Peace Laureate Dr. Sean MacBride. The opportunity for per-

In 101st Congress No. Ireland Fair Employment Practices Act Reintroduced

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Rep. Hamilton Fish, Jr. (R-N.Y.), has reintroduced his "Northern Ireland Fair Employment Practices Act," a bill that would require all U.S. companies doing business in Northern Ireland to adhere to the MacBride Principles, a nine-point set of guidelines for fair employment.

"The phenomenon of over 50% unemployment for Catholics in some Northern Ireland communities will not resolve itself. That figure remains double the unemployment rate of Protestants," said Rep. Fish, a co-chairman of the Ad Hoc Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs. "My legislation will ensure that U.S. companies are not party to that discrimination."

Under the provisions of the bill, U.S. companies must eliminate religious discrimination and significantly increase the number of Catholic employees, especially in management.

The bill requires that companies provide adequate security on the job for Catholic employees, eliminate religious and sectarian emblems in the workplace, actively recruit Catholics for employment, place qualified Catholics in management positions, and develop training and educational programs for the Catholic minority.

U.S. companies failing to comply with the provisions of the bill would be prohibited from importing their products into the United States.

"Efforts in the U.S. have also sparked legislative activity in the British Parliament. A new fair employment measure for Northern Ireland is presently under consideration, though its fate is still unclear. Hopefully, the new British initiative, in concert with the MacBride Principles, will be effective in ending the cycle of religious discrimination," said Fish.

"The MacBride campaign has gained great momentum, with over a dozen states endorsing the principles and an increasing number of supporters in Congress. It stands as a constant reminder that employment practices in Northern Ireland must be corrected. We will continue our work to secure passage of my legislation in the 101st Congress," said Fish.

"Ability, not religion, should be the basis for employment opportunity. As a nation based on equality, our companies in Northern Ireland must take the lead in eliminating religious discrimination in the workplace," Congressman Fish concluded.

Action in the Congress On North Ireland Affairs

Rep. Joseph Kennedy (D-MA) — with some help from his uncle, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-MA) — succeeded last year in forcing an agreement between Short Brothers, the Northern Ireland aerospace manufacturer, and the U.S. Army, on improving employment opportunities for Catholics.

A provision of the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 1989 prohibits the Army from spending money (appropriated earlier) on a contract with the company (known as Shorts) unless "the Secretary of the Army secures a commitment from the contractor that it will support equal employment opportunities for all individuals irrespective of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin in its employment practices." The roughly $60 million contract, a major program for Shorts, is still being negotiated; it will be for 10 or 11 Sherga cargo aircraft. Short Brothers is a British government-owned firm that employs more than 7,000 people in Belfast, making it the largest employer in the province. Shorts has been under fire for a number of years for discrimination against Catholics. Catholics have made up only 5 to 10 percent of the company's work force.

This appears to be the first time that a U.S. equal employment provision is being imposed on a foreign contractor. U.S. equal employment opportunity laws and regulations do not apply to overseas contractors, and in October a federal appeals court ruled that U.S. civil rights laws do not even apply to U.S. citizens employed by U.S. corporations overseas.

The original Kennedy amendment, adopted by the House in May 1988, would have prohibited the Defense Department from awarding a contract to be performed overseas to any contractor that discriminates in its employment practices on the basis of race, color, religion, sex or national origin. The amendment would have required the department's inspector general to investigate any allegation that a firm performing defense work overseas was in violation of anti-discrimination standards as made evident in U.S. law. Confirmation of such violation would have made the firm ineligible for further contracts (in most cases), unless the firm agreed to a plan to assure compliance with U.S. anti-discrimination law.

The Kennedy amendment elicited considerable opposition, not only on the part of Britain, but also from others, such as Israel and Turkey, according to Kennedy legislative aide Don Carlson. Israel, for example, does not allow Arabs (even with Israeli citizenship) to work in defense facilities, and thus apparently would be in violation of the amendment. In the House-Senate conference on the defense authorization bill, the Senate agreed to go along if the focus were narrowed to Shorts. (President Reagan vetoed the first Defense Authorization bill, approved in Congress in July, but the provision remained in the final legislation, approved by Congress and signed by the President in September.)

In the summer of 1988, as a result of pressure from the Kennedys — including this provision of the then-pending authorization bill — the Army reached agreement with Short Brothers on increasing the employment of Catholics. According to the Army, Shorts agreed to specific employment goals and time-tables for the recruitment of Catholics as "new hires." (Given a 5 percent turnover rate, Shorts expects to hire about 350 new employees per year.) The company expects that Catholics will comprise 17.5 percent of new employees hired in 1988. The goals for 1989 and 1990 are 25 percent and 33 percent.

The agreement also commits the company to a "set-aside" program. According to a memo by Under Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone:

The set-aside would stipulate a volume of subcontract work available for employers having 'predominantly Catholic employees.'

New sponsors, new legislation: Other legislative activity in 1988 included the addition of 16 new House cosponsors to the Fair Employment Practices Act, a bill that would (1) restrict the import of goods from Northern Ireland unless the manufacturer documented that it was in compliance with the MacBride principles; and (2) require any U.S. company doing business and employing more than 20 persons in Nor-secution came later when, as Secretary for the Northern Ireland Vinters Federation, Oliver worked for improvements in liquor laws affecting publicans in the North. The Chairman of the Federation was quietly informed by the Northern Ireland Office that as long as Kearney remained in their employ changes in the Sunday Opening law were not likely. A period of baseless slander against Oliver was then followed by his dismissal in June, 1987. The payment for this act of cowardice by the Federation was received in August, 1987, when the Sunday Opening bill sailed through Parliament.

None of these people have ever lifted a gun, planted a bomb or been in prison, but are part of the hidden war England wages in Ireland against people whose only weapon is truth. These stories are not as intriguing as those of Semtex or SAM-7 missiles, nor as emotionally wrenching as the battles of Ballagawley, Gilbralter or Loughall but they pose a greater threat to the image of the conflict so carefully cultivated particularly in America by the British Information thern Ireland to comply with the principles. Principal sponsors are Rep. Hamilton Fish (R-N.Y.) and Sen. Alfonse D'Amato (R-N.Y.). Rep. Brian Donnelly (D-Mass.) and 27 cosponsors introduced a new bill in April that would use a carrot and stick approach to encourage employment of Catholics. The bill would amend the Internal Revenue Code to remove limitations on the amount of foreign tax credit available for income generated by a manufacturing facility located in a high unemployment area of Northern Ireland, if 40 percent or more of the facility's employees are members of a religious minority in Northern Ireland. The 'stick' is that the legislation would reduce the foreign tax credit for entities that have operations in Northern Ireland that do not:

(1) take steps to ensure that no direct or indirect discrimination on religious or political grounds exist in employment,

(2) actively practice equality of opportunity in employment, and

(3) take advantage of affirmative action programs designed to give under-represented groups better access to employment and training opportunities.

Update on 'MacBride'

Since our last issue, another State — Michigan — has joined the "MacBride" camp. This brings to ten the number of States with 'MacBride' legislation on the books and in force. In addition, another city, Tucson, Arizona, has passed 'MacBride' legislation and it was done over a tremendous effort by the British Government to halt it.

More progress is projected for 1989, with more than a few states ready to introduce and pass a fair employment for northern Ireland legislation, including Wyoming, Nebraska, Missouri, Indiana and Oklahoma.

In the U.S. House and Senate, legislation is also being prepared for introduction. Watch for information and progress and how you can be helpful. The following is from the Dec. 1988/Jan. 1989 issue of The American Irish Newsletter. Read it and you will realize what a tremendous campaign this is:

"The MacBride Principles Campaign is the greatest opportunity we ever had to educate the American public. Every time the Principles are proposed they are discussed and the true nature of British colonialism and oppression in Ireland is exposed. The public, particularly influential lawmakers and corporate heads, become informed. This is why it is so critical that we continuously promote them, even though our state may have already adopted them. All endorsements of the Principles are transformed into pressure on our federal representatives to support the national legislation. We must push for endorsements from town councils, community groups, etc."

FREEDOM FOR ALL IRELAND

Message from Freedom For All Ireland Committee Chairman

To all who contributed to the Christmas Relief Fund, thank you very much. The response was fairly good and your cooperation is greatly appreciated. Donations will be accepted at any time, so to those who have not sent in their contributions, please do so. Mail your checks to me at 1115 Ward Place, Woodmere, payable to the Freedom For All Ireland Committee. It is a most worthy cause and rewarding as well, especially when letters are received from the prisoners' families expressing their gratitude to our members for their help and concern.

One hundred twenty-four Divisions have sent me the names and addresses of their Freedom For All Ireland Chairman. If you have not done so, please fill out the tear-off below and send it to me as soon as possible. Upon receipt of this information, I will be able to compile a complete mailing list whereby I can communicate directly to the Chairman relative to all things pertaining to the importance and workings of this committee. God Bless.

Doherty Wins Again?

The Board of Immigration Appeals has once again found in Joe Doherty's favor. This means that his deportation case can be reopened so that he can apply for political asylum in the United States. The decision has been referred to the Attorney General for review, at the request of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. This once again takes an eminently reasonable judicial decision and turns it into a political decision. There is no valid reason for this case to be "reviewed." Therefore, what is actually being sought, from the Attorney General, is a reversal of the decision.

It is incredible that Joe Doherty and his attorneys, who have won case after case in court, are still being blocked by political maneuvers. These maneuvers are being used to exhaust Joe and his attorneys, emotionally, physically, and financially, as they achieve win after win but make no progress. This is Joe's sixth year of winning cases, yet he is still incarcerated in the MCC without charge and without bail.

We have all written letters about Joe's case to various people and at various times; however, we must redouble our efforts. We can't let Joe down. In a recent scuffle with a new prison guard, who tried to remove his notebook, Joe had all privileges suspended and was given 60 days solitary confinement.

Write to the Attorney General: Hon. Richard Thornburgh, U.S. Dept. of Justice, Constitution Ave. and 10th St., N.W., Washington D.C. 20530.

I am proud and honoured to have this opportunity to speak directly to all my American and Irish-American friends who are involved in one way or another in the struggle for Irish freedom. You are the people who in all the dark times have kept our hopes up and our spirits alive. We have always looked to you for succour and you have never let us down. Your support, material and moral, has inspired us to continue the struggle for the freedom of our country.

In the past months the situation in Ireland has become progressively more repressive. Republicans and republican supporters are now denied access to the Broadcast media in Ireland and England. The age-old democratically enshrined law of the suspect's right to silence has now been removed by the stroke of a British minister's pen. There is much speculation that the RUC will be given increased powers that will enable them to charge and have imprisoned, on the sole word of some bigoted anti-nationalist RUC officer, people whom they believe are involved in resistance to British rule in Ireland.

Allegations of shoot-to-kill policies and state assassination of dissidents are no longer restricted to Republicans who have had to bear the brunt of Britain's violent war in Ireland. The whole world has now witnessed the extent of British repression. Murder-gangs are given carte blanc to track and kill unarmed Republicans. Their actions are sanctioned and applauded by Thatcher and her cronies in Westminster, and their cold-blooded savagery is covered-up and explained away by British-owned judges.

There are no more spurious political options left for the British and they know that. The Irish war is now in its final phase. It will be fought with a ferocity unequalled in modern Irish history. Murder and repression are the only weapons Thatcher has left and she will do all in her considerable power to destroy Irish republican resistance. But she will fail, just as previous attempts to finally pacify the ungrateful Irish have failed, because the Irish people, with the full support and approval of freedom-loving peoples across the world, are determined that come what may, this time Ireland will be free.

It is vital in this new climate of repression and denial of free expression that American supporters of Irish freedom do all that they can to ensure that the voice of republicanism, the voice of resistance, the voice of freedom, is heard throughout the United States. You can do that. You can use your influence, your political muscle, your disapproval of those who pander to Thatcher, to impress upon everyone that Irish republicans and democrats only want what is just and right. We want the freedom of our country. We want an end to British domination, to the continuing slaughter and imprisonment of our people, to the system that discriminates against us and deprives us of jobs, decent living standards and hope.

We, the struggling Irish people, are depending on you, our friends and comrades, in the coming days. You will not let us down.

Hostility and disbelief followed the release of the annual report on the International Fund for Ireland. Charles Brett, chairman of the Fund, had a difficult time fielding reporters' questions as to how he could justify allocations for the refurbishing of a Chinese restaurant and a Freemasons' Hall. Unfortunately, the misuse of this money manifests a basic contempt for those idealistic and generous enough to contribute millions of dollars — including, to a great extent, American taxpayers.

The following statement is intended to alert our elected officials to what is happening:

To The Honorable Senators and Representatives of the People of the State of _____

The second annual report of the International Fund for Ireland, released on December 14, 1988, verifies the shocking and scandalous revelations of spokespersons for Northern Ireland's nationalist community. The misuse of funds which were originally intended for those who "have suffered most severely from the consequences of the instability of recent years" to instead purchase oceanographic survey ships, paint banks, and construct saunas and swimming pools in five-star hotels is an obvious misapplication of United States citizens' tax dollars.

We, therefore, urge you to demand congressional hearings on the disbursement of the International Fund so that abuses may be identified and corrected.

Basic Procedures:

1. Work the above statement into a petition or letter.
2. Make as many copies of the petition/letter as you will need to gather signatures at your next state/county/division meeting. Where possible, plan to gather signatures at dances, etc.

Caucus Esposé On International Fund

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Irish National Caucus — the Irish lobby on Capitol Hill — has taken dramatic action on the International Fund For Ireland (The Fund was established in December 1986 to support the Anglo Irish Agreement. The United States is the major contributor to the Fund having already donated $120 million).

The Caucus has presented to Congress a devastating expose of the way the Fund has distributed its money in one of the six counties of Northern Ireland, County Fermanagh.

The Caucus Case-Study — based on the Fund's own official figures — shows that for the period 1987-88, of the money distributed in County Fermanagh, 87.2% went to Protestants, 10.1% went to Catholics and 2.7% went to Neutrals (those who cannot be given any religious classification).

"When one considers that Fermanagh is 52% Catholic," said Father Sean McManus, I.N.C. National Director, "these figures are truly scandalous."

The Irish National Caucus presented its Case-Study to Congressman Lee H. Hamilton (D. IN), Chairman of the House Sub-Committee on Europe and the Middle East, and called on him to hold Public Hearings on the workings of the International Fund for Ireland. The Caucus also held an emergency meeting with Congressman Benjamin A. Gilman (R. NY), ranking Minority Member of the Sub-Committee on Europe and the Middle East and Co-Chairman of the Ad Hoc Congressional Committee For Irish Affairs.

"As was expected, Congressman Gilman was very responsive," said Father McManus. "He expressed great concern about the Caucus Case-Study and said he was going to bring it immediately to the attention of everyone concerned. I know we can count on Congressman Gilman to do the right thing," said Father McManus.

CONGRESSMAN Benjamin Gilman, center, is briefed on the Irish Caucus Case Study report by Fr. Sean McManus. Looking on is Caucus secretary Mary Mullen.

MORNING NEWS ANCHOR BERATED

Mr. Charles Gibson
Good Morning America, ABC
1330 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10019
My dear Mr. Gibson:

I wish to express my own and the disappointment of many people in the civil rights movement as well as in the Irish American community at your failure to ask Mrs. Thatcher about the murderous behavior of her minions in Northern Ireland — action exposed by John Stalker and others — which has been a matter of public inquiry by many members of the House of Commons.

In your interview you discussed the war conditions in the Near East in which Mrs. Thatcher has no involvement but failed to ask about a matter which was covered extensively by the American press.

You could hardly be ignorant of the fact that editorials across this nation (a few days before she appeared on your program) decried the action of Mrs. Thatcher which was aimed at Irish men and Irish women and which would remove the right of silence from an accused and require the television to refuse access to dissenters.

It must be plain that in an open society such as ours, when a Prime Minister of another country claims the benefit of our airways, he or she should be called upon to answer for acts which are inimical to the principles on which our democracy rests. This policy has been scrupulously carried out over the years by members of your calling. It is regrettable that you have sullied a proud tradition.

Former President Reagan or President-elect Bush may deal with Mrs. Thatcher in the quaint ways in which those who support the Contras by fair means or foul, deal with those who carry out a "shoot-to-kill" policy in her first and last colony, but you who represent us have no such privilege for you are our representative in this situation. Because we have the kind of society we have, you may not be, willingly or unwillingly, involved in a coverup. It brings you no glory. You owe it to the people and to the Bill of Rights which affords you the privilege of using the airways to attempt to have the truth presented.

It is unlikely that history will mention you with the media heroes of the past and present, who have stood firm for that right even though the cause was unpopular and in opposition to the views of our leaders.

MARGARET THATCHER AND A.B.C. TELEVISION

A.B.C. Television
1330 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10019

Dear Sirs:

I watched the program in which Charles Gibson interviewed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Editorials across this nation in the previous weeks decried the fact that Margaret Thatcher had scrapped all of the safeguards (right to remain silent, etc.) which are incorporated into our Bill of Rights and drawn from the British system.

The basic protests came from the American media and were provoked by the fact that such action is quite contagious and may ultimately undermine the First Amendment. Yet, while Mr. Gibson wandered all over the world in his interview — all through the troublesome Near East in which Mrs. Thatcher's country was not directly involved — he failed to ask Mrs. Thatcher a single question about her own departure from tradition in Northern Ireland or with respect to the activities of her murder squad (S.A.S.) in Northern Ireland which, according to John Stalker, is part of a deliberate shoot-to-kill policy. Neither did he ask her about the rules she is about to promulgate which will prohibit Irish dissenters from speaking on British television.

I am speaking both from a Civil Rights background of many years as well as for the many, many Irish Americans who are shocked that you, whom we would hope would not be influenced either by Mrs. Thatcher or the State Department or anybody else, would have shown such obvious bias. I cannot believe that Mr. Gibson (who has been up to now an astute but fairminded reporter) would have the temerity to so obviously slant the interview. When one operating under the First Amendment fails to speak when he/she has the obligation to do so, silence is tantamount to speaking falsely.

The First Amendment has been and is a sacred right and while the rights under other of the amendments have been whittled away, the first has withstood vicious and sly attacks. Writers, publishers, civil rights organizations and civil rights lawyers have up to now frustrated these attempts on its life. But the First Amendment was not attached to the Constitution for the special benefit of the media alone. If everybody does not share in its benefit, the cries of the media for its protection will be as a sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal.

PENNSYLVANIA PURSUES MACBRIDE BILL

Hon. Robert C. Jubelirer
President Pro Tempore
Harrisburg, PA 17120
Dear Senator:

I am sure you are aware the MacBride Fair Employment Principle Bills S. 544-548, are now before the Senate. We would ask your full support of these bills, and ask your help in putting these bills on the floor before you recess.

The MacBride Principles are a simple set of employment guidelines drawn up to insure that Catholics get a fair shake when it comes to jobs in Northern Ireland. Ten states have adopted the MacBride statutes. The significance of these victories is that Irish Americans, backed by many other American ethnic groups and bipartisan political support, are defeating the British Propaganda Machine.

Catholics in Northern Ireland are two and a half times more likely to be unemployed as Protestants, and American dollars are subsidizing this anti-Catholic discrimination — along with numerous other human rights violations.

The MacBride Principles were developed in 1984 by four prominent Irish activists, one of whom they were named after, the late Dr. Sean MacBride. A list of their biographies is as follows:

Sean MacBride of Dublin. An international human rights advocate, MacBride was the founder and first Chairman of Amnesty International (1961-1974). He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, the Lenin Peace Prize, and the American Justice Medal for his human rights work. Dr. MacBride has served as United Nations High Commissioner for Namibia and Assistant Secretary General of the United Nations (1974-1977). He was also the General Secretary of the International Commission of Jurists in Geneva (1963-1971), and Minister of External Affairs for the Republic of Ireland (1948-1951).

Dr. John Robb of Ballymoney. A prominent Protestant surgeon in Northern Ireland, Dr. Robb was appointed an at-large member of the Irish Senate by Prime Minister Haughey in 1982. He is also Chairman of the New Ireland Group, a predominantly Protestant organization seeking a peaceful resolution to the conflict in North Ireland.

Inez McCormack of Belfast. A leader of the Irish National Union of Public Employees, Ms. McCormack is a former director of the British Government's Fair Employment Agency for Northern Ireland (FEA). She resigned her directorship in 1981 to protest the Agency's failure to combat religious discrimination adequately.

Fr. Brian Brady of Belfast. Formerly of St. Joseph's College in Belfast, Fr. Brady has testified before U.S. Congressional Committees on employment discrimination in Northern Ireland. He also served as a major witness for the Republic of Ireland in its successful case in 1978 charging the United Kingdom with human rights violations in Northern Ireland before the European Court of Human Rights in Geneva, — distinguished, concerned humanitarians.

We are constantly being reminded to seek peaceful solutions to the injustices in Northern Ireland. Now that the MacBride Principles are meeting with great success, Britain is spending millions on lobbyists to defeat them. Typical British hypocrisy, deceit and propaganda.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, and all Americans, place great importance on America's values and principles concerning human rights. We have faith that our elected officials will uphold these values, not only in Northern Ireland, but in every country where human rights violations exist.

Your support and vote for the MacBride legislation will be a major step against injustice, oppression and tyranny.

Respectfully requesting a reply to this letter, and with grateful appreciation for your time, I am,

Dear Mr. McIlwain:

Senator Zamprelli has referred your letter of November 28th regarding the McBride Fair Employment Principle bills, Senate Bills 544-548, to me as his successor to the post of Senate Democratic Floor Leader.

I regret to inform you that this package of four bills remained in the Senate's Finance Committee at the time of our adjournment sine die on November 30th. Consequently, this legislation must be reintroduced in the next session of the Pennsylvania General Assembly.

If you have any future correspondence on this issue in the next session of the General Assembly, I would be happy to hear from you.

IRISH WAY PRAISED

Dear Mr. Henshaw:

We here at the Irish American Cultural Institute prize the close relationship we have with the Hibernians. I am fairly new at the Institute — but I wanted to write you, and your colleagues in the leadership of the AOH to say how much I look forward to continuing our special connection.

One of the nicest parts of my job is that I get to read some wonderful letters. I've enclosed a photocopy of one which came to our IRISH WAY administrator earlier this month. Glowing reports from parents are nothing new for this program, but this particular parent — a father of nine from the Washington, D.C. area — articulates the impact of the program in an especially touching way.

Letters like this are the real reward of the IRISH WAY. Though this particular student did not receive a Hibernian scholarship, you can be assured that the families of the many who did could write the same letter.

Best wishes for all your efforts on behalf of the Irish inheritance.

James Rogers
Director of Operations

Mr. James Bohan
Irish Way Administrator, IACI
2115 Summit Ave.
St. Paul, MN

Dear Jim:

I just wanted to send along this short note on my impression of your Irish Way program. Gillian has not stopped talking about her experience in Ireland from the moment she returned home. There was not one aspect of her time spent with your first class operation that did not leave a positive impact on her and the solid attitude she now has about growing up and facing the future.

I sent a teenager on the 4th of July to your Irish Way program and got a young woman back with renewed goals on school, going to college, and one day returning to Ireland. Both MJ and I are so pleased that as she tackles everyday life as a Senior she somehow ties it to her trip. The best example of this is the essay on her College entrance application. Gillian has chosen to write about her trip, the impact it has had on her, the historical value it had, and how she wants to share it with everyone especially the college she finally chooses to attend next year.

Again, as a parent I thank you and your staff for an outstanding program and the role models you presented to my daughter.

Court Pronounces:

Britain Violates Human Rights

A court in Strasbourg, France, ruled recently that a British law permitting pre-arrest detention for up to a week, of people suspected of connections with terrorist groups was a breach of the European Convention on Human Rights.

The British law was enacted as a way of countering the Irish Republican Army. The ruling means that Britain will have to change the law or seek special exemption within six months, according to British lawyers familiar with the case. The Home Office, which only last month asked Parliament to put the Prevention of Terrorism law on a permanent footing, said it would consider the court decision before the House of Commons takes up the new bill.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher reacted angrily to the court ruling and to the failure of the Belgian and Irish governments to extradite an Irish Roman Catholic priest, the Rev. Patrick Ryan, who is wanted by the British on charges of helping the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

She told the Commons, "We shall consider the judgement carefully and also the human rights of the victims and potential victims of terrorism." Criticizing Ireland for its response to what she viewed as an important anti-terrorist matter, Thatcher said, "Although the Government of the Republic makes fine-sounding speeches and statements, they do not always seem to be backed up with the appropriate deeds." She said she was "utterly dismayed" by Belgium's decision to refuse extradition. In Brussels, the Justice Minister, Wilfried Martens, said the British charges in its warrant were "very vague indeed."

Thatcher met with the leaders of Belgium and Ireland at a winter summit meeting of the 12-member European Community on the Aegean Island of Rhodes in December.

The human rights court's judgment came as the New Statesman society presented to Parliament a petition for a written British constitution, signed by more than 200 public figures in the arts, academia, entertainment and the law. Geoffrey Robertson, a lawyer who signed the petition, said the government could decide that fundamental rights to a speedy trial or to remain silent could be snuffed out easily since there is no written British constitution.

The case considered by the human rights court involved four men from Northern Ireland who were arrested in 1984 and held for periods ranging from four days to nearly seven, but never charged with a crime.

"The Strasbourg decision," Mr. Robertson said, "very clearly shows that there's no machinery in our country to insure such rights, or redress for their violations." The four complainants, Terence Brogan, Dermot Coyle, William McFadden and Michael Tracey, appealed to the European Commission of Human Rights after their release and it referred the case to the court, a 19-member court from as many different countries.

The justices ruled 12-7 that all four defendants had been denied their right to be brought "promptly" before a judge or other judicial officer after their arrests, and 13-6, that they had also been denied "an enforceable right to compensation," as provided by clauses of the European Convention, signed by Britain in 1950.

A majority of the court denied their claims of violation of the rights in the European convention to liberty and security of person and to a speedy judicial ruling on the lawfulness of their arrests.

The British government is obliged to observe the terms of decisions by the European Court of Human Rights as part of its obligation as a signatory to the European Convention. It can, according to international lawyers here, ask for a waiver in special cases but Mrs. Thatcher's statement indicated that Britain would probably abide by the decision.

After a rash of terrorist bombings in Northern Ireland last summer, the British government decreed that judges trying criminal cases there may draw negative conclusions from the silence of a defendant who refused to talk to the police or testify in court. By executive decree, the British authorities also banned radio and television from broadcasting live or recorded interviews with members of terrorist organizations or groups that support them.

Last month it proposed laws that would require candidates for political office to swear oaths against violence, make it an offense to raise money, directly or indirectly, for terrorist groups, and limit remission of time served in terrorist cases to one-third instead of one-half of the sentence.

Washington Area Honors Brother J. F. Kennedy

The largest number of people ever to visit Arlington National Cemetery came to the grave of former President and AOH member John Fitzgerald Kennedy on the 25th anniversary of his death.

The John Fitzgerald Kennedy Division 5 of the District Board held a memorial service at the cemetery and a wreath laying ceremony at the grave of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Greg O'Brien of the Washington Pipe Band led brother Charles Moore and the honor guard from Woodbridge, Virginia degree team to the speakers platform.

Following the procession were Division 5 Chaplain Reverend Michael C. Kidd, Virginia State Board Chaplain Reverend John J. Munley and honored guests, his excellency Padraic MacKernan, Ambassador from Ireland, Mr. Daire O'Cioldain, third secretary of the Embassy of Ireland, his honor James Moran, mayor of Alexandria, Virginia, National AOH Director James Carmody, Division 5 president Norman McCarthy, Co-chairmen Charles Quinn, Pat Troy and Frank Herbert, District Board president Matt Hannon, Division 5 ladies president Jennie Gibbons, ladies District Board president Catherine Back and Virginia ladies state board president Anna O'Neil.

Also present was former national director Roger Furey.

The memorial service was opened with the national anthems of Ireland and America, sung by Pat Garvey, and prayers by Father Kidd, Division 5 chaplain. Co-chairman Frank Herbert introduced all the guests and turned the podium over to co-chairman Pat Troy. Brother Troy introduced each speaker. The ceremony was concluded with Greg O'Brien playing Irish tunes and Pat Garvey singing the late president's favorite song, "The Boys of Wexford."

Following the memorial service there was a motorcade to the grave of our beloved late president and brother, John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Division 5 president Norman McCarthy was joined by our founder and first president Pat Troy in laying the wreath. The large tri-color and shamrock wreath was donated by brother Troy.

The committee consisted of Frank Herbert, Charles Quinn, Pat Troy, Pat Cady and brother Hibernian from Virginia Joseph Mulcahy. They were able to arrange this official ceremony because of a long history of Hibernian activities at Arlington Cemetery.

Off Our Knees

1968 MARKED THE 20th anniversary of the continuous mass struggle in the North since the formation of the Civil Rights Movement in Ireland.

This video represents the views of those who were there at the beginning, who have continued and grown with the struggle and who are determined to carry on until civil rights, justice and freedom have been attained.

"Off Our Knees" celebrates the stories and aspirations of the people involved — political activists, working people, human rights campaigners — and demonstrates how and why the basic demands of the Civil Rights Movement, for votes, jobs, housing and an end to the Special Powers Act have developed into the demand for a United Ireland — without which true civil rights cannot be won.

Written and narrated by Bernadette McAliskey, the video uses archive film, interviews, murals, posters and songs of the period.

Life Memberships Granted Two New York Hibernians

One of the highlights of the recent LAOH 84th Biennial National Convention was the granting of Life Membership to two dedicated New York State women — Mollie Barrett and Monica Burke — in recognition of their outstanding service to the LAOH over a long period of years.

A large portion of Mollie's life was devoted to our Order. During her more than 30 years of active membership she held a wide range of offices at the division, county, and state levels. No task was too great for Mollie. Whether it be making soda bread or balancing the state treasury, her dedication and enthusiasm was tireless. While now only active on a spiritual level, she continues to be an inspiration to her Hibernian sisters and loved ones.

Monica's commitment to Hibernianism and service to our order have won her the respect of sister Hibernians. She has been active in Hibernian circles for 30 years, holding numerous offices at division, county, and state levels, and is presently serving as Immediate Past New York State President. Monica has attended National and State conventions for 28 years, often acting as committee chairperson or committee secretary. Most recently, she chaired the Ritual Revision Committee at the 1986 National Convention in Buffalo. She has served on a wide range of administrative and social committees in Irish-American circles, including the New York City St. Patrick's Day Parade and the 150 years AOH

Bicentennial Celebration and has extended her Hibernian dedication to activities in religious and community affairs and programs. Among her personal endeavors is fundraising for Irish students who attend American colleges, and care for the elderly. Our Hibernian motto has been fully exemplified in Monica's fraternal and secular activities.

The Ethel Kennedy Division, Macomb County, has been busy with various activities. We started off our season of thanks and celebration with the donation of two turkeys and all the fixings for needy families to the Third Order of St. Francis Hall in Detroit. In the following week we shared a delightful evening of dinner and spirits with some of our sister Hibernians of Rose Kennedy Division at a new nightclub in Detroit, Dunleavy's Z's Riverplace.

Several of our ladies have been attending joint meetings with the Macomb men, planning the 1989 Michigan State Convention to be held May 19 and 20. We are planning to have the best convention possible.

DOLORES VOELKER

The National Vice President, Dolores E. Voelker, was born on Memorial Day. In her early years, she and her twin sister, Dorothy, thought the parade was in celebration of their birthday. Of course, by the time they were eight or nine, they knew better. Being identical twins, they are often mistaken for each other.

Dolores comes from a Hibernian family. Both her parents were charter members of Division 15 in Whitestone, N.Y. In fact, her mother was the organizer and first president in 1942 of the then Division 15 LAOH. Her mother's roots are in

Vice President Voelker and Twin Born on Memorial Day

Limerick on her father's side and Roscommon on her mother's side. Her father's grandmother, Barbara Murray, was born in Leitrim and her daughter was Ellen Laydon Voelker. When she was baptized, Dolores was given her grandmother's name, Ellen, as her middle name.

As a Hibernian, Dolores has served in almost every office in her division, including several terms as president, and in many offices on the County Board, culminating in the presidency of the Queens County Board in 1979. Subsequent to that, she was the New York State Chairman of Catholic Action and Chairman of Missions, a position she held when elected National Secretary in Buffalo in 1986. She is a very dedicated Hibernian who gives of herself unstintingly in behalf of our noble Order. For many years she was a member of the Queens County Degree Team and has been attending State and National Conventions since 1956.

A true Geminarian, she has many interests — writing, cooking, entertaining, photography, and traveling among them. She is a graduate of the Germain School of Photography and is a qualified professional photographer. At the request of the president of Revlon International, she made an 8mm movie for Revlon which was shown at their office in Paris. Having gotten interested in cooking when she was thirteen, she earned the nickname "Cookie", a name given to her by her father. She has a great sense of humor and is genuinely interested in people. If a friend is sick, she can count on Dolores' frequent phone calls.

During the war years, she spent many volunteer hours in Flushing Hospital as a nurse's aide and later taught First Aid for the Red Cross.

Dolores retired after 27 years as an executive secretary for the National Association of Letter Carriers.

While traveling in Ireland a few years ago, she won a prize for writing the winning limerick. She is an ardent Mets fan and her pet peeve is having her first name spelled incorrectly. She loves to say she is a two "O" Dolores which means never spell her name Dolores! She resides in Whitestone with her twin sister Dorothy and both of them enjoy the love of their brother Bob, his wife, Claire, whom they adore, and their six children and five grandchildren.

Dolores E. Voelker is also a member of the committee to select the Grand Marshal for the 1989 St. Patrick's Day Parade.

The Women of 1916 — Easter Rising

During the surrender of the heroic rebels during the Easter uprising, nurse Elizabeth O'Farrell left the insurgent ranks at the general post office (G.P.O.) with a white flag signifying capitulation. She had come forward in the name of Padraic Pearse, commanding officer, who would surrender: "In order to prevent the slaughter of unarmed people and in the hope of saving the lives of our followers."

But Miss O'Farrell, although the first to officially surrender, was not the last of the "women of 1916." Mary Holt Moore cites a number of female Irish Republican prisoners, which roster we present below:

This list does not cite others who are mentioned in various texts. Some women had initially served as couriers sending the rising message and counter-messages as the first hours of confusion ended in decisiveness. Eamonn MacThomais also cites Helen Maloney reading the Proclamation on Easter Sunday. Later on she would tend to the wounded at Cork Hill along with Dr. Kathleen Lynn. He also mentions nurse Keogh who was killed near Mount Brown Hill while assisting the wounded.

At first the rebels had shunned the presence of women in any military outpost, probably fearing for their safety during the almost suicidal defense and perhaps also fearing personal outrages after the battle. Maire nic Shuibhlaigh, Eileen ni Riain and other women convinced Mac Donagh, Pearse, Connolly, and Clarke to allow the women to stay at the rebel positions. Mary Holt Moore notes: "The only commandant to steadfastly refuse the women was Eamon de Valera on Boland's Mill."

Other names mentioned in the heroic stand were: Helena Maloney of the Citizens Army Ambulance Corps; Margaret Shinnider, a sharpshooter, wounded near the Russell hotel; Louise Duffy and Con Colbert at the Lane Distillery; Rose McNamara of the Cumann Na Ban; Winifred Carney and Julia Grennar at the G.P.O.

And of course the woman most known at the time was Countess (Georgianna Booth) Markievicz, an active member of the Cumann Na Ban, the women's paramilitary organization. She and fifteen other women were stationed at Stephen's Green. Her later words could echo the feelings of these heroic women of the Easter rising: "While Ireland is not free, I remain a rebel . . . pledged to one thing . . . a free and independent Republic."

Ladies New York News

The Hibernian women of Westchester County have had a full calendar of social and cultural activities:

The weekend of September 9-11 marked the annual county weekend in East Durham, New York. In October, a large contingent attended Testimonial Dinner-Dances in Troy and Brooklyn honoring New York State Presidents Edward Carley and Ann S. Healion, respectively. November's events included a county dance honoring Past County President Terry O'Connor and County Vice-President Michael Dwyer, as well as participation in the Annual Irish Children's Toy Drive chaired by Lorraine O'Sullivan.

As 1988 drew to a close, Divisions 2 Yonkers, 10 Peekskill, 11 Tarrytown, and 17 White Plains, held their installations of officers for the New Year. Recent division activities included a Dinner-Dance held by Division 17, White Plains, honoring past and present presidents, and the distribution of gifts to Rosary Hill Cancer Home by Division 11, Tarrytown. Division 11 also sponsored a New Year's Eve Dance, the proceeds of which will be used to renovate the Transfiguration Church Hall.

Westchester ladies are very proud of their Chaplain, Rev. Michael T. Driscoll, who received the First Founder's Award in recognition of his founding the Carmelite Community in Florida. This honor was bestowed upon him at a dinner held at the Boca Raton Hotel in Florida.

The Ladies, Queen Maeve Division 1 AOH, Erie County, Buffalo, New York, installed the newly elected officers for the coming year before the Christmas party on December 10, 1988.

The officers are President Nancy Kelly, Vice President Patricia Ryan Dudek, Recording Secretary Marilyn Fadel, Financial Secretary Catherine Casey, Treasurer Patricia Caudle, Irish Historian Mary Ellen McCarthy, Mistress at Arms Phyllis Kessel, Sentinel Nellie McCorty, Admissions, Mary Carr, and Catholic Action, Jean Sherman.

AT THE MIKE is Sr. Meg Redling, president of LAOH, Queens County, introducing Sr. Sheila Twomey, the guest of honor at the 113th Annual Queens County Ball, held on November 19. Sr. Twomey has held many Division and County offices, including that of Queens County President.

1989 — Is It Too Late For A New Year's Resolution? There is an old Chinese Proverb that states, may your troubles last as long as your New Year's Resolutions! That would never hold true for a good Irishman, for we never give up when the going gets tough.

The beginning of a new year could be the beginning of Hibernianism for a new member. Wouldn't that be a wonderful way to start out a year or new Resolution with? Think about it. If every Division throughout the country made a New Year's Resolution to increase Hibernian membership and kept that promise, consider the triumphs not only for each Division but the entire organization as well.

With the enthusiasm and dedication I've witnessed in so many members over the years, it seems to me this particular resolution would be easy for many of our talented LAOH Sisters. We are forever willing and eager to bring forth what we believe in and, being Irish, always the last to give up. I think it is a wonderful way to begin a year, by letting people know there are those who really care about each other. Isn't that what being Irish is all about? By taking that first step, you are proving the first part of our motto: Friendship. Getting these friends to that meeting and showing them the second part of our motto, Unity, and the third part, Christian Charity, would give them the experience of how much we all need each other. Make that LAOH Resolution today, for you see, it is NEVER too late!

Word comes that Division 4's Christmas Party, chaired by Ruth Knapik, met everyone's expectations and more; however, the division was grieved by the loss of two members, Ellen Hanley and Lorraine Owens. Lorraine was a conscientious Hibernian, holding the offices of county chairman of missions and division financial secretary at the time of her death.

Division 14 also suffered loss in the passing of sister Rita Rice.

Baltimore County Division One found its trip to Longwood Gardens to be a social as well as a financial success.

In January State President Nancy Perrin was feted by her family and friends with a surprise birthday-retirement party. Part of the surprise was a new bedroom TV.

On Saturday, November 26, 1988 the members of the AOH and LAOH CT. State Boards hosted a Dinner Dance at the AOH Hall in Stamford, to honor Immediate Past State Presidents Martin Devaney and Mildred Scanlon.

During the evening, Mildred Scanlon was presented with a National Life Membership by Immediate Past National President Sheila M. Clifford. National Director Frank Kearney, Sr., presented Martin Devaney with an award from the AOH National Board.

The successful event was chaired by Tom Eagan and Kay Egan.

New Haven County Board: County President Sue Sweeney has been visiting each Division to install the new officers for 1989. She has been accompanied by Past National President Sheila Clifford, who has acted as the installing officer.

On January 4th, the duo installed Division 66 officers; Jaclyn Reilly is president. On January 7th, they appeared in Meriden to install Division 15's officers, where JoAnn Flynn was installed as president. Within the next two weeks they will perform the same task in Naugatuck and Derby.

Cuyahoga County: Friendship, Unity and Christian Charity were all very well displayed during our annual Christmas Party with almost 100% attendance of Divisions Five and Ten along with their invited guests. Christian Charity came aglow with the results of a collection taken up for Providence House, a home for battered children which is run by St. Joseph Sister Hope Greener. Part of the collection went to Div. Five member Nancy Murphy, who has recently undergone drastic surgery.

The highlight of the evening was the installation of the 1989-1991 County Board officers: President Marilyn Madigan, Vice President Sheila Crawford, Secretary Kathleen Murphy, Treasurer Joan O'Donnell, Historian Rana Chambers, Catholic Action Jeri Corcoran, Mistress-at-Arms Peggy Ladika and Sentinel Nancy Murphy.

Division Ten had a Membership Social on Sunday January 22 and members were encouraged to invite at least one guest.

On Sunday, February 5 at 10:00 a.m., a St. Brigid's Day Mass was held at St. Patrick's Church on Bridge Ave. Breakfast followed in the lower Hall and was catered by Division Five member Patricia Kern and her husband, AOH member Jim Kern.

The Shamrock of the Month Award represents a special note of thanks to a very special individual who has been an outstanding Hibernian leader and given totally of herself beyond the limits. This month, our new County President, Marilyn Madigan, made this award to Joan Cavanaugh, outgoing County President. Her die-hard dedication and leadership eased us through many difficult moments, especially the long hours she spent on our successful National Convention. evening of the first snow, but like true Hibernians, all appeared in appreciation of Diane's two years as president. The ladies are busy planning for their annual float in Meridens St. Patrick's Day Parade, when they intend to win the entry trophy... again!

Division 66, Bridgeport: Fairfield County President AnnMarie McEvoy installed the 1989 officers at the Annual Christmas Banquet. Marge Sheehan has returned as president.

Division 66, Waterbury: Christmas started early for the members of Division 66, which held its 1st Christmas Bazaar on November 19. It was a complete success and the members are looking forward to the 1989 Bazaar. At the Annual Christmas Banquet, in place of a grab bag the ladies decided to collect donations for a family that had quintuplets and were in need of help, and to donate baby items for the nursery at St. Mary's Hospital.

Penny McCarthy, Linda Galvin, and Arlene Hamel chaired the annual Hibernian Children's Party that was held at the AOH Hall. President Jaclyn Reilly has arranged for the Annual St. Brigid's Mass to be held on February 1 prior to the business meeting. Plans are being completed for the annual St. Patrick's programs.

Pennsylvania News

The months of January and February are rather inactive for many LAOH Divisions in Pennsylvania. In anticipation of inclement weather, meetings are not scheduled; nevertheless, members were kept busy auditing books, preparing the annual reports, planning for gala celebrations for St. Patrick's Day. This curtailment of activities followed the series of Christmas parties as each Division celebrated in its own way.

Allegheny County, Mary Margaret Maurath, president. Wilmerding Division 16 hosted the County Meeting and Christmas Party. Nancy Olivo, president, and her members, excelling in the culinary arts, served a delicious Christmas Dinner and entertained the guests with a great party. The meeting was held in the AOH Wilmerding Hall and thanks to our Hibernian Brothers, the hall was decorated in full Christmas spirit.

County officers and Division presidents met on January 16 at Kaufmann's Dining Room to finalize the plans for the annual St. Brigid Mass and Brunch. Sarah Mains, county treasurer, is Chairman of the event.

Division 21, Castle Shannon, Kathleen Parker, president. Division Chaplain Msgr. Charles Owen Rice was honored on his 80th birthday.

Luzerne County, Janette Wydo, president. The County Board Members were the guests of their County President at a Christmas Party.

Washington County, Dorothy Weldon, president. Division 4 Charleroi elected Dorothy Weldon as president. The first major event for the new officers will be a Mass and Breakfast in honor of St. Brigid at St. Jerome's Church in Charleroi. Their Chaplain Rev. John Marcucci will officiate. The Division is saddened by death of their historian, Irene Barrows, who gave her reports in her own special manner of wit and liting laugh.

John E. Lawe Was An Honored Irish American

JOHNE E. LAWE

John E. Lawe, the Irish immigrant and former bus cleaner, who led 36,000 transit workers on an 11-day city-wide transit strike in New York in 1980 died of cancer recently.

During the 1980 strike, Mr. Lawe was President of the TWU of Greater New York, Local 100. He rose to International President of the TWU of America, which represents 100,000 workers nationwide, on May 1, 1985.

Mr. Lawe, also one of the most prominent members of New York's Irish-American communities, had the honor of serving as Grand Marshal of the City's St. Patrick's Day Parade in 1987.

He is only the fourth International President of the TWU of America, the others being the late Michael J. Quill (1934-1966); President Emeritus Matthew Guinan (1966-1979), and William G. Lindner (1979-1985).

Mr. Lawe was born in Kilglass, Strokestown, in County Roscommon, Ireland in 1919. He came to America in 1949.

His work in behalf of the Irish community in America and for the victims of repression in Northern Ireland, has gained him many accolades from Irish American groups. In addition to being the 1987 St. Patrick's Day Grand Marshal, he was named "Irishman of the Year" in 1986 by the Grand Council of United Emerald Societies, and has been honored by the Irish National Caucus, the Irish Northern Aid Society and the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Mr. Lawe is survived by his widow, the former Mary Heaney of Longford, Ireland; son, Desmond; and daughters Deirdre Behrens and Patricia.

California Suffers Loss Of Revered Life Member

Dennis Crowley was born in Northern California on March 7, 1912 and died in Los Angeles on December 13, 1988. He is survived by his wife, Mary Lou, three sons, two daughters and two grandsons.

Dennis was an active member in the Hibernian since he became a member at the age of eighteen. He served as the National Director of California, state president, was county president of Los Angeles twice, was a delegate to the National conventions, and became a life member in 1978. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus, and active in his church, St. Francis de Sales, serving as a Eucharistic Minister, helping the shut-ins in his area. He was always willing to go the extra mile for his friends and fellow Hibernians.

Dennis served in World War Two, where he rose in the ranks from

Andrew Smith Was An AOH Life Member

The members of the Judge James J. Comerford Division No. 1, AOH, Pinellas County, Florida, announce with deep sorrow, the passing of one of their most distinguished brothers, Andrew Smith, on November 3, 1988, in Clearwater, Florida. Andy was a life member of the Order, holding the post at his death of state and division historian. He was a gentle soul who enjoyed everything Irish and whose contributions are too numerous to list.

Andy was born in 1902 in Scotland from Irish parentage, who had immigrated from Baileborough, County Cavan, Ireland. At the age of 17 Andy left home and returned to Ireland where he joined the I.R.A., fighting in the early 1900's along side Eamonn DeValera for Irish freedom.

While on the run at age 21, he fled to Australia and remained there for a year. Andy returned home to Scotland, where he married his childhood sweetheart, Lillie. A short time later he immigrated to Canada and subsequently brought Lillie out to join him. Lillie and Andy made their next move to Detroit, where he was employed at the Ford Motor Company. He attended night school to further his education and advanced upwards through the Ford Motor Company. After 35 years with Ford, Andy and Lillie retired to Clearwater, Florida, in 1968.

He was an inspiration to those of us, in and out of the Irish communities, who knew him. He was one of those beloved figures you do not forget and Andy will long be remembered — fondly.

He is survived by his daughter, Nora Willet, and 12 grandchildren.

Emerald Isle Div. Member Passes Away

WASHINGTON D.C. — James A. Shrewsbury passed away on December 9, 1988 at his residence. He had been a resident of Washington, D.C. area for the past twenty-five years. Brother Shrewsbury served as sentinel of the Emerald Isle Division, AOH and was a faithful attendant at meetings.

Brother Shrewsbury is survived by a loving son, James F. Shrewsbury, daughters Mary Catherine Fallon and Donna Marie Fearon, and a brother John. Mass of Christian Burial was offered at St. Gerard Maiella Catholic Church, Kirkwood, MO. Interment was in Jefferson Barracks National Cemetery, St. Louis, MO.

Celtic New Year Celebrated

The MacBride Chapter, Irish Northern Aid, recently hosted a Celtic New Year social at which Patricia Dwyer, chairwoman, Rockland County AOH Feis for several years, was the honored guest. The speaker for the evening was Dr. Paul Loneygan, Celtic Scholar and chairman of the Department of Romance Languages, Queen's College, CUNY.

Mrs. Dwyer, a legal secretary, has done much to foster a love and knowledge of the arts and culture of Ireland among the younger generation. Patricia is a charter member of the Irish American Cultural Centre, Rockland Co., a sponsor of the local Gaelic Athletic Association, active in politics and the pro-life movement. She was elected the first president of the Rockland Co., LAOH, and is currently their treasurer.

The festive evening also included a fashion show by Una's Irish Heritage, music by the True Celts and the lighting of the candles representing the six Celtic Nations (Eire, Alba, Mannin, Cymru, Kernow and Breizh).

In Brooklyn

Judge Bellard Grand Marshal

Judge William T. Bellard, a member of Division No. 4, AOH was elected Grand Marshal of the 1989 Brooklyn Irish American Parade. Judge Bellard has a long record of outstanding community service and has held office both in Div. No. 4 and currently on the Kings County Board AOH. Bill was the Brehon of this year's Great Irish Fair.

Three outstanding AOH men,

John McGuinness of Div. No. 4, Paul Morrissey of Div. No. 35 and John Comer of Div. No. 19, were each chosen to be an aide to the Grand Marshal in the 1989 Brooklyn parade. John McGuinness was selected to represent the Brooklyn Irish American business community; he is the owner of McGuinness Irish Imports on Avenue S. Paul is the aide representing the Brooklyn AOH and is currently the recording secretary of the Kings County Board. John Comer was elected the representative of Irish Americans in Education in Brooklyn. He is the community superintendent of District 22.

Al O'Hagan Announces For NY State President

Al O'Hagan, a third generation, 38-year veteran of the AOH has announced that he will seek the office of New York State President at the upcoming Convention scheduled for July in upstate Auburn County.

O'Hagan, a State Board officer for the past 12 years, is currently the State Vice President.

The popular Hibernian was chosen as the Grand Marshal of the New York City St. Patrick's Day Parade in the year of our Order's 150th Anniversary. "He best typified the principles of Hibernianism," stated parade spokesman Frank Bierre.

O'Hagan, one of the foremost experts on the AOH ritual, has been asked by the AOH national president to produce a training video for degree teams throughout the Order.

Family Tradition

Al O'Hagan's father and grandfather were national life members of the AOH. Grandfather John O'Hagan from County Derry was the New York state president from 1925 to 1927.

The O'Hagan's were the first grandfather/grandson combination to be Grand Marshal of the Saint Patrick's Day Parade. (John O'Hagan led the 1929 parade).

Al O'Hagan has acquired a long list of accomplishments in the Irish-American community. His AOH Great Irish Fair raises astronomical funds for Catholic Charities each year and is considered to be the largest Irish festival in the world.

AL O'HAGAN

This fair is also credited as being responsible for the current plans for the renewal of Coney Island, which in itself is a major contribution to New York.

Martin Kelly, president of O'Hagan's home base of Kings County, Brooklyn, says, "Al O'Hagan is an organizing genius. His election will be an asset to our statewide organization."

Nassau County Ball

MAN AND WOMAN OF THE YEAR awards for 1988 were presented to Margaret Thornton, Division 14, and Robert Nesbitt, president, Division 6. Sharing the honorees' pleasure are, from left, Pater King, Division 7, chairman of the ball; and Thomas Gullotta, Nassau County Executive. The event was the most successful in many years.

NOTE: Please forward questions to Mr. William T. Malone, Dept. of English, Center for Irish Studies, The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064.

Q. Please provide me with information on my family name McCall? Donald McCall, Truxton, N.Y.

A. Two Irish words are joined to form your name: cruadh, the ua pronounced like ue in fluent the d is silent, and the h gives the word a slight final aspiration; and laoiach just like lee. Together they mean 'toughness of the warrior' or simply 'tough warrior.' No doubt someone was bestowed with this appellation for his military prowess.

The spelling of your name is the modern variant akin to Crilly, Croll, O'Crilly, and these same forms preceded with Mac. The O prefix is rare but appears as early as 1647, when Friar O'Mellan gives the Irish spelling O Crilly to a variant. From what I have researched it seems that your name appeared in an official census of Co. Louth in 1659. But the forms are MacCroll, MacCrolley, and Croll; however, at least we begin to see forms close to your name being used early.

Because so many modern variants of your name exist one cannot determine the most probable origin without knowing a little more about where your family originated. For instance, several prominent Americans named Crowley emigrated from Co. Cork and these do not share any relationship to the names occurring in the 17th century census from Cos. Louth and Armagh. Nor do the Cork Crowleys look as if they descended from the James O'Crilly who fought in one of the O'Neill regiments of James II's Irish army.

Q. Can you tell me something about my name O'Rourke? Frank O'Rourke, Chester, MD.

A. Prior to the Norman conquest, several O'Rourkes sat on the throne of the Kingdom of Connacht. These Lords of Breffny feuded incessantly with their arch rivals, the O'Reillys. Whoever donated owned the more land. Land, however, changed hands on a regular basis. O'Rourke holdings were at their zenith when they controlled the territory from Sligo to Kells in County Meath.

O'Rourkes enjoyed a comfortable life style until Oliver Cromwell ravished the island. Without enough wealth to be earned many Irish aristocrats ventured to the Continent. A branch of the O'Rourkes settled in the Principality of Poland, a puppet State of the Russian Empire. Also, Two Owen O'Rourkes led troops in defense of Maria Teresa of Austria from 1750-80. Prince Joseph O'Rourke served as General — in Chief of the Russian Army from 1700. County Patrick O'Rourke also served in the Russian army in the middle of the 19th c.

Another branch went to France. Colonel Count John O'Rourke (1705-86), served in the army of the French Kings. The proliferate Father Francis O'Rourke (1660-1741), kept the Irish language alive among the literatures of the continent. A common Celtic heritage, agricultural economy, and Roman Catholicism support a good relationship between France and Ireland. Even today, Irish students prefer French as their first second language.

Many O'Rourkes remained in Ireland. Calling themselves Chief of the Name, O'Rourkes staunchly opposed English hegemony any where in Ireland. Brian O'Rourke hanged in London in 1684, he could not speak a word of English, such was his loyalty to his culture. Part of early Irish legend includes the story of Prince Tiernan O'Rourke of Breffny's adventures after his wife, Dervorgilla, was carried off by Dermot MacMorrogh.

Today your surname is ranked among the 100 most frequent surnames in Ireland. O'Rourke still remains most common in Cos. Cavan, Leitrim, Sligo — original holdings of Breffny.

Q. Could you provide me with material on the meaning of my family name Hallerman? Ronald Hallerman, Staten Island, N.Y.

A. Indulge me while I delve into a little linguistics. Hallerman derives from the old Irish word allmuir 'one from overseas, a foreigner.' In the plural allmuire means imported goods, valuable of foreign origin — law records attest such a meaning. And the plural can also refer to 'foreign parts.'

allmuir consists of two words, al is the preposition 'beyond, over,' from the old Irish al — such a form still appears when the syllable receives stress as in the case of your name. The initial A is the prefixed aspiration caused by the preceding o 'descendant of, grandson of,' common in many Irish names. Muir is cognate with the Latin word mare 'sea.' Muir can mean sea in any sense including water as opposed to land.

The name may at one time have referred to a specific individual(s) who arrived in Eire from beyond the sea. Because of Ireland's location the sea often remains foremost in many people's minds, and for all types of reasons. Anyone coming from beyond the sea would be a rara avis to many, especially if the traveller, for whom the title allmuir would be so appropriate, could not communicate with the inhabitants. Records can not exist concerning the first instance of the name, but they could reveal the first recording of the name. The name could have been used for centuries before writing became popular.

Nota Bene: With each question please include a self-addressed stamped business envelope and a check in the amount of ten dollars ($10.00), payable to William T. Malone. Mr. Malone is a doctoral candidate in Irish Studies at CUA.

Pro-Life Report

"Moving to Overturn Roe v. Wade and to Restore Protection for Unborn Babies."

The good news is that we elected a pro-life president, George Bush, whom we hope will be able to nominate a few more pro-life Supreme Court justices. Then the court will be able to overturn the tragic 1973 Supreme Court decision which legalized abortion on demand through the entire nine months of pregnancy.

Some good news is that three states had referendums during the recent elections and the voters in these states (Arkansas, Colorado, Michigan) by a wide margin agreed not to fund abortions. Back in 1970 Colorado had been the first state to repeal its law making abortion illegal but presently the people of that state want to restrict access to abortions or at least not to pay for them.

The recent victories on these referendums point out what people in the pro-life movement already knew — that the American people do not favor abortion as the pro-choice/abortionists have tried to make us believe through their costly and extensive polling and advertising campaigns. Sixteen years ago the pro-abortionists had to win their victory through the Supreme Court on a newly invented "right of privacy" because thirty-two states between 1970-72 had passed referendums to maintain the then present anti-abortion statutes.

The National Abortion Rights Action League (N.A.R.A.L.); Planned Parenthood; N.O.W.; the A.C.L.U.; People for the American Way and other pro-abortion groups are now worried as they sense that we are getting nearer to overturning Roe v.

Wade. Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, expressed her worry over the momentum that the right to life people have gained. She stated on 5/10/88 in the New York Times that the anti-abortion groups "obviously feel that it is within their reach to overturn Roe v. Wade and make abortion illegal again. And the frightening thing is that I'm not sure they're wrong." A few months from now the U.S. Supreme Court will hear a Missouri case that strikes a blow at Roe v. Wade and it is the opinion of many people on both sides of the abortion issue that the Court may restrict abortion but probably will not overturn Roe v. Wade this time around. However, it is the thinking of many people on both sides of this issue that Roe will eventually be overturned. When Roe is overturned the battle will go back to the states whereby each state will decide on the legality of abortion.

Another optimistic sign is the witness of ten thousand people who have been arrested since the time of the Democratic Convention in Atlanta, Ga., last summer; these people blocked the entrances of abortion clinics in order to shut them down so that babies' lives could be saved. These religious people and civil rights activists have been courageous and heroic in their efforts and they have captured the hearts of the American people due to their brave "laying down their lives" for the unborn babies. Their youthful leader, Rev. Randall Terry of Binghamton, N.Y., as well as they, has drawn strength from the Scripture which states: "Rescue those unjustly sentenced to death; don't stand back and let them die" (Proverbs 24:11). Roman Catholic Bishop Austin Vaughan of Newburgh, New York, has been arrested several times with this group because he wants to stop the killing of babies by abortion.

There are interesting and hopeful political rumblings happening. Staunch pro-abortion advocate and Scripture also reminds us that if you and I have enough faith we can move a mountain (Matt. 21:27). I ask each of you to put your faith into practice, into action, and with the help of God, like Martin Luther King, Jr., "we shall overcome" and win another of the great civil rights battles of our century — protecting the lives of babies in the womb, who presently have no protection.

Hibernians Join the Annual Right to Life March

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Representatives of the Ancient Order of Hibernians were among the 67,000 amassed in the nation's capital for the 16th Annual Right to Life March. Members from divisions in New York, Massachusetts, Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland helped swell the ranks of crusaders. They were led by AOH National President Michael Coogan from Ohio and Right to Life AOH National Chairman William Farrell from Massachusetts.

On the ellipse behind the White House, they heard President Bush say, "I think the Supreme Court decision in Roe vs. Wade was wrong and should be overturned."

HIBERNIANS from Lynn, MA, Division 10, with the capitol building in the background.

ON THE ELLIPSE behind the White House, AOH and LAOH members starting to gather around the banner of the District of Columbia Board. Behind the banner is AOH National President Michael Coogan, and AOH National Right to Life Chairman William Farrell, holding the Tricolor. The White House is in the center background.

DAN FLANNERY from St. Brendan Division 1, Berks County, PA, and his grandson, J. Joseph Filak, ready their sign for the parade on the ellipse behind the White House.

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

Happy St. Patrick's Day, Brother & Sister Hibernians, and all the ships at sea! Let's go to press.

FOOTBALL — College type — Notre Dame showed the national press, the world and the fans, including the guy who was occupying the White House until January 20th that they are No. 1. Notre Dame was impressive against West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl. Lou Holtz is quite proud of his team. He has every right to be.

At this point, YR wishes to thank Miss, Mrs. or Ms. Kitty Trainor for sending him a previous column he wrote concerning ND. She said he predicted ND No. 1. Not really true, but he will accept the accolades. Actually he said something about perhaps they could be No. 1. In this game, you take what your readers will give you. Thanks, Kitty. If you're in NYC for the St. Patrick's Day Parade, please look up YR. He would love to thank you in person.

PRO-FOOTBALL — As YR writes this, it is the start of Super Bowl XXIII weekend in Miami. The Cincinnati Bengals and the San Francisco 49ers battle for all the chips. Consensus of opinion at this time, is to go with the 49ers. The books in Las Vegas must be giving long odds on the Bengals. Somebody could make a killing if the Bengals win.

Buffalo, the sentimental favorite of Update New Yorkers, regardless of whom they pulled for all year, gave it the old college try but came up short. Next year, Marv Levy should be able to make it to the Super Bowl.

San Francisco did something everybody said could not be done. They beat Chicago at home at Soldier's Field. YR once was on this field. Not as a player, coach or manager but as a tourist many years ago when he was in Uncle Sam's Canoe Club. Now, that's trivial! Chicago got to the game with San Francisco by defeating a team in a game that has been and will go down in history as "The Fog Bowl". On television you could not see 10 yards. But they played the game and the Bears won. YR's mind is still foggy. Who was it Chicago played?

The NFL still has a substance abuse problem. Will they address it during the off-season. Time till tell. YR thinks the NFL and the owners, the coaches and the players union are sending the wrong message to the kids of America. The message sent, is "Don't flunk a urine test. But if you do, you will only get 30 days suspension." This isn't the message for the youth. Not when some of these kids in the neighborhoods, good and bad, find out the facts of economic life. You can work for a fast food chain and make the minimum wage, $3.65 or whatever. If you deal dope, you can own a BMW or Mercedes, have a cellular phone in the car, dress in the best rags a designer can make and still have pocket money of $10,000 to $20,000. Something is drastically wrong with this picture.

How do you change it? Get involved! Find out what's happening. If you have any athletic talent, donate your time as a coach. If you don't have talent, per YR, then support the teams and leagues that are working with the youth of your community.

STATE NEWS: Florida

By NICK SCHNEIDER

1988 was a banner year for the Florida AOH. Membership increased beyond expectations; a new division was formed and is growing rapidly. During the month of December, a second division in Broward County is in the process of being formed.

Recently, Brevard County Division 1 President Bob Schneider and his Vice President (and first cousin) Nick Schneider, journeyed to the City of Melbourne to donate $250 from the Division to the school library of the Melbourne Central Catholic High School. Upon receiving the donation, the school principal, Mr. Chip Weaver, indicated that he would endeavor to use part of the money for books on Irish history.

The 1989 State Convention will be held in May in Ft. Lauderdale, with Broward County Division 1 as host. President Martin McAndrew and his diligent workers are diligently preparing for the event.

Brevard County Division 1: The division held its annual Christmas party in Indian Harbor Beach, with 68 AOH and LAOH members in attendance. Also attending was State Vice President John Cullinan and his lovely wife Kathleen. At the Division's first meeting of 1989 the following Board of officers was installed: President Bob Schneider; Vice President Nick Schneider; Recording Secretary Ernie Kees; Financial Secretary Frank Harrington; Treasurer Tom Schneider; Chairman/Standing Committee Pat McCann; Marshal

Bill Rothamel; Sentinel Sal Vitale; Historian Jerry O'Shea. Brevard County Division 2: Each year the division supplies Thanksgiving baskets for needy families in the community. Distribution this year was from the rectories of Ascension Parish and St. Joseph Parish.

The Division's annual Christmas party in N.E. Palm Bay was a great success. Jackie Lepper played Santa Claus and presented gifts to 19 children from the local Children's Home. During the festivities, State President Jack Boyle installed the 1989 slate of Division officers.

Manatee County Division 1: President Paul Finnerty reports that the 1989 Board of Officers were installed at the December meeting. Paul also indicated that the Division has great plans for 1989.

Broward County Division 1: Officers for 1989 are President Martin McAndrew; Vice President Don Fortune; Recording Secretary Don Hartnett; Financial Secretary Bill Maroney; Treasurer Ed McCready; Chairman/Standing Committee Tom Howley; Sentinel Jim Lawless; Marshal carry the majority of college games during the week. On the weekends, all three networks have some college ball. Just the proper piece to keep you out of the cold and indoors in front of a warm TV set.

TENNIS — YR received a post card from a member in Manhattan. At least the return address was Manhattan. There was a tournament in November in Madison Square Garden. The writer gave YR some information about the coaches for two of the leading players on the circuit. Both coaches are Irish. YR did not have the opportunity to do anything with that piece of information at that time. YR would love to follow up on some of these items in the spring and summer, if possible. So if that reader or any reader would let YR know in advance what's happening, he might be able to do something.

WINTER SPORTS — If you are a skier, you know there hasn't been much natural snow around the Northeast. Most ski resorts are using very sophisticated equipment to make snow. The lack of natural snow has hurt these resorts. It also hurt the professionals in the East. Colorado is about one of the few places that seems to be thriving this ski season. This depends on who you believe.

HOCKEY — The NFL still must address the excessive violence by some players in using their sticks as lethal weapons. Let's knock off the cheap shots and play the game with finesse and intelligence. Let these animals join the professional wrestlers on their circuit.

The Red Army Team has been touring the NFL. These guys are quite impressive. They are also quite disciplined. They play good hard-hitting hockey with good passing.

TIME LEFT—00:00 — Until the next time on the sidelines, keep those cards and letters coming to PO Box 156 ESS, Binghamton, NY 13904.

BREVARD COUNTY, FL, Div. 1 President Bob Schneider, right, and Vice President Nick Schneider, left, present a $250 check to Chip Weaver, principal of Melbourne Central High School, for the school library.

Bill Rothamel; Sentinel Sal Vitale; Historian Jerry O'Shea.

Brevard County Division 2: Each year the division supplies Thanksgiving baskets for needy families in the community. Distribution this year was from the rectories of Ascension Parish and St. Joseph Parish.

Pasco County Division 1: President Tom Condon reports that the Spring Quarterly State Board of Officers meeting will be hosted by his division in New Port Richey on 4 March 1989. The meeting will be held in conjunction with the division's annual dance. These quarterly meetings are always festive occasions and most of the members make it for the weekend. Therefore, arrangements have been made with the Sheraton Inn in New Port Richey for a special price of $35 per night per room. Be sure to indicate that you are with the AOH group when you call for reservations at (813) 847-9005. The deadline for reservations is 20 February 1989.

Once again I urge all divisions to send me information regarding your activities. One way to accomplish this is to put me on your division monthly bulletin mailing list: Nick Schneider, 240 Eyre Avenue, Merritt Island, Florida 32953.

Florida's First Chaplain Dies

Many brother and sister Hibernians were saddened recently because of the death of Father Michael A. Reilly on December 17, 1988. The 45-year-old Irish-born priest died of a brain tumor after an illness of more than a year. Father Tony, as he was called by his many friends, was Florida's first state chaplain and served in that capacity from 1979 until 1986. He was the founding chaplain of Division 1 in Fort Lauderdale, serving from its founding in 1975 until 1986.

Shortly after his ordination in 1968 he came to the Archdiocese of Miami. His first parochial assignment was in Miami Beach. He became pastor of Our Lady of Mercy Church in Deerfield Beach in September, 1980. There he oversaw the construction of a new church building for the parish and celebrated the first mass in that building on Christmas of 1982.

President McAndrew announced that he is making final arrangements with Ft. Lauderdale radio station WSPF, 1580 AM on your radio dial, for Irish music and news from Ireland to be broadcast every Saturday at 12:00 noon, beginning 7 January 1989. If you would like to be a sponsor or know a friend or business acquaintance who would like to be a sponsor, call Martin McAndrew at (305) 739-0590 during the day or (305) 474-4737 during the evening.

New Virginia Division Honors Civil War General And Irish Brigade

By KATHLEEN McCABE MAHONEY

One of the newest kids on the AOH block is the Gen. Thomas F. Meagher Division in historic Fredericksburg, Virginia. Along with the women of the LAOH, the men enthusiastically celebrated the division's first birthday on December 6 at a local restaurant appropriately called "The Irish Brigade." Mr. Jack A'Hearn was re-elected president of this fledgling but energetic division.

A few days later the group, in a more somber mood, met at the site of a famous Civil War battleground to honor its namesake, Thomas Francis Meagher, and the hundreds of men who lost their lives in the Battle of Fredericksburg on December 13, 1862. Despite bitter cold winds, there was a large turnout to mark the 126th anniversary of the battle, which included a reenactment group representing the 28th Massachusetts.

After retracing the steps from the point where the Yankees would have crossed the Rappahannock River, the authentically dressed and equipped men and their followers participated in a moving remembrance, under the direction of the National Park Service, at the Richard Kirkland monument. Virginia State AOH President Jerry Gorman assisted Jack A'Hearn in the wreath-laying ceremony. With both Irish flags and Old Glory flapping in the cold December air punctuated with a fife and drum band, it was not difficult to imagine the bloody scene where the Irish Brigade lost 528 men in fifteen minutes.

One of the most courageous Civil War units in the Federal Army, the Irish Brigade was made up of men from New York and Pennsylvania in addition to the aforementioned 28th Massachusetts. They were put under the command of then Captain Thomas Francis Meagher, who was later promoted to brigadier general. Meagher was a native of Waterford, Ireland. He had arrived in this country in 1852 after escaping from Tasmania where he had been shipped for his part in the Irish uprising of 1848.

While the Irish Brigade took part in many battles, two sites are memorable for both uncommon bravery and for a staggering loss of life. The 1200 member force was among those at Antietam who charged the Confederates, forcing them to retreat but at great cost: only 500 men had survived. In a jarring reminder of the war's bloodiest single-day battle, the remains of four bodies were just discovered in a shallow grave at Antietam last March by some men with metal detectors. Experts were able to identify the four as members of the Irish Brigade through artifacts like a crucifix, part of a rosary, and a clay pipe.

From Antietam, it was on to Fredericksburg where General Lee was firmly entrenched at Marye's Heights. The soldiers knew that even the famed Irish luck couldn't help them in this hopeless attempt to vanquish the Confederates. Yet, with a sprig of evergreen in every man's cap for the "wearing of the green," the Brigade formed ranks and followed Burnside's insane orders to attack. An observer, Thomas Galwey of the Eighth Ohio Infantry, wrote of their exceptional valor that December day in 1862: "They try to go beyond but are slaughtered. Nothing could advance farther and live. They lie down doggedly, determined to hold the ground they have already taken."

Despite a withering hail of fire, some of the Brigade were able to take the hill within about twenty-five yards of Lee's position but could get no closer. General Meagher, who had started his day with approximately 1300 lads, found that close to 600 had been killed, badly wounded, or were missing.

The Irishmen's reputation for bravery and glorious style spread fast, but their fame was not confined to battlefield exploits alone. A few months after the terrible battle of Fredericksburg, the Brigade distinguished itself for unparalleled achievement in entertaining.

St. Patrick's Day, 1863, dawned under a sunny azure-blue sky just perfect for the meticulously planned celebration for the wearing of the green. In the weeks before, the undisciplined but undaunted men had used their spare moments for preparations which included the construction of a backwoods church in the area of their winter quarters and a well laid out steeplechase course.

The brigade chaplain who later went on to become president of Notre Dame, Father William Corby, began the day's festivities with a solemn high mass.

GEN. THOMAS F. MEAGHER

VIRGINIA STATE AOH HONOR GUARD at the ceremony placing a wreath in honor of General Meagher and the Irish Brigade at the Kirkland Memorial on the Sunken Road at the base of Marye's Heights, Fredericksburg National Military Park. Following his distinguished military career during the Civil War, General Meagher served as territorial governor of Montana. While serving in that office he died in a drowning accident while engaged in a reconnaissance of the Missouri River.

Gen. Meagher donned the formal dress of an Irish squire for the occasion and served as a combination lector and master of ceremonies. A visiting Jesuit gave the sermon, on St. Patrick, of course.

Then it was off to the races, the featured one being the "Grand Brigade Steeplechase" which carried a purse of five hundred dollars. Good food and spirits, naturally, along with foot races, greased pig contests, theatricals, and Irish dancing, left some of the men a wee bit under the weather the next day.

Considering the battlefield horrors that these soldiers had experienced just three months before, their exuberant celebrating was understandable.

For those Hibernians who plan to attend the national convention in the Old Dominion in 1990, consider a side trip to the Fredericksburg area. During your visit you will be able to walk the hallowed ground where the Irish Brigade fought so valiantly. The excellent museums and exhibits are operated by the National Park Service and are free. The short journey from the Crystal City convention site could not be easier and will take an hour. Your exit off Interstate 95 South is 45A for the Fredericksburg battlefield and museum. Conventioneers with more time to spend will find plenty to do and see in this historic area of Virginia.

STATE NEWS: Virginia Hibernians Protest Against Ian Paisley

NORFOLK, VA: Members of St. Patrick's Division 1 of Norfolk and Virginia Beach took part in a peaceful street-side protest directed at the Rev. Ian Paisley outside the local church where he was speaking.

The Division banner and protest signs against hatred were seen on all three local television news programs and Division President J. Thomas Brown III was quoted in the local newspaper. Included was his statement that "None of us need this gentleman, and I use the term loosely, to keep stirring up hatred. And, what gives him the right to call the Pope the anti-Christ?"

What it is...

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAOH members by 1953 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and the LAOH. In 1963, the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Bursary Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.

Patrick's Day Message of Peace and Justice

WASHINGTON — Patrick's Day, the day when the Irish people celebrate their heritage, is also a day when the Irish people are reminded of the need for peace and justice in Ireland.

"Peace, justice, and freedom for all the people of Ireland is our hope on St. Patrick's Day and every day. Our commitment to help accomplish these goals is constant throughout the year."

Joseph Doherty
"On St. Patrick's Day we stand in solidarity behind those legal processes which will put an end to the six years of injustice against Joseph Doherty. We specifically call on Attorney General Richard Thornburgh to grant him bail while his application for political asylum is reviewed. His six years of incarceration without having violated any U.S. laws is both abhorrent and inhumane, and it must end. We must also urge the Attorney General to let stand the Bureau of Immigration Appeal's decision allowing Mr. Doherty to apply for political asylum. We, in turn, urge the Bureau of Immigration Appeals to approve this application.

MacBride Principles
"Another foremost concern is the continuing and worsening economic discrimination which primarily victimizes the Catholic minority population in Northern Ireland. Unemployment there continues to be the highest in Western Europe including more than 60 percent in certain Catholic cities. We support those policies aimed at alleviating and eliminating this problem."

"To that end, we reaffirm our support for the MacBride Principles of Fair Employment and Non-Discrimination. We believe their very existence has compelled the British government to seek needed reforms in their existing Fair Employment Act. Any change in that Act must include strong and verifiable enforcement provisions against companies and practices that promote or perpetuate discrimination.

We lend our specific support to pending legislation to require American companies operating in Northern Ireland to adopt the MacBride Principles as a new corporate code of conduct. Today more than one out of every ten jobs in the north of Ireland is provided by an American firm. We urge hearings to be held in the House and Senate on this important legislation.

International Fund
"We also call for immediate oversight hearings in both the House and Senate on the distribution of the more than $120 million in U.S.

October Dinner and Board Meeting Plans Announced

MICHAEL COOGAN

DAYTON, OHIO — October 20 and 21, 1989 are the dates set by President Michael Coogan for the National Board Meetings and Testimonial Dinner which will be held in his home city of Dayton.

Mr. Coogan has appointed Robert L. Butler, a local businessman as general chairman and Joseph Kilgallen, treasurer.

The event will be a two-day affair with board meetings starting at 9:00 A.M. on Friday, October 20 and carrying through till 4:00 P.M. the following day, October 21. There will be an activity on Friday evening. Saturday will include a mass at 8:30 P.M., followed by cocktails at 8:30, dinner at 7:30, and dancing at 9:00.

The Dayton Mall Holiday Inn, located at 1-75 and Rte. 725 exit, will be the site of the affair. This is adjacent to the Dayton Mall shopping area, one of the largest in the state of Ohio. An added attraction for those with time to spend is the world-famous Air Force Museum, featuring planes of the past and present as well as much equipment used in the U.S. Space Program.

Notices will be mailed to all divisions this spring outlining the cost of the event plus a more detailed outline of the program.

U.S. Church Groups Are Backing MacBride Bills

NEW YORK — At annual meetings this year, a record number of companies having operations in Northern Ireland, will face questions and proposals by shareholders about their equal employment practices in Ireland. Twenty-one Northern Ireland resolutions are on the 1989 agenda of shareholders' meetings of U.S. companies. This increase over the 17 resolutions debated at last year's meetings and the 10 resolutions debated in 1987, reflects the growing concern and action on discrimination in Northern Ireland by U.S. church groups and state and city pension funds. It also reflects the momentum of legislative action of the MacBride Principles in states and cities across the country. "The continually increasing number of shareholder resolutions and state legislation shows that Americans will continue to monitor human rights in Northern Ireland," said Sr. Regina Murphy, spokesperson for the church groups. "We refuse to acquiesce to the discriminatory systems in Northern Ireland."

Shareholder proponents have asked 10 companies to implement and/or increase their activity relating to the nine MacBride Principles for fair employment. Eight companies have received resolutions asking them to review their Northern Ireland operations and to report to shareholders on their equal opportunities policies and practices. Boeing and Lockheed companies have been asked to examine their

Ad Hoc Committee Takes Up 1989 Irish Agenda for 101st Congress

The call for Joseph Doherty to be free on bail and granted political asylum, strong support for passage of the MacBride Principles and a full investigation into the U.S. economic aid provided to Northern Ireland were the main topics as the bipartisan Ad Hoc Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs held its first business meeting on Tuesday, February 28, 1989.

The four committee co-chairmen, Reps. Thomas J. Manton (D-NY), Hamilton Fish, Jr. (R-NY), Benjamin

Gilman (R-NY), and Bruce Morrison (D-CT), all participated in the hearing together with Reps. Gary Ackerman (D-NY) and Elliot Engel (D-NY), member of the executive committee.

The purpose of the meeting was for the Council of Presidents of Irish-American organizations to present their 1989 Agenda to the Committee. This group consisted of Michael Coogan, national president, and Joe Roche, former national president, Ancient Order of Hibernians; Bob Linnon, president, Irish American Unity Conference; Martin Galvin, publicity director, Irish Northern Aid Committee; John Gavin, president, Knights of Equity; Kathy Holmes, president, Irish American Congress; John Finucane, chairman of the Political Education Committee; and Mary Pike, the attorney for Irish political prisoner Joseph Doherty. Hilary House, representing American Protestants for the Truth About Ireland, also participated.

economic aid contributed to the International Fund for Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. The 1986 authorizing legislation had strong conditions governing this first time U.S. aid. The funds were to benefit both communities. They were to be directed into programs which would provide additional employment opportunities for both communities. Reports by two major Irish American organizations charge these funds have not been distributed according to conditions. Oversight hearings are essential to finding out why.

Visa Policies

"We call for continued legislative reforms in our visa policies. We urge the one-year moratorium on visa denials solely on the basis of political beliefs be made permanent. We urge continued attention and appropriate legislative action to reform our immigration laws to remove those elements of hardship that have so especially impacted on the Irish community.

Political Solution

"We urge the Administration to issue a formal position on Ireland and Northern Ireland and to identify what contribution the United States can make to achieving the political solution which helps bring peace and justice to all 32 counties of Ireland.

Shoot to Kill

"We reiterate with emphasis our absolute opposition to all forms of violence in Northern Ireland, civilian or official. We know that both forms of violence have claimed many lives. We urge all who are responsible for acts of violence, civilian or official, be fully prosecuted. We denounce the recent rash of murders being conducted by extremist groups such as the savage murder of Patrick Finucane, a prominent Catholic lawyer. We urge continued world attention to the conduct of British security forces in Northern Ireland to avert repetition of such actions as their "shoot to kill" policies.

We note that August 12 will mark the 20th anniversary of the introduction of British troops into Northern Ireland. We must use this occasion not only to reflect on the tragedies of the past, the present British policies in the North, but also to renew our commitment to seek a new path for peace and unity for this troubled land. It is a path which many may wish to pave, but only the people of Ireland should set its final direction."

Church Groups Back MacBride

Northern Ireland subcontractors' adherence to non-discriminatory practices.

The proponents of the proposals include church groups belonging to Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility, the New York City Employees Retirement System, Minnesota State Board of Investment, Connecticut Retirement Trust Funds, the New York State Common Retirement Fund, and the Christian Brothers Investment Services. This is the first year that the Minnesota State Board of Investment and the Connecticut Retirement Trust Funds have joined the other proponents in submitting such proposals.

"During this time of increased violence in Northern Ireland, we have to find many more non-violent ways to establish justice and equality in that country," said Sr. Patricia Daly of Christian Brothers Investment Services. "Support for the MacBride Principles would be a peaceful step toward a just solution to the inequality of job opportunity experienced by many in Northern Ireland. As shareholders in American corporations operating in Northern Ireland, we cannot stand by and do nothing."

Discrimination in employment has been cited by the International Commission of Jurists as one of the major causes of conflict in Northern Ireland. Church members believe that, as equal employment opportunity increases, violence will decrease. A climate will be created which will encourage new and expanded investment in Northern Ireland, providing much needed fair employment for the 26 percent of Catholics and 10 percent of Protestants who are currently unemployed.

In less than five years after the promulgation of the MacBride Principles, ten states and seventeen cities in the U.S. have already passed legislation which links their investments or purchases to a company's equal opportunity practices in Northern Ireland. Another twelve states have Northern Ireland legislation pending.

In 1988, the British government announced new legislative proposals on fair employment. In outlining the proposals, British officials acknowledge that the Fair Employment legislation of the last 13 years had failed to end discrimination against Catholics in Northern Ireland. Latest figures reveal that unemployment is more than twice as high among Roman Catholics as among those belonging to other denominations. Both government officials and outside analysts stated that the MacBride Principles campaign in the U.S. had influenced the British to take a more aggressive stand against discrimination.

1989 Ad Hoc Irish Agenda

In statements delivered at the meeting the four co-chairmen and Reps. Ackerman and Engel discussed the current issues on the agenda of the Ad Hoc Committee. These include:

• A resolution introduced by Rep. Manton calling for Joe Doherty, incarcerated since 1983 without charge, to be released on bail pending review of his application for political asylum which the resolution also urges be approved. The resolution now has 20 cosponsors. In a related development, Manton has also sent a letter to Attorney General Thornburgh, urging that Joe Doherty be given bail. He was joined on the letter and resolution by all the other co-chairmen including Rep. Morrison, who was recently named as Chairman of the House Immigration Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee which has oversight over the Immigration Service as well as the Board of Immigration Appeals which has ruled that Joe Doherty be allowed to apply for political asylum.

• Legislation authored by Rep. Fish calling on American firms doing business in Northern Ireland to adopt the MacBride Principles of fair employment and non-discrimination. This legislation was introduced in January with almost 40 cosponsors.

• A full scale investigation by the House Foreign Affairs Committee into the $140 million in the U.S. economic aid directed to the International Fund for Ireland and Northern Ireland. Reps. Gilman, Ackerman and Engel, all members of the Foreign Affairs Committee, pledged to press for such hearings.

Manton, who chaired the meeting, also indicated that the Ad Hoc Committee during the 101st Congress would press for the reforms in current U.S. visa policies to permanently end the ban on those denied entry solely because of political views. Further, he said the Committee would issue a St. Patrick's Day message for peace and justice.

The Ad Hoc Committee begins the 101st Congress with over 100 members including five senators. In a joint statement the four co-chairmen called the meeting with the council of presidents "constructive, comprehensive and helpful to us as we continue to press the agenda for peace and justice in Ireland forward in Congress and in the administration."

Sean MacBride Century Club Seeks Members

The Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, Inc. (AOH) was established in 1836 in this country although it was first organized in Ireland in the sixteenth century. A recent amendment to the AOH Constitution, in part, states that the AOH shall memorialize the human rights contributions by Dr. Sean MacBride and it shall recognize the efforts of other individuals who make similar contributions in the cause of peace, justice and the economic well being of the Irish people whether they belong to the AOH or not.

For reference purposes Dr. Sean MacBride was born on January 26, 1904. His father was Major John MacBride, who was responsible for the Irish Brigade in 1899 which fought for the Boers against the British in the unsuccessful Transvaal (Boer) War of 1899-1902. Major MacBride fought the British at Jacob's factory during the Easter Week Rebellion. He was sentenced to death by the English and executed at Kilmainham Jail on May 5, 1916. The mother of Sean MacBride was Maud Gonne MacBride, a beauty and one of the strongest advocates of Irish Nationalism. W.B. Yeats idolized her in many of his poems.

Sean MacBride grew up in France but finally was able to permanently return to Ireland with his mother in 1918. He immediately joined the Fianna. In 1921, he was with Michael Collins in London during the negotiations for the Anglo-Irish Treaty. When the treaty was ratified by the Dail (Irish Parliament) in 1922, Sean MacBride exhibited his Anti-Treaty philosophy primarily because of the partition of Ireland. Sean fought against the Irish Free State and was captured and jailed with Ernie O'Malley in the Four Courts Battle. Years later, Sean MacBride succeeded Moss Twomey in 1936 as Chief of Staff of the IRA.

Thereafter, a change in his life occurred and he departed the IRA. He was admitted to the Bar and became a Senior Barrister in 1943. From

National Board Awards Program Honors MacBride

The National Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians has decided that the proceeds of the 1989 National Awards Program will be used to establish the Dr. Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award. This Award, now part of our National Constitution, will be presented for the first time at the National President's Dinner on October 21, 1989.

Sean MacBride's uncommon valor and dedication to freedom and justice brought him truly unique distinctions. He was the only person in the world to receive three major peace awards. He was eulogized by Cardinal's O'Flaich and O'Connor as an Irish "man for all seasons whose service to the victims of conflict and to the dignity of man spanned three continents in an extraordinary life." His address to Hibernians in 1984 launched a nationwide campaign for the MacBride Fair Employment Principles which has given hope to those who have lived with despair for decades.

The Awards program will have eight cash prizes. In addition, each Division will be eligible for an incentive prize as outlined in a letter to all Divisions. The list of winners will be published in the November-December issue of National Hibernian Digest.

Additional Award books are available from Division Presidents or directly from the National Awards office at Box 623, Mineola, NY 11501.

Your support of the Awards will enable an Irish artist to cast the original bust of Dr. MacBride and will honor a man who walked with us and in so doing ennobled our Order for generations to come.

A Special Day

VINCENT J. SCULLY

National Chairman, Catholic Action

One of the Special Days we in the AOH are expected and required to honor is the feast of Our Lady of Knock, celebrated on August 21 or the Sunday closest to that date.

As Irish Catholics we should be determined that our Blessed Mother receive all the recognition she can attain under her title, Our Lady of Knock. I am asking every division to contribute some effort to promote dedication to Our Lady of Knock.

Your efforts need not be elaborate or expensive. An announced Mass to honor the Blessed Virgin would be great. Perhaps with the permission of your parish pastor, a bouquet of flowers at the Post-Communion could be presented, followed by a prayer or hymn or both. Any effort you make will help create some awareness to what we as a people feel for the Blessed Virgin Mother of God.

This past December, I was in St. Patrick's church in Kennett Square, Pennsylvania (the Mushroom Capital of the World). On the Blessed Mother's altar was a beautiful portrait of Our Lady of Guadalupe. The altar and the portrait were decorated with dozens of roses, in all shapes and colors. The sight of it all was astonishingly beautiful!

Our Spanish-speaking brothers and sisters working in the mushroom houses put their time and money together and set an example we can proudly follow on an annual schedule.

When we participate as an organization, people are drawn to us; and the growth of the AOH is important to our church and to Ireland! Please begin making plans now in your own way and with your own ideas to create a new awareness of the beauty that is Mary.

New York City to Hold American Irish Forum '89

Assemblyman John C. Dearie (D-Bronx), working with dozens of Irish-American leaders throughout the city, will hold the "American-Irish Forum '89" for city mayoral and comptroller candidates on Thursday, May 11 at Manhattan College in Riverdale, the Bronx.

"Like last year's successful Presidential Forum and the Empire State Political Forum in 1986, there are more than enough issues at hand in the city in terms of the Irish vote that must be addressed by candidates for citywide office," Dearie said. "Letters have gone out to leaders in the Irish-American community and to all the candidates, both announced and unannounced, inviting their participation in this very important Forum.

"It's logical that we seek their views on Irish issues and the Forum is a singular opportunity for any candidate to have his thoughts on Irish issues disseminated as widely as possible. This is the perfect time to do so," Dearie said.

The Forum will begin at 7 p.m. at Smith Auditorium at Manhattan

College in the Riverdale section of the Bronx. "In the coming weeks we will be arranging for tickets, which will be free, to be distributed to the event and we are asking that the candidates confirm their attendance by April 15," Dearie said.

In the letter inviting the candidates to join in the Forum, Dearie wrote, "Among the issues that we are asking you to address are: investment of city pension funds in U.S. companies doing business in Northern Ireland and their compliance with the MacBride Principles of Fair Employment for the Catholic minority there; the future of Gaelic Park in the Bronx, a landmark cultural, athletic and social center for the Irish community, whose lease with the Metropolitan Transportation Authority is due to expire next year; the city's response to the needs and concerns of the "New Irish" pouring into the city, both documented and undocumented, whose numbers have been estimated at upwards of 100,000; and the fate of Joe Doherty, an Irishman who has been held for nearly six years without charge at the Metropolitan Correctional Center."

John J. Sweeney Grand Marshal of D.C. Parade

WASHINGTON D.C. — The 19th Annual St. Patrick's Day Parade in the nation's capital was held on Sunday, March 12, 1989, at 1:00 p.m. on Constitution Avenue, starting at Seventh Street and finishing at Seventeenth Street.

John J. Sweeney, President of the Service Employees International Union, AFL-CIO was this year's Grand Marshal. Manus J. Fish, retired Director of the National Park Service, was chosen the Gael of the Year, an honor bestowed on a distinguished Washington area resident who is prominent in the Irish community.

The theme of this year's parade

"The Irish Contribution to Building America" is in keeping with the Committee's desire to honor the men and women of organized labor. Irish Americans have been influential in the formation of the American labor movement to protect the rights of workers. Mr. Sweeney is the second labor official to be Grand Marshal. George Meany the former president of the AFL-CIO was Grand Marshal in 1977.

The parade consisted of more than 100 marching groups with floats and many bands, including ten bagpipe bands.

A Catholic Bicentennial

The year 1989 will witness more people flocking to our city: some as tourists, but this year some will be pilgrims. The reason is the celebration of Baltimore's bicentennial as the Prime Roman Catholic See in the United States of America. What Jerusalem is to the Jews, Rome is to Italy, Canterbury is to England, and Armagh is to Ireland, so Baltimore is to American Catholics.

Maryland had its religious beginnings in 1634 with the arrival of two Jesuits aboard the Ark and the Dove. Catholic clergy would suffer a turbulent relationship with the secular authorities in this state for a number of years, in spite of the religious tolerance espoused by the early Lords of Baltimore. During the 17th and 18th centuries a protestant ascendancy based upon the Anglican Church was established in Maryland, much the same as in Virginia. Only Anglican church members were granted all the rights and privileges of citizenship.

For many years, it was illegal to say Mass or perform the sacraments of the church in a public setting. During the English civil wars all Catholic clergy and influential persons were exiled from the colony.

The Jesuits were the only clergy present in the colony from 1756-1763. There was no Catholic church in Baltimore until 1775, until St. Peter's ProCathedral was built on what is now the Northwest corner of Charles and Saratoga Streets.

The Catholic Church grew steadily throughout the Revolutionary War period. Tory Anglicans became distrusted, while no one questioned the patriotism of the Catholics, many of whom had escaped the British isles due to religious bigotry. Most of these refugees were immigrating to Maryland.

The great John Carroll, whose father was descended from Keane Carroll of Ireland, and whose elder brother Charles was the Attorney General for the state, and a signer of the Declaration of Independence, became prominent in Maryland's religious affairs. John had received a Jesuit education and was ordained in 1769. He circulated a draft plan to Rome for organizing the Catholic clergy in 1782. When the treaty of Paris was signed in 1783, an American Catholic committee headed by Carroll wrote to Rome asking for an ecclesiastical structure.

In the summer of 1784 John Carroll was named Superior of the mission in the thirteen United States of North America. The Pope had followed Benjamin Franklin's recommendation of Carroll as the Prefect Apostolic, with limited jurisdiction in America. Official work of Carroll's new position came on November 26, 1784. Carroll did not return a formal acceptance until February 27, 1785. He was not going to take his position lightly, and gave the matter a great deal of thought. His reply was supplemented by a "Report on the State of Religion in the United Provinces of Federated America" on March 1. It was composed of three sections: 1) an estimate of the Catholic population; 2) remarks on the quality of religious practice; and 3) the clergy.

There were approximately 15,800 Catholics in Maryland at that time (while Pennsylvania boasted 7,000; New York 1,500; and Virginia only 200). Maryland had only nineteen priests, Pennsylvania had only two (both in their 70's).

Carroll emphasized the need for promoting priestly vocations, and was already planning Saint Mary's Seminary to train them.

An election was held at White-marsh plantation on May 18, 1789. John Carroll was chosen by a vote of 24 to 2, and named the First Bishop of Baltimore in a papal decree on November 6, 1789. He was consecrated on August 15, 1790 by the Benedictine bishop, Charles Walmesley, in Dorsetshire, England. He was the next closest bishop, geographically to Baltimore.

Baltimore was the only See in the U.S. from 1789 until 1808. Its territory extended from the Atlantic to the Mississippi river, and from Canada to Florida (an area now comprising 25 states). It was in all probability, the largest Roman Catholic archdiocese in the world.

As early as 1792, Carroll thought of dividing the diocese. In 1808 it was subdivided into the suffragan Sees of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Louisville (KY), and the Metropolitan See of Baltimore.

The principal patron of the Archdiocese of Baltimore is the Blessed Virgin Mary, Assumed into Heaven (which was declared in the Synod of Baltimore in 1791. August 15 was declared the City's principal feast day.

St. Ignatius Loyola was chosen as the secondary patron (synod of 1888), since the Jesuits established the first missions in Maryland in 1634. One of the oldest towns and the oldest church in St. Mary's

When a pub hasn't changed in more than a century, the Irish tend to take it for granted. And that's the way they like it.

But when they learned that Budweiser, that most American of beers, is now being brewed in Ireland, too...well, you might say a change of heart overtook them.

So now pubs like Lenehan's are serving up the clean, crisp taste of Budweiser along with their other brews. And while that may have caused a few raised eyebrows, it's also been cause for more than a few raised glasses.

Announcement was made of a new division, No. 2 for Broward County, with 20 members. Its officers are President Mike Roger Silky; Treasurer Ed Talley; and Sentinel/Marshal Kevin Banaghan.

There was discussion and planning regarding the State Convention on May 6 in Tamarac, a suburb of Ft. Lauderdale. Paul Finnerty was appointed chairman of the Nominating Committee for the next board of of-received activities. National Vice President Mike Carroll, a winter resident of the area, was happy to install the new division officers recently. In addition to President Finnerty, they are Vice President Tom Eagan, Recording Secretary Bob Bambrick; Treasurer Shawn Carney; Financial Secretary Martin O'Sullivan; Sentinel/Marshal Don Donahue, and Chaplain Fr. James Nugent. Fr. Nugent was recently appointed the new American provincial of the Rosminian Fathers' Institute of Charity.

Ad Hoc Staffer Gains University Post

The Italian American Heritage Center, Inc. at The Catholic University of American announces the appointment of Robert B. Blacato as its first Executive Director. Blacato had previously worked as Administrative Assistant to former Congressman Mario Biaggi, who founded the Ad Hoc Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs and served as its chairman from 1977 until August, 1988. Blacato served as the Committee Staff Director and will continue in that capacity for the four new co-chairmen of the Committee: Reps. Hamilton Fish (R-NY), Benjamin Gilman (R-NY), Thomas Manton (D-NY), and Bruce Morrison (D-CT).

The Italian American Heritage Center is a private tax exempt institution dedicated to the promotion of interest in the history and culture of the Italian people, the experiences and contributions of Italian immigrants to the United States, and the continuing relationships between the Italian and American people. The Center will be located on the campus of the Catholic University in Washington, D.C., and across from the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

The Heritage Center is expected to open in 1992 to coincide with the Celebration of The Columbus Quincentenary and will include academic and non-academic programs.

James Hoban Tradition Continues

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On Sunday, March 12, 1989, nine-year old James Hoban continued a tradition by leading the James Hoban Marching Group down Constitution Avenue in Washington, D.C.'s St. Patrick's Day Parade. The Group marched annually since 1982 and was organized to commemorate White House architect Hoban's active local civic service. Young Hoban, of Washington, D.C., the namesake and collateral descendant of Hoban, attends St. Anthony's Catholic School.

Irish-born James Hoban, who was educated in Dublin at the Royal Dublin Society's school of drawing and design, is one of the largely forgotten founders of the City of Washington, D.C.; generally his life is associated solely with the design and construction of the White House and as an early superintendent of the building of the U.S. Capitol. But Hoban was an active civic leader, calling citizen meetings at Rhodes Tavern, near the White House, beginning in 1801, to petition Congress for locally-elected home rule government, representation in Congress, and the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia. Hoban was elected to the first City Council of Washington in 1802, served for a record 30 years and advocated equality for Washington's African-American community.

Rhodes Tavern, the only remaining landmark in the United States associated with the remarkable local civic career of James Hoban, was demolished in 1984 by owners Oliver T. Carr Jr. and The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, despite a resolution of the AOH at its 1982 National Convention in San Antonio, Texas; the resolution was sponsored by the Emerald Isle Division, A.O.H., Washington, D.C., pleading with Carr and Equitable to spare this singular landmark, first listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1969.

In 1983, the citizens of the District of Columbia, in an overwhelming initiative vote, supported the preservation of Rhodes Tavern, only to be denied the fulfillment of this popular sentiment in court by Carr, Equitable and the Mayor of Washington, D.C.

District of Columbia public school students and some of their friends who attend Catholic schools have collected over $1,000 in pennies and have requested permission from Carr and Equitable to use the pennies to pay for placing a bronze historic marker at the corner site of Rhodes Tavern at 15th & F Streets, N.W., as a memorial to James Hoban and the important civic history which unfolded in Washington, D.C.'s first unofficial town hall. The placement of such a marker would fulfill a 1978 recommendation of the U.S. Commission of Fine Arts in Washington, D.C. stating that if Rhodes Tavern were demolished an appropriate

However, to date, Carr and Equitable Life have refused to meet with these young Washingtonians to discuss an offer they made two years ago. Meanwhile, neither Carr nor Equitable have made any public announcement of any plan they might have to place a historic marker at the site.

Hibernian of the Year

Thomas J. Finn, Jr. was named Hibernian of the Year for 1989 at AOH Division One, Newport, on parade day March 11th. Following the 33rd annual St. Patrick's Day Parade in Newport, Bro. Tom Finn was honored at a luncheon where he was presented with the award.

Bro. Finn has been a life-time member of the Hibernians for some 40 years. He served as president of the division in 1969 and is past county president. He now serves on the financial committee.

Tom and his wife Nora, a native of County Clare, have three children, nine grandchildren and two great grandchildren. Both his parents were born in Ireland and his father was also a life-long member of the Hibernians and a Lieutenant on the Hibernian Rifles Drill Team in 1913.

Bro. Thomas J. Finn, Jr. is best known for his "nuts and bolts" articulate speech, his sense of humor, and his dedication to the Hibernians.

Division One's "Mr. March"

At AOH Division 1, Newport, the month of March not only means the St. Patrick's Day Parade, but a wealth of other events in which our members are involved either directly or indirectly. In Newport, the month of March is Irish Heritage Month. A calendar containing some 24 separate events is published annually by the Irish Heritage Committee, most of whom are Hibernians.

Hibernian Hall for the past five years has sponsored Celtic Night and Irish Pub Night. Bro. Leo Downey, chairman of both committees, prepares food for these events. He is a gourmet chef with over 20 years experience in the food and beverage industry. Mr. Downey should be known as "Mr. March" in recognition of the time and effort he puts into his Irish dinners, which are quickly becoming a tradition at Hibernian Hall.

NEWPORT'S LEO DOWNEY, known as Mr. March for the splendid Irish dinners he serves up at division events in March of each year.

Providence Div. Observes Its 112th Anniversary

The 112th Anniversary of the chartering of the AOH William J. McEnery Division 12 in Providence, R.I. was observed at recent ceremonies held at the Wanskuck Post, American Legion Home in Providence. Division 12 was chartered March 2, 1977 in Providence County.

The Rev. George Brendan McCarthy, Deputy National LAOH Chaplain, State AOH Chaplain and pastor of St. Mary's Church, Newport, was the principal speaker. Father McCarthy spoke on the Life of St. Patrick to mark the occasion.

During the event members of the 112th Anniversary Class of Candidates were obligated to AOH membership into the oldest Catholic Lay Organization in America.

Highlight of the St. Patrick's observance in the state was the AOH and LAOH sponsored St. Patrick's Mass in honor of the deceased members of the organizations. The Most Rev. Kenneth A. Angell, Auxiliary Bishop of Providence, was the principal celebrant of the Mass in St. Mary's Church. The Rev. Brian Kane of Los Angeles, a native of County Dublin, Ireland, and a retired Navy commander, was the homilist. An overflow crowd filled the historic Church.

Hibernians in the state participated in four parades held in honor of St. Patrick in Providence, Newport, Pawtucket and West Warwick. The Newport Parade Chairman was Deputy National Organizer Christopher J. Behan. Thomas J. Finn Jr., a long outstanding member of the Dennis E. Collins Division One was named "Hibernian of the Year". President Patrick J. Fallon of the William J. McEnery Division 12 was the grand marshal of the Providence parade.

Irish Exiles Abused by Authorities

On Tuesday March 14, 1989 the Immigration and Naturalization Service entered Kelly's Pub and Grub Restaurant in Quincy, MA and arrested six young female employees suspected of violation of U.S. immigration policy. One young man seated at the bar, who when questioned answered in an obviously Irish accent, was also arrested and removed with the young women to the J.F.K. Federal Building in Boston. The young man was subsequently released when it was determined that his papers were in order.

The young women were denied access to an attorney who arrived at the J.F.K. Building shortly after the incident at the restaurant to volunteer his services. They were questioned at length and required to sign statements which could prove to be incriminating to them before they were allowed to confer with their attorney. They were then released on their own recognizance.

On the same day, officers of the U.S. Border Patrol entered a building site in Hanover, N.H. and removed four young men suspected of violation of U.S. immigration policy. They were taken to the county jail and detained there without benefit of legal representation and without bail. As of the time of this writing, they were still being held as common criminals although it had yet to be proven that they had committed any crime.

We, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, deplore this type of behavior by the authorities and the effect that current unjust U.S. immigration policy is having on the Irish-American community. We also deplore the arrest, detention, and possible deportation of well-motivated Irish immigrants who, even though documented, are in fact making a significant contribution to our U.S. economy and society.

We call upon other concerned members of the Irish-American community to voice their strong disapproval of this type of activity by U.S. Immigration authorities, and urge them to work diligently for change in U.S. immigration policies.

STATE NEWS: Michigan

By JOHN MCINERNEY

State President James Flynn began the new year with the installation of the officers of Michigan's newest Division—Bay County 1. This brings to eleven the number of AOH Divisions in the State and re-establishes an Irish AOH presence once again in the Bay City area. The members meet in a room within the Green Hut Lounge owned and operated by Division President Dennis Hayes.

Detroit's Patrick Ryan Division 2 held their 8th annual Winter Party in late January at the Lager House in the Corktown District. Division President Dennis Hayes (no relation) pronounced the event a success and as a result of the overwhelming support of a raffle the Division was able to make grants totaling $3500 to various Corktown charities. Leading the list were Most Holy Redeemer School and The Pope John XXIII Hospice. Charter Recording Secretary and long-time AOH member Timothy Neenan is retiring to the Ft. Lauderdale area; those who knew him in Michigan will miss a person who truly reflects the motto of the Order.

The Livingston County, Art Walton Division 1 met in February at the home of Frank and Barb McGowan for an Irish get-together but with an Italian twist! While the food was Italian the talk was all Irish—planning for their July 4 fund-raiser to benefit the area's handicapped kids. Division President Jack Murphy was joined by Michael Murphy and their wives along with the McGrudys, the Shaws and the Sullivans. The Division was chartered in 1987 and is off to a great start.

The state's largest Division, the Stephen Walsh Division 1, boasts a recent addition to the lounge in their Hibernian Hall. Doug Gillis (or "Gillie" as he is known), a fourth generation cabinet maker and ten year AOH member of the Division, finished the job in time for the holiday season. Matt McInerney rounded out the team. Division President John Cahill reports that the AOH Charity Ball plans are in place and that all is in readiness for an April 22 date at Livonia's Roma Hall. As expected 300 members, their wives and friends should make this the premier event of the spring. This year's effort honors former Detroit Mayor Jerome P. Cavanaugh, who ran the city as the Michigan outpost during John F. Kennedy's "Camelot" days.

March saw the AOH in Detroit, Bay City, Grand Rapids, Traverse City involved in parades honoring the Saint himself. Detroit's annual parade under Chairman and AOH member Michael (Westside Red) Sullivan was undoubtedly the largest. Participation by members of seven AOH Divisions swelled the ranks of the Sixth Parade Unit. State President James Flynn, National Board of Director John McInerney and Wayne County President James O'Kelly led the marchers down Michigan Ave., through the historic Corktown area. A sunny and somewhat warm day brought out the crowds who lined the parade route. AOH network television, a Richard Kennedy Company, filmed the action which saw Fr. Duffy and Sr. Mary Watson head the parade as Grand Marshals. The two operate St. Patrick's Social Center in Detroit serving the inner city's poor. Joe Doherty was the honorary Grand Marshal this year.

A post-parade party at Detroit's I.B.E.W. Hall in Corktown was hosted by the Wayne County AOH Divisions and included Irish music along with step dancing from members of the O'Hare and Knights of Equity Schools of Irish Dance. An estimated 600 people were in attendance during the four hour party.

Grand Rapids' Kent County Division 1 hosted that city's parade. Chairmen Ed and Pat Glynn coordinated this year's effort which although a bit cool was otherwise a success. The same can be said of Flint, Genesee County Division 1, which hosted their annual parade. Flint's Sullivan and O'Sullivan Division also hosted their annual "Queens Pageant" with State Board Member Michael Zelle as Chairman. The event was a real class act and a tribute to the AOH efforts which were put in place by Charter President Thomas O'Sullivan. Finally Traverse City's parade began (and ended) by following the "Long Green Line" down Main Street, to Charter President John Conley's Irish Cottage. The pub acts as the Irish hospitality center for the area and is well known throughout "Cherry Country" in Northern Michigan.

The Saint's Day was observed by most Hibernians with metro Detroit pubs the likes of O'Halloran's Tipperary Pub and the three Dunleavy family places acting as centers for the meeting of friends new and old. M. Thomas Dunleavy and Son's Irish Inn at one time was the unofficial metro Detroit Hibernian Hall during the late 70's and to this day still maintains the "Pigeon Hole" AOH mail box.

Michigan will hold their State Convention on May 19 and 20 in Detroit's Northeast suburb of Warren.

LIBRARY PROJECT

Michigan's Bernard J. Brady Division, AOH, recently donated eleven books and several pamphlets on Ireland to their local community library. The group, based in Traverse City, plans to make additional donations on a periodic basis.

According to Traverse Area District Library Director Michael McGuire, a special pamphlet file will be established, and will contain a list of books within the library that deal with various aspects of Ireland and its people. The file will also include various brochures on Irish business and industry and a 72-page directory entitled "Overseas Companies in Ireland," published by the Industrial Development Authority of Ireland. The directory lists, among other things, names and addresses of American companies with offices in Ireland.

According to President Dan O'Neill, the donation had been planned for several months. Letters were sent to the Irish Consulate General, the Irish Studies department at the University of Notre Dame, and the national Hibernian organization for suggestions on what books might be suitable.

"As an organization," O'Neill said, "every year we try to do something charitable." In the past, the Hibernians have given Christmas baskets of food to needy families, and money to help bring Catholic and Protestant children from Northern Ireland to live with northern Michigan families for the summer.

The most recent donation to the library was made, O'Neill said, as an effort to benefit many people who are interested in learning about Irish culture, history, and politics.

One of the donated books, "Pad-dy's Lament: Ireland 1846-1847," is signed by the author, Thomas Gallagher. The 1982 release, published by Harcourt, Brace Jovanovich, describes in detail the horrors of the potato famine. It explains as well as shows, O'Neill said, that, contrary to popular belief, crops other than the potato were abundant in Ireland during the famine but were shipped under armed guard to Great Britain. Meanwhile, tens of thousands of native Irish starved because their subsistence crop, the potato, was ravaged by the blight. The famine forced mass emigration to America.

Several of the books were supplied to the Hibernians by the Chicago office of the Consulate General of Ireland. Those books, all published by the Irish Department of Foreign Affairs, cover such diverse subjects as Irish art, sports, literature, and language. "Facts About Ireland," a 256-page paperback published in

Jennifer Williams' Essay Wins Prize

Below is a copy of the prize winning essay for students at St. Clement-Irenaeus School in grades three through six, turned in by a young girl whose entire family is involved in the Ancient Order of Hibernians. The contents of the paper were left up to the students with the title and subject being the only requirements. This short essay attests to the positive affect that a Catholic School education has on our young people.

MY FAVORITE PERSON

My favorite person is God. He is my favorite person because He made us. He also made nature. There would not be a world if it wasn't for God. He is so great! God is everybody's friend. God is three people which makes Him the Blessed Trinity. Miss Naseef tells us about God in religion. If we pray to God He will help us. He is so powerful and so kind. I never saw Him before and I don't think my classroom has ever seen Him either. Has He ever talked to you in prayer? I forgot to tell you God loves us more than the world and we should love God the same as He loves us.

At the Easter Rising Commemoration Monument, Mineola, Long Island, New York

Another year has passed in Irish history as we commemorate the 73rd anniversary of the Easter rebellion against British occupying forces in Ireland. After 800 years of occupation and oppression, after many bloody struggles for Nationhood, the courageous men and women of 1916 finally broke the shackles of oppression, at a tremendous cost in life and property. This sad beginning set the basis for what Ireland is today, a self-governing body, a guardian of its culture, a culture almost completely lost and stamped out by the British.

It is sad to say that Ireland's oppressor is our ally, England; it is also sad to say that our Government looks beyond Ireland and its problems to England, with whom it seems to agree as far as British policy on Ireland is concerned. We must come to this conclusion because of our Government's silence on matters Irish. The daily mayhem in the forgotten six counties of Northern Ireland, an area sandwiched between the two large democratic nations of the United States and England, continues because of those nations' intransigence. They seem to have forgotten the most western nation of Europe, Ireland. Is this related to Ireland's not representing a good foreign policy role model in its expectations of human rights for the people of the Eastern bloc nations?

The men and women of this world who command great power in their short stay in this earthly life, and who rationalize their cruelty to the weaker races with a variety of excuses, must ultimately answer to the Almighty for the wanton misery they helped to visit upon their fellow man. How do these power moguls compare with the men and women who we honor here today. Pearce, Clark, Connolly, McDermott, McDonagh, Plunkett and Ceant did not command big armies; their only self-interest was to free Ireland from the English yoke. They died in pursuit of freedom and peace for their beloved Ireland. They died to remove that ever present pain of oppression. These great men stood up to the might of our ally, England, undertaking the awesome task of setting the record straight, that Ireland belongs to the Irish and oppressors belong in hell. The quest for their dream began on the streets of Dublin City, the city in which I was born. My father, Lord rest him, often held me in awe relating the events of that time and the valor demanded from ordinary citizens in fighting a mighty empire.

An eyewitness recalls this account of Monday, April 24, 1916: "In the City centre, at Beresford Place, men and boys in uniform are mustering, bearing Mausers, Enfields, shotguns, sabres, pikes and bayonets. Drays with equipment. Even hansom cabs are arriving by the minute. The Irish Volunteers and the Citizen Army have assembled. Patrick Pearce, yesterday a school teacher, today Commander-in-Chief of the Irish Republic Army and President of the Provisional Government, arrives with his brother, William, and Joseph Plunkett.

Northern Ireland

"Mississippi Burning," a recent movie, portrays the horror of hatred and warns us of the evil of violence in all of its forms. It reminded me of some feelings and experience I had while working in Belfast, Ireland.

It is terribly sad to note how much the British Government dislikes the Irish. History has recorded the wicked behavior of the British during the time of the famine in the 1840's when millions of Irish were killed and forced to flee to foreign shores. Anyone in touch with Irish history is aware of this situation and current British practice seems to continue to reveal this attitude.

Just recently, the British Government decided not to comply with the ruling by the European Court of Human Rights. The British law permitting the police to detain suspects without cause for up to seven days is a violation of the European Convention on Human Rights. This kind of action would cause a major protest among legal authorities in all civilized countries.

On December 8, 1987, a study was concluded on the northern Ireland justice system by the City Bar Association of New York wherein they reported that there is a compelling need to correct their judicial system. This inquiry was conducted by the association's committee on international human rights. They criticized their Diplock judges, their trial without juries, their internment arrest procedure and the amount of their coerced confessions along with other judicial violations. This comprehensive 120-page study can be obtained from the American Bar Association of New York.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's new limits on journalistic freedom and her proposal allowing defendant's silence to weigh as evidence continues to manifest the British Government's attitude towards the Irish.

On December 16, 1988, the British Government finally introduced

The final battalion wheels into Abbey Street, led by James Connolly and flanked by Pearce and Plunkett. In the General Post Office (G.P.O.) it is just another day. A motley crowd moves in and out. The silence, interrupted only by the shuffle of feet, muffled voices and the scraping of pens, is shattered by cheers, shouts, war whoops to the command, "General Post Office... charge!" Bedlam breaks loose, the battalions come pouring in. The insurgents take their positions and resist a heavy onslaught by the British Lancers. The G.P.O. is seized, as is the South Dublin Union, Jacob's factory, Boland's Mills, the Four Courts, St. Stephen's Green, the College of Surgeons and City Hall. Connolly, with Pearce, Clarke, MacDermott, MacDonagh, Ceant and Plunkett, are in command. The Tricolour flies over the G.P.O., the people outside are silent, as Patrick Pearce, from the portal, reads the Proclamation of the Irish Republic.

"On the sixth and final day of Insurrection, the flags, torn and bullet scarred, still fly through columns of smoke over the General Post Office. The rattle of gunfire accompanies the crackle of flames. The roof crashes into the flames and the flagstaff slowly topples to one side. It is over twelve hours since the Insurgents quitted the G.P.O. and vanished amid gunfire into the labyrinth of laneways between Henry Street and the military cordons in Great Britain Street. The insurgent leaders, Pearce, Connolly, Plunkett, Clarke and MacDermott, establish headquarters in Grogan's grocery shop at the corner of Moore Street and Henry Place. Eamon DeValera is holding out at Boland's Bakery. So are commandant Thomas McDonagh, Major John McBride, Michael Mallin and the countess Markievicz. Eamon Ceant and the critically wounded Cathal Brugha are in occupation in the South Dublin Union Hospital. In Moore Street, Miss Elizabeth O'Farrell, one of the nurses with the G.P.O. garrison, emerges from the insurgent headquarters carrying the white flag and approaches the British barricade. She returns. Now Patrick Pearce walks with her towards Great Britain Street, where the British authorities await him. Later in the afternoon, Pearce is taken to Arbour Hill Prison, and Connolly to the hospital at Dublin Castle."

The eventual execution of these patriots by General Lord John Maxwell, commander of the British forces in Ireland, united the Irish people as never before, and forced British withdrawal from all but the six counties in the North of Ireland. On behalf of these brave men and women and the unfinished chapter of Northern Ireland, let us ask our Government to intercede with our ally England and break the chains of oppression that still exist in Northern Ireland today; and so make Ireland a complete Nation; a Nation for which the men and women we honor here today will not have died in vain — as they fought for freedom and Nationhood, the same goals we in America fought for and enjoy today.

legislation to correct job discrimination against the Catholic minority in the north of Ireland.

The inquest into the deaths of three IRA members killed by the British Army Commandos in Gibraltar showed that one man was shot with 18 bullets including four into his head at close range as he lay wounded on the ground. It also revealed that all three were unarmed. This "shoot to kill" policy of the British army is shocking. In 1984, John Stalker, the famous Deputy Chief Constable of the Greater Manchester Police Force was sent by London to northern Ireland to investigate the killing of six men by the Royal Ulster Constabulary. An Action Through Boycott?

By VINCENT

Did the 80's go by us that quickly? We are watching another decade slide by us while British injustice toward Irish Catholics and Nationalists continues. Suppose we really start to consider a boycott in memory of the 10 brave Irish men who died on hunger strike in the beginning of this tragic decade in the North of Ireland?

Suppose we go after the Brits with a new non-violent energy never seen before? Suppose we join with every Irish Organization (and I mean every Irish Organization) and ask every Irish man and woman wherever they may be to join in and support our efforts?

Suppose we pick just 1 British Retailer and just 1 British Financial Institution and target them for total boycott until the Strip Search and Diplock Courts and Shoot to Kill Policy and the Evil Extradition Treaties are abolished once and for all? What do you think would happen?

We need laws such as the MacBride Principles to protect the rights of Catholic people in Northern Ireland and in every State we work in British Lobbyists are working against us. We have to convince our own legislators of the evils of Discrimination as measured against monetary considerations. (Thank God many good legislators are on our side).

Ten brave Irish men died and most of the world stood by... Can we be as strong and united as they were? Do we have the courage to test our strength or find our weakness? Let us see if we have the Unity of Pur-persuasion, the Shankhill being mostly Protestant and The Falls Road Catholic. It was deeply moving to be with them weeping and embracing one another. They are a fantastic and wonderful people. Herein lies the hope; there must be forgiveness on everyone's part. Forgiveness can heal all wounds if only we work at it.

The issue is justice, for injustice has been rampant and vicious. The unfairness has to be revealed, so people can see the causes of hatred and violence. In the main, these gross injustices stem from social and economic policies enforced by the British.

Human rights violations have been severe and persistent. Keeping up the pretense that British propriety would never allow such horror is a form of ignorance. Americans outraged against human rights violations in South Africa, Guatemala and the Middle East have the same duty to speak out against the British. Civil rights must prevail for human rights and peace to occur.

These violations have been substantiated by the famous Bennett Report, Amnesty International and the Strassbourg Report.

American and European mediators are desperately needed. The people need outside help and it is desperately needed now. This is the greatest contribution America could make, offering them peace facilitators.

Belfast children learn quickly about violence and hatred. Belfast is a difficult place to raise a family. Children are enticed into paramilitary activities, destroying the hopes and stability of a large number of families. It is heart-wrenching to witness.

Their basic problems are social and economic. They become polarized and exploited for their religious beliefs. Restrictions, injustice and confinement can make loving people become crazed. Northern Ireland people are a beautiful people yet they are hating, fighting and killing one another.

The hurts are emotional and psychological, besides physical. Man's inhumanity to man presents a terrible and unbelievable atmosphere. The most frightening pose, and if we are weak, let us realize what we must do to become strong!

If every Irish group has input and ALL our Chieftans stand together with the cry of "NO SURRENDER", then perhaps we can gain for our brothers and sisters some basic human rights and freedoms. We owe Bobby Sands and his nine brave brothers and our persecuted ancestors at least that much! We should not let them down.

Just look at the Joe Doherty case. How many court decisions must he and his lawyers win? Our government seems bound and determined to send Joe back to Thatcher and her S.A.S. retribution. They could not hold him in a British jail; so they get our Attorneys General to do the job for them. We must do something!

We have people who can advise us on investment or dis-investment in stocks and funds that involve British businesses. We can live without British retail products. Can't we? I am just thinking out loud; but I welcome the opportunity to participate in such a challenge. You see I believe we Irish can do whatever we set our minds to. I believe the Ancient Order of Hibernians can be the catalyst for such an action.

Non-violent change can be lasting change. And I want the sons and daughters of Ireland to be able to live for their country and help her grow and live United and Free!

Where is Mike Coogan's phone number? I have to run this idea by him... Mike is always there when I call. Stay tuned!

reality is the physical violence. While I was there, kneecappings and firebombings seemed to be at a peak.

How would you feel if you were lifted, or your son or daughter were jailed and held for an undue length of time without trial, without lawyers? The court system and the civil laws were specifically devised by the British for northern Ireland. Until recently they had laws of internment up to two years. They have bred long-term and deep hatred. Laws such as these have enabled the police and the British army to search and ransack homes without warrants. They can arrest people and hold them for long periods of time without trial. Many of these people were innocent of any activity or crime; some of them were tortured and brutalized.

These violations have been substantiated by the famous Bennett Report, Amnesty International and the Strassbourg Report.

British Fear Election of New York Irish Hardliner

FROM LEONARD DOYLE
IN NEW YORK

British officials are bracing themselves for the prospect that Northern Ireland is becoming an issue in this year's election for Mayor of New York, in much the same way that US policy on Israel inevitably figures in the city's politics.

More ominously, there is a distinct possibility that the winner in November will be the candidate most antipathetic to British interests, Harrison "Jay" Goldin, who has supported two campaigns against Britain being fought by Irish-Americans.

Mr. Goldin, 52, the Comptroller of New York, is one of the main sponsors of the MacBride Principles, which would oblige the British to introduce affirmative action programmes for Catholics in Northern Ireland. He is also prominent in the campaign by Americans across the political spectrum to win political asylum for Joe Doherty, an IRA man convicted of killing a British soldier.

His chances of winning the election are considered high because of the way New York politics divides along ethnic lines. And, curiously, those who tip Goldin to win, say that it will be because of his support among Jewish and black voters rather than the ethnic Irish whose political agenda he has done so much to advance.

The others in the three-way race for the Democratic nomination are David Dinkins, a black candidate with little Jewish support, and the incumbent Mayor, Ed Koch, who alienated the black community by disparaging Jesse Jackson last year. Though running third in the polls (not unlike Ed Koch in 1977), Mr. Goldin still commands broad Jewish and black support which together comprise 57 per cent of the New York Democratic electorate.

In the general election, the Republican candidate is expected to be Rudolph Giuliani, the former US Attorney with a reputation for fighting crime. Mr. Giuliani's core supporters are expected to be the ethnic Italian and Irish who together make up just 16 percent of the electorate.

The MacBride campaign, directed and largely bankrolled by Mr. Goldin's New York office, shows the increasing influence of local pressure groups on US foreign policy. Although the US government disapproves of the MacBride campaign, it has been unable to halt it. Last week, the US Consul General in Belfast, Robert Myers, said it was spreading "almost like AIDS" in America. Ten states and over a dozen cities have passed laws stipulating Catholic job quotas in their Ulster subsidiaries.

Based loosely on the Sullivan principles, which tackled discrimination against blacks in South Africa, the MacBride campaign has been seen from the outset by British officials as a Trojan horse, disguising the true intentions of Irish-American activists. British officials also claim the principles will frighten US investment away and worsen Catholic unemployment.

The Joe Doherty case is another thorny issue for British officials. He fled to the US after being convicted of killing a British captain and has been in jail for six years while appealing against deportation to Britain. The British say that if he is granted asylum, it will be seen by Irish-Americans as judicial support for the IRA.

Viewpoints A Political Prisoner Rots in New York

By JIMMY BRESLIN

Here was Joe Doherty yesterday morning in his orange jailhouse jumpsuit, exploding off the wall at the front of the cell, running about two big steps and hitting the rear wall of the 12-by-6 foot space. He rebounded like an orange stone, twisted, and hurled himself at the front wall.

Joe, 34 now, runs like this for about two hours every day after breakfast in his cell on Floor 9 South at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan. As this form of running requires more shoulder strike than foot strike, Joe now could have a bus brush his shoulder and feel nothing.

He has never committed even a misdemeanor in this country and yet he has been in the MCC for almost seven years, longer than any prisoner who ever has been in the place. They have him in solitary confinement in a high-security floor. In walking the 20 yards from his cell to the visiting room yesterday morning, he was handcuffed in back and escorted by three guards.

"They took the television out of here," he was saying yesterday. "They said we're on a high-security place and they don't even want television."

Joe Doherty came to New York in 1982 direct from the Crumlin Road jail, Belfast, Northern Ireland. He was in the IRA and had been in a shootout with British soldiers, during which one of them, a captain was killed. Doherty and seven others were captured. They broke out of the jail, tying up 16 guards and going through six doors. They emerged onto a street they thought would be clear, but instead was crowded with British soldiers leaning against tanks. Doherty and his people fled under fire. Margaret Thatcher got up on the floor of the House of Commons and promised that they would be hunted and caught. Seven of them remained in Northern Ireland and were caught. Joe Doherty made his way to New York.

He immediately made the most sensible decision of moving in with a woman of Italian extraction in Bensonhurst. He worked construction and on weekends he tended bar at Clancy's on Third Avenue and 65th Street. In June of 1983, nine federal agents came into the Saturday morning quiet of Clancy's with a murder warrant. It was British government issue and being executed by the United States Department of

Michael Cummings, National Director, Public Relations
Ancient Order of Hibernians
Submitted to Honorable Lee Hamilton, Chairman
Subcommittee on Europe and Middle East
House Foreign Affairs Committee
Washington, D.C.

Mr. Chairman, Professor Coleman has detailed for you the utter waste of tax money in the "American" Fund for Ireland. To end this aid would be the first rational thing Congress has done in Ireland since it stopped the Department of State from placing .357 Magnums into the hands of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the most discredited police force in Europe. At least the sale of .357 Magnums made no pretense of reducing tensions or lessening anti-Catholic discrimination. This Fund was adopted with more haste than the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution and will likely have similar results for peace in Ireland as that Resolution had for peace in Vietnam.

Professor Coleman has explained with great detail and accuracy what a clever hoax this fund really is. When Senator Kerry voted for this Fund he stated that he was advised by John Hume, the leader of the Social Democratic Labour Party in the North, that "it is the only effective means for bringing terrorism under control." Let us see.

•Without pretense as to any purpose, the Agriculture & Fisheries program monotonously lists amounts paid to every farmer in Antrim as if it were a welfare stipend. And since when is mushroom farming a weapon against terrorism?

•The Urban Development grants include a scandalous list of payments to banks and restaurants including the very latest in anti-terrorism techniques — investing in bars and bookie shops.

•The Wider Horizons and Tourist Programs do nothing but silver line the pockets of entrepreneurs in the most successful industry in Ireland — north and south. The water sports and golfing tours surely will get at the root causes of violence. We all know how a golfer can terrorize a golf course.

Please Consider these questions?
•Is it right that public funds enrich private industry particularly where there is no need? Did you know that rural depopulation is a problem in Antrim and that grants for raising geese and ducks would solve it?

•Is it not wrong to have a member of the auditing firm that conducts the audit of the Fund also on its Board? This may explain why there is no showing that 3/4ths of the money has gone to the north and why the key phrase "Generally Accepted Accounting Principles" is never used in the report.

•Isn't it wrong that the Act (P.L. 99-4115) requires the use of the funds to leverage private sector investment but the Chairman of the Fund reads that to mean the promotion of private sector prosperity?

•If, as many here believe, this is a religious struggle, is it not incredibly wrong that so much money is going to shell corporations of the Catholic Church whose boards are peppered with priests and Knights of Columbus?

•With so many international bodies capable of administering these funds why is it that the money is managed by the very agency that has crafted the Catholic discrimination and isolation for decades — the DED — which regularly sends teams of "experts" to testify against the MacBride Fair Employment Principles here in America?

•What utter madness permits District Councils and their subsidiary organizations that have never even adopted the 1976 Fair Employment Statement (Ards, Craigavon, Coleraine, North Down) to be grant recipients of American money?

•Most importantly are there not bankrupt American farmers who need this money and homeless here could use the funds expended on tourist hotels in the North of Ireland?

The Fund was ill conceived, is mismanaged, and can do nothing to contribute to peace. Its purpose then and now is to reward Catholics for lining up at the SDLP trough. We have recommended termination of the Fund but have suggestions which would minimize its corruption if it won't die a graceful death.

Senator Moynihan stated in 1986 that to vote against the Fund would mean that the "Senate would have blood on its hands." Indeed, Congress does have blood on its hands when it chooses to act expeditiously and without reason or conscience simply throws money at the Anglo-Irish conflict. The time and money wasted in this Fund have surely cost lives and deepened the despair that turns reason to rage. I ask you to honestly admit this mistake and to begin seriously examining a truly constructive American role in ending Ireland's agony.

United States as a political refugee. The immigration service moved to deport Doherty to Britain, which was the same as extraditing him.

Doherty again won in court. He then applied for political asylum in this country. Attorney General Edwin Meese, who lived with one foot in jail himself, refused. "That would be injurious to our relationship with the United Kingdom." Suddenly, in Washington they changed the extradition treaty with Britain to eliminate political asylum for fugitives and made it retroactive to cover Doherty. He won in court again. Now his request for asylum is before the latest attorney general, Dick Thornburgh.

U.S. Press Goes Easy on 'Death Squads' in Northern Ireland

Say the words "death squad" in Ireland and people won't automatically conjure up Central America. Chances are they will think about Northern Ireland and Mrs. Thatcher and what her government has been sanctioning and condoning. Writing as one who grew up in County Court, I don't think there have been many moments in my lifetime, certainly not since Bloody Sunday 1972, when troops shot unarmed people in the streets of Derry, that the British state has been held in lower esteem by Irish people.

Why is Britain so unpopular?

Viewpoint

By ALEXANDER COCKBURN

Three words—Stalker, Birmingham and Gibraltar—gesture to the reasons. First, the British policeman John Stalker has said that the inquiry bearing his name turned up evidence that a policy of state-sanctioned murder—death squads in fact—was operating in Northern Ireland, in which suspects were being gunned down without benefit of arrest, interrogation or trial. A British government official conceded to Parliament the disturbing implications of the inquiry but proclaimed that "national security" compelled it to be closed off.

No less infuriating to Irish people was the refusal by Britain's judicial system to acknowledge that men and women in all likelihood innocent—the Birmingham Six—remain in prison. They were arrested after a bomb explosion had killed 21 people in London. Subsequent investigation has shown that confessions were consequent upon beatings, that forensic evidence was dubious, that the guilty parties are at large. But a British judge rejected convincing indications of a terrible miscarriage of justice. The Birmingham Six remain behind bars and many Irish people think "national security" is the decisive factor in their continued incarceration.

The killings in Gibraltar are freshest in mind. Three members of the Irish Republican Army, two men and a woman, were shot to death by British security forces, who claimed their victims were about to detonate a terrorist bomb. But the British government's account turned out to be false. A British TV network aired—over fierce pressure from Mrs. Thatcher and her forces—eyewitness accounts indicating that the unarmed trio were murdered, and the BBC, increasingly gagged and servile in the Thatcher years, has come up with similarly disturbing accounts.

The fury in Ireland is echoed by Irish Americans, who are baffled by the extraordinarily genteel way these episodes have been handled by the press here. Now the role of the U.S. press is of great importance, as the British well understand. An alert press means an alerted public, hence responsive politicians and ultimately pressure on the British government to clean up its act. Any equitable political solution in Northern Ireland depends in part upon the confidence of all parties—Catholic as well as Protestant—in the lawfulness and impartiality of government. As the foregoing material suggests, no such confidence now exists; nor will it till the British government stops flouting elementary justice, whether with a shoot-first, ask-questions-afterward policy, or with its diplock courts where people in Northern Ireland can be bundled into prison virtually without due process.

Well aware of the importance of the U.S. press, the British run an efficient public-relations campaign, blessed with great cooperation on the part of American journalists, as a remarkable account by Jo Thomas in the May/June issue of the Columbia Journalism Review (and reprinted in the June issue of the more widely circulated Irish America) underlines.

Ms. Thomas, now teaching at a journalism school in Illinois, was previously a correspondent for the New York Times and a journalist for 18 years. From 1984 to early 1986 she was based in the Times's London bureau, making forays to Northern Ireland. Ms. Thomas narrates how she began investigating the involvement of police and British Army undercover units in what she calls "questionable shootings." She completed two stories before, as she says, "I was abruptly ordered home." By her count, between 1982 and 1987 there were at least 47 suspicious shootings by police or undercover army units. At least 21 of the victims were unarmed and the rest, in Ms. Thomas's opinion, were probably given no opportunity to surrender before being killed.

Why was she suddenly recalled? Ms. Thomas says a senior editor told her it was because she had been paying too much attention to Northern Ireland, and she sets this charge in context. It is easy, she writes, for an American journalist in London to feel important and well informed. They get their weekly confidential briefing at 10 Downing Street. They are invited to dinner at the best places: "No one understands hierarchies better than the British, and they are careful to make close personal friendships with members of important American news organizations. It makes us reluctant to offend, especially to bring up the touchy subject of the war, which they refuse to call a war, in Northern Ireland."

Anyone following U.S. reporting from Britain will recognize the accuracy of this. Anthony Lewis, a former New York Times bureau chief in London, still visits Glyndebourne every year and remits to his readers paeans to the British Way of Life of a sentimentality unrivaled since

'Time to Go' Initiative Launched

HISTORIC CHARTER

THE charter states: "British presence is unquestionably part of the problem. It remains the major obstacle to negotiating a peaceful settlement. Surely it's time to look for a lasting solution. We must recognise that there will never be peace while Britain remains in Ireland."

By RACHEL DOWNEY

Labour MPs have launched a campaign for the withdrawal of British troops from Northern Ireland.

The campaign entitled Time to Go includes a charter signed by more than 100 politicians, artists, musicians and authors.

Launching the campaign, Clare Short, the Crossmaglen, County Armagh-born Labour MP for Birmingham Ladywood, said that it was aimed at speeding up the political settlement process without which troops could not be withdrawn.

The leading campaigner on Irish issues pointed out that the majority of the British public had expressed support for withdrawal from Northern Ireland in opinion polls over the last ten years.

"Yet this argument has not been allowed which is an unhealthy situation in our country," she stressed. "Debate is paralysed because politicians who take an interest in Northern Ireland but fail to defend the status quo, or who advocate withdrawal are instantly ac-

Rupert Brooke's World War I poem "Grantchester." A subsequent bureau chief, R. W. Apple, Jr., seemed as determined as Mr. Lewis to savor an England perfumed with fine claret and the values of an 18th century squire. When American journalists meet British bobbies ("smiling and unarmed," of course, though the opposite is usually true) or members of the upper classes, their backbones and prose turn to the neuro-physiological equivalent of a British nursery pudding staple, junket.

Ms. Thomas says that the good favor of her colleagues and hosts subsided abruptly as she embarked upon her inquiries in Northern Ireland: "A senior editor, who kept a home in London as well as New York...began telling me to stay out of Northern Ireland. A high-ranking British official, who in the past had close ties to the intelligence community in Northern Ireland, took me to lunch and suggested that I drop my investigation in exchange for a lot of access to the secretary of state for Northern Ireland." Her mail arrived opened. Finally she was recalled.

Reflecting upon her experience, Ms. Thomas analyzes acutely the biases afflicting most American reporting on Northern Ireland, from the political reverberations of using "Ulster" to denote six counties, to the way in which a crime by British security forces is often described not as such, but as a "propaganda victory" for Sinn Féin. It is rare for a mainstream journalist to be so forthright, and perhaps it will have an effect. "If a police force of the United Kingdom could, in cold blood, kill a 17-year-old youth with no terrorist or criminal convictions, and then plot to hide the evidence from a senior policeman deputed to investigate it, then a shame belonged to us all," former Deputy Chief Constable John Stalker writes. "This is the act of a Central American assassination squad—truly of a police force out of control." Mr. Stalker took his responsibilities seriously and so, too, should the U.S. press. It would make a difference.

cused of being covert supporters of the IRA. There has to be a new political settlement that reduces the conflict."

Peter Hain, one of the sponsors, said that the campaign aimed to raise the level of debate around the need for withdrawal but not to offer any solutions. "The key focus of the campaign is to get a government commitment to withdraw the troops and move towards a political settlement," he said, adding that Time to Go was the "most broadly-based campaign for withdrawal ever" and would include a popular style of campaigning.

During the coming year the charter will be open for signatures and a march and carnival will be held in August next year, on the twentieth anniversary of British troops being sent onto the streets of Belfast and Derry.

In November there will be a briefing conference to open up the debate among young people and, in the spring, a weekend of discussion will be held, involving leading international academics and politicians, to examine the ways in which withdrawal can be accomplished.

Ms Short acknowledged that support for the campaign to date had come from members of the Labour Party, the SDLP and Plaid Cymru, the Welsh Nationalist Party but that none had been sought from the Conservatives. However, she added: "by the end of the year many Tories will be able to express their support which now is expressed privately."

The campaign has not contacted Irish groups in Britain but is concentrating on increasing support amongst British groups. "Britain governs and legislates for Northern Ireland," Ms Short said. "It was Britain which sent in the troops and says that there will be no solution until agreed by the majority. Britain is the cause of the problem and we are responsible. Everytime a child is killed by a plastic bullet, we are to blame. Britain has to face up to its responsibilities."

Ms Short described the charter as an "important historical document" adding that developments towards a political settlement could already be seen in Ireland—with the talks between Sinn Féin and the SDLP, but not in Britain.

Another one of the sponsors, Mike Fisher, the solicitor for one of the Guildford Four who has represented a number of Irish people tried in Britain, said he was supporting the campaign because "it is absolutely clear that until the charter has been accepted in principle, Irish people in Britain will never be tried fairly."

Tommy Walsh, Community Care Officer of the Federation of Irish Societies, has signed the charter in a personal capacity, along with Tony Benn MP, Ken Livingstone MP, Lord Gifford, who represented the Birmingham Six during their appeal hearing last November, Dublin born Democrat politician Alan Whelan and his Democrat colleague Simon Hughes, historian A.J.P. Taylor, author Donall MacAmhlaigh, cartoonist Steve Bell and, from the acting profession, Julie Christie, T.P. McKenna and Steven Rea.

A number of trade unionists have also added their names to the charter including Alan Sapper, the general secretary of ACTT and the union's national organiser; Noel Harris the general secretary of the NUM, Peter Heathfield and also the president of the National Union of Students, Maeve Sherlock.

Cong. McGrath Supports Two Irish Causes

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman McGrath (R-Valley Stream) announced his support recently of two bills favoring Irish causes. One would penalize American corporations operating in Northern Ireland who use discriminatory hiring practices, and another commends a U.S. legal decision allowing Irish National Joseph Doherty to seek asylum in the United States.

"Frequently, our attention is focused on other parts of the world which draw more media coverage," McGrath said. "Violence and oppression in Northern Ireland have continued for hundreds of years. The lack of constant attention by television cameras does not mean the problems have been solved."

McGrath has cosponsored H.R. 156, which contains severe tax penalties for U.S. companies who discriminate against the Catholic minority. Strong empirical evidence shows that Northern Ireland's Catholics experience widespread hiring discrimination. The British government is expected to pass anti-discrimination laws later this year which all companies in Northern Ireland will be required to follow. H.R. 156 will ensure that U.S. companies are not being subsidized by the tax code for practices that would not be tolerated in this country.

"This bill brings a 'carrot and stick' approach to the discrimination problem among Northern Ireland's Catholics," McGrath explained. "U.S. companies will be told that discrimination means the loss of generous tax breaks. Companies which make an effort to hire Catholic workers in high unemployment areas will be eligible to receive further incentives."

Additionally, McGrath is supporting a resolution commending the Board of Immigration Appeal's decision to allow Joseph Doherty to apply for political asylum in the United States. Doherty has been in a U.S. prison since 1983 without being charged with a crime. He escaped from a Northern Ireland jail after conviction of crimes relating to the death of a British soldier. Doherty considers himself a political refugee and wishes asylum.

"Joseph Doherty is a soldier fighting against an occupation army with a history of shooting suspected Irish Republican Army members on sight," the Long Island Congressman said. "His actions against the British occupation forces should be viewed as a political, not criminal act."

McGrath concluded, "Let us hope that peace will soon come to Northern Ireland, but not at the expense of continued discrimination against the Catholic minority."

FREEDOM FOR ALL IRELAND

City Officials Urge Release Of Joe Doherty

SCHENECTADY, NY: The Schenectady AOH has congratulated the Schenectady city government for speaking out on behalf of Joe Doherty.

"The courage and vision of Schenectady's mayor and councilmembers are to be commended," commented Dennis McFadden of the Schenectady AOH Freedom For All Ireland Committee, referring to the Mayor's Official Proclamation and the Council's Resolution, which strongly supported Joe Doherty, calling for his release. McFadden noted that Schenectady's action followed similar resolutions by the New York State Assembly, the cities of New York, Chicago and Philadelphia and dozens of other governments and organizations. "By appealing for simple Christian justice for an Irishman unjustly imprisoned in the land of the free, Schenectady's leaders have demonstrated the true spirit of St. Patrick's Day."

McFadden also congratulated AOH Schenectady President Larry Riley, who, along with the FFAI, proposed the Resolution and Proclamation to the City Government, while thanking other area Hibernian leaders in Watervliet and Troy who have had the courage to speak out for Doherty.

Cong. Downey To Fight for Joe Doherty

During a February 17 meeting with Suffolk County's Congressman Thomas Downey, Irish-American leaders were assured of the Congressman's deep interest in Joe Doherty's plight. Based on a recent personal visit to the Manhattan Correctional Center, Downey indicated that his discussion with Joe impressed him to the extent that he is now anxious to actively involve himself in rectifying this blatant injustice.

Meeting with Congressman Downey were Ray Meehan, AOH State Treasurer; Brendan Moore, AOH State Freedom For All Ireland Chairman; Tom Jordan, AOH County President; John Hennessey, AOH County Vice President; Tom Conway, St. Mary's Parish Peace and Justice Committee; Charlie McLoughlin, AOH County Immigration Chairman; Anna Marie Priest, LAOH County President; Kathleen Holmes, Chairwoman of the American Irish Congress; Kathleen Conway, County Chairwoman, Freedom For All Ireland Committee.

Other concerns addressed by the group included visa denial, federal MacBride legislation, the work of the Congressional Ad Hoc Committee for Irish Affairs, and Irish immigration problems.

Constitutional Nationalists

WE THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and out posterity, DO ORDAIN AND ESTABLISH THIS CONSTITUTION FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

The Preamble to what is perhaps the greatest government document ever written, the U.S. Constitution, is characteristically crystal clear. It leaves no doubt as to what the Constitution is, what it does, and where it comes from. And any American who says that he is a constitutionalist stands on clear ground; he may argue about what constitutes interstate commerce, or at what point a punishment becomes cruel and unusual, but he must affirm the sovereignty of the American people over American government and American destiny. And he must regard as legitimate only laws and official actions that are duly made according to the provisions of the U.S. Constitution and its amendments, those provisions and amendments themselves duly enacted by the American people — and by them alone.

What a "Constitutional" Irish Nationalist is supposed to be is not so obvious.

The word has slipped into the idiom of public discussion on Northern Ireland in recent years. It is used to refer to Nationalists in northeastern Ireland, in particular the SDLP, who follow the legal forms and work within the political institutions of the statelet, ostensibly to bring about the aims of Irish Nationalism. In other words, the Constitutional Nationalists advocate using a sectarian, British-run governmental system that enshrines the interests of an Orange oligarchy and rules by means of military force and laws that suspend almost every essential liberty — to bring about a united, free, non-sectarian and democratic Irish republic. Do you need to be an "extremist" to see a problem with this?

Modern constitutionalism is generally defined as requiring that a government's powers be defined, and its actions limited, by a specific set of laws and practices imposed by the people whom the government represents. By contrast, the new Irish Constitutionalists allow, indeed advocate, that the people's actions should be defined and limited by laws imposed by a government which represents a different country — in fact, by the historic oppressor of their own country.

Thus the "Constitutional" Nationalists have stood the rich and honored concept of constitutionalism on its head. And what passes for an Irish constitutionalist these days is one who for practical purposes supports the British Constitution — or worse, the degraded version of it that applies to Northern Ireland.

Could Eamon DeValera, who brought Ireland's own noble Constitution into being, have known this was going to happen?

The Irish advocates of "Constitutional" Nationalism presumably use the term to capitalize on the air of legitimacy that the U.S. and Irish Constitutions lend to it, as well as that given by the concept of limited rule itself. As such, it is a public relations gambit along the same lines as the TV fast food commercials that show smiling, singing people eating greasy, tasteless, burgers to associate happiness and health with the junk food that the fast food joints sell. The commercials are apparently as successful as the message is bogus; perhaps the same holds true for "Constitutional" Nationalism. To paraphrase Lincoln, you can probably fool a lot of the people a lot of the time.

The real issue behind the slick packaging of moderate Nationalists as constitutionalists, though, is one of strategy. While the term is used to create the impression that their approach is the legitimate one, the original reason for working within the system in Northern Ireland, in fact for the founding of the SDLP itself, was that it offered what was hoped would be a more effective way of working for civil rights and other Nationalist goals, given the perceived failure of militant Republicanism in the years before 1969.

Has it been? After twenty years of the Troubles, and nineteen of the SDLP, there is a track record.

The key issues in 1969, by all accounts, were discrimination and civil rights. Let's look, first, at discrimination:

In 1968, the rate of Catholic unemployment was double that of Protestants; today it is double that of Protestants, but there's a government Fair Employment Agency to study the situation and take complaints from Nationalists who for some reason think they've been discriminated against. Few complaints are filed; hardly any are found to be "merited."

And civil rights: In 1968, Nationalists were subject to arbitrary seizure and imprisonment under the Special Powers Act. Today, under the Emergency Provisions Act and the Prevention of Terrorism Act, they are subject to seizure and interrogation for up to seven days at the discretion of the authorities, followed by a non-jury trial before a Northern Ireland judge, in which they can (will) be convicted legally by forced confessions, or by the uncorroborated testimony of a paid informer, or even by the testimony of the police interrogator that they made an unrecorded verbal confession. But, the Dublin government now has a consultative arrangement with the British, the Anglo-Irish Agreement, under which it can offer comments and suggestions on human rights in Northern Ireland, if it wishes. Presumably having received such input, the British are now in the process of passing laws that will eliminate the right of arrested persons to remain silent, a right enshrined in the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution; and that will ban spokesmen for legal, but anti-British, political parties from the airwaves, violating a right enshrined in the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

So the track record of "Constitutional" Nationalism brings us back to the subject of constitutions again — and leaves little more to be said.

Let me only suggest that any claims by the SDLP, the Dublin government, the Kennedy-Moynihan

Support Clare Short, MP

Clare Short is Member of Parliament for Birmingham/Ladywood and chairs the "Time to Go" movement. The movement is a broad-based campaign which calls for a detailed debate on how British withdrawal from Northern Ireland is to be accomplished. Perhaps an understanding of the person and the organization is to be attained from Clare Short herself.

"We do not accept the democratic legitimacy of the Northern Ireland border and all the poisonous discrimination that has flowed from it..."

"Given that nothing else will work, it is surely time to re-examine the traditional solution to the Northern Ireland conflict. Should not Britain withdraw from the province, re-unite Ireland and reverse the historic mistake of partition? Nowadays this course receives no serious consideration at all from the political establishment, even though opinion polls show that it commands con-

bunch, or whoever, that its approach to Northern Ireland is constitutional, should be judged according to the first article of Eamon De Valera's Constitution:

The Irish nation hereby affirms its inalienable, indefeasible and sovereign right to choose its own form of government, to determine its relations with other nations, and to develop its life, political, economic, and cultural, in accordance with its own genius and traditions.

Joe Farrell

istent majority support among the British electorate. If it is raised at all it is usually to be dismissed out of hand as utterly impractical, morally irresponsible and politically unacceptable...

"It is widely understood that the political partition of Ireland did not have the consent of the people of Ireland and that the border had no democratic or geographical legitimacy. But even worse, the present majority has been maintained through the crude and deliberate use of discrimination to force a disproportionate nationalist emigration and thus avoid the nationalist majority that would otherwise have taken power by now...."

"The New Ireland Forum predicted a nationalist majority by 2016 on current population trends. But there is real doubt that this majority will be allowed to take power. The poison of discrimination and sectarianism is built into the present political settlement."

We cannot afford to turn our backs on this effort. Can we count on you to request a $25 donation from your division? If so, send it directly to Clare Short at the above address, indicating that it is intended to further the "Time to Go" movement.

N.Y. State Legislature Acts on Joe Doherty

ALBANY, N.Y.: Continuing his fight on behalf of imprisoned Joe Doherty, Assemblyman John C. Dearie (D-Bronx) marshaled a resolution through the State Legislature urging President Bush, the Congress and U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh to grant Doherty "immediate release on bail" and "his plea for political asylum."

Joining Dearie as co-prime Assembly sponsors of the measure are Queens Assemblyman Joseph Crowley, Richard Keane (D-Erie) and Kemp Hannon (R-Nassau). Sponsoring the resolution in the State Senate were Nicholas Spano (R-Westchester) and Suzi Oppenheimer (D-Westchester).

The resolution noted that Doherty has been held at the MCC, a federal prison in New York City, since June of 1983 without one federal charge having been brought against him.

It also reads Doherty's extradition was denied by Manhattan Federal Court Judge John E. Sprizzo in December 1984 "on the grounds that the acts which his extradition is sought are not common crimes but rather offenses of a political character."

There is no doubt that Joe Doherty, so far, has been failed by the U.S. Justice Department, to our regret, through obviously blatant British government anti-Irish propaganda and manipulation," Dearie said.

RESPONSE APPRECIATED

Dear Mr. Henshaw,

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to you and to The Ancient Order of Hibernians for all your helpful responses to the article published in The Digest regarding our television plans for Irish Television America. Please let your readers know that Abbey Productions is currently working to expand our viewing area as quickly as possible and that their continued requests to cable systems for access to the show will definitely help speed the process.

REP. DOWNEY UPDATES

Dear Mr. Henshaw:

Knowing that you share my continuing interest in Irish issues, I want to take a moment to bring you up to date on some recent actions taken by the Congress.

The 101st Congress is already demonstrating its concern with Irish issues. Congressman Brian Donnelly recently introduced H.R. 156, a bill to provide tax incentives for American companies doing business in Northern Ireland, as long as those companies abide by fair employment practices. I am proud to have joined Congressman Donnelly as a cosponsor of this bill, and will be working hard to ensure its passage in the House of Representatives.

I have again joined Congressman Hamilton Fish in cosponsoring his Northern Ireland Fair Employment Practices Act. The so-called MacBride Principles of Fair Employment, which this bill seeks to implement, require that American companies operating in Northern Ireland employ a fair representation of Catholics.

Finally, as a followup to my November visit with Joe Doherty, I have cosponsored a House Resolution commending the Board of Immigration Appeals decision to allow Joseph Doherty to apply for political asylum in the United States and asking the Attorney General to expeditiously approve that request.

As a member of the House Ad Hoc Committee on Irish Affairs, these issues, which I know are important to you, are never far from my mind. I hope that you will always feel free to write or call me should you have further questions, comments, or concerns.

Thomas J. Downey
Member of Congress

SELECTIVE CRITICISM

Dear Editor:

Another Saint Patrick's day is upon us and Ireland is still an occupied country.

The leaders of the free world criticize South Africa, Iraq, Iran, El Salvador for the atrocities they have committed against mankind. We have placed sanctions against them to show that civilized nations will not stand for this form of political slavery. Yet not one word of official criticism is directed towards Great Britain for the 800 years of political and economic slavery she has imposed on Ireland. I believe Great Britain is still in Ireland not because of so-called religious differences, but because she cannot bear to part with her first out-of-country conquest. The mighty British Empire has fallen onto hard times, and she is trying hard to hold onto her former glory. So Ireland must suffer for British vanity as the rest of the world turns its head.

I would ask you to remember one thing. The children of Ireland bleed the same color blood as the children of the Mideast, South Africa, Afghanistan, Asia and South America.

If we protest tyranny in other parts of the world, can we in good conscience forget Ireland?

James P. Conlon

CARDINAL O'CONNOR'S MESSAGE PRAISED

Dear Cardinal O'Connor:

Your St. Patrick's Day homily was insightful and a powerful call for truth. There are, in fact, many moral questions and issues about the conflict in Ireland and its many victims but up until your appointment, religious and political leaders alike focused on the symptom of violence and not on the causes. The "blaming the victim" syndrome you spoke so eloquently about is certainly key to understanding how Britain has been able to avoid serious scrutiny of their official mechanisms for military and legal repression, economic subjugation and social isolation of Catholics in Ireland.

I implore your continued leadership in broadening the agenda of moral questions to be considered. It is up to me and others to actually promote political and social action but all of that would be without effect were it not for your pleas for justice, equity, dialogue, etc.

Please feel free to call upon me at any time if I can be of assistance in this matter. Please accept the thanks and gratitude of our National President Mike Coogan and all Hibernians whose affection for Ireland and concern for the conflict is well known to you.

Honorable Richard Thornburgh
Attorney General
United States Dept. of Justice
Tenth St. & Constitution Ave., N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20530

Dear Attorney General:

As members of the New York State Legislature, we are writing regarding a serious injustice that is being perpetrated against Mr. Joseph Patrick Doherty, who has been incarcerated since June 18, 1983, in the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan, without being convicted of any offense against the laws of this country.

We are concerned that implementation of the November 14, 1988 decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals will be further delayed if you decide to undertake yet another review of Mr. Doherty's case. In that decision, the Board granted Mr. Doherty's motion to reopen the deportation proceedings which entitles him to pursue his claim for political asylum and/or withholding of deportation.

As you are aware, three separate federal courts have rendered decisions that bar Mr. Doherty's extradition to the United Kingdom. In addition, an immigration judge and two successive panels of the B.I.A. have rejected the government's unprecedented demand that Mr.

1948 to 1951, he was Minister for Foreign Affairs for the Irish Government. He was responsible for declaring Ireland a Republic. He appeared in many leading civil and criminal cases in Ireland, Africa and before International Courts. In 1958, he acted as adviser to the Greek government. He was the co-founder of Amnesty International.

In 1974, Sean MacBride was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize; in 1977, he was awarded the International Lenin Prize for Peace; and he was awarded the American Medal of Justice by President Carter in 1978. His receipt of these three awards is quite unique in human history. His work in defense of human rights called him to many parts of the world. He was United Nations Commissioner from 1973 to 1976 and in Iran in 1979 in an effort to secure the release of hostages. One could go on for many pages listing the various international organizations in which he played a significant role and which honored him with high office, awards and distinctions. I was fortunate to meet Sean MacBride privately on a number of occasions. He was in my mind, and in the minds of others, an intellectual leader who was concerned with the equality of humans and fought against discrimination by some of our lesser brothers and sisters. In the words of Thomas Moore:

Shall the harp be silent when he,
who first gave,

To our country a name is withdrawn from all eyes?

Shall a minstrel of Erin stand mute
by the grave,

Where the first, where the last of her patriot lies?

Sean MacBride died in Dublin on January 15, 1988. He was the author of the MacBride Principles, an anti-discrimination code, which has been adopted by many states in America. The MacBride Principles are aimed at forcing American companies operating in Northern Ireland to ensure equal employment opportunities for Catholics who are denied equal rights by the British. Thus shall we be silent and mute?

In a poem written by Yeats in memory of Sean's mother, it states: "Vague memories, nothing but memories, but in the grave, all, all Doherty be deported only to the United Kingdom. It is apparent that Mr. Doherty's offenses were of a political nature, aimed at the British presence in Northern Ireland, under no circumstances should he be deported to the United Kingdom. We urge you to affirm the B.I.A.'s November 14, 1988 decision, allowing Mr. Doherty to apply for political asylum, as soon as possible. Additionally, we think, in the interests of justice, Mr. Doherty should be released on bail while the issue is decided.

We feel strongly that since our courts have already unequivocally determined that Mr. Doherty's offenses were of a political nature, aimed at the British presence in Northern Ireland, under no circumstances should he be deported to the United Kingdom. We urge you to affirm the B.I.A.'s November 14, 1988 decision, allowing Mr. Doherty to apply for political asylum, as soon as possible. Additionally, we think, in the interests of justice, Mr. Doherty should be released on bail while the issue is decided.

Phases of Irish History

By MICHAEL McCORMACK, National Historian

JOHN P. HOLLAND

John P. Holland of Liscannor, Co. Clare, survived the Great Hunger of 1845-49 that devastated his country and earned a living as a school teacher. A lover of the sea, he studied the unsuccessful attempts of Borne, Bushnell, and Fulton at underwater sailing. When the historic confrontation of the ironclads, Monitor and Merrimack, took place in the American Civil War he noted English concern; they saw the vulnerability of the wooden ship navy they relied on to maintain their colonial power. Also a lover of his country, the young schoolteacher began to design an ironclad that would sail beneath the waves, and threaten that navy. He came to the United States to promote interest in his submarine.

In 1882, an impatient Clan leader, John Breslin stole the Ram and took it to New Haven where he hoped to launch it; unfortunately, with no knowledge of its operation, it only sank. The Ram was later salvaged for use in a fund-raising campaign for the 1916 Easter Rising, and its rusting hull ended up as a monument to Holland in Westside Park, Patterson, NY. It was finally moved to the Paterson Museum alongside Holland I, salvaged in 1927.

Without sufficient funds, Holland continued his designs on paper, and persevered with his own limited assets and borrowed money to interest financiers in his invention. In 1895, he finally won a $150,000 U.S. Navy contract to build a submarine. The plucky Irishman built the 53-foot, 63-ton, Holland VI, to his own specifications, and offered it to the Navy for trials. It was a total success and in 1900 became the U.S.S. Holland — the first American submarine. He received an order for six more.

So it was that the brain-child of a patriotic Irish immigrant became the prototype for the greatest submarine fleet in the world. Unfortunately, Holland was deeply in debt and couldn't finance the order. Financiers bought into the J. P. Holland Torpedo Boat Company and costly court battles eventually arose regarding ownership of the patents. Holland spent his remaining years in costly unsuccessful litigation trying to reclaim his patents. On August 12, 1914, he died in obscure poverty in Newark, N.J., leaving his wife Margaret with five children. As he lay dying, the Germans and British were readying their respective Navies for war and the eyes of both fleets were submarines, built with Holland's principles.

Holland's original design remained the standard for American submarines until a narrower design was introduced during World War II. Ironically, with the advent of faster nuclear submarines, the narrow design proved unstable and Navy engineers returned to Holland's design. As a result, all U.S. submarines from the 1958 Skipjack to the present day bear a likeness to the Navy's first submarine Holland, named after its forgotten inventor, one of the immigrants who help make America great.

Long interested in Holland and his inventions, Jack Flatley and I visited the Paterson museum in 1987 to see the Holland I and the Fenian Ram. We found the boats in good condition, but poorly displayed in the rear of the museum. We identified ourselves as State officers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and asked if there were anything we could do to encourage a more suitable display. Museum curator, Ms. Barbara Rivolta, was happy to find someone interested in the Holland exhibit, and generously took the time to show us the Holland memorabilia in their care —

John Philip Holland Father of the Modern Submarine

By TERENCE McHUGH SHEA

Inventors must often fight the establishment to gain credibility for their achievements. Even then, they sometimes are not rewarded for their success.

Late in the 19th century, many inventors were hard at work developing submarines, but the powerful navies of the world refused to take notice. It took one man, an Irishman, initially motivated by his patriotism, to change their minds.

John Philip Holland, trained only as a school teacher, defied his critics and mastered the problems of underwater navigation, earning the epithet

"father of the modern submarine." Many preceded him, and many followed, but only Holland succeeded in demonstrating the submarine as a formidable weapon that no navy could survive without.

Born in Liscannor, a port on the barren coast of County Clare, February 24, 1841, Holland grew up watching his countrymen lead poor and miserable lives. While he was still quite young, Holland developed an inextinguishable resentment for an England that allowed so many Irish to suffer and die in the Great Famine. Later in life, Holland channeled this resentment into building a submarine for the Fenians which would have rendered Her Majesty's Navy quite helpless, were it not for internal Fenian political problems.

Ironically, Holland survived the Famine because his father was employed as an officer in the British Coastguard Service in Ireland and they literally were guaranteed a roof over their heads. He did not forget this either.

After demonstrating a proficiency for math and science in school, Holland joined the Teaching Order of the Christian Brothers and took his initial vows at the young age of 17. After several years of apprentice teaching, Holland taught subjects ranging from math to music in various parts of Ireland.

Holland's ill health often kept him from the classroom, but this convalescence proved to be a blessing in disguise. During these periods when he was unable to teach, Holland began studying the then unconquered realms of human flight and undersea navigation. Holland's first exposure to anything that even resembled submarines was in 1862 when he read in the Cork Examiner of the Battle of the Ironclads between the Monitor and the Merrimack in the American Civil War.

While Holland's ideas on submarines thrived, his health did not. As well, he had to cope with the added stress of worrying about his mother's health and his brothers' revolutionary activities. (His older brother, Alfred, edited a semi-revolutionary newspaper and his younger brother, Michael, was an active rebel). In 1873, The Christian Brothers granted Holland a dispensation on the grounds of his health and he then followed his mother and brothers to America, where they had been for some time.

After a brief stay in Boston, Holland joined the Christian Brothers as a lay teacher at St. John's Parochial School in Paterson, New Jersey. Legend has it that a student's father was a friend of Navy Secretary George M. Robeson and encouraged John Holland to submit his design for a one-man pedal-powered submarine to the Navy in 1876. The Navy rejected Holland's proposal, calling it "impractical." This was Holland's first — but certainly not his last — experience in dealing with bureaucracy.

Michael Holland, the inventor's younger brother, and a member of Clan-na-Gael, the United Brotherhood of the Fenians in America, introduced Holland to Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa, in turn introduced him to Jerome Collins, the founder of the Clan-na-Gael in 1876. Later, Holland met John Devoy and John J. Breslin, Fenian leaders and heroes of the Catalpa affair (the daring rescue of Irish political prisoners from the British penal colony in Fremantle, Australia) upon their return to New York after the incident.

The Fenians were interested in Holland's scheme for a relatively inexpensive boat which they could use to cripple the British fleet. Eventually, the Fenians used the money from their Skirmishing Fund, which was set up solely for the purpose of revolutionary activities and collected weekly in nickel and dime increments from Irishmen in the States, to support Holland's submarine. Holland contracted with the iron works on Albany Street in New York to produce his first submarine.

On May 22, 1878, the Holland No. 1, at a length of fifteen feet (shorter than most of today's cars) and a width of just three feet, was launched on the Passaic River in New Jersey. Holland's demonstration of this submarine, in which he remained submerged for the unprecedented time of one hour, was a complete success. The tests impressed the Trustees of the Skirmishing Fund so much that they directed Holland to build a larger vessel equipped with armaments.

Thus the Fenian Ram was conceived and John Holland ended his teaching career to devote full time to the project, which began in May of 1879 at the Delamater Iron Works in New York. Here, the submarine was launched two years later. Many of its features demonstrated elements of submarine design and navigation that soon became standard and others that would not appear again until the designs of the diesel powered Albacore and the nuclear powered Skipjack of the American fleet in the 1950's. These vessels were lauded for their outstanding design and performance.

And though Holland had demonstrated his skill as an inventor, the Trustees of the Skirmishing Fund were unable to exhibit their talents at successful money managing.

As Holland continued testing the Ram, and building a smaller, working model in which he was advancing the Ram design, the Trustees skirmished among themselves. The debate, which is putting it lightly, centered on what determined proper use of the Fund. Since its only use was for "revolutionary activities," the Fund had quite an ambiguous purpose and was open to various interpretations.

When a Dr. Dennis Mulcahy was sent to Ireland with the remains of one of the Fenian leaders, some of the Trustees promised to pay him from the Fund. But the other Trustees objected and Mulcahy eventually took his case to the New York Supreme Court. Before the court case, however, Devoy resigned as a Trustee, Breslin gave up his post of directly overseeing the submarine project, and O'Donovan Rossa was ousted from the Clan-na-Gael. These actions severely factionalized the Fenians.

CHECKING OUT a later submarine bearing the name "Holland."

Breslin, still an active advocate of Irish nationalism and still unofficially involved in the Holland venture, was compelled to act in order to save the Fenians and their $60,000 investment—Holland's submarines—from both Mulcahy's suit and the angry contributors to the Skirmishing Fund who expected their "ten cents worth of revolution each week."

Late one night in November, 1883, Breslin and a few fellow Fenians stole the Fenian Ram and its

in the Paterson Museum today. While Holland certainly had cause to sever his relations with the Fenians—and they with him—after the theft of the submarines, historians have debated whether or not he was a member of the Fenians before the action. Dr. Richard K. Morris, author of Holland's biography and grandson of his supervising engineer, asserts that there is no strong evidence to suggest that Holland was a member of the Fenians. If he was a member, "He didn't do it very openly," says Dr. Morris, a retired Trinity College (CT) Professor, and a resident of Deep River, CT.

As well, Dr. Morris adds, "He was fairly close to (John J.) Breslin and John Devoy." However, Dr. Morris continues, "When he died (in 1914), there was some evidence that he was a member of Sinn Féin." Although this fact adds to the legend of John Holland, it is doubtful that he was a very militant member, because at that time he was engaged in selling his submarine plans to the British navy.

After his failure with the Fenians, Holland tried again at selling his plans to the U.S. government, but to no avail. While the submarine fascinated many young navy officers, Holland could do nothing to change the minds of the Admirals in command who saw no need for such a ship. As his hope for supplying the navy with his first submarine grew dim, Holland took up an offer of Edmund L. Zalinski, a well-known inventor who specialized in artillery

Junior News, Maryland

We are proud to announce that our Junior Division is 15 members strong. The Juniors presented the offertory gifts at the Formal Obligation Mass on March 5. They were also in attendance at the special Mass at the Basilica to install the Grand Marshal and Deputy Marshals for the St. Patrick's Day Parade.

On Parade Sunday, the Juniors led the LAOH contingent, proudly attired in their new uniforms. Junior Coordinator Kathleen Burke reports that the Juniors made Valentine cards for the retired sisters at Mercy Villa, where they practice dancing each Saturday.

Rose Kennedy Div. LAOH, Wayne County, Michigan, sponsored their 22nd Annual Court of St. Brigid Pageant on February 18 at the Hibernian Hall in Detroit. Mr. Neal Shine, Senior Managing Editor of the Detroit Free Press, was Master of Ceremonies. The distinguished judges were Mary Ellen Dunleavy, Thomas Dunleavy, Helen Ivory, Philip O'Dwyer and Margie Reedy, who is a newscaster on Channel 4. The lovely young ladies, ages 17 to 22, who competed for the title of Queen all have in common an interest in their Irish heritage and Irish history.

The judges selected Mary Margaret Cleary, 21, to be Queen. Ann Marie Houlihan, 19, and Jennifer Prater, 18, were chosen for her Court. The Queen's father, Frank Cleary, is a member of the new Art

Walton AOH Division, Livingston County.

The Queen was presented the Mary Gibbons Memorial Bond, a $200 U.S. Savings bond. She also received $500 from the Daniel O'Connell Memorial Scholarship Fund. Ann Marie received a $200 scholarship and Jennifer $100. Each of the girls who participated was given a gift.

Queen Margaret Mary and her Court led the AOH and LAOH in the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Detroit. The girls attended Hibernian festivities and will be presented at the AOH Spring Charity Ball.

The O'Hare Irish Step Dancers set the tone for the evening of the Pageant by performing traditional Irish dances. The Wakes and Weddings Band provided lively music for singing and dancing.

LAOH President Keynotes At Leprechaun Convention

National LAOH President Mary E. Bradley of Central Falls, R.I., from the smallest city in the smallest state, was the keynote speaker at the Leprechaun Society of Ireland and America's fun-filled 11th annual convention and St. Patrick's day observance held at the Old Timer Restaurant in Clinton, Mass. The convention luncheon was sponsored by the LAOH Clinton Division, led by President Cathy Duvarney.

Miss Bradley in her keynote address featured the story of the "Nine Famous Irishmen in the Irish Disorders in 1848." After the keynote address Chief Leprechaun Dick O'Toole presented Miss Bradley with the Leprechaun Award, along with a letter in a silver frame from the White House, Washington, D.C. The letter read in part "... As you celebrate St. Patrick's Day, Barbara and I join in sending best wishes to Award Winner Mary Bradley and to all the people in Clinton, Massachusetts, for a Happy Leprechaun Society Convention ... Sincerely, George Bush."

Connecticut Life Member Dies

Margaret Sweeney Cashman, a Connecticut State Life Member, LAOH, and past State President, died January 18, 1989 in Rocky Hill at the age of 97. Margaret joined the Order sometime between 1903 and 1907, according to her son Robert H. Cashman, Sr. of Wethersfield, CT.

Born in Rockville, CT, she lived in Hartford from 1921 until 1968, moving to Newington 20 years ago. There she was a member of the Church of the Holy Spirit. She was a past president of Rau Locke Post, past president of the Hartford Chapter of Widows of World War I.

She was also a member of the May, Davis & Stolzer Post of the Legion Auxiliary, the Newington Historical Society and the Newington Senior Citizens. She did volunteer work at the Newington Veterans Medical Center and the St. Francis Hospital Thrift Shop for 20 years.

Margaret is survived by her son Robert H. and his wife Geraldine (Toce), and three grandchildren, Robert H. Cashman, Jr., Mary Alice and Kerry Ann Cashman.

Following a mass of Christian burial in the Church of the Holy Spirit, burial was in Mount St. Benedict Cemetery, Bloomfield.

LOWELL, MA: During December LAOH Division 1 joined with the men of Div. 19 for the President's Dinner and Installation of Officers. Joan O'Brien, county president installed our new officers with the help of Mary Morley and Mary Ryan from the Marlboro Div., who accompanied her. A roast beef dinner was followed by music by Joe Tinean with singing and Irish dancing. A Past President's pin was presented to outgoing president Noreen Conlon, by out-going vice-president Eileen Sullivan, along with a beautiful bouquet of flowers.

The guest speaker for the February meeting was Rosemary Noon, division member who is Director of the Lowell Office of Cultural Affairs. She spoke on Lowell culture, education, recreation and sculpture. The members were saddened by the announced passing of member Rosetta O'Donnell the evening prior to the meeting.

Allegheny County: Mary Margaret Maurath, president. The third Annual St. Brigid's Mass was held on February 5th at St. Agnes' Church in Pittsburgh. Sara Mains, county treasurer, was chairman assisted by the presidents of the seven county divisions. Rev. David Keager, T.O.R., was celebrant. Robert Bierra and Sr. Sara Marie Healy, county chaplain, were the Eucharistic Ministers. Two Division 8 sons were the altar servers, Joseph Byrne and Joshua Mylan. Piper Charles Gladick led the procession which included Margaret Cooney, state president; Ronald Bryan, AOH state president; and David O'Connor, AOH county president. The cantor was Brother William O'Brien and soloist was Patricia Conroy. The division vice presidents presented the seven gifts of St. Brigid. Formal installation of division officers was conducted during the Mass. Following the liturgy, brunch was held in Moriarty Hall. Women of Ireland was presented by members of the Gaelic Arts Society with Margaret Maloney as coordinator.

Division 11 — Eileen Martini, president: After marching as a Unit in Pittsburgh's largest St. Patrick's Parade, members held an After-the-Parade Party at the Pittsburgh Hilton and Towers.

Luzerne County — Wilkes Barre, Division 1: Monica Mullin, president of Saint John Newmann Division, proudly led her Sisters in the Saint Patrick's Day Parade in Wilkes-Barre on March 11th. A new banner was carried in the parade, in memory of deceased Sisters, by Sue Quinn Cosgrove and Pat Quinn Astolfi. Rev. Charles Mulrooney, pastor of St. Leo's Church, Ashley, and division chaplain, was Honorary Grand Marshal. It was the first time in the history of the parade that a Catholic Priest was so honored. On Friday, March 17, the LAOH were present for the traditional Irish Flag Raising ceremonies at the Luzerne County Courthouse in Wilkes-Barre.

Washington County — Charleoi Division 4: Dorothy Weldon, president—February 5 Mass at St. Jerome's Church was offered for the intentions of the Living Members and also honoring our patroness, St. Brigid. Rev. John Marcucci, division chaplain, was celebrant and homilist. Following the Mass, a breakfast was served at St. Jerome Lyceum. Guest speaker was Sister Colman Cohill, C.S.J., who centered her talk on thoughts of St. Brigid.

second Wednesday of every month. New members in the area of Atlantic Beach and Long Beach are welcome to join this fine organization.

Mary E. Bradley
National President

If you want the best you must offer the best. The LAOH is the best and the time to offer is fast approaching. We are about to begin that period of time set aside for county and state conventions. All the divisions are buzzing with information on locations and planned activities for the conventions. Everyone is carefully employing every means possible to attend.

Outgoing presidents have carefully examined every idea and plan to make the convention at which they will preside the best run, the most orderly, the most harmonious and just the very best. Outgoing officers deserve a good deal of credit. These two years have been well run and very effective. The Order can salute them for their work.

What of the new candidates? There are customs and rules and understandings that all enter into the picture when election time draws near, and in honesty, many of these have in the past served the Order well.

Now we need to really examine those women within our ranks who have quietly been sitting back and watching — capable women who have not expressed particular aspirations for themselves, but who are extremely faithful and hard working. Women who are always there and who have some understanding that more might be expected of them as they accomplish their current work. Some of the division officers appear to have great potential.

Now is the time, before convention, to explain what the duties of the officers on the county and state levels are. Perhaps if the positions were more fully understood, there might be greater ease in accepting nominations for these higher offices.

Ability to do the required work is not the problem — we need the commitment to dive in and get it done. Officers direct the membership. We need the best, not necessarily the best known.

A Political Prisoner

All Doherty has ever done in this country is win in court and stay in jail. If Joe Doherty were on the run from Nicaragua or South Africa, on either side in either place, he would live here undisturbed. But he sits in jail through all these years because the British put their hand into our criminal justice system and people with Irish backgrounds around here don't know how to raise an eyebrow or a finger at injustice.

There will be tens of thousands of them in their green ties on Fifth Avenue tomorrow. Later, there will be the usual torrent of brave talk over the lip of a glass, yet only the faintest of heartbeats sound in their fat chests.

I give you them and I give you their parade. They allow the British to hold an Irish political prisoner in a cell right in our own city for almost seven years now.

On Joe Doherty's first day in the MCC, they brought in three Colombians who were charged with holding 1,000 kilos of cocaine. The Colombians pled guilty and received sentences of 7 and 8 years. All three have finished their sentences and are back on the street now.

Joe Doherty, who never committed a crime in this country, sits in his cell.

He was in there when they brought in the Soviet spy, Gennadiy Zakharov, who wanted to steal all our missile plans. One day, the guards took Zakharov out to get a plane home to Russia.

Joe Doherty sat in his cell.

John Gotti arrived. Gotti said he would wear a shamrock on St. Patrick's Day. One night, Gotti was not in the next cell.

Watching television, Joe Doherty saw Gotti returning to his house in Howard Beach.

A spy from Bulgaria and another from Czechoslovakia came in and sulked for a while. They were taken to the airport for the ride home. Joe Doherty, who never did a thing wrong in this city, flew off the walls. Here was Ivan Boesky, who stole tens of millions. He was in and out. Joe Doherty stayed. Then Stanley Simon, the Bronx borough president, who stole from people who were starving had the cell next to Joe. Simon is gone and out doing his sentence. At this rate, Simon will be back in the Bronx and Joe still will remain in the MCC.

"My mother is coming up this afternoon," Joe was saying yesterday. "She gets over here every year. They make me an honorary grand marshal at one of the St. Patrick's Day parades. Hartford, Bergen County, Philadelphia. And they bring her over here."

"Who brought her over this time?" "Cincinnati."

Of course, another town. Never New York. The Irish who parade tomorrow in New York, with their tendency to be a race of butlers, would let the man rot in his cell before they dare raise a voice against authority.

Taken from Newsday.

honoring St. Brigid will be at St. Brigid's Church on April 2, and the County Board Convention is scheduled for April 8. FINANCIAL GUIDE FOR CATHOLICS

By William A. Corbett

At last there is a book that can help individuals feel good about raising their family, about meeting their spiritual and financial goals, and about being Catholic. William Corbett's Financial Guide For Catholics attempts to combine a few practical planning techniques with an ethical framework based on the beliefs we hold as Catholic Christians.

This excellent financial resource shows a Catholic how to make his or her financial decisions from a spiritual, rather than materialistic, perspective. It uses understandable language, humor, and commonsense examples to explain how to meet the financial goals Catholics set for themselves through investment, insurance, and savings plans. Its simple directions take a person through the work required to make one's family financially sound without giving them boring theories or confusing them with unexplained terms.

The Financial Guide For Catholics

goes even further. It explains the American economic system in simple terms and provides sample worksheets to help readers in their financial planning.

About the author: William Corbett is a financial counselor who concentrates on stocks, municipal bonds, mutual funds, and tax-deferred annuities as vehicles for meeting financial goals. He is the father of four and is an active member of his parish in Traverse City, Michigan. He is also a member of the local AOH Bernard J. Brady Division. This is his first book.

MAY

The Battle of the Boyne 1690 by Peter Berresford Ellis

History that reads like a novel. Here is the story of one of the most decisive battles ever fought in Ireland.

163 pp., pb, $12.95

Few people realize that the outcome of this battle was of concern to England, Holland, France and the Vatican.

Here in well-written suspenseful language, is the account of the bloody day on the Boyne River that sealed the fate of Ireland.

Ellis's masterly account of that scorching day — and of the causes and consequences of the battle — make it clear why the July 12 parades are still a dominating symbol in the North of Ireland, and why the Vatican was happy with the Orange victory.

Peter Berresford Ellis is also the author of Rising of the Moon and To Hell or Connaught.

JUNE

Error of Judgement by Chris Mullin

The sensational account of how six innocent Irishmen were railroaded for the 1974 pub bombings in Birmingham, England.

227 pp., pb, revised and updated, $8.95

British journalist. Chris Mullin, demolishes the case against the six men wrongfully convicted of the bombings — and still in prison. Mullin has even interviewed three of the four men who admit to planting the bombs — and are free.

The implications for the British political and legal system are shocking — and justify the fear in Ireland that Irish men and women cannot get a fair trial in England.

This book has forced the British Home Secretary to re-open the case. Must reading for the discussion of extradition.

weapons and a lieutenant in the American Army, to build a submarine for him.

Zalinski commissioned Holland to build a submarine that could effectively display a new dynamite gun that he had just invented. Known simply as the Zalinski Boat, this ship proved nothing to Holland, except that he knew that he must have complete control over the design and construction of his submarines if they were to be built properly.

Beset by funding problems, and therefore lapses in material quality, the Zalinski Boat was a failure. Constructed mainly of wood beams on an iron frame, the Zalinski Boat sunk on its initial launching in 1885. The project was kept going only for Zalinski to prove his weapon and satisfy his financiers. Eventually the Zalinski Boat was scrapped and sold in order to partly pay back the funders of the operation. Holland again found himself out of work and nearly out of luck. Nearly.

The Department of the Navy sponsored a competition for submarine design in 1888. Holland entered this competition, which had certain minimum performance requirements for the ship, under the backing of the Cramps Shipbuilding Company of Philadelphia. Holland promptly won the contract, but Cramps could not guarantee that the ship would perform to the Navy's standards. The competition was reopened, the previous plans were reviewed, and Holland was again declared the winner.

However, Grover Cleveland failed in his re-election bid and the submarine venture went out with his Secretary of the Navy. Holland had to wait four more years, until Grover Cleveland was again in the White House, before anyone again took his submarine proposals seriously.

During this time Holland worked as a draftsman for Charles A. Morris of the Morris and Cummings Dredging Company, who had supported him in his efforts with the Fenian Ram. Holland worked almost daily with Morris on designing a flying machine, but the potential backers of this scheme always wanted to hear more about Holland's submarine proposals which had made him famous by this time.

After Cleveland's re-election in 1892, $200,000 was appropriated for the development of an experimental submarine and the design competition was reopened. Holland secured his financial support when Elihu B. Frost, a young lawyer who had Charles Morris as a client, was so impressed with Holland's determination, skill, and attention to detail in his plans that he lent Holland the initial funds needed to complete his proposal.

Within a few months Frost had incorporated the John P. Holland Torpedo Boat Company, with Holland as manager and Frost as the secretary-treasurer. Frost managed to raise the capital for a $7,500 deposit that the Navy required to be submitted with each design entry. Holland, for the first time, stood on a strong financial base that would finally allow him, or so he thought, to build a submarine the way he envisioned it.

After much political shenanigans, (Holland's chief competitor, Simon Lake, held much influence in Washington), Holland won the government contract for his submarine, which was far superior to any of the other submissions.

Production of this ship, called the Plunger, began in 1896 in a Baltimore shipyard. Although Holland had finally received the government contract that he had long coveted, the Plunger was afflicted with the same problems that his previous efforts had encountered: uneducated interference.

The Navy, whose project officers Holland labeled "amateurs," insisted on forcing their ideas into design changes in the Plunger. These actions by the Navy later prompted Holland to write, "The Navy does not like submarines because there is no deck to strut upon... Sweep out all interesting but useless devices... She cannot have a deck on which her men can enjoy sunlight." Holland looked to porpoises for the ultimate in submarine design. They always travel with their body in the water; they dive and surface at an angle, and they certainly do not have a deck to strut upon. While all of these features were part of Holland's ideal submarine, they were not incorporated into the Navy's submarines until the late 1950's, when the nuclear powered Skipjack was launched - and was lauded for its outstanding design and performance.

Holland, upset at what the Navy had done to his design and adamant about proving his theories, convinced Frost to use the Company's resources to finance a new submarine free of interference from the Navy. Work began on the Holland VI at Lewis Nixon's Crescent Shipyard in Elizabethport, New Jersey during the winter of 1896-97. Morris, having lost control of his own company to his partner Frost, was signed on as the superintending engineer for the project.

On May 17, 1897, the Holland VI was launched and work began on making the ship fit for service in the Navy. The John P. Holland Torpedo Boat Company, however, had expended its last funds in building the submarine and was forced to sell to Isaac Rice, owner of the Electric Launch Company and the Electro-Dynamic Company, the supplier of the electric storage batteries in the Holland VI. The new corporation was called the Electric Boat Company, and the Holland Torpedo Boat Company became a subsidiary company. The Electric Boat Company became the General Dynamics Corporation in 1952 and thrives today as the nation's largest defense contractor, with Electric Boat in Groton, CT as its largest division.

The Holland VI satisfied Navy specifications and performed brilliantly. Although the Plunger, which the Navy had already purchased, did not initially meet Navy requirements—as Holland had predicted—the Holland VI brought submarine navigation and technology to a level that had seemed impossible to most people just a few years before. To most people, but not to John Holland.

On April 11, 1900, the United States Government purchased the Holland VI (later the USS Holland) from the Electric Boat Company. This event was, unquestionably, the highest point of Holland's career, but it was also the beginning of the end. The Holland VI was the last ship that he was personally involved in building.

Frost recognized Holland's genius and managed to obtain, for the Company, the rights to all of Holland's existing patents for submarines and any new ones that he filed while he was employed by them. Holland's designs were sold to many nations in Europe, and elsewhere. Even Great

N.Y. Leaders Meet On Investment Bill

Britain bought a Holland design ship.

While the Company certainly prospered from these sales, Holland received no royalties. In fact, Holland was no longer manager of the Company that bore his name. He was retained as a design engineer at a salary of no more than $90 per week. When his contract with the Company expired in 1904, Holland resigned.

With the support of Morris and many other old friends, Holland formed the John P. Holland's Submarine Boat Company on May 18, 1905. Holland had designed an all new, high speed submarine since he had left Electric Boat. His attempts to sell the design in this country and in Europe were met with the powerful legal machine of Rice and Frost. Holland did, however, manage to sell this new design to Japan, which was also building Electric Boat designed submarines. This sale was John Holland's last victory.

Holland's infant company could not compete with Electric Boat or the legal problems it created. By 1907 the last of the financial supporters of the Company had backed out, stripping Holland of the capital needed to continue. Although his name had become synonymous with submarines, he had amassed no great fortune. His submarine building days were over.

Holland spent the last years of his life designing various other submarines—including passenger ones—and remaining active in social and church groups and in the American Irish Historical Society. Holland, a native Irish speaker, also had a keen interest in the Gaelic revival.

Through his ingenuity and persistence, John Philip Holland, a self-taught engineer, had mastered the problems of undersea navigation like no one before him. Although technology has advanced submarine development, naval architects still faithfully follow this pioneer's basic design principles.

John Holland died on August 12, 1914. He is buried in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, in Totowa, N.J. After his death he was vindicated when a German U-Boat sunk 80 times its own tonnage in British shipping, establishing the submarine as the formidable weapon Holland had envisioned.

Editor's Note: Terence Shea is a student at Washington University, St. Louis. He is the son of Leo Shea, a long-time member of the JFK Div. 2, New London, CT, and a former submariner.

This article is submitted to commemorate the contributions of John P. Holland to the U.S. Navy on the occasion of the anniversary of the beginning of the U.S. Navy Submarine Force, April 11—"Submarine Day." On this day in 1900, the Navy took possession of their first submarine, the USS Holland.

STATE NEWS: New York

Freshman Cong. Joins Ad Hoc Committee

Recently elected Congressman Mike McNulty of the 23rd Cong. District of New York will join the Ad Hoc Committee for Irish Affairs. Congressman McNulty was also recently elected Freshman Majority Whip for the Northern region of the country. He also serves on the House Armed Services Committee and the Committee on Small Business.

First elected to public office in November, 1969 as Town Supervisor of Green Island, NY, Mike became the youngest town supervisor in New York state at the age of 22. After serving eight years as Supervisor, he was elected Mayor of the village of Green Island and served in that capacity until he won election to represent the 106th Assembly District of New York in 1982.

Mike promotes the Ad Hoc Committee's dedication to the advancement of the United States role in promoting justice, peace and an end to the suffering in the North of Ireland.

Tom Dooley Choraliers to Perform at Shrine Opening

On May 7, the Shrine of Our Lady of Martyrs at Auriesville, NY, will be opened for its 104th season, assisted by the New York State Board. AOH. Those who have attended in the past attest to the reverence and beauty of the Mass at noon, and the camaraderie of those gathered in the picnic area following the ceremony. For those who do not pack a picnic lunch, there is a well stocked cafeteria available. During the day there are many religious artifacts and shrines on the grounds to explore.

A highlight of the opening is the participation of the Dr. Tom Dooley Choraliers and the Tara Hall Pipe Band of Troy.

By way of background, the Dr. Tom Dooley Choraliers was begun 27 years ago and is named in honor of the doctor-missionary to Southeast Asia. The 30 man chorus is reported to be the only Irish Choral group in the country.

Among the group's most memorable previous appearances include: The N.Y. Worlds Fair 1965, Montreal Expo 1967, Chautauqua Music Festival 1971, St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York and a tour of Ireland in 1972, Eucharistic Congress in Philadelphia 1978, St. Patrick's Day for President Reagan and Ireland's Prime Minister at the

John Concannon Retires to Home Work

FLUSHING, N.Y.: Veteran Hibernian and journalist, John J. Concannon, took a "buyout" and early retirement from Newsweek magazine, leaving just seven days short of 35 years with the magazine.

This "historic" happening was appropriately celebrated at a "retirement party" tendered by relatives, friends, associates and acquaintances in the cafeteria at the headquarters building of W. R. Grace and Co. on West 42nd Street in the Big Apple.

Among the eight score "for-he's-a-jolly-good-fellow" singers at the party were some three score members of the Irish community, most of them members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Wishing Concannon happy retirement were: former

National President Nick Murphy, National Director Jack Irwin, former National Historian Judge Al Melia, New York County AOH President Dick Cunningham and fellow Big Apple Hibernians Jim Moriarty, John Clark, Jim Fitzpatrick, Neil Walsh, Martin Kearns, Brother David Concannon, Dick Joyce; Queens Hibernians Ed McKenna and Matt Feeley; Rockland's Frank Cull, and Manhattan Lady Hibernian, Dymna Kenny. Also such Irish community activists as telecaster Jack McCarthy, Irish Echo Editor John Thornton, Cable TV's Larry McEvoy, Paul Keating, Peter Duffy, Joseph Jackson, Robert Moynihan, Tom Kennedy and Ann Barrington. Former New York State Governor, Hugh Carey, acted as Master of Ceremonies and said "a few kind words" about the retiree.

Retiree Concannon reported that he will be working out of his home, now fulltime, on the numerous Irish projects he has in his computer. He revealed that he is currently deeply involved in researching a book on the history of "The Concannons in the United States." This pet project grew out of the "Concannon Millennium," a Clan Concannon family reunion that will take place from June 11 to June 18, 1989 in Galway. The originator of the "Gathering," Dr. Maureen Concannon O'Brien of Dublin, claims that "Concannon is one of the oldest surnames in the world" dating back to 991, when Cuccannan, descendant of Brian, King of Connacht, was killed in battle.

Nassau County Ball

A HIGHLIGHT OF the recent Nassau County Ball was the presentation of the Man and Woman of the Year Awards. Sharing the pleasure of bestowing and receiving the honor are, left to right, Peter King, Division 7, Nassau County Comptroller; Bill Condon, Division 7, Nassau Board Treasurer and Chairman of the Ball; Woman of the Year Margaret Thornton, Division 14; Man of the Year Robert Nesbitt, Division 6 President; and Thomas Gulotta, Nassau County Executive. The affair was deemed the most enjoyable in many years.

White House 1982 and the pre-Mass ceremonies for Pope John Paul II's visit to Toronto in 1984. Most recently they performed at the re-lighting of the Statue of Liberty on July 4, 1986, for which Director Michael E. Pinkasewicz composed three songs for the choraliers to sing on this occasion. The songs are titled: We are the Sons of Liberty; "Give Me Your Tired" and "You Are My Lady".

The Choraliers are sponsored by and made up of members of Tom Dooley Division 1, Camillus, N.Y.

Hibernian Sports

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

Football — The NFL Super Bowl went the way the bettors said it would. So far there hasn't been much backlash about it. The NFL still has its substance abuse problem. This league must work on it. Some coaches lost their jobs, most notably Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys. The new owners handled this like a precocious child. Landry for his part acted like the gentleman he is. Before anybody gets the idea YR is a Cowboy fan, let him reassure you. He is not a Cowboy fan. He never has been a Cowboy fan. He will not make a rash statement and say he will never be a Cowboy fan. He has learned that those rash statements have a tendency to come back and haunt a person.

On the collegiate scene, the NCAA is investigating and handing out suspensions to those flagrant violators of their rules. The mess in the Oklahoma territory gets worse and worse. What is next out there?

Locally, a high school quarterback from Binghamton High School has received a four year scholarship to Alabama. His name is Ray Stanton. YR knows the family well. He was the photographer for the TCjets, a semi-pro football team, when Ray Sr. owned the franchise. Ray Jr. was only the water boy back then. Congrats, Ray. Keep up the good work, especially on the books.

Basketball — In the pro ranks, Larry Bird of the Celtics is still having problems with his feet. The Celtics do miss him. In the interim, they are getting more mileage out of some of their veteran players than they ever hoped. Also they made a trade involving Danny Ainge with which YR is not that happy. Time will tell who is right. YR still can't get hyped up over the pros. To him, most of the pros walk before they dunk. Then there is the definition of basketball. YR always thought it was a non-contact sport. Watching some of the pros and even colleges, they should install a "Sin Bin" for the violations. It is more like playground ball than professional ball.

Speaking of collegiate basketball, it is time once again for the NCAA Tournament. Sixty-four teams will play in this single elimination tournament to see who will make it to the "Final Four" in Seattle. This tournament certainly has grown since the fifties when it usually was played in Kansas. At Madison Square Garden in New York City, the NIT usually had the creme de la creme. Then came the point shaving scandals and college basketball went back to the college gyms for a period. Now it's back on national TV.

Do you still believe that colleges play athletics for the sake of the athlete-student? YR will tell a fact of life. This year, there were seven colleges who shall remain nameless that did not receive a bid to the NCAA tournament as one of the 64 teams. That same weekend, these million a season, I'm worth $3 something million a season. This is an interesting premise. The fallacy in it is there are usually bonus clauses rewarding the player for making the All-Star team, for winning some title, for bettering his average, etc.

There might even be a clause that he gets a bonus just for showing up to play. Who knows?

There are never any clauses stating that if a player has a bad year, he will take a reduction in salary next year or for not making the All-Star team, etc. YR is neither anti-player nor pro-owner. YR feels what is right, is right. These Contracts were negotiated in good faith.

Most of the fans do not have the opportunity of even negotiating a one year contract for minimum wage much less for millions. This is just another example of greed. No wonder the kids of today have such a warped sense of values.

More Hoop Stuff — Last year, YR mentioned his grandniece, Colleen Heslin. She won the NYS Knights of Columbus Foul Shooting Contest at West Point. She is headed there again this year. That's not the big story with Colleen.

Colleen is in sixth grade. In Broome County, the CYO has a grammar school league for grades 6th, 7th and 8th. Usually these teams are comprised of 7th and 8th graders. It is the exception rather than the rule to play 6th graders. St. Patrick's has a grammar school team. There are no 8th graders on this team. There might be one or two 7th graders. The St. Patrick's Grammar School team is mostly 6th graders. If you think this is a Cinderella story or a story of the underdog beating the favorite, it isn't. St. Patrick's Grammar School did not have a winning season. They gave up height, age and experience to their opponents all season. Yet, in many of their games, this scrappy team held on tenaciously like the puppy learning how to bite. They refuse to let go even when the odds said they were doomed. They learned much this season. They are looking forward to next season already. You might say they are looking for revenge against some of the teams that took undue advantage of their weaknesses.

Colleen Heslin was a member of this team. She was usually their high scorer and led the team in assists. Colleen was named by her fellow players on this team to represent St. Patrick's on the Grammar School All-Star Team. This in itself is quite an honor. To be chosen by your peers to represent them says something about how they think of Colleen.

Her father and mother, Terry and Kathy Heslin are proud of their daughter. Colleen is their second daughter. There are also Lisa, Conor and Emily in the family. Colleen is behind Lisa. Her grandfather, James "Red" Heslin is proud of her. Red is retired from Binghamton's Finest. Red and Terry are both members of Division 1, Broome County. Her great grandfather is probably beaming like the sun as he gazes down on Colleen. Her great grandfather was Edward J. Heslin, a charter member of Division 1, Broome County. Edward J. was better known as Ned in Ireland where he played Gaelic football. He had a local Gaelic football team in Broome County in the 20's and 30's.

Why all the fuss over Colleen Heslin, aside from the fact she is YR's grand niece? Colleen Heslin was the only girl not only on St. Patrick's team, but the only girl in the entire league. The rest were boys.

Crystal Trophy Presented

SAN FRANCISCO, CA: Macy's in conjunction with Waterford Crystal, Inc., presented a Waterford Crystal "Superbowl" Trophy to Bill Walsh, coach of the San Francisco '49ers. The football trophy, which carries a dollar value of fifteen thousand, was designed and executed by Mirek Havel, the head designer at Waterford in Ireland. To create the trophy required over 150 man hours of shaping, cutting and copper wheel engraving. Other officers are Recording Secretary Sean Murphy, Financial Secretary George McKelvy, Treasurer Enda Dodd, Standing Comm. Chair Donald Booth, Marshal John Ward, Sentinel Stephen Ferlic. Trustees are Bob O'Shea, Leo Murphy and Jim Hayes. On March 11 Div. 2 honored Robert O'Shea as Man of the Year. He is past president and drum major of the Saffron Kilts Pipe Band of Babylon.

This speaks well of her talents if she can compete equally with boys her age and older. Way to go, Colleen! The entire family is proud of you.

Q. Tell me something about McCall our family name? Donald McCall, Truxton, N.Y.

A. There seem to have been two major families from which, for some many and some unknown reason, numerous surnames have evolved. One was an old Irish family active as early as 700 A.D.; the other a prominent English family which came to Ireland around 1607. MacCall, MacCaul, MacCawell, Corless, and Carlos all derive from Caulfield the name of the English family. Related are also Campbell, Howell, MacCarvill, MacCawhill, MacHall. Your own name MacCawell and MacHall are also used for Mac Cathail, however, in their original home country of Connacht usually now appear as Corless, Carlos, or Charles. When English became used more and more as the official government language of Ireland, more families rendered theirs in anglicized forms for any number of reasons: to avoid persecution, gain promotions, buy land and others. Because of the low rate of literacy and the large number of local dialects it is not surprising that so many variations of the two original names appear.

The English form Caulfield was first associated with a wealthy English family which settled in Ulster under the service of Queen Elizabeth. Around 1607 he acquired large tracts of land in Cos. Armagh and Derry where he acted as tax and rent collector. Caulfield was early used as a synonym for MacCall, Gaffney, and MacKeown; the connection with the latter two is obscure. The majority of present day Irish Caulfields once used MacCawell as the anglicized version of the original Irish spelling Mac Cathmhaoil (pronounced just like MacCawell, mh=wh; soil=ell).

The first Irish Mac Cathmhaoils belonged to the Cenel Eoghain clan traditionally said to be descended from Niall of the Nine Hostages, whose saga represents one of the finest pieces of early Irish literature. They flourished in the Barony of Clogher in County Tyrone.

Petty's census of 1959 shows that most MacCawells lived in Armagh and Louth. Today most MacCalls live in the Armagh-Monaghan-Cavan region. Caulfields are most numerous in metropolitan Dublin, Mayo, and northeast Ulster.

The English settlers produced many prominent figures who were usually always naturally very loyal to the English throne considering Queen Elizabeth gave them their important start in Ireland. The original Caulfield held the title Baron Charlemont. Within the vicinity of his holdings lived the Gaelic clan of MacCawell. Certainly confusion arose when the MacCawells began using Caulfield as the anglicized version of their name after the 18th c. Before then, many MacCawells are listed in Ulster records and several served in the Roman Catholic Church. Two were Bishops of Clogher between 1390 and 1432.

Q. Keaton is our new son, could you tell us what his name means? A. As you spell Keaton it is the English surname meaning one who hails from Ketton in Rutland and originally refers to the estate of the Keateven clan. But if you altered the Irish surname Keating to look more like first name then it belongs to one of two traditions.

Keating originates from the Irish Ceathadha meaning 'sense' as in good sense. Thus O Keating means 'descendant of the reasonable or urbane person.' It was a prominent Dalcassian sept name when that clan inhabited Cos. Limerick and Clare. Of note is that Brian Boru belonged to the Dalcassian tribe.

The other tradition is the Keating or Anglo-Norman origin, but is now thoroughly hibernicized. In the 12th c. Keatings came with the Norman invaders and settled in Cos. Wexford, where the name is still popular. From there part of the family moved to Limerick. From their early beginnings this family played a prominent role in Irish history and politics. Many members were sheriffs, members of parliament, and held other local government positions. Depending upon the perspective, contemporary and later historians called the Keatings rebels (against the crown) and loyalists.

John Keating (1635-c.1695), served under James II and is believed to have died as a result of wounds suffered in the Battle of the Boyne. The most famous Keating was Dr. Geoffrey (1570-1844), who wrote in Irish his celebrated History of Ireland.

Q. Could you provide me with background on my family name Bennet, Thomas H. Bennet, Elmont, N.Y.

A. Ben(n)et(t) is cognate with Buynan and Biane, all deriving from the Latin word for 'blessed,' benedictus. Benet became a popular Irish surname before 1250 in Westmeath and Tipperary.

The popularity of the name is attested by the many placenames throughout Ireland. Some are Bennetstreet in Co. Kilkenny; Bennetsbridge, Athy, Co. Kildare; Bennetstown, Cos. Meath and Wexford.

John Benet was Bishop of Cork and Cloyne from 1523-36. During the 16th c. numerous references to Benets occur in various capacities in the official records of Cork. In New Ross Bennets controlled local politics from the mid-16th to the mid-17th c.

William Bennett of the 18th c. moved from Co. Kerry to Co. Clare and was known as the Buineen, anglicized to Buynan, rather than the usual gaelicized form Bineid. Because of this nickname he (and other Benets) became associated with a powerful Co. Kerry family named Buynan (and Bunion). Eventually most Buynans changed their name to Bennett. This switch was exacerbated by the Four Masters associating the Buynans with Baile an Bhuinneanaigh (Town of the Buynans) in Co. Kerry.

The connection between Bennet and Biane seems to have resulted when families near Tralee and Banane used them as synonyms of Buynan.

Q. Why did James Joyce have such a difficult time getting Dubliners published in Ireland? Bill Moskalczyk, Throop, PA

A. The Gaelic-Irish Renaissance was well under way when Joyce was writing Dubliners and the common opinion was that all Irish writers should be praising Ireland. Instead Joyce chose to depict Dublin and Ireland as he saw them. Joyce rejected his religion, country, and family — three crucial subjects in Roman Catholic Ireland then (and now). He felt that artists should be allowed free reign and not be constricted by social conventions or expectations. Of note is that Yeats, Lady Gregory, G.B. Shaw, and Synge and other 'Irish' writers recognized Joyce's genius well before the general public. As a result only a couple of his short stories were published in Irish periodicals. It was not until 1916 that an English publisher printed them as the collection of short stories known now as Dubliners.

Nota Bene: With each question please include a self-addressed stamped business envelope and a check in the amount of ten dollars ($10.00), payable to William T. Malone. Mr. Malone is a doctoral candidate in Irish Studies at CUA.

another. The British can help and they don't. No one seems to be helping these suffering people of northern Ireland.

From my experience with these embattled and oppressed people, I am convinced the process for justice and tranquility will begin only when England declares its intention to pull out of the north of Ireland. When England leaves, and hopefully, this will happen soon, the sting will be taken out of the violence. The British are the managers and the ones responsible for the pain and agony in Ireland. They can't seem to let go, and they have to. They must let go of Ireland, their last colony. It is sad that one country can possibly hate another so much. It is my feeling they owe Ireland a great deal. Many of the people bitterly resent the presence of the British Army and they frequently refer to it as evil. Every year the violence seems to escalate. Government reports in 1986 revealed that the number of shootings, murders and robberies went up dramatically. Fire-bombings increased from 740 in 1985 to 906 in 1986.

The present situation in northern Ireland requires knowledge of the Irish history, especially in 1921-22 and 1966-69. In 1922 the British carved out the six counties and separated them from the rest of Ireland.

Imagine if Mexico took six of our nearby states or if Canada assumed authority over six of our bordering states. This is what Britain did to Ireland in 1922. Just imagine such a prospect, even if it was supposed to be temporary.

America's unwillingness to condemn repetitive violations of basic human rights in northern Ireland is puzzling. The failure to speak out against these injustices amounts to a condoning of injustice and contributes to the waste of innocent lives and the imprisonment of the elderly in chains of fear. In this regard, the recent and continuing question of New York's Cardinal John O'Connor is haunting in its simplicity. "Where are the forty million Irish Americans who can bring an end to British oppression of the Irish?"

Ireland has made a vast contribution to our country which we should not forget. We should not dismiss the people of northern Ireland, merely because their numbers are small or because their struggle is embarrassing to England. Ireland would be a great place for our new Administration to begin with our modern peacemaking techniques. I think the United States and the European community can now provide a substantial contribution as peacemakers by offering mediators to the people of northern Ireland. Similar to the Camp David peace forum, we can serve as negotiators to work for peace and justice in that troubled land.

We Americans have to make this clear to President George Bush and Secretary of State James Baker and to our representative Senators and Congresspeople.

Overcoming hatred requires a lot of hard work and much prayer and, most of all, the belief that we can overcome it.

Patrick T. Flanagan, S.J.

What it is...

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAAOH members by 1963 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and the LAOH. In 1963, the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Bursar Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
In General Congress Assembled

When in the Course of human Events, it becomes necessary for one People to dissolve the Political Bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers of the Earth, the separate and equal Station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent Respect to the Opinions of Mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the Separation.

We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness — That to secure these Rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just Powers from the Consent of the Governed, that whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these Ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its Foundation on such Principles, and organizing its Powers in such Form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient Causes; and accordingly all Experience hath shewn, that Mankind are more disposed to suffer, while Evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the Forms to which they are accustomed.

But when a long Train of Abuses and Usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a

Britain Sends Top Gun To Target MacBride Bills

By MIKE HESLIN

BINGHAMTON, NY: On May 3, 1989, the Los Angeles World Affairs Council hosted a luncheon meeting on the problems of Northern Ireland. The meeting was covered by C-SPAN, the television channel which usually covers the United States Congress and other meetings and hearings in the Washington, DC area.

The person invited to address the Council on the problems of Northern Ireland was Tom King. Some of the readers of the Hibernian Digest will recognize the name. Many will not. Tom King holds the position in Margaret Thatcher's cabinet as Secretary of State to Northern Ireland. His background includes being an officer in the British Army, and a member in good standing in the ruling party of Britain.

During his one hour presentation, King stated many facts concerning Northern Ireland. Some of these facts have proven quite nebulous. Some are based on truth. Many are based on myths and half-truths. One of the points on which King kept hammering is "The MacBride Principles have not yet made one job in Northern Ireland." Mr. King was here doing his job. He does it quite well. For those readers who think most of the opposition in the six counties in the North of Ireland are loudmouths such as the Rev. Ian Paisley, they are not.

The British government, namely Maggie Thatcher, the Iron Maiden, does not send inexperienced, ungroomed, ill-kempt, illiterate people over to the United States when they are looking for something. She sends her best and brightest. Tom King is one of her best.

Mr. King appeared before the group dressed in a well-tailored blue suit which was not what one would call "off-the-rack". Complementing the blue suit was a white shirt and red tie. The red tie has a mythical power connotation connected with it if worn on TV. His grooming was impeccable.

During his speech, King said that unemployment in Northern Ireland was down to 16% from its previous level. This is to make one believe that the Thatcher government has done something major to cause a reversal in the unemployment rate. King did not break down this 16% into its religious components. If he had, the 16% would be 98 or 99% Catholic and 1 or 2% Protestant.

King made a statement about those who are now unemployed and have been unemployed for years. He maintained that there is work to be

Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award Recipient Announced

Webster defines a Patriot as "a person who loves and loyally and zealously supports or defends his country".

This definition depicts the character of our first "Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award" recipient, Mr. Oliver Kearney from Antrim Town, Ireland. Other words used to describe his efforts to find peace with justice for his fellow countrymen are author, lecturer and civil rights activist. He is the devoted father of five children and husband of Bridgid.

Oliver first came to our attention here in America at the beginning of the MacBride Principles Campaign in the state legislatures some four years ago. He had already been working in his native Ireland against anti-Catholic discrimination as Executive Secretary of the Northern Ireland Fair Employment Trust. This trust was set up under the sponsorship and auspices of Dr. Sean MacBride. He helped define the problem of injustice crafted by a British institutionalized discrimination against the Catholic minority population and helped in drafting programs and setting up agencies such as the Fair Employment Trust to both monitor the Northern Ireland authorities, document the lack of concern by the government for its citizens from the Catholic population, and suggest remedies and proposals to reduce the devastating effects of second class citizenship.

A highly trained personnel manager, who has known discrimination first hand, and who has suffered the wrath of the British government personally, Oliver chose to speak out in favor of change in support of the MacBride Principles. Oliver's testimony before the California State legislature was the pretext for government conspiracy to eliminate and silence him. His family's safety has been in jeopardy from his advocacy of justice.

Oliver has logged thousands of miles traveling from Ireland to the

OLIVER KEARNEY

United States visiting various states promoting the truth of the MacBride Principles and the lies of British government efforts crafted to address the problem.

The success of the MacBride Campaign to date can certainly be attributed to his unselfish efforts to speak with elected representatives in a professional and most knowledgeable manner concerning the problems surrounding anti-Catholic discrimination in the work place. Thanks to his efforts

NY Political Forum Hears Views of Office Seekers

NEW YORK: Recently, a New York City Comptroller and Mayoral race Forum was held at Manhattan College, here, attended by 800 American-Irish leaders. This was one of the largest crowds assembled politically for the Comptroller and Mayoral race of New York City.

Under the direction of AOH National Director Jack Irwin, Forum moderator, and time keeper, Patrick Timmons, the Forum got under way with the Comptroller's race. Candidates attending were: Assemblyman Alan Hevesi (D) Queens; Frank Macchiarola, (D) Brooklyn; former Chancellor for the New York City Board of Education and Assemblyman Jerrold Nadler, (D) Manhattan. Those who did not attend were: Assemblyman Mark Alan Seigal (D) Manhattan, and Elizabeth Holtzman.

The media panel for the Comptroller race consisted of: Martin Galvin, editor of Irish People, Mary Murphy, reporter for Channel 2

News (CBS), David Henshaw, editor of the National Hibernian Digest, and Chris Donoghue, Channel 9 News (WOR).

Questions on the five issues of concern to the American-Irish were: use of New York City Pension Fund to support the MacBride Principles of fair employment; future of Gaelic Park as Irish social, cultural, and sports landmark; maintain and expand present City policy of extending City Services to the undocumented; asylum for Joe Doherty; past and future activities on behalf of the City's American-Irish population and their concerns.

The Mayoral Candidates attending were: Herbert London, (R) New York University; Mayor Edward I. Koch (D); Ronald Lauder (R) former Ambassador to Austria; Henry Hughes (R-RTL) Businessman; Harrison J. Goldin (D) New York City Comptroller; David Dinkins (D) Manhattan Borough President; Richard Revitch (D) former Chairman Metropolitan Transportation Authority; and Art Piccolo (D) Bowling Green Association.

The only one not in attendance was Mr. Rudolph Guiliano (R).

Media panel participants were: John Thornton, editor of Irish Echo; Adrian Flannelly, radio host of WNNK; Jim Ryan, anchor of Good Day New York, Channel 5 (Fox T.V.); Niall O'Dowd, publisher of Irish Voice; Magee Hickey, reporter for Channel 4 News (NBC).

Rudolph Guiliani, although in the area, refused to attend. Moderator Jack Irwin remarked: "Your non-participation will long be remembered by the American-Irish community."

All candidates responded positively to the American-Irish concerns, with the audience voicing a "wait and see" response. The candidates concede that the American-Irish vote is the swing vote in these elections and react accordingly. The evening started with welcome remarks by Bronx President Fernando Ferris.

The national anthems, Irish and American, were sung by Assemblyman Joseph Crowley. During the breaks, the audience was entertained by the Manhattan College Pipe Band. After addressing the crowd, Assemblyman John Deare (D), coordinator of the Forum, received a standing ovation for his work on behalf of the American-Irish Community. This was the third Forum coordinated by Deare, all relative to candidates for public office—State of New York, City of New York and U.S. Presidency. He acknowledged the special assistance of Brother Thomas Scanlon, F.S.C., president of Manhattan College and the college staff, and his own staff: Cheryl Harrington, John Melia, John McCarthy, Gloria Salacan, Patrick Timmons, and Tim O'Connor.

Restructured Award Format Adds Interest

The decision by the National Board to restructure the annual National Awards program has met with the approval of the membership. Details are available through your local division. Richard M. Rogers, assistant national secretary and National Awards chairman, reports that interest to date has shown a noticeable increase over previous years.

The beneficiary of this year's program is the new Dr. Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award. Additional details on the MacBride Award and its recipient, Oliver Kearney, are on page one of this issue of the National Digest.

Every member of the Order is involved in the Awards program. Awards will be conferred at the National Board meeting in Dayton, Ohio, on October 21 and will be published in the November-December issue of the National Digest. Additional information is available from the National Awards office at Box 623, Mineola, NY 11501, or by calling the office at 516-887-1952.

President's Message

TEACHTAIMEACHT AN UACHTARAIN

By Michael J. Coogan, National President

Hibernians have been active across the country in projects which give new life and new dignity to our Order. Vermont and New Hampshire adopted MacBride Principles statues and in California a key committee voted out the MacBride bill after the compelling testimony of Oliver Kearney. In Boston I joined with other Irish-American leaders to announce the federal lawsuit to end the discriminatory visa policy our government applies to Gerry Adams, the president of Sinn Féin and elected Member of Parliament. In Chicago, a Joe Doherty rally draws 650 people and mayoral candidates; and in May the City Council adopted a resolution declaring June 17th Joe Doherty Day in Chicago.

The innovative fund raising of the Massachusetts State Board has engendered awards to Sister Veronica and the Irish Pastoral Center for helping the undocumented, St. Anne's Cancer Hospital in Dublin and the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights. The love and dedication of Hibernians involved in support of the Irish team competing in the New York State Games for the Physically Challenged has been remarkable and gratifying.

I urge your support of State and National AOH leaders, who can maintain this record of achievement only if you get involved. Plans are now being made for activities in support of the International Right to Life Committee, chaired by a physician from County Cork; for the 10th Anniversary dinner to commemorate the start of the aid to Families of Prisoners begun by Past National President Jack Connolly; and for a campaign to support awareness and research on the newly diagnosed Respiratory Distress Syndrome (RDS) which has probably affected every Hibernian family at one time or another.

My thanks to all for your prayers and good wishes during my daughter's convalescence.

Sean MacBride Award

Americans are more aware of the problem and are responding accordingly. Twelve states and seventeen cities have adopted the Principles as guidelines. No matter when he is called upon to help, Oliver is there, whether by telephone, written information or the sacrifice of leaving his home and loved ones to travel on behalf of his commitment to end discrimination in the North.

Oliver Kearney seeks a better life for his own five children as well as all the children of Ireland who have known hate and religious bigotry since their birth. He speaks for both sections of the community when he seeks fairness from the government, for he has a vision of a United Ireland, where all men and women, regardless of race, religion or national origin are treated equally. In using his God given talents in the manner that he is, Oliver is a real student of his mentor, Dr. Sean MacBride.

The award will be presented to Oliver at the National President's Dinner on October 21, 1989 in Dayton, Ohio.

Protestants Dominate N.I. University Staffs

BELFAST — The Fair Employment Agency has found that a large majority of those employed in Northern Ireland's universities are Protestants. Some of the information found in an as yet unpublished report compiled by FEA investigators is very embarrassing to the British Government.

For instance, the University of Ulster, one of the North's two main universities, is employing four times as many Protestants as Catholics, according to the FEA report.

The agency has also discovered that more than three times as many Protestants as Catholics are on the payroll of Queen's University in Belfast.

The agency has sent the report to the governing bodies at both universities, asking the authorities for their comments. However, the documents, described as "embarrassing" by one academic, were leaked to reporters in Belfast last week. The source said: "They are certain to spark quite a row, and not only in the academic field."

The reports show that at the University of Ulster, which employs

2,402 people, 64 percent of the workforce is Protestant, 16 percent Catholic, a ratio of exactly 4-1 in favor of Protestants.

At the largest of the university's four sites at Jordanstown, Co. Antrim, 83 percent of the workforce is Protestant, 18 percent Catholic. The Catholic quota at the other three sites are: Magee College, Derry (55 percent), Coleraine (21 percent) and Belfast's Art College (18 percent).

Protestant academic staff (43.4 percent) at the university outnumber their Catholic colleagues (14.9 percent) by almost 3-1.

With the figures confined to staff recruited from within the North, the widest discrepancies occur in the clerical, technical, maintenance and manual grades of the University of Ulster's workforce, where Protestants outnumber Catholics on ratios ranging from 4-1 to 8-1.

The FEA's conclusion in the report is that the University of Ulster has been making efforts since its establishment to redress the imbalance it inherited, but more effort is needed to "further equality of opportunity."

National Park Service Reneges on Agreement

SHARPSBURG, MD — The Irish Brigade Monument Committee (IBMC) has been told by officials of the National Park Service (NPS) at the Antietam National Battlefield here that the group may not erect its planned memorial to the Irish Brigade of the Union Army. "Previously," stated Jack O'Brien, president of the Irish Cultural Society of Prince George's County, MD, "the National Park Service had bones of the Irish soldiers in conjunction with the erection of the tribute to the Irish Brigade. Now, the new superintendent of the battlefield site has reneged on the agreement." O'Brien's organization started the Irish Brigade Monument Committee two years ago. Last year, the bodies of four members of the Irish Brigade were discovered on the field.

Since getting permission for their memorial, members of the IBMC have visited Ireland to select a green/gray/white granite base for the monument. At the memorial's top a large bronze bardic harp is planned. The harp is an ancient symbol of the land of birth of most of the members of the brigade and was emblazoned upon its green battle flags. The four sides of the base of the monument will tell the story of the unit in the September 17, 1862 ("the Bloodiest Day in American History") encounter between the Union Army of the Potomac and the Confederate Army of Northern Virginia.

The Irish Brigade on that date was made up of the 69th, 88th and 63rd New York and 29th Massachusetts Infantry Regiments. Its mission was to attack a line of opposing infantry holding a natural entrenchment along a sunken road, ever afterwards called "Bloody Lane." The brigade was led against the gray defenders by the "young Ireland" patriot hero, Brigadier General Thomas F. Meagher. It assaulted the enemy position until its ammunition was exhausted and it had to be relieved by a fresh brigade. Two regiments, the 69th and 63rd New York suffered 61.8 and 59.2 percent casualties respectively. Throughout the Civil War, the Irish Brigade lost over 4,000 men, a total which represents more men than the organization ever had within its ranks at any given time.

In a recent meeting between the IBMC and Superintendent Richard Rambur, the Committee was refused what had already been given: permission to erect the monument. The new man in charge at the battlefield does not believe that any more monuments should be put up on the field. He indicated to the group that a new "general management plan" is to be drawn up by a special team from the Denver Office of the National Park Service. Rambur will serve on that team.

However, the IBMC has a document in its hands from the former superintendent at Antietam which does give permission to erect a memorial to the Irish Brigade. O'Brien and Matt Hannon, Chairperson of the IBMC, believe that this letter supercedes the new attitude of the NPS. They point out that the IBMC has already expended funds on the project and has even donated money for the repair of a cast iron marker relating to the brigade, a marker which had been broken in two pieces for years and was only restored through the efforts of the IBMC. One of the difficulties here has been the budget given to the NPS over the years.

Committee historian Professor Jack McCormack of Delaware County Community College (Media, PA) is quick to point out "that the NPS personnel at the site were initially delighted with out intention to place a monument to such a distinguished fighting unit. They were even interested in having us acquire some key land and place the monument on it. There was talk of reinterring the bones of the Irish soldiers in conjunction with the erection of the memorial. Then, suddenly, we were told that there will be no monument. That puts us in a quandary; how far can we proceed under these circumstances? The more the delay, the

Nat'l Catholic Action Chairman Honored

VINCENT SCULLY accepting the Clan na Gael award presented by fellow Hibernian Robert D. McIlwain, left, chairman, F.F.A.I., and Political Education for the area of Philadelphia, Delaware, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Vince Scully Candidate for Pennsylvania Presidency Post

VINCESCULLY

Vincent J. Scully, AOH National Catholic Action Chairman, and Pennsylvania State Vice President, has announced his candidacy for President of Pennsylvania. A man who was honored in 1988 by his fellow council members of the Knights of Columbus as "Knight of the Year", and then in 1989 by Clan Na Gael, for his untiring work in the cause for Irish freedom.

Vince will once again direct his energies toward the passage of the House and Senate resolutions containing the MacBride Principles Legislation.

As National Catholic Action Chairman, his phone calls and telegrams to the Belgium government helped in keeping Father Patrick Ryan out of the hands of the British government, and in showing England that we will not stand by and let them attack our clergy without a fight.

A man of strong family commitment, he has been married to his wife Betty for thirty-two years. They have three children and seven grandchildren.

A printer by trade, he has kept the state informed with his newsletter, "Scully", and has shown that we can make the difference.

Joseph Snyder Honored

BRISTOL BOROUGH, PA. — Following the April meeting at the AOH Hall, Joseph Snyder, right, was recognized for attaining 50 years of continuous membership with the Bristol Division. Mr. Snyder is the sixth person to become a 50-year member, the others being Martin Fallon and Lawrence Delaney, both deceased, Edward Mulligan, James Nealis, and Hubert Nelson. Mr. Snyder's 50-year pin and certificate of merit were presented to him by Bill Wildman, left, of the Bristol Hibernians, president of the Division. The Hibernians have been in Bristol Borough for 106 years, and are believed to be the longest continuous service group in the state. On July 16 the AOH will sponsor the 7th annual Irish Day in the borough, consisting of bands, crafts, food and fun. Held in Lions Park by the Bristol Wharf along the Delaware River, the featured band will be the Claddagh Folk. The affair attracts thousands each year. Admission is free and all are welcome.

State Chaplain Marks 35th Year As Priest

By KATHLEEN M. MAHONEY

"I had wanted to be a priest since eighth grade," Father John J. Munley recently recalled, and hundreds of people around the Commonwealth of Virginia are very happy that he did eventually achieve that youthful goal. Father Munley, now pastor of St. Mary's in historic

FR. JOHN J. MUNLEY

Fredericksburg, Virginia, celebrated the 35th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood this year. He was ordained in Richmond on May 8, 1954.

The month of May was a memorable one for Father Munley. A

A widely known and respected Hibernian in Pennsylvania, Vincent J. Scully, was recently honored by the Philadelphia Clan na Gael at their Eighth Annual Irish Unity Dinner. Scully is presently the AOH state vice president and National Catholic Action chairman.

As Honoree, Vince was presented a plaque in recognition of his untiring work and support over the years, not only to Clan na Gael, but to all Irish-American organizations.

Vince was born fifty years ago into a family that immigrated from County Tipperary, Ireland, in the first part of this century.

He is a man of strong family commitment who has been married to his lovely wife Betty for thirty-two years. They have raised three children and have been blessed with seven grandchildren. Although his work and activities take up a great deal of his time, his family knows they are always his number one priority.

Vince learned early-on the rich values and traditions of his Irish heritage, and sadly, of the suffering, oppression, and persecution of the Irish people by the British.

Always concerned about the rights of others and always proud of his Irish identity, he became outraged in the early eighties with the deaths of the Hunger Strikers at the hands of the British government.

His Irish Catholic identity took on another facet as he found what he thought would be his true love. He became a member of the AOH and quickly realized that this organization embodied his ideals of Irish heritage and Catholic faith. He saw it as a vehicle that the Irish-American community needed to get its ideas across to the general public.

The AOH had become dormant in his area of Southwest Philadelphia. But through his countless hours and unending dedication, he almost single-handedly resurrected the Order in the Southwest Philadelphia and Delaware County. His actions on behalf of the order became infectious and soon the AOH began to reclaim its past place as a leader of the Irish community. His magnetism and zeal drew many men to the AOH. His deeds became known state-wide and, at the 1987 Pennsylvania State Convention of the AOH, he was elected State Vice-President. His actions didn't stop with a title; he planted the seed for new divisions both in the Delaware Valley and throughout the state.

Vince is a deeply rooted family man, a dedicated Irish-American, a true Catholic gentleman, and most of all, a trusted friend in times of need.

committee of parishioners planned the May 6-7 weekend as one of joyous celebration with a reception after each Mass in honor of Father. While the 10:30 service on May 7 was the official anniversary Mass, Father Munley was present at the activity center after all Masses to greet parishioners and old friends.

On May 17 he joined other priests of the Diocese of Arlington who were celebrating anniversaries at the annual Jubilee Mass. This year St. John of Warrenton was the host parish for the Jubilee.

Sandwiched between those two events, Father Munley celebrated his birthday, turning 65 years old on May 14. A Mother's Day baby, he was born in Kingston, Pennsylvania, just across the river from Wilkes-Barre, to Frank and Frances Munley, the parents of five girls and one other boy.

In addition to his pastoral duties, Father Munley keeps busy as the Virginia state chaplain of the AOH. Acting as the group's spiritual advisor is clearly a labor of love, for he relishes the job and all things Irish. The chaplain has been to Ireland about fifteen times and plans to be back this summer among relatives in Belmullet, County Mayo, as well as visiting other favorite spots in the Emerald Isle.

Reflecting on his thirty-five years as a priest in Virginia, Father Munley is quite optimistic that the diocese will continue to be richly blessed with religious vocations. "God always provides" is the Munley philosophy. His current parishioners in Fredericksburg, as well as the countless others he has touched in the last thirty-five years, are thankful that God provided them with a John Joseph Munley.

When a pub hasn't changed in more than a century the Irish tend to take it for granted. And that's the way they like it.

But when they learned that Budweiser,* that most American of beers, is now being brewed in Ireland, too...well, you might say a change of heart overtook them.

So now pubs like Lenehan's are serving up the clean, crisp taste of Budweiser along with their other brews. And while that may have caused a few raised eyebrows, it's also been cause for more than a few raised glasses.

Pro-Life Report

We are presently awaiting the outcome of the court decision in Missouri RE: Webster Vs. Reproductive Health Services, which will determine where a woman's right to terminate her pregnancy ends and the state's interest in protecting life begins.

The crucial significance is whether the decision will deny abortion as a constitutional right or continue the right as it exists today.

A successful outcome will throw back to the individual states the right to decide whether to hold criminal the killing of the unborn child or to decriminalize the killing of the unborn child.

Results of a successful court decision to overturn the Roe Vs. Wade decision will clearly leave abortion on demand available to states such as New York (others as well). We are probably now the death capital of our nation.

Trees for Ireland Posters Available

American involvement in the Trees for Ireland reforestation effort will get a boost through the new full-color poster offered free to interested individuals and organizations by the project's sponsor, The Irish American Cultural Institute (IACI). The poster includes a supply of tear-off coupons to enable Americans to have a tree planted in the Irish county of their choice.

To request a poster or for other information about the Trees for Ireland Program, write IACI, 2115 Summit Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55105, or call (612) 647-5678.

The gift of life blessed by a commitment of faith is our most precious gift. This year the A.O.H. renews its pledge to make a difference. We will defend life in all its stages. We will encourage all our Legislators to do the same.

We must protect Life in all its stages, not as a single issue, but as a priority issue. Pope John Paul II stated that it is the most important work on Earth.

While I embrace the honor and the responsibility of this Pro-Life position of the AOH, let it be said I was and still am fearful of failing. The hardest part (and I am afraid it will always be so) is when our own people find fault with those who must stand up in the public arena and represent their own commitment of faith. Irish Catholics are a twice blessed people. We can make a difference on this issue which we all find repulsive. All I ask for is your consideration of help in this area and your prayers for our success.

PAT AND ME

The date was April 6, 1989. I just called home to check in and when Betty answered I could sense in her tone of voice that something was wrong. She assured me everything was all right, and after I hung up and went back to work, the call slipped my mind.

As soon as I walked into the house after work my wife burst into tears and told me of the death of my best friend, Pat O'Mahoney. It felt as if a knife went through me and I couldn't hold back my emotions either.

Pat and Me. We grew up together. We were in each other's wedding party. Pat and Joan, Bet and I are godparents to one another's children. We went to conventions and banquets and even shared the grief of death and troubles in our families. Pat and Joan were related to everything good and bad. We were that close.

As kids Pat's younger brother Chuckie used to borrow my baseball glove. I was his hero; but I was also lefthanded and just happened to have a lefthanders Hutch fielders mitt. Pat and Me always waited for Chuckie's line and we probably egged him on a little, too.

Pat and Me were in De La Salle Council 590, Knights of Columbus, and the Cardinal Dougherty Assembly of the Fourth Degree. We were both officers of the Commodore John Barry Div. 2, A.O.H. and Pat was our Shirt and Cap salesman. He graduated Villanova University; but was a lousy speller. (His Ancient Order of "Hibernians" shirts can attest to that.) Want to buy one? We still have some!

Pat and Me were especially close and I thank God for allowing us the time to be friends.

It doesn't end there. As it happened, Pat's burial took place in Sts. Peter and Paul cemetery in a newly opened section. The Archdiocese of Philadelphia sent notices around the parishes about the opening and while 50 is by no means ancient, it seemed to be a good idea to get that stuff out of the way. Anyway when the funeral arrived at the cemetery for Pat's burial, Caretaker Michael Humphreys was waiting to receive him (Mike is A.O.H. and K of C also and took charge in honor of Pat). Brother Mike informed me that all the plots surrounding the O'Mahoney graves had a hold placed on them; just in case Bet and I wanted to make a selection. Well we moved in right next door to the O'Mahoneys. This way somebody should be able to say an Ave for us or plant a Tri-color in the green grass above us at least once in a while!

I still hurt because he was my buddy and I loved him dearly; but I don't want melancholy to set in on you. . . In fact I write of him as if in a prayer that God will give each and every one of you a Pat to have at least once in your life. . . You will be greatly blessed and joyful! Friendship is a wonderful treasure!

It is said that as God closes one door, He opens another. Would you believe that there is another Hibernian and Brother Knight named Walt? God bless you! And God bless you, Pat.

Your friend Vince.

P.S.

My sister Helen and brother-in-law Joe Schell, who is Delaware County Board vice president, purchased the lots directly facing us. We may have an AOH section out at Peter and Paul. None of us will get a good night's sleep. Now if we can only get the Flyers games?

Shaw Festival Theatre Features Popular Works

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, ONT.: The 1989 season of the Shaw Festival Theatre here will feature George Bernard Shaw's comic masterpiece "Man and Superman" from Apr. 26-Oct. 15, according to Christopher Newton, artistic director. The play is one of Shaw's most popular classics.

In addition, Shaw's ever-popular comedy "Getting Married" will run from July 2-Sept. 24. And to complete the Shaw section of the festival, Ronnie Burkett's unusual Theatre of Marionettes will present a mythical battle of literary titans entitled "Shakes vs. Shaw" featuring George Bernard Shaw and William Shakespeare. The program will run from July 5-Sept. 23.

The Festival will also feature the works of Shaw's contemporaries including "Berkeley Square" by John L. Balderston based on an unfinished novel by Henry James. The play will run from May 4-Oct. 14.

Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman's fast-paced and satirical comedy about Hollywood's movie moguls "Once in a Lifetime" will run from May 11-July 23. Other productions will include "Trelawny of the Wells" by Arthur W. Pinero from Aug. 4-Oct. 15; "Peer Gynt" by Henrik Ibsen from July 4-Sept. 24; and "An Inspector Calls" by J. B. Priestley from May 2-Oct. 14.

Two musicals will also be included in the 1989 program. "Good News" with book by Laurence Schwab and B. G. DeSylva, lyrics by B. G. DeSylva and Lew Brown, and music by Ray Henderson will run from May 17-Oct. 15. And Cole Porter's "Nymph Errant" with book by Romney Brent will be featured from August 8-31.

The Shaw Festival will also present the 25th Annual Shaw Seminar entitled "Love, Sex and Marriage" sponsored by the Academy of the Shaw Festival. The seminar is scheduled from July 13-16 in Niagara-on-the-Lake.

For a brochure, write: Shaw Festival, Box 774, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., Canada - L0S 1J0.

THE BACK OF BEYOND

Far away 'tis
A distant land seldom seen
You'd go a long way to get there, to the other side of it all
No road will take you there
No one we know has been there
No one has told of its mystery
The land of fairies, leprechauns, and the pucca, it is said
No posted letters
No parcels sent
It's farther than the mountains, past the mist of imagination
It's the Back Of Beyond.

Bobby Sands Div. Serves Needy

SAN DIEGO, CA: In commemoration of the eighth anniversary of the death of Bobby Sands, Division 2 AOH (Bobby Sands Division) sponsored, along with the San Diego Catholic Worker, a meal service for San Diego's homeless.

Alice Smith, co-ordinator of the local Catholic Worker, accepted a $200 check Saturday morning at the St. Vincent de Paul-Joan Krock Center. Volunteers from Bobby Sands Division 2 prepared and served 500 poor and needy generous portions of perhaps their only meal of the day.

President John McMahon has expressed a desire that this "be an annual event for our division on this particular day — May 5th." James Shannon, National Board Officer, concurred, stating Christian Charity is best exemplified when words are put into action. Hibernians who served and contributed to the meal service were: Tom Garity, Dan McPherson, Kevin Conway, John McMahon, Jim Shannon, John Whelan, Tim Cashman, John Israel, Carter Ryan, Bob and Bernadette Farrell and John Reynolds. Significantly, as the hunger strike as a means of righting an injustice is a very old tradition in Celtic tradition, perhaps we here in San Diego can ease some injustice by "feeding the hungry."

RUTLAND, VERMONT: Members of AOH Michael Davitt Division of Vermont, the sponsoring organization for MacBride Principles legislation, pose with Governor Madeleine M. Kunin after she signed into law the MacBride Bill legislation. The ceremony was held in the same room, the council chambers of Rutland's City Hall, where the campaign was launched in 1987. Those who witnessed the triumphant climax are, left to right, Attorney Stephen Cosgrove, division treasurer; Thomas C. Ryan, marshal; Thomas J. Ryan, chairman, Freedom for All Ireland, Tom Kieran Egan, president; Kieran Tom Egan, first president; Michael Harte, former president and current vice president; and Murray McGrath. Two small flags of Ireland are at the Governor's left.

Vermont 12th State to Enact MacBride Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C.: Vermont became the 12th state to pass the MacBride Principles. The State Senate voted for the Principles on Friday, April 28, 1989. The House of Representatives had already passed them on St. Patrick's Day.

"This is yet another great victory," said Fr. Sean McManus. "Now all six states in New England have passed the Principles."

Fr. McManus had appeared on a radio talk show the morning of the vote to urge the people of Vermont to rally around MacBride. He had appealed to the people to call their senators and to call Mr. Tom Egan, the leader of the MacBride campaign, for information on how they could help.

"Right after Fr. McManus made his appeal," said Mr. Egan, "a man telephoned to offer his help. He was from a part of the state where two senators were not known to me and they were not going to vote for the MacBride Bill. The caller knew them both well and he got them to vote for us," said a triumphant Mr. Egan.

Fr. McManus singled out Mr. Egan for special praise. "A lot of good people in Vermont worked on this campaign," he said, "but it is only proper to pay special tribute to the great Tom Egan. Tom is a legend in Vermont. For over 60 years, Tom has kept the Irish cause alive in Vermont. What makes his victory on MacBride especially impressive is that Tom has, for the past year, been very seriously ill. Tom not only accepted his very serious illness with extraordinary faith and fortitude, but he also poured his heart and soul into getting MacBride passed in Vermont. I've always known that Tom was a great Irishman, but in the past year I have been deeply edified and inspired by his extraordinary faith and resignation to God's will. Tom is truly one of the most impressive men I've ever known. He has the heart of a lion, the soul of a saint, and the talent of a very gifted Irishman."

Chaplain's Message

Teachtameac An Seipinacta
Rev. Donal O'Carroll, Deputy National Chaplain

Our Chaplain's meeting at Beverly, Ohio, is now history and it is in order that we thank all the participating chaplains for coming. A special word of thanks to Mike Coogan, president of the AOH, for full participation in the gathering. He listened to our proposals and problems and the end result of the meeting will all be the better for his presence. Ohio president, Tom Murphy, was also in attendance.

Fimbar Flannigan, OFM, who was born in Belfast and spent a number of years in South Africa, gave us a different but still interesting look at the problems facing the Irish and the troubles in Northern Ireland. It gave us much food for spiritual thought.

A primary subject that came up was that in the past the Divisions were asked to help the Pastor and were the right arm of the Chaplain. We Chaplains want to serve the various divisions or obtain the services of a chaplain for Divisions that have none. This is a must in spite of the scarcity of priests and the emphasis is now on evangelization since the Second Vatican Council.

In other words, if we are going to continue an interest in Irish problems, especially peace and justice there, we have to take a good hard look at the social gospel here, and see that all Divisions receive the spiritual food that our involvement can produce. Prayers, meditation and love for the scriptures must have a more important place in our everyday lives and also should be used for at least a short time during the meetings.

The chaplains who were unable to come to the Beverly meeting will receive the minutes of the meeting. The rain spoiled the golfing somewhat and the high cost of the U.S. Air tickets also prevented some from coming (a matter to be studied in the future). I know with some long-range planning that too shall pass. We do ask Mary, St. Patrick, and St. Brigid to richly bless the chaplains from Michigan, Massachusetts, Maryland, Connecticut and Ohio who graced us with their presence and many others who wrote although they were not able to be with us and gave some valuable suggestions on current chaplain concerns.

Yours in Christ,
Rev. Fr. Donal O'Carroll

Summer Courses Set By Galway University

GALWAY, IRELAND: University College Galway will offer a varied program in Irish Studies during June, July and August, according to Seamus O'Grady, administrative director.

Courses in Irish Studies, directed by Gearoid O Tuathaigh, will include: Anglo-Irish Literature, Irish History, Gaelic Culture and Literature, and Irish Society. Classes will run from June 27 to July 29.

Dr. Declan Irvine, director, lists the following courses in the "Education in Ireland" field: Course Structure and Method, and the Education System of Ireland. Dates for the courses will be July 6-29.

In the field of Gaelic Language, directed by Peadar Mac an Iomaire, both Beginning and Intermediate courses will be offered from July 21-Aug. 18. Excursions and visits will be arranged to several Irish-speaking locations to help students experience the Irish language and culture in their natural environment.

"Students will live in Galway homes adjacent to the University and have an opportunity to make contact with people of Galway and their way of life," explained Director O'Grady.

Credits for courses are offered at both graduate and undergraduate levels. Assessment will be based on attendance and completion of appropriate written assignments or examinations as prescribed by each course director.

For information, write: Director Seamus O'Grady, Summer School, University College Galway, Ireland.

trying to tell Irish men and women what to do for years.

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland agreed to be interviewed by the Irish Echo in its 5/12/89 edition. The material covered in this interview was basically the same covered in his speech to the World Affairs Council in Los Angeles.

Let us, AOH members and citizens of the United States, forget that it was the United States that bailed Britain out with a very favorable "Lend-Lease" program during WWII, did Britain ever repay its debt to the U.S. of A?

The British government is investing money, material, and humans into its battle to defeat the MacBride Principles. There is legislation pending in states besides the twelve states which have already passed such legislation. Some of the states which have passed MacBride Principles legislation are New York, Michigan, Vermont, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Florida, New Jersey, Illinois and Minnesota plus seventeen municipalities.

Organizations in states where legislation is pending can use all the help they can get. As a member of the AOH, get involved with this project. Drop a line to your state senator or state representative telling him you feel he should support MacBride Principles legislation. You just might be the one who makes the difference. Don't let this noble endeavor get shot down by a "Foreign Gun."

Phases of Irish History

By MICHAEL McCORMACK

What Happened? Where is all the communication between historians? You know, history is not just a passing event — it's what makes the Irish so special. Our rich history shaped our culture and made us what we are today. It is a proud and honorable thing, and we have the obligation to pass it on to those who come after us; so let's get to the letter-writing and keep lines of communication open. Unfortunately, there is very little news to report from the Historian's desk this time. There were several library displays in March, but no one wrote to give us any information on who or where, so we can't mention them or pass on any of their ideas. Hopefully, we'll hear in the near future. Likewise, the mailbox is not overflowing with reports from our historians on plaques, statues, or landmarks that may be located in their geographic areas; but I'm not going to stop trying. If you have a historic landmark of significance to the Irish American community in your geographic area, bug your division, county, or state historian to get the details of that landmark to me. I'll spread the word from there, and publicly acknowledge the source. As for our other projects:

1. National Essay Competition. Congratulations to Kenneth Allen of Bayshore on winning the college level competition. Ken's essay appears on the editorial pages of this issue. However, the response in the open competition was terrible, and analysis points to one or all of three possible factors: a difficult topic, lack of interest, lack of promotion. If the topic "Immigration — a modern cornucopia" was too difficult, I accept responsibility for that. I was hoping that our contestants would provide some useful information that could be used in our fight to lift restrictions on Irish immigration. I am in no way convinced that there is a lack of interest in American schools, and I don't want to think that our historians across the country did not promote the competition; therefore we will try again next year and the entire effort will be analyzed to determine where the cause lies. And I promise that the topics will be more interesting.

2. Monthly Profiles. The bi-monthly "Profiles in Patriotism" will continue to be mailed to any historian who has sent me a copy of the form 9 or other information confirming his position as division, county, or state historian. That's all you have to do. Why then have I received only 23 to date? I know there are more historians out there. Come on, send me that letter and receive a monthly mailing of "Profiles in Patriotism" for use at your meetings. Send to Mike McCormack, 37 Harrison Ave., Centereach, NY 11720.

3. Holland Project. The Patterson Museum suffered a terrible fire only days after National President Mike Coogan and our Holland Submarine Committee met there on January 20. Fortunately no damage was done to the submarines nor the file of approximately 10,000 papers, most in Holland's own writing, that are part of the Holland Collection. The fire only underscores the importance of our project to document and microfilm the collection. Not only would they then be available to historians, but safe from loss. With the permission of Museum Curator, Ms. Barbara Rivolta, we are sponsoring a nationwide appeal for funds to achieve that goal. Phase One of the project is to catalog the Holland Papers and publish an index for prospective biographers. That phase alone will cost $12,000. Joe Sullivan of New Jersey and Jim Gallagher of Connecticut are Deputy National Historians assisting on the project, and a project office has been established as a reception point for all inquiries and contributions. As a Hibernian, you can help. Publicize the project among the Irish media in your own area (radio, newspapers, etc.); press releases are available. Seek the assistance of other Irish and Irish-Americans and their respective clubs and organizations. Please send all donations to:

The Holland Project
P.O. Box 9006
Elizabeth, New Jersey, 07201

4. Video History. A new video history on Ireland has been produced by Rego Records, 64 New Hyde Park Rd., Garden City, NY 11530. The presentation is a general overview of the subject and should certainly stimulate the appetite for more of the same. The film's biggest advantage is bringing you to the actual scene of many historic events.

Congratulations to our brother Hibernians in Alabama who are actively engaged in establishing a memorial to Commodore John Barry aboard the U.S.S. Alabama. The great warship is now a floating dockside museum in a beautiful commemorative park and the local AOH thought that a plaque to the Father of the American Navy presented by the AOH would be appropriate since Barry was a proud Irishman. Brother Mike Foster is chairing the effort, and asks that if you'd like to help, you can call him at Father Ryan Div. AOH, 931 Carlyle Way E. No. 237, Mobile, AL 36609.

If you have any projects that you would like to share with us please call and let us know what you're doing.

Likewise, if you have any historic story you would like to share, please feel free to contact this office. I'm still waiting for Jim Browne to send me the story he found on George Washington's son (or was it his grandson) and the tradition which requires shamrocks to be placed on his grave every March 17. Maybe one of the Washington DC or Virginia members can find out and share it with us.

James Burke Passes Away

CAMDEN, NJ: James Harry Burke, member of the Rt. Magr. Francis J. Cosgrove Div. 4 here passed away on April 5, 1989, at the age of 87.

He was born in Camden and worked in the Electrical Bureau of the city for forty years.

He was a member of his Division for over fifty years, and is survived by his wife Dorothy and sons James H. and Robert B. and a sister, Evelyn Widmann.

Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated by the Rev. Magr. Thomas St. John Cannon. Interment was in Calvary Cemetery, Cherry Hill, New Jersey.

STATE NEWS: Michigan

It was a bright and beautiful Sunday, November 27, 1988, when the Father Solanus Casey Macomb Division of the AOH met at St. Bonaventure's Monastery on Mt. Elliott in Detroit to help celebrate at Mass the occasion of the birth of Fr. Solanus Casey. Born on November 25, 1870, this unpretentious man and priest is the patron of our division. A highlight of the celebration was the division's presenting the Monastery a magnificent, hand-painted portrait of Father Solanus.

Almost a year earlier, our division commissioned a young and talented artist, Tim Bodendistel, to begin work on an oil painting of Father Solanus for display at the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick Hall, where we hold our monthly meetings. Soon Tim became an active member of our division for two reasons. First, his family had a great devotion and respect for this saintly man of God. Secondly, he saw our division as a place to express his friendship and camaraderie with our members.

Irish Videos Catching On

PATRICK NOONAN, president of Rego Irish Records and Tapes, provides the musical accompaniment for a group of step dancers who performed at the company's booth during the fourth annual New York Home Video Show at the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center. Connie Murphy, director of publicity for the company, was beaming on the last day of the show. "We've met so many people who were interested in our line. It turned out to be a great show for us," she said. There were more than 4,000 visitors and 180 exhibitors involved.

Castle Carrickancross. Next, they visited Canelough in County Armagh where his mother, Ellen Murphy, was born. They were escorted by Fr. Leo McAuliffe, a Capuchin from Holy Trinity in County Cork. They wanted to see as much as they could in their short visit to the Emerald Isle. Brother Leo and Brother Richard were gathering data for a second book on the life of Father Solanus Casey. Both books will be part of the portfolio of information being gathered and sent to Rome as evidence for his proposed sainthood. The cover on the second book will have Tim Bodendistel's portrait on the cover.

When the Mass was completed at the Monastery, we adjourned to the 3rd Order Hall for light refreshments and an update by the two Brothers on Father Solanus' cause.

As the portrait of Father Solanus was viewed, Tim Bodendistel was complimented for his artistry in capturing the true expressions of this great man. His piercing blue eyes, his saintly countenance, his gentle manner were perfectly depicted. Tim spent over 60 hours on this 28 by 36 inch painting. Instead of blending colors together on canvas, Tim created what he called a "Mosaic" oil painting. He said this enables each person to experience his or her expression of Father Solanus. "The blending takes place in your eyes," the artist said.

The occasion ended with a song composed by another member of our division, George Darrah, who honored Fr. Casey in song as he traced the key events in this saintly man's life.

We are so proud of Tim, Father Solanus Casey, and all who made this day so memorable.

THE IRISH HUNGER STRIKERS IN RETROSPECT

I'll wear no convict's uniform
Nor meekly serve my time
That Britain might brand Ireland's fight
Eight hundred years of crime

Nine years have passed since the 10 Irish hunger-strikers died in 1981. It has been a lifetime since the first to die, Thomas Ashe, gave his life in 1917. Twenty-two brave martyrs died on hunger-strike. Another eight later died after first surviving the ordeal — their death attributed to their fast.

Thirty tragic stories — every man a hero. Thirty Irish saints? Perhaps; surely men of courage. They endured their suffering for a cause. Shortly before his death on May 12, 1981, Frankie Hughes spoke these words: "I have no prouder boast than to say I am Irish and have been privileged to fight for the Irish people and for Ireland. If I have a duty I will perform it to the full in the unshakable belief that we are a noble race and that chains and bonds have no part in us."

These men expected their sacrifice would bring a new rising, or perhaps a path to a peaceful solution to the "Troubles". Who mourns them now? Who remembers their names? What did they accomplish? What has happened since their death?

The hunger-strikers turned the page of history in Ireland. Since 1981 good things have happened. The British policy of "Criminalization" has failed. People throughout the world would simply not accept the British claim that these men were common criminals. Men who died as these men did were noble to a sacred cause. This same feeling is now felt toward all the political prisoners in Britain. The hunger-strikers highlighted questions about freedom and democracy in Northern Ireland. Never before had the "Irish Question" been discussed in so many government chambers. The immoral and inhumane behavior of Margaret Thatcher and the British government during the hunger-strike has been presented to the world. It has led to the New Ireland Forum, and to the disclosure of many of its defects. The MacBride Principles have publicly revealed that oppression against Catholics is a way of life in Northern Ireland. The hunger-strikes revealed a weakness in the Dublin Government — that political curtesy to the Queen still goes on.

The hunger-strikes brought an awareness up to the surface that all is not good with British rule. It has been shown that the government in the North is an imposed government; a government without the consent of the people. The hunger-strikers resisted to their death the British forceful trespass on their lives — for sake of Irish freedom. They taught everyone a lesson in courage. If these men were willing to die for a cause in this manner, then the "auld cause" is worth it all. They left a legacy of Irish determination in the quest for unity and freedom. Do not forget these heroes. Pray for them.

Their suffering started long before their first day of fast. Torture in many gruesome ways was inflicted on them. They were deprived of the most basic needs. They were insulted and beaten and abused. Never once did they give in to their cruel warders. Their spirit was never broken.

Soon after the last hunger-striker died, the prisoners in the H-Blocks were wearing their own clothes. The awful inhumane tortures stopped. A reasonable prison routine was established with more frequent visits. Prison life improved.

A strong American lobby is now underway — especially in Congress. People just don't trust the Thatcher government any more. A feeling of sympathy now exists with many English people in England. A great moral energy with Northern Ireland Catholics has been released. They no longer fear the RUC or the government. Strong feelings have been stirred in the North. Historians may tell us, one day, that the hunger-strikes since 1917; and especially the 10 martyrs of 1981, created the turning point in the quest for Irish unity and freedom.

Broward County Division 1 hosted the fifth Biennial Florida State Convention on the weekend of May 5, 6 and 7 at the Holiday Inn in Tamarac, a suburb of Ft. Lauderdale. Division 1 hosted a social in the adjoining AOH and LAOH Hospital rooms from 7 P.M. to Midnight. Music for the dancing was provided by Martin McAndrew and his accordion. Outgoing President Jack Boyle presided over Saturday morning business assisted by Vice President John Cullinan, Secretary Bob Schneider and Chaplain Rev. Fr. Gerald Grace.

Also in attendance were State Editor Nick Schneider; Manatee County Division 1 President Paul Finnerty and Vice President Tom Eagan; Brevard County Acting President Jim Duffy; Pasco County Division 1 Acting President Joe Connelly and Vice President Frank O'Brien; Brevard County Division 2 President Jerry Costlow, Sentinel Dennis Fitzmaurice, Vice President Jim O'Connor and Financial Secretary Tom Donnelly; Brevard County President Bob Carroll; Broward County Division 1 Financial Secretary W.J. Moroney; State Treasurer Eamon Quinn; Broward County Division 1 President Martin McAndrew, Vice President Don Fortune, Treasurer Ed McCready, Delegate Ed Nagle, Recording Secretary Don Hartnett and Standing Committee Chairman Tom Howley; Brevard County Division 1 Ernie Kees; Brevard County Division 2 Pro Life Chairman Fran McMonagle; Pinellas County Division 1 President Al Murphy and Delegate Pat Silver; State Financial Secretary Bob Bambrick and Broward County Division 2 Secretary Roger Silky.

Martin McAndrew, president of the host division, greeted the members and outlined the weekend. He and his committee were commended for the excellent results of their work in putting together the convention.

During the business meeting, many issues of concern to Florida Hibernians were taken up. Some were resolved and some were put into committee. Following further discussion of progress made in the state, election of officers was held.

The winning slate was President John Cullinan; Vice President Bob Schneider; Treasurer Martin McAndrew and Secretary Paul Finnerty. Following other business matters, the divisions represented gave reports. Brief highlights are:

Broward County: Division 1 President Martin McAndrew reported on the opening of their own home quarters, at which there is a social with dancing every Saturday night.

Their radio show has brought in several new members but that they could use more sponsors.

Manatee County: Division 1 President Paul Finnerty reported that for a new division, they are making great progress, particularly in the area of membership. Plans are under way for an Irish heritage section in the local libraries. The most recent members are Rev. Fr. Gerald Curley, assistant at St. Peter and St. Paul Apostles Parish; Pat O'Sullivan, Jim Quigley and Dan Ferry.

Pinellas County: Division 1 President Al Murphy reported that they have a one-hour radio show in the Tampa Bay area and are seeking sponsors. He encouraged the membership to write to the Budweiser Corporation to continue their sponsorship. Division member Mike Hanlon was responsible for getting the program on the air. The Irish memorabilia exhibit at the Clearwater library was a great success. On membership, division Chaplain Fr. Simcox contacted several parish which will put AOH information in their bulletins.

Brevard County: Division 2 President Jerry Costlow reported that his membership is increasing every month. During meetings, a great deal of emphasis is placed on Irish history from the book donated by Hal Bryant. He announced plans for a big Irish Night in October and invites all Hibernians and friends from all over the State.

Funds Are Available for Irish American Research

The Irish American Cultural Institute (IACI) is now accepting applications from research-oriented individuals to investigate facets of the Irish experience in America. The Institute welcomes applications from all disciplines. Primary research is the focus of this program. Projects such as museum exhibitions, oral history collections, and the compilation of bibliographies and other research tools are also eligible to apply for these funds.

The Irish Research Fund of the IACI represents the conviction of concerned individuals and organizations that the Irish contribution to America—often a matter of undocumented bombast—deserves serious scholarly exploration. At present, the IACI has two completed funds to support such research. One is the Lawrence and Elizabeth O'Shaughnessy Irish Research Fund; another is the Irish Institute of New York Irish Research Fund. Funding efforts for additional research monies are underway in several other communities.

Applications are accepted from any state. In the event that two applications weigh in evenly, consideration will be given to that which focuses on a matter from the region of the fund's origin. The prime considerations, however, are the significance of the matter proposed and the capability of the researcher to pursue it. On occasion, a grant may be made for research into events, forces, and movements in Ireland.

Original research and possibly assistance for travel or publication costs can be funded up to a maximum of $5,000 from each fund. The Irish American Cultural In-ster Shanty in Cocoa Beach, celebrating the divisions' tenth anniversary, was attended by fifty-one Hibernians and friends.

State Finance officer Eamon Quinn gave a favorable report which indicated that the State Hibernians are financially sound. The host division invited everyone to their home quarters for lunch, refreshments, music and dancing.

Late Saturday afternoon, Fr. Grace celebrated mass in the hotel conference room.

On Saturday evening the installation dinner/dance was attended by over 200 Hibernians and friends in the hotel ballroom. The music was provided by the popular Irish Band "The Shades of Green." The new officers had the honor of being installed by National Director Tom Gilligan, who is a member of the host division. He was assisted by outgoing President Jack Boyle.

At the conclusion of the installation, President John Cullinan, reappointed this reporter as State Editor. Therefore, I urge all division presidents to place me on your bulletin mailing list, giving me information of your division activities. STATE NEWS: New York

TO HONOR THE MEMORY of Eamon DeValera, the AOH leaders of New York City, under the chairmanship of State Vice President Al O'Hagan, placed a permanent monument at the Summit Hotel, where the statesman was born on October 14, 1882. The hotel was then the Nursery and Childs Hospital. Ceremonies took place on Monday, April 24th, the anniversary date of Easter Monday 1916. Before an estimated crowd of 1500, New York City Mayor Koch and Sile DeValera, Eamon's granddaughter, unveiled the plaque and officiated at the official street name changing, making East 51st Street "Eamon deValera Place." Ceremonies ended with a procession to Saint Patrick's Cathedral where a mass for peace with justice in Ireland was celebrated. Father Michael Driscoll, son of past New York State President Tom Driscoll, con-celebrated the mass while the Suffolk County AOH choir sang traditional hymns. All five New York City borough presidents joined the AOH on the steps of City Hall to proclaim April 24 "Eamon DeValera Day" in their respective boroughs. Left to right, front row, are Ralph Lamberti, Staten Island; Fernando Ferrer, Bronx; Howard Golden, Brooklyn; and David Dinkins, Manhattan. Back row, Al O'Hagan and Kings Co. President Martin Kelly.

Rockland Co. To Hold 16th Annual Feis

The Rockland County AOH will hold their 16th annual Feis on July 23 at the Marian Shrine, West Haverstraw, N.Y. The festive day will begin with the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass for peace in Ireland. The dedication will be by the R.C. Vicar, Mgr. John Harrington.

Patricia Dwyer, chairlady for the past 10 years, has announced there will be 261 competitions in dancing including championship contests, singing, essay, Irish language, pipe bands, Celi bands, together with varied solo instruments. Also, art and Celtic design, choreograph and a four level competition in oratory dealing with the Women of Ireland.

An added feature this year will be "Special Child", art contests, a dart tournament, Irish football and basketball games.

In the late afternoon the McKiernan Band will entertain outdoors. A journal is published in conjunction with the Feis.

Entry forms and syllabus is available by writing to: "Feis", P.O. Box 31, Garnerville, N.Y., 10923. No entries by telephone. Deadline for entries is June 20th.

Division 3, NY Condemns I.S.

NEW YORK — At its regular monthly meeting Div. 3, NY County AOH, passed a strong resolution condemning the arrests of eleven Irish immigrants by officers of the U.S. Immigration Service and Border Patrol on March 14 in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

The resolution calls to question the validity of the procedures followed by these officers during the arrests and calls for the redeployment of the

I.N.S. and Border Patrol "to an aggressive campaign in defence of U.S. society, from the current drug crisis and its attendant criminal sub-culture, and away from the current campaign of harassment of young Irish immigrants."

Emphasizing that the arrests "must be interpreted in a hypocritical light" because they occurred at a time when the U.S. was preparing to honor the historic contribution of Irish immigrants to every facet of American life, the resolution demands of the U.S. Government and Congress, the immediate legalization of the undocumented Irish community in the most expedient way possible.

The resolution points out the irony of current U.S. immigration policy. As the U.S. is facing an impending, severe skilled labor shortage, current immigration policy is restricting the legal entry of industrious skilled and well educated Irish immigrants.

BOBBY SANDS MEMORIAL

The MacBride Chapter INA, Rockland County, recently held its eighth annual Bobby Sands Memorial. The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass at Holy Eucharist Chapel was celebrated by Rev. Kenneth Loughman, whose homily evolved around the mysticism of Padraig Pearse and its perpetuation in the life and death of Bobby Sands. Rev. Maurice Burke, S.M.A., delivered an inspirational closing tribute to Bobby Sands and his comrades. The scriptural readings were done by playwright Desmond Starr and Peter Quinn of An Cumann Cabhrach. Liturgical music was provided by Janette Major and Brendan Foley.

Ray Meehan Contends for NY Secretary

At a recently-held meeting of the AOH, Suffolk County Board, Ray Meehan, presently New York State Treasurer, was unanimously endorsed for the position of New York State Secretary.

Ray is a long-time member of our Order and has held a variety of offices. These include state director; president, vice president, and secretary for both County and Division levels; treasurer and vice chairman of, the Metropolitan Regional Council; and Deputy National Organizer. He has also served on numerous committees at State and National Conventions.

Ray was a driving force in his own Division 8 in Suffolk County when they realized their dream of their own Hibernian Hall four years ago. He has served in many Corporation capacities in maintaining the hall. A 4th Degree member of the Knights of Columbus, Ray is also a past president of the Holy Name Society, and has been active with Scouts and Little League programs. He and his lovely wife Patricia are the proud parents of three daughters and a son, as well as proud grandparents of three grandsons.

Suffolk County's candidate for New York State Secretary, Ray Meehan, is a truly dedicated Hibernian who very much exemplifies the motto of our Order, Friendship, Unity, and Christian Charity. We appreciate your consideration for our candidate by the delegates assembled in Auburn, New York, in July 1989, for the 85th Biennial New York State Convention.

AOH National Editor To Be Honored

The Long Island Feis Committee is pleased to announce that David J. (Dave) Henshaw, National Editor of the Hibernian Digest will be the Feis's 1989 Honoree. It is with great pride that we honor this dedicated Hibernian and Irish activist whose deep love for Ireland is witnessed by his commitment to Irish Culture and the pursuit of Justice for the People of his Ancestral Homeland.

David Henshaw, we are honored to dedicate this day to you in recognition and appreciation of your leadership and dedication to the ideals we all hold so dear.

We know many of you will want to honor Dave in our Journal, so get your copy in early.

It is on this day that we, of the Irish-American Community, invite you to participate in this great Irish Cultural event consisting of song, dance and musical competition. In the past, our attendance has exceeded 15,000 people from the local tri-state area, who came to compete or enjoy the day's entertainment.

Financing an event of this magnitude is very costly. Our main fund raiser is the Souvenir Program Journal which is made available to all those who attend.

If you have placed an ad in our journal in the past, you know the importance of having your name, business or organization included. If you have not subscribed to our Journal before, we urge you to consider the benefits of placing an ad. The donation is small, considering the rewards. The MacBride Principles

The passage of the MacBride Principles Bill in the state of Vermont brings the count to twelve states and seventeen municipalities which have recognized the blatant discrimination against nationalist Catholics in Northern Ireland. The bill has passed in these legislative bodies by large majorities, countering the British denial that discrimination in employment exists in Northern Ireland.

The legislatures of New York, Michigan, Vermont, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Florida, New Jersey, Illinois, and Minnesota have passed the MacBride bills because never before in modern times has the story of the suffering people in Northern Ireland been brought to their attention with such compelling evidence. For the first time legislators are able to see our ally England as an oppressor, and to send the message in such legislation that, now that the facts are out and known, Britain has lost its day in court.

Despite the fact that bills are not enacted flippantly in our legislatures, that our state representatives are basing their action on facts, the British continue to connive to spend millions of dollars to stop our people from interfering in their policy of discrimination. As hard as they try, however, Britain cannot stop the tide of MacBride legislation making its way through our "legislative halls of justice" to the U.S. Congress where the final statement will be made — no condoned British oppression allowed here!

Those states in the process of examining the history of Northern Ireland and the MacBride bill are Indiana, California, Arizona, Pennsylvania, Wyoming, Utah, Texas, Iowa, Colorado, Oklahoma, Maryland, Nebraska, Wisconsin, and Washington. These legislatures will also recognize the bigotry of Margaret Thatcher's government in Northern Ireland and pass the bill.

We must ask ourselves: How many states and municipalities are investing our tax money in Northern Ireland? How many billions of our dollars are unwittingly subsidizing discrimination there? Perhaps someday, someone will put this figure together!

A simple stone in Drumcliff marks
The specter of that ageless voice
A stilling cold-eyed horseman

Transcendence of the noble realm
New dawn combines the cold night past
With radiance of rising sun
The swan has flown but swans still swim
In placid pools for wondrous gaze
The chilling silvery Gaelic moon
Restrains the surging, swirling tides
Of powerful Atlantic blasts
In ceaseless regularity
Despite eternal fickle light
Of centuries of Celtic grief
Aurora granted Irish strength
To that mystical symbolist

Notwithstanding cursed oppression
Zealously he withstood the blight
Erin's dreadful, strife-filled aeons
Did not intimidate his song
An ardent lover of life's charm
In Sligo's undulating hills
He explored ev'ry occult tract
And expressed the esoteric
Creative Celt in lunar mode
But still he clocked the time in

With visionary fervency
And solar objectivity
He has bequeathed to us his wealth
Of prodigious scintillation
He endlessly enchants the ear

Examining the Political Offense Exemption

By KENNETH ALLEN

The debate over the political offense exemption versus extradition, much like the question of Northern Ireland itself, is very complex. The exemption question has caused rumblings, not just in Anglo-American relations, but throughout the international political system for some time. Who is a political criminal? What standards are used to measure political crime? No universal criteria has ever been established to determine the politicality of an act but new questions are being raised. Should the political offense exemption exist at all? Have we seen the last of the exemption among the first-world nations whose recent treaties have severely limited its application?

To determine if a crime was political and if the exemption from extradition was warranted, American courts traditionally applied a two-step incidence test. The test was heavily based on In Re Castioni 1890, the famous case in which the British high court set precedence for what constituted a political act. The test requires the act first to be "contemporaneous with a violent political disturbance" and second be "incidental to it." This test came under severe criticism from the Reagan administration and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher after several members of the Irish Republican Army, including four convicted of murder, successfully avoided extradition in the last fifteen years. The American judiciary ruled that their offenses in Northern Ireland were of a political nature in that they were incidental to a violent political disturbance.

The growing frustration of both U.S. and British governments for the failure of the American courts to extradite convicted IRA members, resulted in a historic U.S. shift of extradition policy towards Great Britain. The Reagan administration took the decision out of the courts' hands with an amendment to the Anglo-American extradition treaty of 1972. The Senate, under considerable pressure from President Reagan, passed the Supplementary Treaty of Extradition with Great Britain in 1986. The supplementary treaty severely limits the application of the political offense exemption. The amendment lengthens the list of crimes which are automatically extraditable between the two countries. The list now includes hostage-taking, murder, manslaughter, malicious assault, possession of firearms or explosives, and serious property damage. The treaty was seen by political observers as Margaret Thatcher's reward for her staunch support and assistance of the U.S. during the bombing raid over Libya.

The treaty was, in fact, part of a wider strategy employed by the Reagan State Department to renegotiate on a state-by-state basis with "stable" democracies to limit the political offense exemption. The reasons given for this new strategy, reciprocity and international cooperation to thwart terrorism, calls us back to before the mid-eighteenth century when sovereigns constituted a brotherhood of nations who collaborated in the suppression of crimes against the state. Even Hugo Grotius, a most esteemed international jurist and himself a political refugee, wrote at the time that states have the duty either to extradite or prosecute persons who have committed "crimes by which another state is particularly injured."

This attitude changed with the downfall of the aristocracy throughout Europe and the rise of the revolutionary ideology in the late eighteenth century.

There were three base reasons for the birth of the political offense exemption. First, countries sought to protect fugitives from an unfair trial or persecution at home for an act done in the name of political ideology. Second, countries wanted to preserve their neutrality as to the internal politics of other countries. By having a well-defined policy of exemption, countries were able to avoid making sensitive foreign policy decisions with each episode. Third, the exemption clause granted refuge to those who had fought against an unjust or despotic authority. Legal writers have suggested that during the eighteenth century there was a romantic glorification of political offenders, based on a "naive" identification of political offenders with a liberal revolutionary and those who backed the exemption did not fully realize that political offenders would turn against the new liberal world order.

Many legal writers and jurists have called for reform of the way the political offense exemption is used. Some have called for the abolishment of the exemption altogether, if a fair trial for the fugitive can be guaranteed in the requesting state. Another proposal calls for more bi-lateral treaties, such as the Anglo-American amendment of 1986. These treaties list specified offenses that are automatically extraditable, but again extradition is contingent on assurances of a fair trial. A U.N. convention listing specified offenses as automatically extraditable has also been proposed. It is modeled on the European Convention for the Suppression of Terrorism which has been moderately successful in the extradition of offenders. Other proposals include the establishment of an international criminal court, having the trial outside the states in dispute, or requiring the asylum state to prosecute. All these proposals are contingent on the fugitive receiving a fair trial and escaping persecution for his political beliefs.

The new State Department strategy is based on the belief that among the "stable" democracies an international fugitive would receive a fair trial, despite the nature of his crime. This was the basis for the 1986 agreement with Great Britain. A closer look at the particulars of Northern Ireland, however, contradicts the belief that a member of the IRA would get a fair trial.

Is a trial in the "Diplock" courts considered fair? Can a fair trial be granted in a court where a single jurist acts as both judge and jury? Are fair trials being conducted in a court that convicts 90% of those they try? I would argue no, a fair trial cannot be guaranteed. Of the 90% convicted in the Diplock courts, 80% are on confessions, some of which Amnesty International has called brutally induced. The standards for the admissibility of evidence in the Diplock court are far less than all other courts in the British system. There can be no fair trial in a court where the silence of the accused is held against them.

I would argue that there can be no guarantee that IRA members would receive a fair trial in Northern Ireland. But it is also increasingly clear that the U.S. doesn't care. The U.S. has turned its back on justice and on due process by turning offenders, deemed politically motivated by our courts, over to Great Britain. Through this new policy, the U.S., born of a violent revolution itself, has turned its back on those who are trying to rid themselves of unjust rulers.

AOH and Undocumented Irish

The enactment of the 1965 Immigration and Nationality Act has made it almost impossible for young Irish people to immigrate legally to the United States in the 1980s. In the last few years, many thousands of these young people fleeing political unrest, discrimination, and violence in the North of Ireland and economic depression and unemployment in the South have come to the U.S. seeking a better life.

However, because of the 1965 Immigration Act, they come among us as undocumented aliens unable to participate in or contribute fully to the great nation that past generations of Irish immigrants gave their labor to build and their lives to defend. These young people live precarious lives fraught with danger, fear, and insecurity. They labor under a status that manifests itself in adverse social and mental effects on their lives.

The 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act (I.R.C.A.) further compounded this injustice. Under the amnesty program of this Act, only 600 Irish were eligible out of the 3 million undocumented aliens of all nationalities who applied. While the young Irish, both those in Ireland and those in the U.S., did reap some benefit from the Donnelly visa scheme of I.R.C.A. — securing up to 3.5 thousand visas — the vast majority of those in the U.S., at least 100,000, were left out in the cold.

In the last Congress the AOH, working with our allies in the American Irish Political Education Committee, the County Associations, the Emerald Societies, the Irish American Labor Coalition, the Irish American Unity Conference, the Irish Immigration Reform Movement, and with the assistance of Catholic Charities and the Irish Government, succeeded in passing a minor yet significant immigration bill, H.R. 5115. Of course the passage of this legislation would not have been possible without the cooperation and tremendous efforts of the many senators, congressmen, state and local representatives but, in particular, Senators D'Amato, Kennedy, Simon and Simpson, and Congressmen Berman, Donnelly, Fish, Mazzoli, Morrison and Schumer.

This legislation, H.R. 5115, provides for 30,000 extra Donnelly visas to be awarded over two years. These visas are currently being awarded to applicants who are on the reserve list of the original Donnelly visa scheme. The legislation also provides for the award of 20,000 extra visas over the next two years through the Berman Visa program. The deadline for the receipt of applications under this program was March 31st. A comprehensive informational campaign was organized by the I.I.R.M. and the A.O.H. throughout the month of March, and we are confident that some of our young undocumented immigrants will secure visas. However, it is important to realize that only a certain percentage of our young people will qualify and that effectively the Donnelly and Berman Visa programs are only a stop gap measure on the road to comprehensive immigration reform.

Currently, there are several pieces of legislation in both the U.S. Senate and U.S. House of Representatives, which, subject to beneficial amendments and alterations, could legalize many of our people and could establish a more just, equitable, and logical immigration policy.

These legislative measures include the Kennedy-Simpson Bill, S.358 and the Simon Bill, S.448, in the Senate and the Berman Bill, H.R. 672, in the House of Representatives. These three bills propose, in varying forms, the creation of an independent visa category that would benefit our immigrants to a greater or lesser degree.

A somewhat different yet also helpful measure is the legislation H.R.1306 which was introduced into the House by Rep. Ben Gilman (R-NY). This measure, if enacted, would allow for the enlistment of undocumented immigrants into the U.S. Armed Forces, the Reserves, the National Guards, and State Militias. After three years honorable service, the immigrant would be eligible for permanent residence status. It is expected that Representatives Fish (R-NY) and Schumer (D-NY) will introduce their own bills in the immediate future. It is also believed that the Administration is formulating its own proposals.

At our National Convention in July of 1988, as well as being elected National Director, I was also appointed by the National President, Mr. Michael Coogan, to the position of Chairman of the A.O.H. National Immigration Committee. The National President also appointed two deputy chairmen, Jim Larkin of the Connecticut A.O.H. and Jack Meehan of the Massachusetts A.O.H. Previous to their appointments, both these men had considerable experience in the immigration field through their work in their respective state boards and as members of the I.I.R.M.

The objective of the two national deputies and myself is to ensure the maximum participation of the A.O.H. in the lobbying campaign to ensure the passage of a comprehensive, beneficial immigration reform bill through this 101st Congress. We envisage a role in this campaign for every A.O.H. member and every A.O.H. Division across the U.S. However, in order to realize this maximum participation, we must be organized effectively. With such organization in mind, we ask that all divisions across the country appoint a chairman of immigration. This particular officer would be responsible for maintaining contact with the National Immigration Committee. The National Committee would provide this officer with regular updates on the progress of the lobbying campaign and would alert him as regards any specific or strategic lobbying action. This officer would then be responsible for disseminating any information and communicating requests for action to all members of his division.

As you know, the nature of legislative lobbying is such that spontaneous, organized, and decisive action is often necessary and, with this in mind, we ask all such chairmen of immigration to supply their names, addresses, and telephone numbers to Patrick Hurley, A.O.H. Immigration Committee, c/o 3301, Greenpoint Avenue, Long Island City, New York 11101.

Pat Hurley is also a member of the National A.O.H. Immigration Committee and someone with whom I will be working closely.

I cannot emphasize enough the importance of the immigration reform campaign and its objectives, nor can I stress enough the necessity for the A.O.H. to become fully involved. We must obtain comprehensive immigration reform in this Congress. At a time when U.S. Department of Labor studies are

Design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their Right, it is their Duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future Security. Such has been the patient Sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the Necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The History of the present King of Great Britain is a History of repeated Injuries and Usurpations, all having in direct Object the Establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid World.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public Good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing Importance, unless suspended in their Operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the Accommodation of large Districts of People, unless those People would relinquish the Right of Representation in the Legislature, a Right inestimable to them, and formidable to Tyrants only.

He has called together Legislative Bodies at Places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the Depository of their public Records, for the sole Purpose of fatiguing them into Compliance with his Measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly Firmness his Invasions on the Rights of the People.

He has refused for a long Time, after such Dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative Powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the Dangers of Invasion from without, and Convulsions within.

He has endeavoured to prevent the Population of these States; for that Purpose obstructing the Laws of Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their Migrations hither, and raising the Conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the Tenure of their Offices, and the Amount and Payment of their Salaries.

He has erected a Multitude of new Offices, and sent hither Swarms of Officers to harass our People, and eat out their Substance.

He has kept among us, in Times of Peace, Standing Armies, without the consent of our Legislatures. He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil Power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a Jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution, and unacknowledged by our Laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:

For quartering large Bodies of Armed Troops among us:
For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from Punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:
For cutting off our Trade with all Parts of the World:
For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:
For depriving us, in many Cases, of the Benefits of Trial by Jury:
For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended Offences:
For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an arbitrary Government, and enlarging its Boundaries, so as to render it at once an Example and fit Instrument for introducing the same absolute Rule into these Colonies:
For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:
For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with Power to legislate for us in all Cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.

He has plundered our Seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our Towns, and destroyed the Lives of our People.

He is, at this Time, transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the Works of Death, Desolation, and Tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty and Perfidy, scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous Ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized Nation.

He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the High Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the Executioners of their Friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestic Insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the Inhabitants of our Frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known Rule of Warfare, is an undistinguished Destruction, of all Ages, Sexes and Conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions we have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble Terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated Injury. A Prince, whose Character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the Ruler of a free People.

Nor have we been wanting in Attentions to our British Brethren. We have warned them from Time to Time of Attempts by their Legislature to extend an unwarrantable Jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the Circumstances of our Emigration and Settlement here. We have appealed to their native Justice and Magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the Ties of our common Kindred to disavow these Usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our Connections and Correspondence. They too have been deaf to the Voice of Justice and Consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the Necessity, which denounces our consent of our Legislatures.

James Hoban White House Architect

By BRIAN K. LONERGAN

During their visit to Washington in 1812, the British left their traditional calling card — the destruction of property. One of the better buildings to go up in flames was the presidential mansion, later to be known as the "White House." This residence was restored after the War under the direction of James Hoban, who was also the original architect.

James Hoban was born in 1762 and while growing up in Ireland, became attracted to architecture. He studied in Dublin at this profession before emigrating to the United States. Hoban became a successful architect in the Philadelphia area. He moved on to Washington where, in time, he entered a competition for architects interested in the building of the new presidential home. His design was successful and from 1793 to 1800 he oversaw the work of construction. After the disastrous British arson, Hoban directed a massive restoration plan to restore the charred framework to its original beauty. Workmen finished the edifice in 1817 by giving it a distinctive white surface. He is said to have been responsible for painting the presidential mansion white to obliterate the smoke marks from the burning. From then, the name "The White House" remained.

In September of 1981, the United States Post Office issued a commemorative eighteen-cent stamp showing a portrait of Hoban flanked by a sketch of his "White House". Hoban's design of the presidential residence is said to have been modeled on Leinster House in Dublin, once a Fitzgerald home, now the home of the Irish parliament. The design on the stamp features the White House as it was in Hoban's time. A similar stamp was issued by Ireland. Thus the link between the House of Leinster and the House of Washington had completed a full historical circle.

Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of Mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace, Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the Rectitude of our Intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly Publish and Declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be, Free and Independent States; that they are absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political Connection between them and the State of Great-Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. MEDIA PROBLEMS

Dear Mr. Henshaw:

The March-April edition contained a good deal of excellent information about abortion — the killing of the unborn — and I thank you for it.

The Viewpoint Column by Mr. Cockburn described press bias and the genteel handling of the British role in Northern Ireland by the Fourth Estate. Right to Life groups know well press bias and empathize with you.

Here are a few examples of press bias regarding the Right to Life:

Law — The media constantly refers to abortion as being legal in only the first trimester of pregnancy, when it is legal for all nine months of pregnancy. In the Washington Post from one day to the next you can read conflicting versions of the law, even by the same reporter.

On Channel 5 in Washington, D.C., there is a reporter with a Hibernian name — Patrick McGrath. He gave two contradictory versions of the law within a minute in the same report.

Abortion Statistics — Government statistics show there were less than 100,000 abortions in 1969 and 620,000 in 1973. Yet the media continues to claim there were over 1,000,000 abortions annually during the 1960's. Abortion was legalized in 1973 and the media would have us believe that the number of abortions decreased by 40% in the year it was legalized.

Maternal Deaths — The media inflates the abortion figures during the 1960's to try and give credibility to the claim of 5,000 to 10,000 maternal deaths annually. While every abortion is a tragedy, and if the mother dies that is a double tragedy, government statistics show that in 1966 there were 120 maternal deaths due to abortion.

Child Abuse — The media would have us believe that the violence of abortion leads to less violence against the born. Actually, what we all know — violence leads to more violence — is proven again by abortion/child abuse statistics. Child abuse incident growth paralleled the growth in abortion from 1974 to 1978 and then the child abuse incidents increased at a faster rate than abortion through 1985, the year of latest statistics.

Public Support — The television media constantly claim there is widespread support for abortion and it is supported by a wide majority. Actually, a correct statement is "the vast majority opposes the vast majority of abortions". Over 97% of abortions are done for contraceptive reasons. There are about 1.6 million abortions annually and 97% of 1.6 million is over 1.5 million. Some 89% of the people oppose abortion as a contraceptive.

Polls show that in difficult situations where great faith in God is required to continue the pregnancy (rape, incest, health, life) a large majority want abortion to be legal.

In summary, the pro-abortion position as promoted by the media is founded on lies and more lies, but truth eventually wins.

ARTISTS AGAINST PRO-LIFE

Dear Sir and Brother:

May the peace of the Lord be with you. As you are well aware on April 9th, 1989, Pro choice Pro death groups conducted a march on our Nation's Capital. By it's very character and essence we find this action extremely offensive to all things that Catholics cherish and believe.

Leading their presence and support to this event were a number of TV and movie stars who should no longer be supported by those of us who violently oppose murder and abortion.

Among those who attended are Morgan Fairchild, Donna Mills, Kelley McGillis, Cybil Sheperd, Susan Sarandon, Marlo Thomas, Polly Bergan, Terry Garr, Veronica Hamel, Valerie Harper and Whoopie Goldberg.

Furthermore we feel that it is incumbent on us all to let the sponsors know how we feel, and if necessary we will not choose their products at the market place, as long as their employees offend our Religious Beliefs.

We urge you through the avenue of the Hibernian to promote our thoughts on this matter. Thank you.

U.S. LEGISLATOR VISITS N. IRELAND

Dear Mr. Henshaw:

As we celebrate St. Patrick's Day 1989, I wanted to let you know about my recent activities in New York and Washington of concern to the Irish community.

As you may know, I traveled to Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland in early January. It was an enlightening, emotional experience that I will never forget. I had the opportunity to meet with a broad spectrum of individuals and organizations, and I saw first hand the violence and terror that has become part of daily life there. I returned with a personal commitment to do everything I can to end the occupation and the suffering in Northern Ireland.

It was a particular delight traveling with Paul O'Dwyer. Together we made strong points at every level of officialdom. Walking the Falls Road and meeting in peoples' homes in West Belfast and the Ardoyne was especially moving.

In February I had the privilege of visiting Joseph Doherty in his detention cell in New York City. I was particularly appalled that while Joe has never been convicted of any crime in the U.S., he has been held for six years in a prison-like environment, with almost no contact with the outside world. I have requested a meeting with Attorney General Richard Thornburgh to discuss the details of Joe's case and to appeal for his release on bail while the legal proceeding continues.

Last week, I was pleased to participate in a hearing on Ireland before the Foreign Affairs Committee, of which I am an active member. I raised many difficult but necessary questions about the International Fund for Ireland (IFI). I asked the State Department representatives about the political discrimination I personally found with regards to Conway Mills and other sites — projects that have applied for IFI funds but have been turned down because of their political affiliations. I intend to add language to the upcoming Foreign Assistance Act to state that Congress will not tolerate political discrimination in the International Fund for Ireland. I have also called for future Foreign Affairs Committee hearings on this vital issue.

I want you to know that these actions could not have happened without your support and encouragement. I look forward to working by your side in the coming year on these and other vital concerns.

LOBBYING FOR JOE DOHERTY

Mr. Edward P. Romaine
County Legislator
640 Montauk Highway
Shirley, New York 11967

Dear Mr. Romaine:

This is in further reference to your letter dated January 21, 1989, concerning the case of Mr. Joseph Patrick Doherty.

The Board of Immigration Appeals decided on November 14, 1988 to grant the motion to reopen Mr. Doherty's case to allow him an opportunity to apply for political asylum. The Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service affirmed that decision and the matter was certified to the Attorney General on December 6, 1988 and has not yet been returned.

We appreciate the interest and concern you have shown in this matter and will further review the possibility of bail for Mr. Doherty.

If we may be of assistance in the future, please do not hesitate to communicate with this office.

ASSEMBLYMEN ANSWER N.Y. POST REGARDING DOHERTY

Your editorial, "Albany endorses terrorism" (March 18), was a broadside attack on the Irish Republican Army.

The editorial implied that the state Assembly was endorsing the IRA when it unanimously passed a resolution calling for justice in the matter of Joseph Patrick Doherty, an IRA member incarcerated in a U.S. jail. The editorial, however, never discussed the actual facts of the case.

The real issue in the case is not the IRA or the troubles in Northern Ireland or the presence of British troops.

The issue is essentially whether American laws and legal principles of due process and equal protection are being summarily ignored in the Doherty case. In fact, they are, and this should be of concern to all Americans.

The legislators who voted for the resolution believe Doherty is being treated in a disgraceful manner. They base this judgment on the following facts:

1. Doherty has been held for six years in the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan without ever being charged with or convicted of any criminal offense against the laws of the United States.

2. The killing of a British Army captain, in which Doherty participated, and his subsequent escape from a British prison have been ruled by the U.S. federal courts to have been political acts and therefore not extraditable offenses under the

FAREWELL OF IRISH PRESIDENT TO HIS MOTHER ON EVE OF EXECUTION

The following is a farewell letter that Patrick H. Pearse, President of the Irish Republic, wrote to his mother on the eve of his execution. It is dated Kilmainham Prison, May 3, 1916, and is as follows:

"I have been hoping up to now it would be possible to see you again, but it does not seem possible. Good-bye, dear, dear mother. Through you I say goodbye to Wow Wow (a sister), Mary Brigid Willie, Miss B. Mical, cousin Maggine and everyone at St. Enda's. I hope and believe Willie and the St. Enda boys will be all safe.

"I have written two papers about financial affairs and one about my books which I want you to get. With them are a few poems which I want added to the poems in MS in my bookcase. You asked me to write a little poem which would seem to be said by you about me. I have written it, and a copy is in Arbour Hill Barracks with other papers.

"I just received holy communion. I am happy except for the great grief of parting from you. This is the death I should have asked for if God had given me the choice of all deaths — to die a soldier's death for Ireland and for freedom. We have done right. People will say hard things of us now, but later on will praise us. Do not grieve for all this but think of it as a sacrifice which God asked of me and of you.

"Good-bye again, dear mother. May God bless you for your great love for me and for your great faith, and may He remember all you have so bravely suffered. I hope soon to see papa and in a little while we shall all be together again. I have not words to tell you of my love for you and how my heart yearns for you all. I will call to you in my heart at the last moment."

political-exception clause which existed in the extradition treaty between the U.S. and the United Kingdom.

The judge clearly distinguished between actions that would have been considered "terroristic" and the ones in which Doherty actually participated (Matter of Doherty, 599 F. Supp. 270, 276 (S.D.N.Y. 1984).

Further, the court that scrutinized Doherty's actions and the history of the current phase of the Irish "troubles" ruled that "the facts of this case present the assertion of the political-offense exception in its most classic form" and that he is not to be extradited to the United Kingdom.

3. The executive branch under President Reagan summarily ignored the court ruling even when the late Appellate Judge Henry J. Friendly, the federal judiciary's acknowledged expert in extradition law, authored a unanimous 3-0 opinion which upheld the original decision in favor of Doherty, pronouncing it a "careful analysis" of the law.

4. Finally, an immigration judge and two successive panels of the Board of Immigration Appeals have rejected the government's unprecedented demand that Doherty be deported only to the United Kingdom and the last BIA ruling, dated Nov. 14, 1988, stated that Doherty should be allowed to apply for political asylum.

Doherty's case is being handled solely in accordance with the political wishes of the British government, not in a manner showing respect for U.S. law and our judicial system.

Clearly, if Doherty had been an American citizen under the exact same circumstances, the Bill of Rights would have protected him and he would have been released within days of incarceration.

CONGRESS MONITORS BRITISH GOVERNMENT

Mr. Eugene M. Fahey
Councilmember at Large

Dear Mr. Fahey:

Thank you for your recent correspondence providing me with material regarding the Buffalo City Council's recent Resolution on H.R. 725, the Northern Ireland Fair Employment Practices Act and H.R. 1156, the Northern Ireland Fair Employment Incentives Act. I appreciated receiving this information.

I share your concern about continuing discrimination and employment practices in Northern Ireland. The Subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East, of which I am the chairman, tries to follow developments in Northern Ireland and, particularly with respect to this issue, closely. We are eagerly watching to see how the British government moves to implement the new Fair Employment legislation for Northern Ireland, introduced in the House of Parliament earlier this year.

Once again, I appreciate your bringing this matter to my attention. With best regards,

Dear Mr. Finucane:

I have been asked to respond to your letter of January 25 to President Bush in which you requested a meeting with an appropriate official to discuss U.S. policy towards Ireland. I and other officials of the State Department welcome opportunities to discuss all foreign policy issues with the American people of all backgrounds. But before proceeding to arrange the meeting you propose I believe it would be useful to take this opportunity to comment on several issues you raised in your letter.

The U.S. advocates peaceful solutions to the political, economic, and social issues of Northern Ireland. We believe such solutions are possible today. For that reason we support the Anglo-Irish Agreement which states that "any change in the status of Northern

Message from Freedom for All Ireland Committee Chairman

Fifteen years ago, the presidents of the Irish organizations in our county discussed and decided upon having a monument erected dedicated to those who gave their lives in the cause of Irish freedom. Nassau County District Attorney Denis Dillon headed that committee and the lovely monument is the site of a ceremony held there every Easter Monday, which includes speakers, bag pipers and laying of a wreath at the monument, located in Mineola, N.Y.

Fifteen years later, we thought that it would be a fitting gesture to plant a tree dedicated to these brave men and women. A committee of three was formed from Division #3, consisting of Michael O'Rourke, P.J. O'Rourke and myself to ask permission to have this tree planted. Permission was granted by our County Executive, and we are pleased to announce that we will have the Dedication Ceremony on Sunday, July 23rd at 3:00 P.M. in North Woodmere Park, No. Woodmere, the site where the tree has been planted. Hon. Denis Dillon will be the keynote speaker and Hon. Peter King will read the Proclamation. We would be pleased if as many as possible can attend.

Please give some thought to having something similar done in your area. We have to keep informing the public about the atrocities that were suffered by our brothers and sisters in their fight for freedom, a fight that has not yet ended inasmuch as the 32 counties of Ireland are still divided; and there will never be peace while this situation exists. However, let us pay homage to those who sacrificed their lives toward the cause of Irish Freedom. We offer our prayers for them and for the eventual reunification of Ireland.

Joseph Doherty

If you have fears you fail to serve, forego them -
no longer an unknown among so many valiant - never again to be a shadow - your appointed destiny to be intractable surrogate for millions -
"When the time comes, the child comes" - the sacrifice of anonymity and privacy is trivial - as buried as Bobby Sands
you live together in affirmation, waging a far greater campaign with far greater inspiration from your tombs than ever you did in Ulster - surely, you will be spoken of among the people!

Know what Christ knew, know what Pearse knew - transcendence - you have become magnified
in your sacrifice,
awakened more people, gained more illustration than any occasional, corner victory:
embarrassing your enemy, exposing them in their righteous hypocrisy to a world they once thought to rule!
(My father, a Sligo man, used to tell me
'the sun never sets on the British Empire' - then pause - and conclude -
'because you can't trust them in the dark!')
And all this you have fulfilled in New York!
Truthfully, could you have done the like in Belfast?

You have multiplied the sum of your parts, cloned yourself from obscurity to a brilliant symbolic visibility - whether you fancy it or not.

You all believed in the divinity of your people - though you are no longer the architect of your own destiny, you serve a nation's heart - may we prove worthy,
though history provides no precedent.

But - if that mulish woman persists in tyranny and turpitude, let her own Book speak for us all:
Pearse recognized King David's aspiration in driven desperation -
"That thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thine enemies, and that the tongue of thy dogs may be red through the same."

Reader's Digest Addresses Mrs. Thatcher

Reader's Digest's two-page spread in the New York Times (April 19, 1989) read like Margaret Thatcher's canonization announcement. While there may well be instances of solid achievement under her administration, there appears to have been very little follow-up by the Digest interviewers on some of the Prime Minister's statements.

With specific regard to the North of Ireland, Mrs. Thatcher was unchallenged in stating: "In Northern Ireland, every single person has full civil rights and an equal vote. The reason some of them turn to terrorism is that they do not like the results which democracy gives." Similarly, members of Northern Ireland's minority would have been astonished to read her comments regarding "a freer society with a proper rule of law and a genuine respect for human rights." It was convenient for Britain's leader to ignore the fact of juryless trials in the North of Ireland. Her government was recently condemned by the European Court for Human Rights for its policy of holding citizens for up to seven days without specifying the charges against them. John Stalker's bestseller clearly depicted the "shoot to kill" policy pursued by Northern Ireland's law enforcement agencies, and institutionalized employment discrimination has, likewise, been documented.

In addition, individuals in the British media would have gasped at Thatcher's references to "a much freer society" inasmuch as one of the major criticisms of British journalists involves the Prime Minister's curbs on the media. Indeed, Mrs. Thatcher has even withdrawn one's right to remain silent when accused of a crime.

Was there no will whatsoever on the part of the Reader's Digest interviewers to probe for more accurate responses or to challenge what they were being told? Are they misinformed, uninformed, or unconcerned about the facts as they relate to the North of Ireland? What you do about your own subscription to the Reader's Digest is your own decision. However, each state board, county board, and division should certainly write to inform the publication of their displeasure:

The Reader's Digest is not merely another periodical. Rather, it is an American tradition. Its readers and subscribers deserve better and they obviously would have been better served had a more objective and determined interview been conducted with Prime Minister Thatcher.

Remembering the Past The Weekly Summary

BY PETER O'ROURKE

In 1921, as the Tan War entered its third year, the infamous Black and Tans and Auxiliaries received official British government backing and encouragement for their campaign of terror and murder in Ireland through the RIC journal, The Weekly Summary.

In April 1920, Sir Hamar Greenwood, a Canadian of Welsh parentage, was appointed Chief Secretary for Ireland. A hard-bitten careerist, he, in a desperate attempt to defeat the armed struggle of the IRA, authorized official 'reprisals' against the nationalist population and sanctioned a shoot-to-kill policy against republicans.

In The Weekly Summary, which he started in January 1921 as he explained, to "revive the morale" of the 'police' force in Ireland, Sinn Féin and the IRA were described as "crime incarnate" for whose members "the rope and the bullet are all too good."

It was widely circulated to RIC and military barracks throughout the country with the aim of goading the crown forces into more violent action in Ireland. The Auxiliaries and Tans, whose object, according to the Weekly Summary, was to make "Ireland a hell for rebels to live in," soon realized the extent of their licence-to-kill and the journal kept their temper at fever pitch.

Shoot-To-Kill Policy
The Weekly Summary taught the police that they had licence "to use force to the uttermost, force without stint" — in present day terms a shoot-to-kill policy. The effects of the new policy were immediately evident. For the Auxiliaries and Tans the hunting of republicans was indulged in as a form of sport and the inflicting of indignities on young and old came to be regarded as a normal feature of the programme of oppression. During February and early March 1921, 26 Volunteers were murdered by the crown forces, while countless homes, shops and business premises were burned to the ground in 'reprisal' for IRA operations.

BOBBY SANDS

O come tell me, Maggie Thatcher,
Tell me why you hurry so,
Do you see the ghosts of brave young men
Wherever you go?

We remember nineteen eighty-one
And the death of Bobby Sands.
How one word from you would spare his life,
His fate was in your hands.

But instead you swore an awful oath
That Bobby he must die,
Though the Pope himself did plead for him.
With his mother standing by.

I recall quite well the day he died.
'Twas in the month of May,
The people gathered round the jail
The rosary to pray.

No, we won't forget you, Bobby,
We will never let you down,
Though your suffering is all over
And you wear the Martyr's crown.

But suppose now, Mrs. Thatcher,
That those ghosts should fade
from view,
It's your conscience, if you have one,
That will surely make you rue.

For the way you tortured Bobby
Sands
And would not set him free;
His memory will be fresh and green
And live in history.

While Irishmen will curse your name,
As they did the Black and Tans,
Unless you try to make amends
For the death of Bobby Sands.

So if you want to ease your guilt,
I'll tell you what to do:
Take your troops from out of Belfast
And from all of Ulster, too.

Or the fighting will continue
Till they all march off to hell,
Then we'll shout revenge for
Bobby Sands
And the land he loved so well!

Patrick Beary

(Member of Committee on American Principles of Queens Co. Bar Association and serves as Administrative Law Judge, City of New York).

Week after week, the Weekly Summary carried utterly fabricated accounts of IRA attacks on civilians and against the Protestant community which were calculated to arouse RIC personnel and others to anger. The vilest of slanders against republican leaders were punned and crown forces were actively encouraged to carry out 'reprisals' — the official term for looting and murder.

This black propaganda publication of Dublin Castle continued to be published until the Truce in July 1921. The British government sponsored Weekly Summary first appeared on January 21st, 1921, 67 years ago this week.

Father Brennan Was Former LAOH Chaplain

Rev. Silvan Brennan, 81, died recently at St. Francis Hospital in Hartford, Conn. A member of the Passionist order, he pronounced his religious vows Sept. 4, 1928. Following his seminary studies he was ordained a priest April 28, 1934.

Before moving to New York two years ago, Father Brennan lived for 38 years at St. Joseph's Monastery in Baltimore. For the past two years, he was a confessor and counselor at a Passionist retreat in Jamaica, N.Y.

As chaplain at Baltimore's Bon Secours Hospital, he met, counseled and prayed with thousands of patients over the years. He was active in a number of local groups, including the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Council of the Knights of Columbus. He was recently named an honorary life member of the Knights of Columbus.

Father Silvan also served as State Chaplain for the AOH and LAOH State Boards of Maryland. From 1980 to 1982 he was the National Chaplain for the LAOH. In recognition of his Fiftieth Anniversary to the priesthood, the AOH Baltimore City Board appointed Father Silvan as the Grand Marshal of Baltimore's St. Patrick's Parade. He is survived by nieces and nephews.

Margaret Judge, Past Nat'l Secretary, Dies

Margaret Mary Conway Judge of Akron, Ohio died peacefully in her sleep on April 22, 1989. She was 82 years old.

Margaret was a lifelong resident of Akron and a charter member of the Mark Heffernan Division in Summit County. She was a past county president, past state president and past national secretary. Of her many interests and projects, the one most dear to her was her affiliation with the Hibernians. Her heritage was very important to her. As a true Hibernian, Margaret lived our motto of Friendship, Unity and Christian Charity to the fullest every day of her life.

Other memberships included St. Mary's Catholic Church, St. Monica's Guild, Catholic Career Women, Professional Secretaries, Tire Town Chapter, International Institute Women's Auxiliary Board and the B.F. Goodrich Retirees. Margaret was a retired secretary from that company with over 40 years service.

Art Judge, Margaret's husband, preceded her in death 25 years ago. She is survived by her sisters, Rita Flanagan and Blanche Smith, nieces and nephews.

Margaret had planned her own funeral a year or so ago. She wrote her own obituary, chose her casket, and chose what she was to wear right down to her accessories. She wanted yellow roses and to be laid out two nights "so that everyone could see how pretty she looked." She would have been pleased, as she looked like a sleeping beauty. The funeral service was beautiful and the church was full. The heavens opened for Margaret as the rain poured all morning. The sun began to shine almost immediately following the graveside service. Margaret's nephew, Michael Flanagan, gave the eulogy. The eulogy was not included in Margaret's funeral plans. However, as Michael put it, "I know she won't mind because anything her nephews and nieces wanted or did was always just fine."

Margaret will be sorely missed by all those who knew her. She is a legend in Akron and was held in high esteem by Hibernians from all across the nation.

I would be remiss if I did not tell you of my feelings for Margaret. I loved Margaret Judge. She was my friend. Her death has left a void in my life that cannot be filled. I will always remember her smile, her refinement, her gentle manners and the way she always looked out for me. I miss you, Margaret!

Marion Guilfoyle's Death Mourned As Great Loss

Physically, she wasn't very big. She was under five feet tall but when Marion I. Guilfoyle died on April 19, 1989, the Hibernians of New York State felt they had lost a giant.

Marion Irene Guilfoyle was born in Staten Island, New York and moved to the Bronx in 1928 where she resided at the time of her death. She joined the Lt. Patrick J. Walsh, Division 29, LAOH in 1949 and almost at once got involved in Hibernian activities at all levels. She filled most offices on the Division and County levels and upon being elected to the State Board, filled every office, culminating in the Presidency in 1972. The following year, New York State opted to hold the Biennial State Conventions in alternate years from the National Convention. For this reason, Marion served only one year as State President. In 1977 she was awarded National Life Membership in the Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Marion was a graduate of Fordham Law School and admitted to practice before the New York State and Federal Courts, as well as the United States Supreme Court. She worked in the Head Reference Section of the U.S. Attorney's Office, Southern District, and later was Counsel to the New York Bureau of Casualty Underwriters. From 1977 until her retirement in January 1988, Marion was Staff Attorney and Equal Opportunity Coordinator at the United States Supreme Court of International Trade.

Each of us has our own special memories of Marion I. Guilfoyle but one that all of us can share is that of Marion singing "The Sidewalks of New York" as she did a soft shoe dance and also leading the "Chorus" in a medley of George M. Cohan's favorite oldies, "You're A Grand Old Flag" and "I'm A Yankee Doodle Dandy."

She will be sorely missed because all of us who knew Marion loved her for her vitality, enthusiasm and dedication to our Noble Order.

1988-89 Irish History Essay Contest Winners Announced

In announcing the results of the National Irish History essay contest, National Historian Dorothy Fowler shared the following details. There were 19 essays on the grade school level and 18 high school. Twelve states participated, and eight had winners. The judges, and she herself, were very impressed with the entries. The papers held their interest to the end, the facts were well documented and there was excellent use of resource material.

In addition to letters of congratulations and certificates of award and checks, letters were sent to all who participated encouraging them to enter again when the contest reopens.

Historian Fowler thoroughly enjoyed her drive to Conception, MO, to deliver the essays for judging. "Conception Abbey sits on a knoll overlooking a lake and a thousand acres of land — so serene and peaceful!" she stated.

The essay winners were as follows:

Grade School Level
Subject: Fr. Flanagan, Founder of Boys Town
1st Place: Sean Elsbernd, 44 Vista Verde Ct., San Francisco, CA 94131
2nd Place: Michael J. Covington, 194 Woods Drive, Annapolis, MD 21403

Hibernian Women

Mary E. Bradley
National President

DEPUTY MARSHAL Mary Heckner, Division 14, Baltimore left, represented the LAOH in the St. Patrick's Day Parade. With her is Mary Pat Clarke, Division 4, the first woman to be elected president of the Baltimore City Council.

In the past few months I've spent some time reading minutes. State, County and Division levels. The history of our Order is truly fascinating. There is probably no way that a new member can find a true interest in the material without some help and understanding but for someone who has been a member for a while and become involved in the County and/or State workings, it is a trip through the past that can't be replaced. Persons come alive. They are there before you. They had decisions to make and they made them then. Their successes and problems appear on the very next page. You suddenly find the reason that things happened then and why they are probably still happening now. You also find how little things cost in comparison to today's prices.

There is a familiar saying that those who don't know history are condemned to repeat it. Those that do know it or at least of it, are destined to understand and work to circumvent the same problems as they reappear. Some of the ideas of the last fifty years are exactly what people need today — an adventure into the past to leave the hustle and bustle of the 1980's.

We are following in the footsteps of many great women, many unknown outside their own states. They offer us an opportunity to share the past while planning for the future.

Historians of the Order should take the time to read some of the past and perhaps import it to current members.

Go back and find out what the original meeting was like. How many were there? What was the standing of the Division/County at the completion of the first year? What were their plans? Where are they now? It is truly a trip through time. Those sisters were most likely as interested in the Order as we are now.

They can give us insight into ways to deal with the "generation gap" and an enduring hope for our own future. They have already been there.

St. Dymphna Division, a newly-formed LAOH group, was installed on January 19 in Bradenton. Officers are: Mary Finnerty, president; Loretta Banbrick, vice-president; Dorothy Kitchenman, secretary; Elizabeth Lavella, treasurer; Margaret Askin, historian. Chairpersons are Jane Donahue, missions, and Sheila Kipferi, Catholic Action; Eileen Laurino, mistress-at-arms and Elizabeth Finan, sentinel. The first social event for this group was a Valentine's Dance given by Our Lady of Knock Division in Pinellas County.

The Palm Bay LAOH, jointly with the men's AOH group, hosted a bonny St. Patrick's Dance, March 17 at St. Joseph's Hall. Music by Bobby & Susie was lively and the floor crowded. Master of Ceremonies Jerry Costlow, president of his division, prevailed on various attendees to render Irish songs. The basket of cheer was won by James Brumaster.

The LAOH will sponsor a booth at the Eau Gallie Flea Market in April to raise funds for its ongoing Mission and other humanitarian gifts.

Proceeding the Annual St. Patrick's Dance, both men and women marched in the St. Patrick's Day Parade held in downtown Melbourne and sponsored by Shamrocks of Brevard.

This 4th annual event brought out the military and the bagpipes — and green, green everywhere.

The women of LAOH contribute each month with food for the South Brevard Sharing Center. This month our contributions will be baby items, which baskets of goodies are presented to several needy mothers with newborns.

Officers for 88-89 are: Kathleen Cullina, president; Paula Fitzmaurice, vice president; Isobel Carroll, Secretary; Katherine Gokhulsingh, financial secretary; Gerry Shevlin, treasurer; Inez McGovern, historian; Missions Chairwoman Catherine O'Connor; Catholic Action, Kathleen Keville; Sentinel Eleanor Daly; and Mistress-at-Arms Catherine Jones.

NEW PORT RICHEY, FL: Anne-Marie O'Brien has been elected president of the St. Brigid's division, LAOH of Pasco County.

Other officers elected for 1989 were Jeanmarie Whitmore, vice president; Helen Creighton, recording secretary; Kay Connolly of Spring Hill, Hernando County, chairwoman of Missions; Mary Gargan, chairwoman of Catholic Action; Doris Daly, financial secretary; Frances Duane, treasurer; Elsie McFadden, Irish historian; Margaret O'Keefe, mistress at arms, and Theresa Benn, sentinel.

Mrs. Connolly was also installed as recording secretary of the Ladies Hibernians State Board in Florida during the AOH State Board meeting in Fort Lauderdale.

INSTALLATION of new officers for St. Dymphna Division LAOH, Bradenton, Florida. President is Mary Finnerty and vice president, Loretta Banbrick.

New York Juniors Elect Officers

Our Lady of Knock Juniors of Division 15 LAOH, Whitestone, held their installation of officers recently at St. Robert Bellarmine Church Hall in Bayside. The Division was organized just a year ago by Mrs. Bridget Kearney, president of Division 15 LAOH.

The following officers were installed by the National LAOH Vice President Dolores E. Voelker: President Eileen Sullivan; Vice President Jennifer Sheehan; Treasurer/Financial Secretary Patricia McLoughlin; Secretary Tara Kearney; Irish Historian Attracta O'Connell; Chairman of Missions Marie Reilly; Chairman of Catholic Action Allison Rubin; Mistress-at-Arms Regina McInnerney and Sentinel Patty Brieza.

The Junior Division is comprised of girls between 6 and 16 years of age who are Irish by birth or descent or the daughter of a Hibernian (either parent). Their projects include learning about Irish music, literature, step dancing, visiting nursing homes and hospitals, etc. Although this group was only organized six months, it was awarded second prize in the Banner Contest at the National Convention in Cleveland in July 1988.

For additional information on the Juniors, call Mrs. Bridget Kearney, 746-3837.

IRISH CRYSTAL

Legend attributes the discovery of the secret of glassmaking to a Phoenician sailor who was building a fire on a sand beach using blocks of nitre (potassium nitrate) as a fireplace. The sand, which was piled around the outside of the blocks, reacted with the nitre under the heat of the fire. When the shining trickle of glassy liquid caught the sailor's eye, he tried again and again until he learned how to produce this new material on a repetitive basis.

The discovery of the blowpipe in 30 B.C. removed glass from the luxury list and prefaced the First Golden Age of Glass which lasted for the first four centuries A.C., mainly in those countries of the Eastern Mediterranean area under Roman rule. Little is known of the glass industry between the decline of the Roman Empire and the Middle Ages. Glass manufacture had developed in Venice and by the fourteenth century, an elaborate guild system of glassworkers had been established. This coincided with the beginning of the Second Golden Age of Glass.

By the mid-1600s, glassmaking had spread to Northern Europe and England where Venetian-style glass was produced. Then, in 1674, a new type of glass was developed by an Englishman, George Ravenscroft, by changing the usual ingredients. This glass, called Leaded Glass, contains approximately 30% of lead oxide and is especially suitable for cutting and engraving and for use as tableware and giftware.

The English influence resulted in the foundation in Ireland of a number of "glasshouses" to manufacture what came to be known as "Lead Crystal Glass". This was made basically from sand, lead oxide and potash, and manufacturers took great care to produce a clear white glass which became renowned for its brilliance and suitability for engraving and cutting. Factories were established in Dungarvin, Cork, Dublin, Belfast and Waterford, and survived a chequered history until the middle of the last century when the imposition of excise tariffs brought an end to this craft industry. The fame of the hand-cut crystal glass made in County Waterford overshadowed all others and fortunately this industry was re-established after World War Two and has achieved notable success worldwide ever since.

Brother and Sister members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians who will be travelling to Ireland this summer will have the opportunity to visit some of Ireland's outstanding Irish Crystal factories. Visitors are most welcome at Waterford, Galway, Dublin, Cavan, Tyrone, Sligo, Tipperary, Cork, Crystal Na Ring and several other Irish Crystal factories. It's an excellent time to purchase that special gift or to do a little advance Christmas shopping.

Business Profile

It is good to be able to report a new industry, founded by a local man, that is succeeding. Such is the case with Criostal na Rinne, a company recently formed in Ring by a Ring man which is producing beautiful articles in cut crystal at a reasonable price.

Criostal na Rinne Teo is the brainchild of Eamonn Turraoin (Terry) and is situated in Ballingoul in the Udaras na Gaeltachta factory that some years ago housed Scannell Glass (Gloine na Rinne). Eamonn actually started his venture in October 1988, after he had been studying various commercial enterprises in Germany. A lot of research was needed.

Eamonn finished as a cutter in Waterford Glass in late 1987, and got great help and encouragement from Udaras na Gaeltachta, for whom he did feasibility studies before gaining their support.

He is now producing 54 different pieces and adding weekly to his range. His idea is to produce beautiful quality articles in crystal that are not too expensive for the average person to buy, especially as presents. One of his most popular pieces is a preserve jar with a lid. Another big attraction is a Christening Mug individually inscribed with the child's name and the date of Baptism (or birth). A special butter dish designed by him for the American market is going very well. It is exactly the right shape for the U.S. pound of butter. Each piece bears Eamonn's trade mark "An Rinn" etched in the clo-Gaelach. They all come in a lovely deep-blue silk-lined box with a gift card included.

The new technology being used in the cutting process includes the most up-to-date diamond-wheel cutters. At present he is on his own, but by the end of the year he will have two or three working with him.

His products include every size of drinking glass from liquor to brandy, and come in all kinds, from a single rose vase costing around 15 pounds to a centrepiece at over 100 pounds. But most of his pieces are in the 20-35 pound range — biscuit barrels, honey jars, bowls, ring holders, trays, salad bowls and a beautiful pair of candlesticks. He will take orders for presentation pieces and is doing quite a lot of prizes for competitions, such as engraved trays, bowls and plates, suitably inscribed.

In his office, Eamonn has a map on which he has pinpointed all the places in the world his goods are going to, and there are little red pins far and wide. A special order can be ready in a week.

A gift of sparkling, hand-cut crystal is something to treasure for a lifetime, to pass on to future generations. Criostal na Rinne Teo, is well worth a visit and a purchase.

I AM OF IRELAND; WOMEN OF THE NORTH SPEAK OUT
by Elizabeth Shannon

For too long, women's voices in Northern Ireland have been silenced.

Both cultural differences about women's role in Irish society and the past 20 years of violence in Northern Ireland have contributed to this.

Elizabeth Shannon (wife of former U.S. Ambassador to the Republic of Ireland and author of Up in the Park, an account of her years in Dublin) breaks that silence here in a shattering collection of interviews with women of every political and religious affiliation.

She talks to Mairead Farrell, shot to death in Gibraltar in March 1988 by British commandos; to Ann and Eileen Gillespie, two sisters who served a 10 year prison sentence in England despite their claim to innocence; to the widow of Brian Faulkner, last Prime Minister of Northern Ireland; and to a host of others.

"A work of empathy, heart, and superb professional reportage."
—Tim Pat Coogan, author of The I.R.A. and former editor of The Irish Press—

264 pp., clothbound, $17.95

Other Recommended Titles

Father and Son by Peter Maas, 316 pp., hb, $18.95

A blockbuster of a novel, by the author of Serpico and The Valachi Papers. The story of Michael McGuire, New York executive and widower, who never thought of himself as particularly Irish until his son, Jamie, was drawn by romantic impulse into an IRA gun-running plot -- and killed.

My New Curate by Canon P.A. Sheehan, 340 pp. pb, $15.95

The late Canon Sheehan's novels are loved worldwide. My New Curate was one of his most popular books, a warm and vivid picture of the relationship between an old priest ("Daddy Dan"), his new curate (who, the Bishop promised, would break the old priest's heart in six weeks flat!), and their flock.

HOW TO WIN THE U.S. IMMIGRATION GAME
by Christopher Henry

With the recent surge of Irish immigration to the U.S., many are concerned with work and money matters, medical assistance, and visas—for both the legal and the large underground "illegal" wave of new residents.

Here is a simple guide through the legal maze of immigration, written by the advisor on immigration law to the New York Irish Voice Newspaper.

It explains the many different types of visas available to an Irish person coming to the States—temporary workers, student visas, employment-based "Green Card" applications, and gives advice on the Emigre's legal rights in the U.S.

96 pp. pb, $9.95

Kingdom Come by Eoghan Corry, 336 pp., pb, $12.95

The story of the famous Kerry Football Team, 1975-1988, who held an unrivalled 30 All-Ireland senior football titles during that period. Gives background on Co. Kerry and the history of football there (soccer, to U.S. fans), plus all the controversies and glories of the greatest Irish football team ever.

Famine by Liam O'Flaherty, 448 pp., pb, $12.95

A masterly historic novel set in the period of the Great Famine of the 1840s, this is the story of three generations of the Kilmartin family and the ravaging effects of the Famine on their lives and on a whole people. An epic work of great scope and sympathy.

D.C. Feis Set for July 31 Crowd

Need a little fun in your summer? We've got what you're looking for at the 1989 Nation's Capital Feis (Gaelic for Irish Festival) on Sunday, July 30th, 1989! There will be something for everyone in this Irish Cultural Event, sanctioned by the North American Feis Commission. Admission is free, unless indoor facilities are used. Our day will begin with Mass at 8AM on the Ellipse, then the competitions will commence at 9 AM promptly! All events will take place, rain or shine!

The Feis, as it was last year, will be produced by civic leaders from across the country and the Nation's Capital Feis, a non-profit organization. The event expects to draw contestants from across the United States and Canada, as well as from Ireland, Scotland and England. In conjunction with the Feis, there will be a Country Set Workshop, instructed by Dr. John Cullinane, from Cork, Ireland, and Michael Meehan, from Limerick, Ireland, and a Step Dancing Workshop, instructed by Anthony Nolan, from Limerick, Ireland, both to be held Monday, July 31, and Tuesday, August 1. Also, on July 31, there will be an honor dance for the winners of the

Video Review

"A History of Ireland"

Variety and richness are two attributes of Irish culture and of Irish history as well. These two words, variety and richness, also describe Brian Munn's video presentation of "A History of Ireland", recently released in North America by Rego Irish Records and Tapes.

"A History of Ireland" for the first time on video cassette, brings the viewer through the various stages of Irish history from the dim mists of Celtic antiquity and the introduction of Christianity through the Vikings, the Normans, the Penal Times, The Great Famine, the 1916 Easter Rising and finally the formation of the Republic. Shot entirely on location in Ireland, this story of the development of a nation is told against the backdrop of some of Ireland's most breathtaking scenery.

Given that the Irish nation has been settled on and identified with their homeland longer than any other nation in Europe north of the Alps, it is no mean trick to survey millennia of Irish history in a one-hour video tape. But this video does just that with a combination of most attractive on-location filming in Ireland, brief interviews with some of the top experts in the field and a most entertaining narration. Just after introducing the passage grave at New Grange, County Meath (a structure both more ancient and more scientific than the pyramids of Egypt), the antiquity of Celtic Europe is discussed by Tomas Cardinal O Fiaich, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of All Ireland, and also an internationally recognized Celtic scholar.

"A History of Ireland", however, is not an antiquarian exercise, but rather a vibrant history presented with an eye toward the relevance of past events to the present situation of Ireland in the world. The tragic death of Brian Boru, "Imperator Scotorum," and his son and grandson at Clontarf on Good Friday 1014, is presented as having left Ireland without strong leadership and therefore prey to foreign aggression which, with the Norman invasion, ushered in 800 years of struggle which still dominates the relationship between Ireland and England today.

This is truly Irish production, not a foreigner's perspective of Ireland and the Irish. Even where the Irish extend their activities abroad, whether the Peregrini of the middle ages, famine emigrants of the nineteenth century or nineteenth and twentieth century Irish nationalist political leaders like James Stephens or Eamon deValera, the Irish perspective is not sacrificed to convention nor is it tainted by historical revisionism. What is especially refreshing for an American audience is a genuine appreciation of the role of Ireland's exiled children in America in the history of the Irish nation.

In addition to providing an excellent and entertaining historical overview, "A History of Ireland" also incorporates a section on Irish genealogy: "Tracing your Roots", a feature of particular interest to the American Irish.

If there is any caution to viewing the video, it is to warn you that you will come away unsatisfied in that more appetites and passions will be greater will be the cost of the monument," he continued.

Park Service Reneges

In the meantime, the Committee feels that the time has come to have people interested in this tribute to soldiers who died for their adopted country write to their senators and congressmen to urge that the Irish Brigade Monument be completed and erected on the Battlefield at Antietam, as originally agreed to by the awakened than satisfied, and you will be wanting more of the same in greater intensity in one or another area of interest. The great virtue is that this awakening or re-awakening is achieved in a most delightful manner and in proper historical perspective.

"A History of Ireland" is an outstanding, and painless, introduction to Irish history — truly a service in this video age. It is equally suitable for viewing by school children or adults and, as Hibernian historian John Ridge has said, "should be donated by each Hibernian Division or other Irish organization to a school or library, but only after viewing by its members." We can only hope that it will be just the first in a series of videos on various successive chapters of Irish history. "A History of Ireland" is available for $29.95 plus $4 postage and handling from Irish J.C. Imports, 89 So. Broadway, Lawrence, MA. 01843 and distributed by Rego Irish Records Tapes, Garden City, N.Y. 11530.

Mr. Jack O'Brien
Irish Cultural Society
11109 Belton Street
Upper Marlboro, Maryland 20772

Dear Mr. O'Brien:
It was a great pleasure to have you and Mr. Matthew Hannon meet with our staff Thursday, July 23, 1987, to discuss the monument your Irish Cultural Society is planning to erect at Antietam. We were also pleased to hear of your plans regarding the repair or replacement of the severely broken cast iron descriptive tablet, which marked the battleline of General Thomas F. Meagher's Irish Brigade at the Sunken Road (today's "Bloody Lane").

We have carefully assessed the damage of the cast iron descriptive tablet and believe that it can be reasonably repaired at an estimated cost of $500. A photograph of the damaged sign will be sent as soon as prints are developed. The dimensions and design of the tablets are enclosed. This rehabilitation work can be contracted locally through the park.

The Irish marble or granite that you and Mr. Hannon described would reflect a distinctive honor to the Irish Brigade at Antietam. This proposed monument, when completed, should be placed near the existing fence row, at the rise in the upper bank of the Sunken Road, across from the existing locust tree and approximately midway between the 132nd Pennsylvania and the 2nd Delaware Monuments. This approximate location would be historically correct. You may wish to send photocopies of the photographs that were taken to further identify this location for future references. In addition to the location, and proposed rock, we also discussed the height of the completed monument to be compatible with existing monuments and that a height up to 23 feet would be reasonable in scale for this location. We anxiously await receipt of your monument material and design plan so that our Park, Regional and Washington staff can respond within a reasonable time frame.

We sincerely appreciate receiving a copy of the book, The Irish Brigade and Its Campaigns, by Captain D.P. Conyngham, Boston, MA, 1869 (reprint 1987). This book, a welcomed asset, has been placed in our park library which will assist interested researchers and our interpretive staff in furthering their knowledge regarding this phase of civil War history.

It was my pleasure to be a small part of your plans regarding Antietam, and I wish you speedy success in achieving your goals. The best of luck to you and to Mr. Hannon, in acquiring an appropriate monument honoring the Irish Brigade at Antietam and your possible target dates for dedication and ceremonies during the 126th and 127th Anniversaries of the Battle of Antietam.

Hibernian Sports

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

Baseball—It's that time again when a young man's fancy turns to Runs, Hits and Errors, RBI's, Innings Pitched, K's, BB's and a plethora of other statistics. Some teams are struggling already. Some teams are blowing hot and cold. Some teams are surprising everyone.

The Yankees surprised everyone with their trade of a young pitcher, Dave Latimer, for a veteran player of what many analysts feel is slightly mediocre ability. GS, the Yankees owner, is denying anything to do with this deal. Time will tell.

The other news off the field in baseball is Pete Rose. Did he or didn't he? Perhaps only his hair-dresser knows for sure. There have been allegations hurled across headlines in every newspaper and on every sports show on TV about Pete Rose and his gambling habits. The latest word is that the report is finally in Commissioner Bart Giamatti's hands. Needless to say, it's about time. Rose has been walking under a cloud since the first day it was made public. It has been going on now for months. If he is guilty, deal with him firmly, justly, and with alacrity. This has to be tough on Rose, the Cincinnati Reds, and the whole of baseball. If he isn't guilty, then baseball owes this man a public apology. No one deserves to have his reputation sullied such as this in public.

Politicians and TV evangelists seem to fair better than athletes with the press and the public. Why is so much demanded of an athlete who isn't elected by the populus, works for a privately owned corporation, has entered an agreement to do what he does best for the corporation, play ball?

No place does it state that his or her private life must be public. Yet, many athletes are subjected to the harsh lights of investigative reporting so much more than the pols and the TV evangelists. The politicians take oaths to uphold the law. The first thing many of them do is look for the loopholes. The TV evangelists use the Bible and preach of sin and damnation. If you sin, you will go to Hell. But before you do, please send $10.00 to keep the ministry going. It takes a lot of dough to keep these ministers in the style to which they have become accustomed.

The latest thing on the Pete Rose case is that the commissioner has scheduled a hearing and has given Rose and his attorney a copy of everything the commissioner has pertaining to the case. Stay tuned for further developments. Film at 11:00 PM.

Basketball — The good news is P.J. Carlissimo is staying at Seton Hall. This is a good sign. It shows that some coaches not only have principles but also have Class with a capital "C". P.J. Carlissimo is such a person. YR had to pull for Seton Hall in the Final Four because of his connection with the Peacocks of St. Peter's. For those of you readers not familiar with NJ, St. Peter's College is a Jesuit school of higher education located on the JFK Blvd. in Jersey City. When YR went there the road was paved but it was the Henry Hudson Blvd. The Jesuits would probably be very happy if YR did not lay claim to attending St. Peter's. He did not bring any honor or glory during his brief tenure there. Seton Hall was down the road. It's still down the road. They were and are a formidable worthy opponent. If you don't wish to believe YR, ask any college coach in the Big East. So good luck and best of everything to P.J. and the Pirates of Seton Hall.

Frank Cull, who writes a sports column which appears in the Irish Echo, recently stated in his column the exact things YR has said about pro basketball. These guys walk. They double dribble. They use much too much physical contact in a sport that is supposedly a non-contact sport. Thanks, Frank. YR knew he wasn't a minority of one. Now there are two!

Speaking of the NBA, they have finally started their play-offs. As YR writes this, it is mid-May. By mid-June, they should know who won the play-offs, Methinks.

One final note on basketball. YR's grandniece, Colleen Heslin, won the NYS K of C Foul Shooting Contest held at West Point for the second year. Congrats, Colleen. Any women's teams that are interested in recruiting Colleen, she will be in 7th grade next fall. If she stays with basketball, she can only get better. Then again, YR is biased, prejudiced and bigoted.

Hockey — The NHL has finally made it to its Finals. It's an All-Canada Final with Calgary and Montreal. As YR writes this, it is mid-May. Perhaps by Memorial Day, this too shall have passed.

There were some very interesting games in the quarter-finals and semi's of NHL. The Chicago Blackhawks lasted longer than all the experts said they would. That's good news for the Chicago fans. The Phillies should do something about their goalie, Ron Hextall. This guy is a menace to mankind, not to mention the opposing players. He goes ber-seker. Perhaps the Flyer fans like it. I haven't heard a sportscaster in the northeast, on radio or TV, defend this guy's antics. Hartford has made a change in GM's. Emile Francis is out and Eddie Johnston is in. Johnston was with the Pittsburgh Penguins prior to this. Is it possible to think that the Binghamton Whalers in the AHL might benefit from this move? YR hopes so. The guys who own the local Whalers deserve help in the form of young players.

Track — There was a very good article on track at Villanova in the Irish Echo, 5/12/89 issue. There are now three female Irish track stars at Villanova. It seems like only yesterday, Ron Delaney was their big track star. To be precise, it is exactly 31 years ago. Time flies when you are having fun.

NYS OAH Bowling Tourney—This was held. It was written up in the Empire State Hibernian. Tom Ryan, the editor, graciously sent me a copy. Alas, YR left his copy home. There were winners and losers. Camillus fielded the oldest team. YR's good friend, Dan McQuiston, was on the team. He wasn't the oldest. He was only the second oldest. Daniel is a Postal Service retiree. The team results will appear in the next column. TIME LEFT:00:00—That's all for this column. Send your bon mots to P.O. Box 156 ESS, Binghamton, NY 13904.

An Aside — YR would like to thank Mike McCormack, the National Historian, for his latest addition to help the cause of Irish History. He recently sent a one page article on Kevin Barry. YR didn't get a chance to read it. His wife glimmed on to it for the meeting of Our Lady Of Knock Division for their history lesson that same night. Thanks, Mike. You deserve a big hand for this service. Maybe some more people will get interested in Irish history not only of Ireland but also how the Irish made their towns and cities better places to live. It would be good.

Questions and Answers

By Mr. William T. Malone

NOTE: Please forward questions to Mr. William T. Malone, Department of English, Center for Irish Studies, The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064.

Q. Please explain the derivation of the family name McCann. W. Rocca, Bethlehem, PA

A. McCann derives from son of Annadh, in Irish mac annadh, but changed to MacAnna and now to McCann(y). The c of mac is such a strong sound that we tend to pronounce it with the A of Anna. The Annals of the Four Masters call Amhlaibh Mac Canna a "pillar of chivalry and vigour" when he died in 1155. In 1260 the family lost its status in the south shore region of Lough Neagh in County Armagh. But they did retain some prestige since Donnell MacCanna was called Chief of Clanbrassill in 1598. Today the name is still most popular in the Lough Neagh area and elsewhere found infrequently.

Q. Our Cahills originated in Queens County, but that name no longer appears on Irish maps. Frank Marquette, Kingston, N.Y.

A. In 1565 Philip and Mary commissioned soldiers to drive from their lands the clans of O'Connors and O'Mores. The Tudors planned to increase the plantations outside of the Pale; but most of them failed because the English soldiers sent to protect English settlers often sympathized with the natives and refused to burn and destroy Irish farms; and they were none too pleased that they usually did so on empty stomachs. Their important forts were Maryborough and Philipstown. We see again imaginative English nomenclature when they named these the capitols of Queens and Kings Counties respectively. During the Free State these names were Gaelicized to Leix, now Laois, and Offaly. Perhaps if there are any more of your Cahill relatives residing in Laois, they might be able to tell you when people stopped referring to these Pale extension districts by their Anglicized names. The juxtaposition of Laois with Tipperary accounts for your branch within forty miles of where the Cahills of the first formed a family. Their holdings would naturally enough be called the land of the Cahills and develop with them until the family grew to several dwellings so as to constitute a town 'Ballycahill.' From here they expanded into central northeastern Tipperary between Templemore and Thurles. Ask Irish relatives if they know of anyone having moved from Tipperary to Laois. The preponderance of Cahills in this region also accounts for the aetiology of the three towns named after the sept. Ballycahill derives from Old Irish baile 'town' and cahill from Cathail from catu 'powerful' and 'ualos' 'in battle' (the t aspirates the u of ualos when the two words merge; the u of catu drops off for phonological aesthetics; the -os ending drops off because the case changes from the adverbial dative—tells that is 'in' battle,—to a possessive genitive—shows 'whose' son or descendant it is: originally the first offspring to use the name would call himself 'son of his father, Cathail' thus be called O'Cathail, which developed to Cahill in Modern Irish.) At some time in the history of your family somebody seemed to be considered by his fellow warriors and officers good at close fighting. The crest for your name, however, gives no indication of such. Instead the arms depict an anchor atop a shield bearing a spouting whale on blue waves. At this time there is no motto associated with the crest. Again, if you have family in Ireland ask them if they know of any relative involved in a mercantile occupation. Today more Cahills live in Counties Tipperary, Cork, and Kerry than in Galway, where another clan established itself for over 250 years until the O'Shaughnessys usurped their position, and Clare, where the branch migrated south from Galway. This sept's ancient presence accounts for Ballycahills in Counties Galway and Clare even though the name is found infrequently.

Q. Please provide me with some information regarding the meaning of my family name. Mike Kinnarney, Framingham, Massachusetts

A. Your name derives from Mac and Aircinnigh 'the son of the eranagh; eranagh has been anglicized from airchinnech (+echt for original) 'headship, leadership' and refers to an overseer of church property. Eventually this office fell into lay hands and generally became hereditary. Since eranaghs lived throughout the country, several families called themselves after this occupational title. Most of them, naturally, are unrelated. In County Clare the name is still most popular. Between Ennis and Quin, in the parish of Kilconry in the barony of Bunratty around 1390, when the family came into prominence and remained so even after losing most of their holdings during the Cromwellian maraudings. The census of 1659 shows at least thirty families living within this barony. The forms Kinnerke in County Clare and Nearney in County Roscommon are related. Your variant seems to have resulted owing to phonological orthography. Someone spelled it according to the way he figured he heard it. Spelling is not fixed because of the variety of accents and dialects. Your form sounds just like MacInerney.

Q. Could you tell me what my family name means? Joseph H. Kiely, West Chester, PA

A. The first problem with your name is determining all the number of related spellings. When a good number of the people are illiterate it often happens that officials record a name according to the way they think it should be spelled. With the variety of Irish dialects and sub-dialects and the nonconformity of spelling in general, it is no wonder that Kiely, Kealy, Keele, Kiely, Queally, Kaaly, Kaylyl, Kaille along with their O' forms appear throughout the country; certain forms being particular to certain regions. Your form was most popular in Counties Waterford, Cork, and Limerick in the 1890 census. In the 17th century the K forms started replacing many Q forms on a widespread basis except in Waterford. Patrick Kiely, (d. 1948) a noted Gaelic revival activist, spelled his Irish name O Cadhla, just as most of the Galway members of this sept did. Today in Kilkenny and Tipperary the forms O'Kally, Kaaly, O'Kaylyl, O'Kealy, and O'Kaille occur most frequently. There and in Laois many have tried to adopt the famous name Kelly, one of the seven significant families in County Laois.

Liberty Is Ill in Britain

by PETER SLEVIN

London Bureau, Miami Herald

"Liberty is ill in Britain," began Oxford and NYU law professor Ronald Dworkin in a recent essay in Index on Censorship. "...censorship is no longer an isolated exception in which the nation grudgingly gives up some of its liberty, with great regret and a keen sense of loss, in the face of some emergency."

"This government's challenge to freedom," he writes "has nothing to do with totalitarian despotism. It shows a more mundane but still corrupting insensitivity to liberty, a failure to grasp its force and place in modern democratic ideals."

YES! THERE IS A HIBERNIAN LIFE INSURANCE FUND

What it is...

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAAOH members by 1953 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and the LAOH. In 1963, the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Bursary Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.

International ProLife Leader Greeted by Pope

The Hibernian community, long active in the pro-life movement nationwide, has been encouraged by the recent decision of the U.S. Supreme Court granting more authority to the individual states to constrain accessibility to public funds for abortion involvement. Plans are under way to further mobilize Hibernians in the Right to Life movement.

The Order has made a commitment to Dr. Wilke, president of the national and international Right to Life federations, to provide $10,000 for support of the work of William Sherwin, executive director of the International Right to Life Federation, with offices in Rome, Italy.

With over 300 divisions in America, the AOH hopes to realize $100 from 100 divisions to reach its goal. The plan is to present the monetary gift to Dr. Wilke at the president's banquet in Dayton, Ohio, in October.

Please send your donation to National Secretary Thomas McNabb, 31 Logan St., Auburn, NY 13021.

All Hibernians are encouraged to join their local Right to Life committees as well as Operation Rescue, and to step up their campaigns to overturn Roe vs. Wade, thus guaranteeing to all the right to life.

WILLIAM SHERWIN

Mr. William Sherwin has been the executive secretary of the International Right to Life Federation since its inception in 1984. The year before, he held a similar position with the European Pro-Life Working Group at its Rome headquarters, during which time he helped coordinate pro-life activities in Europe.

Bill hails from Delvin, Co. Westmeath, and studied theology at St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, which is the Irish national seminary. He became involved in right-to-life advocacy in his native land during the campaign for the now historic 1983 Referendum which resulted in the first constitution in the world to mandate the protection of the unborn child.

Bill acted as executive secretary of the Pro-Life Amendment Campaign during that long and bitter but successful struggle. The Irish constitution now mandates the State to history, has been universally regarded as one unit. The historical and contemporary existence of the Irish nation has never been in dispute. The Irish people have never relinquished their claim to the right of self-determination. What has been in contest is the right of the Irish people, as a whole, to self-determination and their freedom to exercise that right.

For centuries, the relationship between the British government and the Irish people has been the relationship between the conqueror and the conquered, the oppressor and the oppressed. The perennial cycle of oppression/domination/resistance/oppression has been a constant feature of the British government's involvement in Ireland and the Irish people's rejection of that government's usurpation of the right to exercise control over their political, social, economic, and cultural destiny.

From the late 17th century onward, that usurpation provoked both revolutionary resistance and — within the narrowest confines of British constitutional legality — constitutional opposition. In the course of the 19th century, British oppression and famine caused the population of Ireland to be halved.

The last occasion when the Irish people nationally exercised their franchise was in the 1918 General Election. Sinn Fein, with a political program demanding complete independence for the unitary state of Ireland, won the election with 69.5% of the vote. Those democratically elected representatives of the Irish people formed Dail Eireann and, on January 21, 1919, enacted the Declaration of Independence.

The Anglo-Irish Treaty of 1922, the partition of Ireland and the Constitution of the Irish Free State were imposed on the Irish people under the threat of "immediate and terrible war." They were not submitted to the Irish people for ratification and their imposition represents a denial to the Irish people of the freedom to exercise their right to self-determination.

The pretext for partition — the wishes of a national minority to maintain British rule — holds no validity against the express wishes of the vast majority of the Irish people. Secession is not the same as self-determination.

Partition perpetuates the British government's denial of the Irish people's right to self-determination. It perpetuates the cycle of oppression/domination/resistance/oppression. In the words of Sean MacBride, winner of the Nobel and Lenin Peace Prizes:

"Ireland's right to sovereignty, independence and unity are inalienable and indefeasible. It is for the Irish people as a whole to determine the future status of Ireland. Neither Britain nor a small minority selected by Britain has any right to partition the ancient island of Ireland, nor to determine its future as a sovereign nation."

SCENARIO FOR PEACE

The end of partition, a British disengagement from Ireland and the restoration to the Irish people of the right to exercise self-sovereignty, independence and national self-determination remain the only solution to the British colonial conflict in Ireland. The Anglo-Irish Agreement and the processes it involves seek merely to camouflage the fact that the Six-County state is a

President's Message

Teachtairéacht An Uachtaráin

By Michael J. Coogan, National President

In the coming months our Order must be poised for action on several fronts. I have traveled to the Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York conventions to urge Hibernian leadership support on these key issues. Please help!

We need to meet and talk with our Members of Congress to urge their endorsement of H.R.62, regarding Joe Doherty. If you need information, please call. No effort should be spared to get a Representative's endorsement as soon as possible. We also seek to raise money for William Sherwin (Co. Cork) of the International Right to Life Committee and more than ever need grass roots networking by Hibernians in lobbying State Legislatures to remove funding for abortion and to protect the unborn. We need your calls and action in support of our undocumented Irish. There is no shortage of bills in Congress to do this, but in order to target our efforts on the best bill, please contact your State Immigration Chairman or Pat Hurley (Div. 3, NY) at 718/898-4824. The House of Representatives failed to address the abuses of the International Fund for Ireland, so we must now ask our U.S. Senators for common sense in examining and eliminating the abuses of our tax money.

Hibernians stand tall and proud whenever we speak up for those Irish still living under English rule; for the unborn; for the undocumented and for the Irish legacy of courage and faith whether in Ireland or America. The Commodore Barry commemorations in Mobile, Alabama and Boston, and Our Lady of Knock Masses by Div. 7 and 2 in Suffolk Co., NY, are important parts of this rich legacy we share with our family and friends.

Congratulations to the Connecticut State Board for getting into high gear with a "Joe Doherty Justice Committee." Welcome to our new members from Delano, Florida. My thanks to all for your hospitality in my travels. I hope to see you again in Dayton on October 21.

Divisions To Benefit from National Awards Program

BY RICHARD M. ROGERS

Over the years many Divisions had suggested it. This year the AOH National Board voted to change the annual National Awards program to grant prizes to each Division that meets its quota — every division can then enjoy an additional means to raise funds.

Each division whose members succeed in returning books equal to one half the division membership will receive a portion of the award, with added incentives for 100 percent membership participation.

The proceeds of the 1989 National Awards program will be used to fund the Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award, which this year, will be presented to Oliver Kearney at the National Board meeting and President's Dinner in Dayton, Ohio, on Saturday, October 21, 1989.

But the members' prizes awarded that day will be cash instead of the merchandise prizes awarded in previous programs. Top award is $1500, followed by $700, $300 and $100 (4th through 8th place).

Each member has been sent the materials necessary to participate in the program. Additionally, each national officer, county, state and division president has additional supplies. The division need not be involved in handling, accounting for, or shipping the returns, as each member will do this individually. However, because the member will notate each return with his division number and county, every division will be credited with its return regardless of who submits them.

For further details and clarification, see your division president; or write the Awards Committee, Box 623, Mineola, NY 11501; or call 516-887-1952.

New Strategies Planned For Joe Doherty Case

The bi-partisan Ad Hoc Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs held an emergency meeting this week to discuss the Joe Doherty case in the aftermath of last week's Justice Department decision ordering his deportation back to England. This meeting was called by Co-Chairman Tom Manton (D-NY).

The Ad Hoc Committee members in attendance including Co-Chairmen Bruce Morrison (D-CT) and Ben Gilman (R-NY), Eliot Engel (D-NY), Gary Ackerman (D-NY), and Jim McDermott (D-WA) listened to a presentation by Doherty's attorneys Mary Pike and Stephen Somerstein. Their statements discussed the current status of Doherty's case in light of Attorney General Thornburgh's position. Manton declared, "What is important to note is the fact that in our mind the attorney general's decision is not the last word on this subject."

•The Ad Hoc Committee will join on the amicus brief to be filed with the Second Circuit urging that Doherty be granted political asylum. •Members of the Ad Hoc Committee will deliver a series of statements into the Congressional Record on a designated day next week criticizing the Thornburgh decision and discussing future plans.

•Work with the leaders of Irish American organizations to increase the number of co-sponsors on the Manton Resolution urging political asylum for Joe Doherty. At present the Resolution has more than 60 co-sponsors. In addition efforts will be made to get a comparable resolution introduced in the Senate.

Manton added, "To abandon Joe Doherty now would be to sanction the injustices which have befallen him over the past six years. Joe Doherty is entitled to due process and it is wrong for our Justice Department to administer justice in a selective fashion."

failed entity, socially, economically and politically. The Treaty does not challenge the constitutional status of the Union but actually reinforces it.

Sinn Fein seeks to create conditions which will lead to a permanent cessation of hostilities, an end to our long war and the development of a peaceful, united and independent Irish society. Such objectives will only be achieved when a British government adopts a strategy for decolonization. It must begin by repealing the "Government of Ireland Act" and publicly declaring that the "Northern Ireland" statelet is no longer part of the United Kingdom.

Furthermore, it must declare that its military forces and its system of political administration will remain only for as long as it takes to arrange their permanent withdrawal. This would need to be accomplished within the shortest practical period. A definite date within the life-time of a British government would need to be set for the completion of this withdrawal. Such an irreversible declaration of intent would minimize any loyalist backlash and would go a long way towards bringing round to reality most loyalists and those of their representatives genuinely interested in peace and negotiation. It would be the business of such negotiations to set the constitutional, economic, social and political arrangements for a new Irish state through a Constitutional Conference.

20 YEARS DIRECT OCCUPATION
The present phase of the struggle for democracy in Ireland has lasted 20 years. It is the longest phase in the struggle for self-determination for the Irish people. In the last 20 years, nationalist people in the Six Counties have lived with armed British soldiers on their streets. They have been the victims of a shoot-to-kill policy by lead and plastic bullets. They have lived under emergency legislation and non-jury courts. They have suffered discrimination in employment. Today, 20 years on, nationalists are still 2-1/2 times more likely to be unemployed than loyalists. Sinn Fein supports the MacBride Principles and we would welcome federal legislation to enforce these Principles.

We sincerely hope that you, the representatives of the American people, will inform your constituents about the struggle that we are undergoing in Ireland against the censorship of duly elected representatives of the people; and in America, with the visa denial policy, which in effect denies the American public the right to hear all opinions in the struggle for self-determination in Ireland.

We believe that after 20 years of failed initiatives it is time for the British government to adopt a policy of withdrawal. Therefore, we respectfully request the Ad Hoc Committee for Irish Affairs in this 20th year of direct British military presence in the Six Counties in the northeast of Ireland to sponsor a resolution on British withdrawal from Ireland. Finally, we sincerely appreciate all your efforts in highlighting the gross inequities in The International Fund for Ireland. Thank you very much for your time and consideration.

How Much Is A Colony Worth?

By KEVIN MULLIGAN

Her Majesty's government paid almost one half million dollars to defeat the fair employment guidelines, directed at American corporations doing business in Northern Ireland, commonly known as the MacBride Principles.

The half million dollars was spent to pay lobbyists in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. A large portion of that half million was spent on air fare and hotel accommodations for a group of "professional" Catholics from West Belfast who were willing to take the British line against their own people. These men and women were all paid by the Department of Economic Development, a British Government agency in Northern Ireland which distributes the American tax dollar funded International Fund for Ireland. $3,131.00 to fly from Belfast to Boston. What airline did these people fly on? Three thousand dollars to fly round trip? Call any travel agency and you will find that you could fly very comfortably for as little as $450.00 round trip to the same two cities.

At the same time the folks from Belfast were living it up on the airways, courtesy of the British Government, Northern Ireland Catholics were lining up at the Falls Road Welfare Office to collect their weekly unemployment check, hoping some day they might get paid for a week's work in any place that will give them a job.

Why has Britain spent nearly half a million dollars in three northern New England states? To save face. Her Majesty's government cannot afford to appear less than perfect in the eyes of her biggest fan club — the American people. So, Britain enlists the aid of "professional" Catholics, from predominately Catholic West Belfast, then pays them exorbitant amounts of money to tell the naive Americans how great things are for them and their families.

They forget to mention how many of their neighbors stand in line every week to collect one-fifth of what they are paid in air fare. They also forget to mention that in some sections of Belfast, unemployment among all adults run at a staggering 86% and that figure is rising.

Yet these men and women are content to go wherever her Majesty sends them at great expense, to tell our legislators that "it is none of our concern," that Britain will "take care of the problem." The folks from Belfast espouse the "new plan" to take care of the unemployment problem in Northeast Ireland. This according to the sales pitch, is THE legislation that will end all discrimination in Northeast Ireland. Then why is it that every major political party in Northern Ireland is opposed to this legislation because it does absolutely nothing to solve the problem?

Still her Majesty is content to spend millions to defeat the straightforward MacBride Principles and control the American legislative process. Why is it that Britain has unlimited resources to spend on their anti-MacBride campaign, yet is unwilling to invest any amount of time and effort towards investigating and preventing intimidation in the work place?

Britains's ability to generate hostility against the MacBride initiative became clear in a recent survey of employers in Northern Ireland that showed that a vast majority — 82% — of employers had heard of the MacBride Principles but that only 2% were actually aware of any of the details.

Her Majesty's government might consider that MacBride Principles are in large measure of their own manufacture, given the fact that Britain is directly responsible for a colony that has left Catholics as second class citizens from the beginning of 1920, when the Northern Ireland state was created. The millions of dollars being spent to block the efforts of Americans of good will is much like the proverbial boy with his finger in the dike.

The recent passage of the MacBride Principles in New Hampshire

An Independent View on Northern Ireland from Fortnight

California may be the next domino to fall in the MacBride Principles campaign. LEONARD DOYLE reports that, despite the Fair Employment Bill, the lobby will keep pushing ahead.

NEW YORK: During his recent tour of the US, Tom King gave New York City a wide berth until the last day of his visit — concerned no doubt that Harrison 'Jay' Goldin, the chief promoter of the MacBride principles in the US, was going to draw him in to the rough and tumble of New York city politics in an election year.

Mr. King had no intention of tangling with Mr. Goldin. It suited the secretary of state to snub the American politician most closely associated with the principles, rather than sit down with him to thrash out some of the issues which divide them.

During his visit Mr. King complained to a local journalist that one of the problems about Northern Ireland was that there had been no serious dialogue between the parties in 14 years. Discussions between the British and proponents of the MacBride principles are not very popular either.

Nor, since Britain likes to lump MacBride supporters in with Noraid and Sinn Fein, is there much likelihood of talks any time soon. Brian Fall, a diplomat assigned to Washington, put Britain's position succinctly when he wrote recently that the principles ran the risk of aggravated tension in Northern Ireland, because they were "named after a former chief of staff of the IRA" and supported only by Sinn Fein among the northern political parties.

But it remains ironic that officials should attack the MacBride campaign — saying that its backers are IRA propagandists — while incorporating many of its aims into the legislation on fair employment. Affirmative action is in — though there are still arguments about its extent — as are goals and timetables, and penalties for employers who flout the bill.

Why then did Mr. King bristle when asked whether he would meet Mr. Goldin to discuss the issues? The answer seems to be that Britain hopes to stop the campaign while denying that the legislation has and Vermont added new cracks to the dike and with it more leaks are springing up faster than can be covered by Britain and her agents. More and more money will be spent to try and stem the flow of the MacBride Principles while more and more people in the nationalist community in Northern Ireland will slip farther into poverty. All the while, the major political parties that represent that community play a game of see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil about the blatant discrimination that continues to permeate the Northern Irish society.

A Colony's Worth

Why is Britain so concerned with these basic principles, which are more modest than most affirmative action guidelines in the United States. The Official line is that "they will discourage investment." The real concern is that legislators throughout the United States are discovering the kind of place that Britain has been running in Northern Ireland. Previously Britain has been content in the knowledge that a majority of Americans were more concerned about what color Princess Di was wearing this week, than the generations of Northern Irish citizens being discriminated against because of what Church they went to or what section of Belfast or Derry they lived in. It worries them so much that they are willing to take money from the people who most need it to try and stop the resurrection of millions of dormant Americans of Irish descent.

Britain knows that these groups of concerned citizens have found a non-violent approach to try to bring justice and dignity to a portion of the Northern Ireland population which has not known the meaning of those words for over eight hundred years.

Never, in recent history, has Britain spent so much to sway American opinion. Margaret Thatcher and her party hastily put together "blue smoke and mirror" legislation which never would have happened save for the MacBride Principles campaign. Tom King, the Northern Ireland Minister, says "it is the campaign aspect that we oppose, not the principles themselves." Her Majesty's government appears frightened of the prospect of organized Americans contacting Congress and presenting Britain and all of its problems in a far more negative light.

How many more millions of dollars will be spent before the lines end on the Falls Road? How many more mothers and fathers will weep over their children's graves? How many more young men and women must face the prospect of knowing they will never be employed while her Majesty holds their lives in the balance in order to maintain one of her final colonies on whom long ago the sun had set?

Ethical

anything to do with pressure from America. By characterising the MacBride campaigners as Irish-American hotheads who would see the economy of Northern Ireland crumble, the government has tried to avoid any suggestion that it has caved in to American pressure.

But the force being exerted against it via the MacBride campaign — now endorsed by 12 states and half a dozen cities — is quite different from anything Britain has experienced in the past in North America. Relatively small pressure groups in this country have learned that by combining the strength of stock owned by pension funds and foundations they can wield enough power to undermine US foreign policy. Local policy initiatives can no longer be dismissed as symbolic acts when, like the MacBride principles, they represent some $4 billion invested in North Ireland.

Exxon, the largest oil company in the world, recently discovered the effectiveness of institutional shareholders after the Exxon Valdez oil spill. Once again it was Mr. Goldin who rallied a block of institutional investors with $88 million in company stock and forced Exxon to agree to the appointment of an environmentalist to its board of directors. The Exxon decision marked a shift in policy by the loose coalition of activist institutional investors led by Mr. Goldin, which is that change may better be brought about through negotiation than disinvestment.

The British government is not about to negotiate with the backers of the MacBride campaign, so it seems inevitable that it will continue to work its way through state legislatures and city councils. Britain's side will certainly get a better hearing in America when the legislation is passed, but MacBride activists are so convinced that it will be ineffective they are confident their campaign will continue to gather steam.

As long as Catholic unemployment remains significantly higher than the rate for Protestants, the MacBride campaigners can expect to be busy. And from Britain's perspective a key danger is that for the first time an Irish lobby is taking shape in the US focused on shaping events overseas. In the heyday of Irish-American political power domestic issues were the priority and politicians paid lip-service to events in Ireland.

All that has changed, and in the same way as the Jewish lobby is active over Israel, second-and third-generation Irish-Americans are getting stirred up about events in Northern Ireland. These activists, many sophisticated professionals, present Catholic unemployment in Northern Ireland as a human rights rather than a nationalist issue, with the result that they are forming alliances with other political pressure groups.

Jay Goldin, a Jewish politician born in New York, is not the sort of person typically to espouse a nationalist cause. But American politicians like him have no trouble in subscribing to a campaign to end discrimination in employment, if it earns them political support at home. As a candidate in the race for mayor of New York (where some 8 per cent of the electorate is ethnic Irish) he will need all the support he can get if he is to dislodge the incumbent, Ed Koch. Even if he loses, however, the MacBride campaign can be expected to rumble on, as local action committees spring up in states like Utah, Texas, the Carolinas and Oklahoma.

Cincinnati Honors Patriot Joe Doherty ☆☆☆☆☆☆☆

THE COLOR GUARD of St. Patrick Division 1, Hamilton, Cincinnati, proudly led the way for the 23rd annual St. Patrick Day Parade. Joe Doherty was hailed as a Co-Honorary Grand Marshal of the parade, along with U.S. Representative Thomas A. Luken. The St. Patrick Division was privileged to use its collective voice to raise the issue of Joseph Patrick Doherty's unconscionable incarceration in a New York prison.

FOLLOWING the St. Patrick Parade, participants gathered in the division clubrooms to continue the celebration. Happy over the selection of Joe Doherty as Honorary Grand Marshal are his niece, Kellie McAllister and his mother, Maureen Doherty, standing with Division President Mike Hall, National President Michael Coogan and Grand Marshal Patrick Dowling.

STATE NEWS: Florida

By NICK SCHNEIDER

The AOH in the State of Florida continues to grow. On June 6 a new Division was formed. Volusia County Division 1 held its installation of officers at the home of its first president, John O'Neill, in the city of Deland. The installation team consisted of National Director Tom Gilligan; State President John Cullinan; State Vice President Bob Schneider; State Editor Nick Schneider and Brevard County Division 1 Secretary Ernie Kees. At the conclusion of the installation, Division President O'Neill hosted an enjoyable social. Officers installed were: John O'Neill, president; Tim Flynn, vice president; Bob Butler, recording secretary; Jim O'Neill, treasurer; Joe Quinlan, financial secretary; Vincent Cleary, marshal and George Ryan, sentinel.

President O'Neill indicated to State President Cullinan that he has many new members joining the division in the fall. Eligible candidates are urged to contact Bob Butler at 1619 Palm Ave., Deland, FL 32724 or call (904) 736-8828.

The summer months are always a time of inactivity for all organizations, and the AOH is no exception. However, all divisions have requested me, through this column, to urge all members to resume their division activities in the fall by attending meetings and supporting all the division socials.

Brevard County Division 2 President Jerry Costlow, recently commended Ray Reilly and Inez McGovern for their great work and dedication as division historians. Jerry invites Hibernians throughout the state to attend his division's Irish Night on November 4 at the K. of C. Hall, Dairy Rd., Melbourne.

Broward County Division 1 President Martin McAndrew reports that the Shamrock Degree was given grew to 9 full companies—7 of which were made up predominantly of native Irish or sons of Irish immigrants. The remainder were predominantly German.

Led by Col. Thompson and his second in command, Lt. Col. Edward Hand of Co. Offaly, the Battalion served with conspicuous bravery in the crucial and difficult early years of the war against the overpowering might of the British Empire. In January, 1776, Thompson's Pennsylvania Rifle Battalion was redesignated the first continental Regiment, and later, the First Pennsylvania Regiment. In March of that year, George Washington made Col. Thompson a Brigadier General. Three months later, Thompson was captured. Lt. Col. Hand assumed command of the First Pennsylvania Regiment, and was eventually promoted to Adjutant General of the Continental Army.

General Hand went on to become one of Washington's principle Staff Officers, but Brigadier General Thompson's military career was over. He remained a prisoner of his British enemy until he was paroled with the stipulation that he never bear arms again. His release is recorded in a prisoner exchange in 1780. Although his physical condition at the time of his release is unknown, he died on Sep. 3, 1781, shortly after his return to his home in Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

In 1988, a group of concerned citizens located the final resting place of General Thompson in the old Carlisle cemetery, and erected a beautiful Celtic Cross, carved in Ireland, to his memory. The Thompson Battalion Memorial Project, founded by Col. William Kennedy (Ret), to restore the gravesite, has also published a booklet on this early Irish-American patriot and his memorable fighting force. In the tradition of Commodore John Barry, he was one of America's first patriot leaders.

Profiles in Patriotism

By MICHAEL McCORMACK
National Historian

William Thompson

In Massachusetts in April 1775, a handful of local minutemen at Lexington and Concord moved years of colonial exploitation to the field of military confrontation as the colonies dared to challenge the Crown. In May, the second Continental Congress, assembled in Philadelphia, decided the die was cast, and the American Revolution was on. On June 14, 1775, the stars and stripes was adopted as the flag of the new nation and Congress called for the recruitment of 10 companies of volunteer riflemen from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia. The following day, George Washington was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the new force; he was gratified to learn that 6 of the 10 companies would be made up of Pennsylvania riflemen.

In 1775, Pennsylvania was the American frontier, and pioneers in that area had developed a method of engraving spiral grooves in their smooth bore muskets that gave them greater range and accuracy. These men with their Pennsylvania Rifles and superior marksmanship were needed to balance the odds against the superior numbers of the British Army. Most of these hardy pioneers were Irish emigrants and their sons, earning a new life far from the English tyranny they had left behind in Ireland. When the call came to stand against that same tyranny on the side of the Ocean, there was no question of what to do.

So it was that in the hot summer of 1775, an army of farmers and frontiersmen marched out of Pennsylvania to fight for a new concept in human freedom. Some became the victims of British guns, disease or exposure, and never returned; others languished for years on British prison ships, and returned broken in health to live out their lives with little more than the satisfaction of having participated in the greatest event in history, but all were America's first patriots.

The companies who were first to answer the call became the critical link in the evolution from New England Militia to today's United States Army, and the men who led them became America's first commissioned officers. According to The Army Lineage Book, Vol. 11, Thompson's Pennsylvania rifle battalion furnished 6 of the first 10 companies of the Continental Army, and they were led by Col. William Thompson of County Meath, Ireland.

As already noted, the Irish, who had emigrated to America to escape British injustice in their native land, were a major part of this Battalion, and as word spread, they kept coming. Within a few weeks of the initial call to arms, Thompson's force to several new members at the July 14 meeting, with a social following. The division's annual picnic will be held on Sunday, October 1. For details, contact Martin at 1701 N.W. 97th Avenue, Plantation, FL 33321 or call (305) 474-4737. The division's radio program on WSRF, 1680 AM on Saturdays at 12:30 PM, is still doing very well. If you know anyone in business or with an organization who would like to be a program sponsor, have them contact Martin McAndrew at (305) 474-4737 during the evening.

This reporter urges all divisions to support State President John Cullinan and his board of officers as well as the county presidents and their boards of officers during the coming Hibernian year. As one big team pulling together, we can make Florida the greatest Hibernian State in our great organization. I know that every member must know of at least ONE friend or relative who is eligible for the AOH. If we go out and sign up that one individual, we will double our membership in one shot.

Furthermore, I continue to request that all divisions put me on your mailing list so that I can be kept up to date on your activities. Send to Nick Schneider, 240 Eyre Ave., Merritt Island, FL 32953.

STATE NEWS: Pennsylvania

By John S. Kane

The AOH in Pennsylvania lost two special brothers with the passing of John J. Bonner and Joseph F. Murrin. Each fought courageously for the principles of the AOH, not only in the state of Pennsylvania, but on the national level as well.

John served as National Director from 1984 to 1986. He was also the first AOH President of Luzerne County, and was currently serving as Pennsylvania State Organizer and president of St. John Neumann Division 2, Wilkes-Barre. The funeral Mass was celebrated on Wednesday, June 21, 1989 at St. Mary's Church in Wilkes-Barre by former State Chaplain Rev. Charles Mulrooney, with three former national presidents, one former national secretary, one national director and three past state presidents in attendance.

Joe served as Deputy National Organizer for the state of Pennsylvania from 1986 to 1988. He was currently serving on the State Board and was Vice-President of the Lackawanna County Board, and was also treasurer of the J.F.K. Division 1, Scranton. Joe was one of the first organizers of the Irish festivals which were held from 1984 to 1988 to benefit Project Children. The funeral Mass was celebrated on April 8, 1989 at the Immaculate Conception Church by Lackawanna County Chaplain Rev. Patrick J. Healey.

This reporter, for one, considers himself a lot richer for having known these two hard working Hibernians.

We would like to remind all the Divisions in the state of the project that has been undertaken by the State Board, which is to establish a fund raiser for the parochial school system in the state. If every Division in the state could raise just $500.00 in your area, look what that would do for the school system! Let us, as Hibernians, keep these schools open in our state. If you would like more information on this project, you can write to me, John S. Kane, 2731 Pittston Ave., Scranton, PA 18505.

A Farewell to a Friend — John Bonner

By EARL WATSON

Perhaps Red Gilroy put it best: "To know John Bonner was to love him."

John J. Bonner is gone now. He was laid to rest on Wednesday morning at the age of 52. Much too young. It's our good fortune in life that our paths had crossed and we were able to call John Bonner a friend.

To know him was to love him. John Bonner was a respected, and in many quarters, revered, human being—loved by his family for his devotion and compassion (particularly to his mother, Anna Cooney Bonner); admired by his legion of friends and associates for the warmth he radiated.

His passion in life was the Ancient Order of Hibernians (AOH) which he served fervently, not only locally, but on both the state and national levels.

Fact is, he was a national director.

Through his AOH affiliation, he was particularly proud of having been named to the committee to erect a Freedom Foundations memorial at Valley Forge for Irish nationals who were Congressional Medal of Honor recipients.

The granite obelisk, donated by the government of Ireland, was erected at Valley Forge's Medal of Honor Grove, adjacent the Three Chaplains Memorial.

We recall doing the story for John when he attended the dedication ceremony at Valley Forge several years back. He was excited over his role in perpetuating the memory of those Irish citizens who performed such extraordinary acts of bravery for their newly-adopted land. Their names are inscribed on the marker.

That he was highly-respected by his AOH colleagues is evidenced by their assemblage at his funeral.

They came from Massachusetts and Delaware, from Connecticut and New York.

They came from Virginia and New Jersey . . . three past national presidents, three past national directors. The AOH entourage from Pittsburgh alone numbered a score or more.

They came to bid farewell.

We got to know John Bonner on a personal basis when he was tending bar for his brother, Jerry, at the Carriage Stop Inn, Plains, our lunchtime stop. (He subsequently went into partnership with brother, Frank, at Squire Green's on Public

Philadelphia Division 39 Celebrates 100 Years

PHILADELPHIA, PA: On May 21, 1989, Division 39 here celebrated its 100th Anniversary. Chaplain, Fr. Thomas Doyle, S.J., celebrated Mass at St. Leo's Church in Tacony, where Division 39 was organized on May 15, 1889. After Mass a cocktail hour with hors d'oeuvres and dinner was held.

Many distinguished guests and friends attended the celebration, among them National President Mike Coogan; Past National President Joe Roche; State Vice President Vince Scully; and State Ladies President Margaret Cooney. Congressman Robert Borski, State Senators Hank Salvatore and Joe Rocks and City Councilpeople, Franny Rafferty and Joan Krewjewski were also in attendance.

Proclamations and letters of congratulations were received from President Bush, Governor Casey, Pope John Paul II, the United States Senate and House, and the State Senate and House. We also received a very special proclamation from City Council making May 15, Ancient Order of Hibernians Day in Philadelphia. National President Mike Coogan presented us with a plaque from the National Board. Everyone who attended had a grand time. We hope Division 39 will continue to show the world what is meant by Friendship, Unity, and Christian Charity.

The restaurant business, hectic at times, never seemed to phase the soft-spoken, easy-going gentleman that he was. He always maintained his composure, his warm smile and caring personality—traits which, we believe, were his hallmark. Stress never bothered him.

Yes, to know John Bonner was to love him.

But, the end would come suddenly. He was in the company of his dearest friends, Charley and Maryanne Lavan last Friday night when he complained of a shoulder pain and severe headache.

"We wanted to take him to the hospital," Lavan recalled, "but he wouldn't go."

The next day, John keeled over while attending his niece's graduation party at Greely (Pike County). He had suffered a massive heart attack. Death was instantaneous.

John Bonner's passing has touched many of us.

Hundreds, yea thousands, passed his bier at the two-day wake. More than 300 attended the funeral services, no doubt, the melancholic strains of "Danny Boy" (sung by Joe Nealon) still tugging at the hearts of mourners long after they filed out of St. Mary's Church.

"Danny Boy" was John's favorite.

There was a wordsmith who once wrote:
"Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban.
Let me live in my house by the side of the road.
And be a friend of man."

John Bonner never sat in the scorner's seat or hurled the cynic's ban. And, yes, he was a friend of man.

NATIONAL PRESIDENT Michael Coogan, left, presented the plaque held by Division 39 President Mike McGeehan in honor of the division's 100th anniversary. At right is Division Secretary Seamus Boyle, who is also Philadelphia County Board president.

AOH County Board President Honored

During the Memorial Day observance, May 30, at Calvary Cemetery, Pittsburgh, David O'Connor, re-elected Allegheny County Board president of the AOH, received a citation for meritorious and distinguished service in furthering the aims and ideals of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. The citation was presented by Clarence R. Smearman, Commander of the Daniel O'Donnell Post of the V.F.W.

Accompanying the County President was James Burke, county chairman of Catholic Action, and James Duffy, AOH Division 15. There were about three hundred present for the Memorial Day Services and as we understand it, this was the first time a citation of this kind was presented at the services. President O'Connor, then representing the AOH, presented a wreath in honour of the men buried there.

Chaplain Departs for London

Father John F. Baldwin, CAPT US Navy, Chaplains Corps, has been an active member of AOH Division One, Newport, for several years and we are proud to count him among our membership.

Father Baldwin was assigned as Command Chaplain to the U.S. Naval Base, Newport, RI in August of 1986. This month, July 89, he departs to his office in London, England, to assume his position as "Fleet Chaplain — Europe."

During his stay in Newport and as a member of our Division, which he considers his AOH Division, Father Baldwin has made an impact on many members and has made many friends for our Division. He was born in Chicago, September 14, 1933, the son of John Thomas Baldwin and Marie Ida Spielvogel, the oldest of three children.

He attended the parochial grammar school, and graduated from Quigley Preparatory Seminary in 1952. After Bachelor and Masters Degree from St. Mary of the Lake Seminary, Mundelein, Illinois, he was ordained by Albert Cardinal Meyer, Archbishop of Chicago on May 7, 1959.

Fr. Baldwin served as associate pastor at Resurrection Parish on Chicago's West Side from 1959-1964, and associate pastor at St. Joseph's, Round Lake, when in October of 1968 he entered active duty in the U.S. Navy.

After Chaplains School in Newport he was Squadron Chaplain for Amphibious Squadron One out of San Diego making two deployments to Vietnam. Transferred to NAS Lakehurst, New Jersey in 1970, he remained there until early 1974 when receiving orders to the Third Marine Division in Okinawa, Japan. In the spring of 1975 he then was ordered to the Coast Guard "Boot Camp" in Alameda, California. It was the summer of 1978 that he crossed the country to serve for two years on USS GUAM out of Norfolk. From 1980 to 1981 he was in Newport at the Chaplains Senior Course living at Salve Regina College. Crossing the country once again he was transferred in 1981 to Treasure Island in San Francisco and another tour with the Coast Guard, functioning as chaplain for the Pacific Area and 12th District. In 1974 he again was assigned to Japan but this time to Marine Air, MCAS Iwakuni. In August of 1986 he again returned to Newport as Command Chaplain whence he leaves this July to the billet of Fleet Chaplain, Commander in Chief Naval Forces, Europe, with an office in London.

R.I. Hibernians Elect McEnery and Roderick

NEWPORT, R.I. — The Rhode Island AOH elected William J. McEnery of Providence as state AOH president at the recent state convention held in Newport. Mrs. Esther Roderick of Newport was elected Ladies AOH president.

McEnery, who served the AOH as national president in 1964-1966, is a past state president. Other state officers elected were Christopher J. Behan of Newport, vice president; Patrick F. Murphy of Newport, secretary; Capt. John P. Kane of Newport, retired Navy captain, treasurer; Joseph E. Fanning of Providence, organizer; M. Frank Gibney of Providence, chairman of Catholic Action; Raymond J. Burns of Freedom for All Ireland, Michael J. Behan Sr., Norman J. King, Leo T. Downey and Thomas J. Finn will serve as state directors.

Other state LAOH officers elected were Genevieve Mathison of Newport, vice president; Helen Treible of Newport, secretary; Mary P. Kane of Newport, treasurer; Dorothy M. Dolan of Pawtucket, chairman of missions; Bridget Redden of Newport, historian; and Helen LaPierre of Newport, chairman of Catholic Action.

The Rev. Brian Kane of Los Angeles, a native of Ireland and a retired Navy commander, was the principal celebrant at the convention Mass held in St. Mary's Church. The Rev. George B. McCarthy, deputy national LAOH and state AOH chaplain, was the principal speaker at the convention dinner. Business sessions were held in Hibernian Hall. Miss Mary E. Bradley of Central Falls, national LAOH president, installed the LAOH officers assisted by Mrs. Mary L. King of Newport, a past national LAOH president.

Vice President Behan, who is also serving as deputy national AOH organizer, was endorsed by the convention as a candidate for national AOH office at the national AOH convention next year in Arlington, Va. Historian Burns was proposed for national AOH life membership. Director Finn was named as Hibernian of the Year by the Dennis E. Collins Division One of Newport.

STATE NEWS: Pennsylvania

By John S. Kane

The AOH in Pennsylvania lost two special brothers with the passing of John J. Bonner and Joseph F. Murrin. Each fought courageously for the principles of the AOH, not only in the state of Pennsylvania, but on the national level as well.

John served as National Director from 1984 to 1986. He was also the first AOH President of Luzerne County, and was currently serving as Pennsylvania State Organizer and president of St. John Neumann Division 2, Wilkes-Barre. The funeral Mass was celebrated on Wednesday, June 21, 1989 at St. Mary's Church in Wilkes-Barre by former State Chaplain Rev. Charles Mulrooney, with three former national presidents, one former national secretary, one national director and three past state presidents in attendance.

Joe served as Deputy National Organizer for the state of Pennsylvania from 1986 to 1988. He was currently serving on the State Board and was Vice-President of the Lackawanna County Board, and was also treasurer of the J.F.K. Division 1, Scranton. Joe was one of the first organizers of the Irish festivals which were held from 1984 to 1988 to benefit Project Children. The funeral Mass was celebrated on April 8, 1989 at the Immaculate Conception Church by Lackawanna County Chaplain Rev. Patrick J. Healey.

This reporter, for one, considers himself a lot richer for having known these two hard working Hibernians.

We would like to remind all the Divisions in the state of the project that has been undertaken by the State Board, which is to establish a fund raiser for the parochial school system in the state. If every Division in the state could raise just $500.00 in your area, look what that would do for the school system! Let us, as Hibernians, keep these schools open in our state. If you would like more information on this project, you can write to me, John S. Kane, 2731 Pittston Ave., Scranton, PA 18605.

A Farewell to a Friend — John Bonner

By EARL WATSON

Perhaps Red Gilroy put it best: "To know John Bonner was to love him."

John J. Bonner is gone now. He was laid to rest on Wednesday morning at the age of 62. Much too young. It's our good fortune in life that our paths had crossed and we were able to call John Bonner a friend.

To know him was to love him. John Bonner was a respected, and in many quarters, revered, human being—loved by his family for his devotion and compassion (particularly to his mother, Anna Cooney Bonner); admired by his legion of friends and associates for the warmth he radiated.

His passion in life was the Ancient Order of Hibernians (AOH) which he served fervently, not only locally, but on both the state and national levels.

Fact is, he was a national director.

Through his AOH affiliation, he was particularly proud of having been named to the committee to erect a Freedom Foundation memorial at Valley Forge for Irish nationals who were Congressional Medal of Honor recipients.

The granite obelisk, donated by the government of Ireland, was erected at Valley Forge's Medal of Honor Grove, adjacent to the Three Chaplains Memorial.

We recall doing the story for John when he attended the dedication ceremony at Valley Forge several years back. He was excited over his role in perpetuating the memory of those Irish citizens who performed such extraordinary acts of bravery for their newly-adopted land. Their names are inscribed on the marker.

That he was highly-respected by his AOH colleagues is evidenced by their assemblage at his funeral.

They came from Massachusetts and Delaware, from Connecticut and New York.

They came from Virginia and New Jersey . . . three past national presidents, three past national directors. The AOH entourage from Pittsburgh alone numbered a score or more.

They came to bid farewell.

We got to know John Bonner on a personal basis when he was tending bar for his brother, Jerry, at the Carriage Stop Inn, Plains, our lunch-time stop. (He subsequently went into partnership with brother Frank, at Squire Green's on Public

Philadelphia Division 39 Celebrates 100 Years

PHILADELPHIA, PA: On May 21, 1989, Division 39 here celebrated its 100th Anniversary. Chaplain, Fr. Thomas Doyle, S.J., celebrated Mass at St. Leo's Church in Tacony, where Division 39 was organized on May 15, 1889. After Mass a cocktail hour with hors d'oeuvres and dinner was held.

Many distinguished guests and friends attended the celebration, among them National President Mike Coogan; Past National President Joe Roche; State Vice President Vince Scully; and State Ladies President Margaret Cooney. Congressman Robert Borski, State Senators Hank Salvatore and Joe Rocks and City Councilpeople, Franny Rafferty and Joan Krewjowski were also in attendance.

Proclamations and letters of congratulations were received from President Bush, Governor Casey, Pope John Paul II, the United States Senate and House, and the State Senate and House. We also received a very special proclamation from City Council making May 15, Ancient Order of Hibernians Day in Philadelphia. National President Mike Coogan presented us with a plaque from the National Board. Everyone who attended had a grand time. We hope Division 39 will continue to show the world what is meant by Friendship, Unity, and Christian Charity.

STATE NEWS: Virginia

In a splendid atmosphere of Unity, Friendship, and Christian Charity the Virginia Divisions of the AOH held their biennial State Convention in Fredericksburg. The highlights of the Convention were the election of officers, setting of goals for the incoming team, the discussion of the AOH National Convention to be held in Virginia in July 1990.

After the presentation of Committee reports and introduction of Division presidents the principal order of business was the election of officers. For the coming term of two years the following officers were chosen: President James Carmody, Vice President Arthur P. Grimley, Secretary Al Malz and Treasurer A.C. "Charlie" Moore.

The Convention announced its support for Irish Immigration, and the MacBride Principles. After being briefed on the play "Sister Ignatius Tells All for You," members declared the play as un-Christian, un-Catholic and non-Irish. Members were encouraged to ban and refuse to see the play.

In discussions of the National Convention of 1990 Chairman Arthur P. Grimley asked for volunteers and helpers and set two meetings for the summer months. The first meeting will be held in Woodbridge, VA on July 11, and the second, in Annandale, VA on August 8. Art may be reached at (703) 971-6831.

All was not business; a fine golf tournament was held until the rain chased all towards the courtesy room. An ice breaker on Friday night heard Past National President Joe Roche cite the benefits of the MacBride Principles and request that all support the passage in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

A Saturday evening Mass was celebrated by State Chaplain Father John J. Munley. At a Saturday night Banquet/Dance, Declan Kelleher, 1st Secretary of the Irish Embassy, addressed over one hundred members and their ladies. After Sunday morning Breakfast all headed for their way back home.

The Ladies AOH for the Commonwealth of Virginia held their Convention co-jointly with the men. Always more efficient, their group elected the following officers for the coming two year term: President Eleonore Grimley; Vice President Joan Malz; Secretary Patricia Romano; Treasurer Joan O'Brien; Irish Historian Alice Moore; Catholic Action, Maria Herlihy; and Chair of Missions, Mary Thayer. National Vice President Dolores Volker attended and administered the oath to the new officers.

The chairman for the Convention arrangements was James Herlihy of Arlington's John F. Fitzgerald Division. The host was President John Ahern of the Thomas Meagher Division, Fredericksburg.

Woodrow Wilson Speech Subject Of Article

ST. PAUL, MINN.: "Woodrow Wilson, Self-Determination and Ireland (1918-19): A View from the Irish Newspapers" is the topic of an article in a recent issue of "Eire-Ireland" Quarterly published by the Irish American Cultural Institute here, according to Editor James J. Blake.

"For peoples living in belligerent countries, the signing of the Armistice on 11 November 1918 was cause for wild rejoicing," writes author Ronan Brindley in assessing the mood of many subjugated people, including the Irish, towards peace and self-determination.

In his Fourteen Points speech of January 8, 1918, Wilson spoke of the need for ethnic self-determination. No longer would peoples be compelled to live under tyrannical and alien political rule.

Irish leaders of the 1918-19 period fully expected that the Peace Conference would hear and then heed the pleas for a self-governing Ireland. That such pleas were ignored resulted in bitter conflict in Ireland.

Funds Donated for Battlefield Monument

FREDERICKSBURG, VA: The AOH in America, the Virginia Chapter, has donated $1200.00 towards the restoration of the Butterfield Monument in the Fredericksburg National Cemetery, part of the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park.

The Thomas Meagher Division of the AOH, located in Fredericksburg, began the effort to seek contributions for the restoration of the monument two years ago, and they received funds for this effort from other Hibernian Divisions in the State of Virginia. The Irish Brigade commanded by General Thomas Francis Meagher was part of the second wave of attacking troops on Marye's Heights during the Battle of Fredericksburg in December of 1862.

The Hibernians donated the funds for the restoration of the monument to commemorate the heroic acts of the British Brigade during the battle, and also in hopes that this type of donation effort could be done elsewhere in America.

Mr. Nick Veloz of the NPS who performed the work the week of June 13, said, "There are many monuments throughout the country such as the Butterfield Monument in need of repair and restoration." Acting Superintendent Sandy Rives said, "This generous donation will allow the National Park Service to restore

Hibernians Honor Colonel on Retirement from U.S. Marines

WOODBRIDGE, VA:—On June 30th, members of the AOH joined Colonel and Mrs. Pat Collins and their family at the Marine Corps Barracks, Washington D.C. on the occasion of Pat's retirement from the U.S. Marine Corps. In a moving and fitting ceremony, Pat was retired with full military honors by the Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Alfred M. Gray.

Colonel Collins joined the Marines in 1951 and had accumulated thirty-eight years of active duty. He had served seven tours overseas, had twenty short Fleet Marine Force deployments, and served eleven tours in the FMF. He is the last certified Master Parachutist and Airborne Pathfinder on active service.

He is one of only thirty-three Marine Officers to serve three full tours in Vietnam. He is one of the few Marines left who served in Korea, Vietnam, Cuba, Lebanon, Dominican Republic, Thailand, and Laos.

Colonel Collins has been awarded a variety of decorations, including the Silver Star, the Navy-Marine Corps medal, five Bronze Stars, three Purple Hearts, two Vietnamese Crosses of Gallantry and the Lebanese Order of the Cedar. He leaves the Corps as one of the longest serving and most highly decorated Marines on duty.

Pat is married to the former Moira O'Falloon of the Bronx, New York City. They have a son, Michael, and three daughters, Roisin, Kara, and Moira.

Pat served with LtCol Jack Dowd. The Hibernian Division from Woodbridge, Virginia, of which Pat is a member, was named in memory of LtCol John A. Dowd, USMC.

Upon retirement, Padraig O'Collins is planning to move to Skibbereen, West Cork, Ireland, to pursue an academic life of studying and teaching Celtic studies and modern Irish History.

STATE NEWS: Virginia

In a splendid atmosphere of Unity, Friendship, and Christian Charity the Virginia Divisions of the AOH held their biennial State Convention in Fredericksburg. The highlights of the Convention were the election of officers, setting of goals for the incoming team, the discussion of the AOH National Convention to be held in Virginia in July 1990.

After the presentation of Committee reports and introduction of Division presidents the principal order of business was the election of officers. For the coming term of two years the following officers were chosen: President James Carmody, Vice President Arthur P. Grimley, Secretary Al Malz and Treasurer A.C. "Charlie" Moore.

The Convention announced its support for Irish Immigration, and the MacBride Principles. After being briefed on the play "Sister Ignatius Tells All for You," members declared the play as un-Christian, un-Catholic and non-Irish. Members were encouraged to ban and refuse to see the play.

In discussions of the National Convention of 1990 Chairman Arthur P. Grimley asked for volunteers and helpers and set two meetings for the summer months. The first meeting will be held in Woodbridge, VA on July 11, and the second, in Annandale, VA on August 8. Art may be reached at (703) 971-6831.

All was not business; a fine golf tournament was held until the rain chased all towards the courtesy room. An ice breaker on Friday night heard Past National President Joe Roche cite the benefits of the MacBride Principles and request that all support the passage in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

A Saturday evening Mass was celebrated by State Chaplain Father John J. Munley. At a Saturday night Banquet/Dance, Declan Kelleher, 1st Secretary of the Irish Embassy, addressed over one hundred members and their ladies. After Sunday morning Breakfast all headed for their way back home.

The Ladies AOH for the Commonwealth of Virginia held their Convention co-jointly with the men. Always more efficient, their group elected the following officers for the coming two year term: President Eleonore Grimley; Vice President Joan Malz; Secretary Patricia Romano; Treasurer Joan O'Brien; Irish Historian Alice Moore; Catholic Action, Maria Herlihy; and Chair of Missions, Mary Thayer. National Vice President Dolores Volker attended and administered the oath to the new officers.

The chairman for the Convention arrangements was James Herlihy of Arlington's John F. Fitzgerald Division. The host was President John Ahern of the Thomas Meagher Division, Fredericksburg.

Woodrow Wilson Speech Subject Of Article

ST. PAUL, MINN.: "Woodrow Wilson, Self-Determination and Ireland (1918-19): A View from the Irish Newspapers" is the topic of an article in a recent issue of "Eire-Ireland" Quarterly published by the Irish American Cultural Institute here, according to Editor James J. Blake.

"For peoples living in belligerent countries, the signing of the Armistice on 11 November 1918 was cause for wild rejoicing," writes author Ronan Brindley in assessing the mood of many subjugated people, including the Irish, towards peace and self-determination.

In his Fourteen Points speech of January 8, 1918, Wilson spoke of the need for ethnic self-determination. No longer would peoples be compelled to live under tyrannical and alien political rule.

Irish leaders of the 1918-19 period fully expected that the Peace Conference would hear and then heed the pleas for a self-governing Ireland. That such pleas were ignored resulted in bitter conflict in Ireland.

Funds Donated for Battlefield Monument

FREDERICKSBURG, VA: The AOH in America, the Virginia Chapter, has donated $1200.00 towards the restoration of the Butterfield Monument in the Fredericksburg National Cemetery, part of the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park.

The Thomas Meagher Division of the AOH, located in Fredericksburg, began the effort to seek contributions for the restoration of the monument two years ago, and they received funds for this effort from other Hibernian Divisions in the State of Virginia. The Irish Brigade commanded by General Thomas Francis Meagher was part of the second wave of attacking troops on Marye's Heights during the Battle of Fredericksburg in December of 1862.

The Hibernians donated the funds for the restoration of the monument to commemorate the heroic acts of the British Brigade during the battle, and also in hopes that this type of donation effort could be done elsewhere in America.

Mr. Nick Veloz of the NPS who performed the work the week of June 13, said, "There are many monuments throughout the country such as the Butterfield Monument in need of repair and restoration." Acting Superintendent Sandy Rives said, "This generous donation will allow the National Park Service to restore

WOODBRIDGE, VA:—On June 30th, members of the AOH joined Colonel and Mrs. Pat Collins and their family at the Marine Corps Barracks, Washington D.C. on the occasion of Pat's retirement from the U.S. Marine Corps. In a moving and fitting ceremony, Pat was retired with full military honors by the Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Alfred M. Gray.

Colonel Collins joined the Marines in 1961 and had accumulated thirty-eight years of active duty. He had served seven tours overseas, had twenty short Fleet Marine Force deployments, and served eleven tours in the FMF. He is the last certified Master Parachutist and Airborne Pathfinder on active service.

He is one of only thirty-three Marine Officers to serve three full tours in Vietnam. He is one of the few Marines left who served in Korea, Vietnam, Cuba, Lebanon, Dominican Republic, Thailand, and Laos.

Colonel Collins has been awarded a variety of decorations, including the Silver Star, the Navy-Marine Corps medal, five Bronze Stars, three Purple Hearts, two Vietnamese Crosses of Gallantry and the Lebanese Order of the Cedar. He leaves the Corps as one of the longest serving and most highly decorated Marines on duty.

Pat is married to the former Moira O'Fallon of the Bronx, New York City. They have a son, Michael, and three daughters, Roisin, Kara, and Moira.

Pat served with LtCol Jack Dowd. The Hibernian Division from Woodbridge, Virginia, of which Pat is a member, was named in memory of LtCol John A. Dowd, USMC.

Upon retirement, Padraig O'Calline is planning to move to Skibbereen, West Cork, Ireland, to pursue an academic life of studying and teaching Celtic studies and modern Irish History.

The Physically Challenged Irish Youth Team - 1989

By JACK FLATLEY

For the first time in my life I have seen the ultimate in human endeavor. The Irish Youth Team competed in the New York State Games for the Physically Challenged. Twenty in all; 12 boys, and 8 girls. They ranged in age from 10 to 21 years. They came from all parts of Ireland — North, and South.

These wonderful physically challenged kids came here to Long Island and we were blessed by their presence. They brought with them a special kind of love, and they touched us all with the Lord's blessings. They came, they loved, and they conquered. They won many medals: 53 gold, 12 silver, and 6 bronze. A remarkable achievement for a small team from a small country. They proudly brought their medals back to Ireland. They showed everyone what they could do. They were an inspiration to all the other less fortunate kids back home in Ireland. Their message was clear: "Look what I can do; you can do it, too."

The members of the Irish Team are called less than perfect, and they are called handicapped, but they showed us all the meaning of dedication. They trained hard. They had to. The competition was tough. And they won the gold. Two won 4 gold medals. They all won our admiration. They left us with something. I call it "The Misty Eyes." It starts with a tightness in the throat. Then your eyes get wet and misty, and the eyes stay wet. What you feel is admiration in your heart for the courage, for the courage of their mother and their father, and for a family filled with love for this special child. What you feel is the love of life. A special kind of love.

Life can start in many ways. An infant can be born into great wealth, or an infant can be born into poverty. A newborn can be perfectly formed, or the new miracle of life can be born with a tragic affliction — to face life with crippled limbs, blindness, deafness, or many other severe disabilities. When a child born this way is part of a loving family it is indeed wonderful. The touch of God's love becomes part of their life. This special love is passed to everyone they meet and touch. When these youngsters achieve great heights of excellence, they are success images to all the youngsters who have known only failure. When you think of your own problems — and we have many — think of these kids and what they have overcome. They have defeated life's failures and life's shortcomings. They are champions. Your problems look small when you realize what they have been through and what they have conquered.

I have recalled many times in my mind the day of the young girl's 60 Meter dash for the spinal cord injured. Ten-year-old Gillian Boyle was entered in this event. She was at the starting line facing tough competition. At the gun they were off. At 40 meters Gillian was second. We were all yelling for her. She gave it all she had, her arms flailing, her little legs pumping. She won by a stride. Gillian Boyle, of Dublin, lay on her back on the track with sweat running out of her little body. Tears were streaming from her eyes. She had won the gold for Ireland. I confess, my eyes were wet. I had a case of the misty eyes. This wonderful little girl born with a body less than perfect (Spina Bifida), a lovable little angel from Ireland, taught me a lesson in determination and courage. God Bless her and her team mates.

I will never forget 12-year-old Catherine O'Neill, from County Wexford, winning a silver medal in Table Tennis. Catherine was born without arms. Seventeen-year-old Helen Winters, and 17-year-old Francis Hyslop each won an unbelievable 4 gold medals. Helen also won the coveted Governor's plaque award for outstanding athlete of the Games. She is a powerful swimmer. She is also a wonderful young lady. Francis was the picture of determination. His foes didn't stand a chance.

The event and medal results are tabulated below.

The Team stayed at Hofstra College dormitories. They were treated to many fine sightseeing trips and entertainment events before and after the Games (June 1st—June 4th).

On one memorable day the Team enjoyed the Circle Line trip around Manhattan. The Captain was Tom English from Achill Island, County Mayo. Tom was thrilled to have the Team aboard and treated the boys and girls to a fine time. The Team marched in the Memorial Day Parade at Lynbrook, Long Island. They were proud to march, wheelchairs and all, with Steven McDonald, the New York City police man disabled in the line of duty. Officer McDonald also attended an AOH reception for the Team given by the Nassau County Board. The Team was treated to dinners, barbecues, concerts and many treats provided by the AOH.

The Team was accompanied by some parents, coaches and relatives from Ireland; and also nurses and chaperones from the AOH. When the Team arrived home in Ireland they were greeted by President Hillary, and were given a rousing welcome by

J.F. KENNEDY DIV. 5 OPEN HOUSE

The John Fitzgerald Kennedy Division V, of Prince Georges County, Maryland, and the Ladies AOH held an open house recently at their meeting room in Holy Family Parish, Mitchellville, MD. Our division members were joined by prospective new members, and our guests. The latter included Rev. Michael A. Kidd, Division chaplain; Rev. Brendan McCormack, District Board chaplain; the cultural attache from the Embassy of Ireland, Mr. Daire O'Cruidain and wife Mary; National Board Director James J. Carmody; Ladies District Board President Catherine Back; Vice Pres. Joan Videns; Irish American Club President, Isabelle Gallagher; District Board Treasurer Paul Collins; and Deputy Grand Knight, Council 224, Knights of Columbus, Wash. DC, Jack Gallagher.

The gathering was entertained by the talented Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company singers, seventeen members participating.

Mr. Daire O'Cruidain spoke on immigration and its impact on both Ireland and America.

A buffet prepared by the ladies, under the leadership of Jennie Gibbons, and an open bar were thoroughly enjoyed.

STATE CONVENTION

For the first time in thirty-one years Bridgeport's JFK Division AOH and LAOH hosted the biennial State of Connecticut Convention. It was held at the Bridgeport Hilton on June 24th and 25th. After the meetings on Saturday, a Mass was held at St. Margaret's Shrine on Park Avenue, Bridgeport. It was concelebrated by Fr. Edward J. Small, state and county chaplain; Fr. Michael Flynn, Bridgeport chaplain; Fr. William A. Nagle, Stamford chaplain; and Fr. Joseph Piccarillo. All were welcomed to St. Margaret's by a large banner at the entrance and to the tune of Patrick J. Mallaney's bagpipes.

The procession included National Director Frank Kearney and Past National President LAOH Sheila Clifford, State officers, Chairpersons John Collins and Marge Sheehan (presidents of Bridgeport Divisions); and concelebrating priests.

A banquet followed at the Bridgeport Hilton at which Bishop Michel Egan, newly installed Bishop for the diocese of Bridgeport, was the guest speaker. Music was provided by Christy O'Connor and band. One of the highlights of the banquet was the presentation by Past National President Sheila Clifford of lifetime membership upon Mae King.

The newly elected state officers are President James Gallagher, East Lyme; Vice-President Thomas Egan, Sandy Hook; Secretary Edward McGuinness, Norwalk; and William McCarthy, East Hartford. The newly elected state Ladies AOH officers are President Mary Daly, Stamford; Vice-President Anne Marie McEvoy, Bridgeport; and Secretary Kay Egan, Danbury.

Gallagher, an oceanographer with the Naval Underwater Systems Center, New London, and a member of the New London AOH Division, announced that the State AOH is developing educational programs for members and for the general public in Irish and Irish-American history. Hibernian programs also include: a fair U.S. immigration policy for Irish immigrants; the end to discrimination against Catholics by companies doing business in Northern Ireland (the MacBride Principles); the sparse coverage by the U.S. news media of human and civil rights violations in Northern Ireland; and the dictatorial control of news reporting by the British Government regarding Northern Ireland; peace with justice in Northern Ireland and eventual reunification with the Irish Republic; and, support Right to Life.

Resolutions passed at the convention decried the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision to relate free speech to the burning of American flags; and condemned the unconstitutional imprisonment of Joe Doherty in U.S. jails for over six years without a charge, and the U.S. Attorney General's Office for its unilateral order to deport Doherty to Britain, thus reversing the decisions of

In the year 1992, the massing of twelve Nations in Europe to form the European Common Market will create a formidable force of over 300 million advanced people competing for market share of the world's wealth. We must ask ourselves how Ireland will fare in this convulsion of national identities aimed at a united front.

During the recent European summit meeting, Irish Prime Minister Haughey welcomed the British Prime Minister's "very positive affirmation" of Britain's intention to join the European monetary system. He strongly disagreed with Prime Minister Thatcher's rejection of the massive transfer of resources to "peripheral regions such as Ireland" and emphasized the need for extra aid to bring about economic convergence. As to the proposed European Council social charter, the Irish Times quotes Mr. Haughey as saying he was "on a different wave length" than Mrs. Thatcher.

Ireland's geographical location as an island on the far western reaches of Europe has always placed it at a trade disadvantage in terms of shipping costs. Ireland lacks the ease of access enjoyed by the closely nested countries of the continent. The resultant dependency on the British, inevitable or contrived, has played a significant role in Irish history.

The broadening of the Common Market strategy enhances Ireland's opportunity to circumvent dependence on Britain with concomitant reliance on Europe for the resources to take its place as a sovereign nation and equal partner in the world community.

On the Northern Ireland scene, Britain's annual outlay of billions of dollars coupled with the monetary drain of Irish Government security, is bound to arouse increasingly circumspect scrutiny as the European nations search for the efficiency and harmony needed to propel their 1992 venture into the next century.

"Whence does this mysterious power of Ireland come? How is it that she has forced generation after generation to stop the whole traffic of the British Empire in order to debate her domestic affairs? Ireland is not a Daughter race. She is a Parent Nation."
Winston Churchill

Remarks of Robert Roche, Albany Attorney, At the New York State Convention Banquet — Auburn, NY, July 15, 1989

Mr. Roche was commissioned by the AOH National Board to observe the "Reading of the Appeal" of the Birmingham Six case in London, England.

Reverend Fathers, Honored Members of Dias, My Sisters and Brothers, Friends:

When I was called by the National Organization and requested to consider representing this ancient and venerable organization at the reading of the appeal of the Birmingham Six case in London, I was certain that I had been mistaken for my namesake, the Past President of the National AOH, but in my peculiar sense of justice the invitation had been extended and I would not let it be withdrawn.

Similarly, I am honored this evening to have been asked to speak to your State Convention at this Installation Dinner and I will overlook the fact that the first 38 choices on your list were in some way unavailable for this evening's festivities. I do not mind being chosen so lowly on the list but I am grateful for the unavailability of all those who preceded me on the list. What I am about to say to you is not going to be comfortable for a lot of people who will hear it and I am certain that the words that I am about to impart to you, if heard and understood by you, will offend some. I apologize for the offense, for no offense is intended, but I do not apologize for the truth of what I am about to say.

In Dublin there is graffiti on a wall which reads "British Justice — no Irish need apply". Indeed, what I saw in London that passed for the British common law would confirm that wall philosophy. When that assignment came to me there was a little doubt in my mind that I must go because it was something that I had always wanted to do and, like yourselves, always wondered where the opportunity would present itself for me to somehow become involved in what is both a holy and necessary cause. That is the freedom of the six Counties of the North and the unification of the Irish people. As an Irish-American, and one not nearly as close as I should be to the events in Ireland, Northern Ireland and England, I had to understand more fully who, what and why were the "Birmingham Six" and, as an American of Irish decent, to what extent the "Birmingham Six" affected or impacted my life and why would I leave family and home for the purpose of traveling there to attend and observe this appeal process?

I had determined that as your representative this must indeed be a just cause because I would not lend the name of my family, nor my father, nor of my profession, nor could I lend good names, individually or as this venerable and beloved organization, to an act of murder. Like many of yourselves, I was born, educated, and presently live and, in God's wisdom, will probably die in this Country and, hence, I am not Irish but I am American. I had to understand so I tried to read and research the transcripts of the original trial, contemporary newspaper articles that were given to me by members of the National AOH, commentaries in the press in the intervening years, the text and transcripts of the appeal which had been argued months before in London, and I read the book by Christopher Mullen entitled "An Error in Judgment". Having read, researched, attempting to study to the extent of my limited capabilities, and understand as God would allow me to, what was at issue in the "Birmingham Six" trial, I was convinced to a moral certainty that these six men, now spending life in prison in Her Majesty's prisons, are six innocent men. With that background, I undertook the assignment from the National Organization and I went to London.

I was sent to London merely as an observer but I returned from London as a witness. I am a witness here this evening to injustice, and to the travesty and sham that is passed off upon the world, and especially upon the Irish, as British Common Law.

As a speaker invited here to your Installation Dinner, of your State Convention, I would love to say the magic words or speak the right formula to stir your hearts to action but, given the limitations of myself, I will be happy if, indeed, I can but tweak your conscience. Having put into a framework of what the "Birmingham Six" was, and is, and why I was there to observe this appeal as an Irish American, I can tell you that this case helps us all focus on several things.

It helps us focus on the hypocrisy of British Justice or more correctly "Injustice" where Irish are involved. There is no question having studied the case, nor is there in the minds of anyone who takes the time to do that, that four guilty men are walking about free while six innocent men who did not commit this bombing are spending the rest of their natural lives separated from their loved ones and families in Her Majesty's jails. A man named Christopher Mullen, who is now a Labor Member of Parliament, but at the time was trained simply as a journalist, has interviewed all four people who are, in fact, guilty of the crime and they have admitted the complicity to him.

There are two people who made the bombs and there were two people who planted the bombs. Mr. Mullen has interviewed them all. He has quoted them and referred to them in his book "Error in Judgment". British Intelligence, which would like us to believe they are the best the world possesses, claim they could not, did not, and were not able to find any other than the six imprisoned Irishmen, who are responsible for this heinous crime. What this case also helps us focus on is the bad luck that these men had to be Irish. They were unlucky enough to be Irish in the wrong place, at the wrong time and, of course, to be cursed with the wrong nationality.

The protocol and the outline on which the British case is premised is that these men, five of the six involved, were on a train which had left Birmingham at or about the time of the detonation of the bombs in question. They were on their way to the night ferry to Belfast, Northern Ireland. The train in which they were riding had departed Birmingham coincidentally close to the time of the explosions and they were admittedly going to Belfast, at least in part, to attend the funeral of Jamie McDade, a known and admitted IRA bomber who had died the week before. These men were stopped because of their accents and their place of origin. They were interrogated, they were beaten, and oh how they were beaten. They were charged. They were then falsely tried and unjustly convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. I suggest to you that if we change only one element in that equation and if we were to put on that train from Birmingham to the night ferry to Belfast, six Chinese or six Dutchmen or six Americans, those people would never have been stopped, would never have been interrogated or beaten, certainly would never have been charged, could never have stood trial and would not today be convicted. Hence, I suggest to you that the facts clearly indicate that these six men are guilty of one thing. That is the same thing of which each and every one of us in this room, to some degree or measure ourselves are guilty. That is, of being Irish.

Some of you may have heard and, indeed, it is true, that four of the six men gave confessions and the British prosecution relied very heavily on those confessions. Three of them were written or at least signed. These men signed their names to the bottoms of pages that their interrogators had prepared. Let me discuss with you, while I avoid all the titillating details that lawyers are wont to go on about for hours in the evidence of cases that the sum total of these confessions that were beaten out of, discussed at some point later, claim to the place of the detonation may have used today at K-Mart or. The confessions further claim that these bombs were placed in rather d of a bar and the other in an area near a cigarette dispensing device.

These confessions, however, are forensic evidence produced by the clearly proved beyond any doubt, bombs had, in fact, been carried in valises or suitcases and that they places that would be best known to intimately familiar with the tavern place was in the storage room be stored and in the other in a caretaker's closet between the restrooms.

In summary, the confessions to the British Midlands Police, confessions happened. And yes, indeed, my beyond doubt that these men were tortured that these men show between Lodging photos indicate that they to which the British respond to prisoners. That they were not, in fact, that they were "saved" by their prisoners were so upset with them. The most deplorable and unappealing is that the British expect the worst. Their arrogance borne of ignorance.

As an American attorney I was inherited the British Common Law dependence we would at best have and be the poor step children of the see the "real" Common Law, the people, and what I saw was a disaster. What we have in this Country, as concerned, is light years ahead of the Common Law. The abuse of the law nothing more than the extension of flagrant abuse and is some indication of the Executive department of the British Crown for all things Irish been perverted to serve the needs Government and cannot be trusted in this country. The present is a prisoner in an American jail, in the British press and the Anglo-manipulated this Country in which the control is not simply at medium trols our government to a fault. T you see here, what your politicians hear in this Country. One must as fighters and all seven disparate patriots, why then is every reformer President, in a dishearteningly received his Knighthood from the earned it.

The "Birmingham Six" also help us to focus necessarily and pain-violence in Northern Ireland. Dan O'Connell, the great liberator, who is who is revered on an equal status ago that blood makes a poor mor- of liberty. No ocean can obscure the produced twenty dead, one hundred ty dead were not soldiers, were not And, basically, they were children of in an English City, to which their employment at home. They were only somehow the war that is going on in and are thinking back to the War of and Thompson sub-machine guns, I know who are parents, that there is child.

This enormous crime were acts of people. These people are alone in Nor- they have been abandoned by a govern- and a government in this country its Anglo conspiracy. They look to and we have too oft in the past ing as they remain alone, desperate, of desperate, lonely, angry and the deaths of children and innocent e on them and allowing this to con- problem and have not provided any unity today cannot stand alone and ow it, and especially the Irish in the d know it. We certainly should know an people and as Americans, to offer an army of occupation, a viable alter-also clearly into focus the stereo- of all things Irish. Their press is at press, on the day of the murder of who had represented young men and unities in Northern Ireland, gunned essence of his wife and small children, piece of "IRA terrorists". This was the same British press, so content and so smug in its entrenchment, that it referred to that sweet and gentle man, Sean McBride, the founder of International Amnesty, on the day of his funeral, as "an evil man". It is this press which announces, and is echoed here in the press which is controlled in this Country by the Anglo conspiracy, that the violence in the North is the result of a "sectarian" conflict which is, in fact, a misnomer. It is that assertion of a sectarian conflict that creates the atmosphere that has become sectarian. They have created their own terror and they produce and promote that terror. Not once in that British press will you see the three letters "IRA" without having those three letters followed by one of the four words of modification — Murderers, Thugs, Killers or Terrorists.

And we, as American-Irish, must understand that this conspiracy has reached into our Country. Because Joe Doherty, who presently is in the Federal House of Detention in New York City, is an Irishman who's a victim of British injustice using the American Justice Department as its accomplice. This man is the political victim of this Country's conspiracy with Ten Downing Street. Despite the many lawsuits he has won in the American Courts, he still remains in our prison for not violating a single American law. These people have perverted justice in your Country to show you how completely they disdain freedom for anyone who stands against them. Your Justice Department has been insidiously taken over and has become an extension of the Executive Department of Ten Downing Street. I submit to you, if Joe Doherty's last name were Solzenytsen he would not be in prison.

If you disbelieve the extent to which the Anglo conspiracy has frustrated and subverted American justice, consider what they did in promoting the abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine. That Doctrine, which John Kennedy used to keep the missiles out of Cuba in 1962, was scrapped when President Reagan sided with a European power against an American Country in the dispute in the Malvenas. We no longer have any right to call upon the Monroe Doctrine. We no longer have any right to have it regarded or respected by European countries because we have abandoned it. Perhaps it would be well for all of us to remind our representatives in Washington that at Yorktown General Cornwallis surrendered his sword to an American General. That was a war we won. We are no longer a British Colony.

And yet my friends there is a solution that is not a new solution. We are a Christian people and members of this honorable and beloved organization must become a part of that solution. The solution was quoted by Eamon DeValera in 1921 in a letter to Lloyd George during the period of the negotiation of the cessation of hostilities during the Irish War of Independence. DeValera wrote to Lloyd George

"The Ulster question must remain for the Irish people themselves to settle. We cannot admit the right of the British government to mutilate our Country either in its own interest or at the call of any section of our population. We do not contemplate the use of force. If your Government stands aside we can effect a complete reconciliation."

That was written sixty-eight years ago and the solution, the touchstone of which remains valid today, is premised on "if your Government stands aside". We, all of us, you and I must help the British Government through the eyes of our Government see the wisdom of standing aside and thus become a part of the solution for Northern Ireland. We must awaken in the American people that genius they have for good, for the genius of the American people to do good is bottomless and beyond doubt. Cardinal O'Connor, upon his return from Northern Ireland last year, reminded us all that it was our duty as a Christian people to provide peace. But as the Cardinal very correctly pointed out, it is not enough simply to stand by and condemn the violence without providing a viable alternative in the form of a formula for the peace.

In this Country, I am told by politicians that statisticians report to them nearly one-fifth of all Americans of voting age, have or claim some Irish heritage. Yet the fact remains that one-fifth of all the native inhabitants of the island of Ireland remain in British bondage. We must, to fulfill our inheritance as Americans and sons and daughters of true Liberty, work pressure, politic and lobby tend the unholy alliance, the Anglo conspiracy with Ten Downing Street. We must put into the equation for Irish unity and freedom, American support for both of those causes. If we do not and if we simply allow these desperate, angry, frustrated and lonely people to continue to resort to acts of violence as their only expression of a desire to be free men, then we cannot escape the blood of the next child or children who will die in Northern Ireland, from being on our hands, yours and mine. If we are capable of aiding the solution and do not, we are a part of the problem. As such, we cannot escape the responsibility for whatever ensues.

The occupation of Northern Ireland by the army of the British Empire is un-American. It is un-Christian. Britain must be told by our government that the price of our continued support of them in the world marketplace and in the community of nations is a phased plan of withdrawal of their troops from Northern Ireland. I am convinced that if Northern Ireland were in the South Atlantic and were not as close as it is to Britain, it would be free today. If the British, in fact, can give up what Gladstone called the "Jewel of the Empire" in Hong Kong by a phased withdrawal, there is no legitimate reason why it cannot leave Northern Ireland. There is only an emotional, arrogant and myopic explanation. Such cannot pass muster when measured by the objective standards of fair men everywhere.

Indeed my good sisters and brothers, we as Americans have tried the great American answer for all things. Money. We have tried to buy peace in Northern Ireland and that has failed. We have been caused to support tens of millions of dollars to the International Fund and all we have done with that money is such mindless exercises as to build tennis courts for the army of occupation. We must, as Americans of Irish decent, stand for the same principles in Northern Ireland for which our sons, our brothers and ourselves have fought all over the globe. We must do this to be true to our inheritance as Americans. The catalyst for peace and unity in Ulster and Northern Ireland is not in Northern Ireland. It is not in Whitehall. It is not in Dublin. It is here in the Irish-American community which has too long been silent in speaking to its Government regarding the lack of peace and the disunity which exists in Ireland today.

This evening at Mass, or tomorrow morning, you will undoubtedly exchange the peace of Christ, the simple sign at the sacrifice of the Mass. Let that sign of Christ's peace remind you that there is, in your Country of origin, no peace in the six counties under British domination. Let us pledge ourselves that the reunion of the six Counties to the Republic will be in His name for we are a Christian people. We may never abandon His law even when others do, and as Irish perhaps, especially when others do.

For those of you who assume that your voice is but one, and one person cannot make that much of an impact, I submit to you and I offer for your edification one small voice, one giant of a person who by her own beauty and simplicity is a Saint living and walking amongst us today. I offer you the simple commitment and complete dedication of Mother Theresa of Calcutta. With only a fraction of such commitment as here we can effect this reconciliation and we must effect this peace and reunification for Ireland not only for the Irish but for ourselves. We must do this to redeem, to ransom and to justify our principles as Americans of Irish decent, the same principles for which this Country has stood all over the world.

Yet, these six men, these known as the "Birmingham Six", suffer their incarceration with dignity and never once have called for one drop of revenge. It is not revenge they seek — it is simply justice.

You and I must let Lords and Commons know that we will, this ancient and venerable Order, will be the conscience of our Government, and we will persist until Britain does, if for no other reason but that they must, LET OUR PEOPLE GO. I beseech you, let our voices all rise from this small community in Upstate New York as one voice and repeat the chant to be taken up in the hearts and breasts of men of good conscience all over the world to LET OUR PEOPLE GO. Let it be heard in the Halls of Whitehall and Storemont, in Congress and Dail Eiran, to LET OUR PEOPLE GO. While any of us remains in chains, none of us are free. That call, those four simple words, while at the same time striking fear in the hearts of the oppressors, will swell hope in the hearts of the oppressed. That will be the cry of all right thinking men of whatever race, color or creed, for freedom knows no race. Freedom knows no color. Freedom has no creed.

Then in God's time, but soon, with the help of His Grace, that great desire and dream will be accomplished. By His cross and crucifixion he taught us to endure and suffer. But on Easter He also taught us the triumph of faith. We have faith in Him and faith in our people. In His time and in His name we undertake this cause, for we are a Christian people. The British will, if for no reason other than that they must,

LET OUR PEOPLE GO.

Thank you.

Remarkable Growth In Irish Studies Explored

GALWAY, IRELAND: "One of the most remarkable developments in educational circles on both sides of the Atlantic in recent years has been the growth in the number of Irish Studies courses being offered in hundreds of colleges and institutions of higher education. These courses — concerned with the Irish experience in its historical and contemporary settings — draw on many of the traditional disciplines, such as History, Geography, Literature, Politics and Sociology, together with Drama and Theatre, and Music. The desire to understand, in some way, what has been going on in Northern Ireland during the past twenty years was probably a significant factor in stimulating interest in Ireland as a focus for academic study. But the natural interest of the children of Irish immigrants in different parts of the world in the 'roots' has undoubtedly been a major factor also," said Director Seamus O'Grady of the University College Galway summer program.

In any event, the number of colleges in the U.S.A. which offer some form of Irish Studies program is now to be counted in hundreds, as the Directory of the American Conference for Irish Studies clearly shows. Canada has also experienced a growth in the number of colleges offering Irish Studies courses, while the British Association for Irish Studies (though late in following the American example) is now busy coordinating Irish Studies courses in British colleges, including a new degree course in Irish Studies at Liverpool University. Australia and New Zealand will, no doubt, be following the American example in due course.

"The Colleges at home in Ireland have been greatly encouraged by these developments," added O'Grady. "The links between the Irish Colleges and Colleges in the U.S.A. with an Irish Studies program are numerous, and have proved most fruitful over the years. Some formal bilateral links exist between institutions on both sides of the Atlantic, but much more remains to be done in this area. However, of invaluable assistance in the teaching of Irish Studies is the publication of the first comprehensive Irish Studies: A General Introduction text-book, developed by a team of academics from various disciplines in University College, Galway."

Based on their experience over several years of teaching the highly-regarded Galway Irish Studies Summer School the book is published in the U.S.A. by Barnes & Noble (in association with Gill & Macmillan in Ireland). It ought to stimulate further interest in what has been an extraordinary growth area of academic study.

It Just Isn't Done, Old Boy

LONDON — The Church of England's proposals to allow the ordination of divorced men and of men married to divorced women were defeated in the House of Commons yesterday.

Lawmakers voted 51 to 45 to reject the proposals, which had been approved by the General Synod, the church's governing body, and by the House of Lords, the unelected upper chamber of Parliament.

JOE DOHERTY An Urgent Appeal

Thomas W. Gleason
President Emeritus
Longshoremens' Association
Battery Place, Suite 1530
New York, New York 10004
or Mr. Gleason:

It is with very great urgency that I write to request your intercession with the National Council of the AFL-CIO with reference to the case of Irish political prisoner Joseph Doherty. The recent political decision of Attorney General Richard Thornburgh not to even have a hearing for Mr. Doherty's request for political asylum, issued it was to the Congress and the media, but not to Mr. Doherty's attorneys, on the eve of a long national day celebration, was sneaky andpicable in its cowardice and unethicity of the high government position held by Mr. Thornburgh.

His decision comes as a severe blow to a multitude of loyal and patriotic American citizens who hold deep and intense interest for the well-being of Joseph Doherty as well as a personal stake in the continuation of our American way of life. These people are active participants in American society in the public and private sectors as well as in the various communities of our nation. They represent a clear national consensus and are in fact the true essence of America. They include federal judges, senators, congressmen, elected officials at the state and local levels, church hierarchy, clergy, professors, journalists, union leaders, attorneys, doctors, police officers, human and civil rights workers, ethnic organization leaders, political parties, and thousands upon thousands of ordinary American citizens.

As you know, Mr. Doherty has prevailed with every aspect of his case at every level of the federal judiciary and in the immigration courts. As you also know, the federal judges have stated and affirmed that Joseph Doherty was not and is not "a terrorist", nor even a common criminal. It is this affirmation that caused a groundswell of grass-roots support across the country not only for Mr. Doherty personally but also to demand adherence to and respect for the American Constitution.

Despite the very impressive and continually growing support for this issue, Irish American organization leaders have been turned down by the Reagan and Bush Administrations in our requests for meetings although we notice that British officials have easy access to our elected officials and in fact parade carte-blanche through the halls of Congress and the White House to convey their points of view to our government officials who were elected by us to uphold, protect, and defend our Constitution. Considering all of this, we invite your further consideration of certain events which have occurred over the past few years:

- U.S. support of Britain's war in the Malvinas/Falklands in violation of the U.S. alliance with Argentina;
- U.S. war planes leaving from England rather than from the more strategically convenient location of American ships stationed in the Mediterranean for a bombing mission in Libya;

- The presence of British intelligence agents in the basement of the White House as the Iran/Contra deal was being hatched;
- The refusal of the Executive branch to abide by the rulings of the Judiciary, a co-equal branch of government, in the Doherty case;

- Removal of the "political exception" clause from the US-UK Extradition Treaty, the only extradition treaty of its kind among our nation's one-hundred or so extradition treaties with foreign nations;
- The practice of censoring by visa denial certain democratically elected Irish officials who represent Irish reunification;

- The unprecedented British buying-up of American companies making the British the largest by-far foreign investor in the United States;
- The acceptance by Casper Weinberger and Ronald Reagan of "knighthoods" from the British monarchy.

While each of these events, when considered individually, might seem innocent in and of themselves, when viewed in their entirety, however, seem to present a pattern of planned American support of the British political agenda without regard for the consequences to the United States of America. This should be of very grave concern to every American citizen since we are now justified in asking if our government is still the free and independent United States of America or if we have been reduced once again to being a mere British colony. Is the government still a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, or have our leaders made us a colonial extension of the United Kingdom?

Although we do not wish to minimize the importance of the civil rights and liberties of the individual in this case, Joseph Doherty, the ramifications of the Doherty case go far beyond his illegal and immoral imprisonment. What is of equal importance here, as symbolized by the Doherty case, is the very fabric of American society: The U.S. Constitution with its separation of powers, its recognition of the independence of the judiciary, and its respect for the rule of law. All of this is being ignored and ridiculed in order to placate the political whims of the British government.

If the Administration is permitted to continue its political games of catering to the political agenda of a foreign government in contravention of the Constitution and defiance of the will of the American public, this will surely be the beginning of the end of American independence. To state that the Executive branch has been anti-Irish and anti-Catholic in its dealings with the government of Britain is one thing; to clearly demonstrate that the Administration has been acting in an unconstitutional, illegal, immoral and un-American manner is something entirely different.

It is quite an amazing adventure to read through the Attorney General's recent decision not to allow an open hearing for political asylum for Joseph Doherty; to see in black and white how the facts of this case are twisted by the Attorney General by his own use of the very verbiage and "facts" which have all been repeatedly rejected by American courts at the trial and appellate levels.

Let me cite for you one such example of how the Attorney General employs political chicanery and disinformation in his recent decision. The Justice Department states that "Doherty is due to be deported to the United Kingdom to serve a life sentence imposed for the murder of Captain Herbert Westmacott nine years ago in an ambush of British soldiers in Ulster. Captain Westmacott left a wife and young child."

Not only does this statement contain gross lies, it also contains misleading and incomplete information as can be ascertained in the court records. In the first instance, it was four Irish Republican Army soldiers, including Joseph Doherty, who were ambushed and fired upon by eight members of the Special Air Services (SAS), an elite British undercover unit responsible for the assassinations of many Irish people "suspected" of operating militarily or politically against British rule in Ireland. Joseph Doherty's unit was forced to defend their lives in a gun battle wherein a British SAS leader died. Mr. Doherty's life sentence was ordered by a juryless British "Diplock" Court, whose sole Loyalist judge was appointed to his position by the British government to carry out British policy in Ireland.

In what country of the western world would a man be charged and convicted of the crime of "murder" under such circumstances? Yet the Justice Department arrogantly persists in misleading Congress and the media by rehashing British propaganda which holds no basis in fact. With reference to this situation, His Eminence John Cardinal O'Connor of the Archdiocese of New York has written: "... I sense there is something very wrong in this case in which so many positive decisions on Mr. Doherty's behalf have not had any substantive results."

To that statement, we say "Amen." It is obvious to us that a clear attempt is being made by the Administration to subvert and circumvent the duly rendered decisions of American courts and of the Justice Department's own immigration authorities. Thornburgh quotes the State Department as having "specifically determined that it is in the foreign policy interests of this country that (Joseph Doherty) be deported to the United Kingdom."

What American interests will be served by such a decision? Certainly not the interests of the multitude of passionate supporters of justice for Joseph Doherty; certainly not the integrity of the federal courts whose reasoned wisdom inspires the public confidence; certainly not the numerous governmental bodies and locally elected officials who have gone on record in support of justice for Joseph Doherty. The Executive branch should not sell out the true national interests to a foreign power which is obsessed with getting revenge on a man who dared to challenge its control over a small area of a small defenseless country, Ireland. The deportation of Joseph Doherty to the United Kingdom will most definitely not be in the interests of the broad national consensus of the American public and will indeed serve only the selfish interests of the British government.

It is clear from Attorney General Richard Thornburgh's unconstitutional political decision in this case that he is a hand-picked appointee of the Reagan-Bush Administration whose tactics are similar to those of other hand-picked appointees in the National Labor Relations Board who have shown themselves to be anti-labor and unsympathetic to the problems of the working man and woman in America. While the nation's attention is being focused upon the issue of flag burning, it is obvious to us that President Bush is secretly burning the American flag on the Doherty issue to the hurrahs of the British government.

You can now understand the urgency with which we request the help of the AFL-CIO's National Council. Because the Justice Department has rendered a political decision in opposition to every legal victory obtained in this case, it is up to the American people to obtain a political decision from the Congress to overrule the Attorney General. If the Administration, acting on behalf of the Thatcher government, succeeds in returning Joseph Doherty to British jurisdiction, we can only imagine the torture which awaits him based upon the documentations and condemnations of British torture and of Irish political prisoners by Amnesty International and the European Court for Human Rights. If such an event should occur right under our noses and despite our efforts to the contrary, God help America!

We would very much appreciate your help, Mr. Gleason, in the following ways:

1. Would you please bring this case immediately to the attention of Lane Kirkland and the National Council of the AFL-CIO for their support? We desperately need a strong and vigorous endorsement from the National Council as well as its commitment to help us to diligently overturn the Attorney General's immoral political decision.
2. Would you please communicate to President George Bush that his Administration's abuse of the Constitution and disrespect of the American judicial system are not in keeping with his call for a kinder, gentler nation and will bring him no support from the American people.

Regardless of what future victories might be rendered from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 2nd Circuit, the Administration is intent upon returning Joseph Doherty to the British by hook or by crook. We must act quickly; time is of the essence and the final chapters of Joseph Doherty's case are now being written. His well-being and that of the American Constitution are at stake. We are not asking the Bush Administration to become pro-Irish or anti-British. We ask only that it become pro-American.

Thank you very much, Mr. Gleason, for your prompt attention to this very urgent request for help as well as for all of your past support of Irish American issues.

JOE DOHERTY Major Principles at Stake

Mr. Lane Kirkland
President, AFL-CIO
AFL-CIO Building
815 Sixteenth Street, N.W.
Washington, DC 20006
Dear Brother Kirkland:

I am writing to enlist the support of the AFL-CIO by having the Executive Council take a stand on an urgent matter involving two principles that have always concerned the organized American labor movement. These have always spurred us on and eventually led to what we have accomplished: namely, that "right" is superior to "might"; and that the law of the land is above any petty individual and the government itself.

In a case I will refer to, these basic beliefs, to which you and I and the members of the AFL-CIO's Executive Council subscribe, have been subjected to the severest test and strain over the past six-plus years.

The preceding and present U.S. Administrations have pursued single-minded, unrelenting efforts to deliver an Irish fugitive, Mr. Joseph Patrick Thomas Doherty, into the eager hands of a British government that has already decided his certain fate of lifetime imprisonment under conditions that have merited international notoriety and condemnation. The point, however, is that in 1984, a distinguished judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, after looking at all of the factors involved, concluded that the conduct in Northern Ireland for which Mr. Doherty was cited and all the "various and sundry charges" which were connected to his escape from prison and flight to our shores were political acts and therefore were not extraditable offenses under a Treaty of Extradition between the United States and Great Britain. Since that time, decisions of a succession of U.S. Courts and of an immigration judge and repeated rulings of the Board of Immigration Appeals have consistently dismissed the claims of the Executive branch and of the British government that Mr. Doherty must or should be deported to the United Kingdom. Notwithstanding these judgments and determinations as well as the mounting groundswell of support for Mr. Doherty in Congress and at State and City levels on an ever-broadening base, two attorneys-general have rejected them out-of-hand. Messrs. Meese and Thornburgh have twice refused to recognize Joe Doherty's legal right to reopen the deportation proceedings and to obtain a hearing on his claim for political asylum (or to withhold deportation).

It is not disputed that Joseph Doherty was found to have caused the death of a British army officer during an exchange of gunfire in May, 1980, between members of a special British army unit and the organized Provisional Irish Republican Army contingent of which Doherty was a member. Yet, the U.S. Judge, sitting as an "extradition magistrate", found that in the context in which that act was committed by him, his status at the time, the nature of the organization (PIRA) on whose behalf he committed it — including the instructions given him to escape and to flee — and the particularized circumstances of the location where the act took place "present the assertion of the political offense exception in its most classic form." Matter of Doherty, 599 F. Supp. 270, 278 (SDNY, 1984). The Court emphasized that the acts committed by Doherty were not tainted by "purely personal reasons such as personal vengeance or vindictiveness"; and that they were neither indiscriminate nor were otherwise "beyond the parameters of what and should properly be regarded as encompassed by the political offense exception to the Treaty"; nor did they violate international law or run afoul of the international standards of civilized conduct. Rather "... it was in its inception an outgrowth of the notion that a person should not be persecuted for political beliefs".

I feel certain that your own reading of the enclosed court decisions and the summary of proceedings to the time of the most recent turnaround by Attorney General Thornburgh on the eve of our own Independence Day, as prepared by Mr. Doherty's counsel, will lead you, along with the labor leaders on the Executive Council, to agree with the sentiments of John Cardinal O'Connor. His Eminence thus summarized his impressions:

"... I sense there is something very wrong in this case in which so many positive decisions on Mr. Doherty's behalf have not had any substantive results."

The basic issue is not whether or not one agrees with Mr. Doherty's actions; or whether or not one is committed to his cause; or whether or not he properly entered this country as a regular immigrant. Rather, the issue is: whether a human being who has sought protection under our laws, including a treaty approved by the U.S. Senate which thereby became the supreme law of the land, for what has been held by a series of objective tribunals to have been political acts for which he is entitled to a hearing in order to obtain asylum (something which, in these times especially, has been permitted individuals in the hundreds and thousands from countries all over the globe), should be required to continue to languish through a seventh year in a federal prison in Manhattan or to be deported under circumstances which defy all precedent and the Treaty itself, simply because the past and present Administrations are having a "love-fest" with the Thatcher regime. Not only is the "political offense" in its "most classic form"; an abuse of power by our own governing regime, as it tramples on the legal rights of a powerless and defenseless individual, is present in its "most classic form", too.

This should all sound a very familiar ring in the memories of the veteran labor leaders on the Executive Council who will recall how power was misused and our laws were perverted to subdue their and their members' rights as persons and as workers. It is now their right, privilege — indeed obligation — to speak up whenever such incidents are brought to their attention, because in doing so they are not just safeguarding the principles of law that govern our society, but also are protecting their own members from arbitrary excesses of politically-based authorities. It is as true for them now as for all of us ever before that "eternal vigilance is the price of freedom".

I therefore urge you to include Joseph Doherty's desperate situation on the agenda of the forthcoming meeting of the AFL-CIO's Executive Council. I ask you to propose a resolution addressed to the President and to his Attorney-General, along the lines suggested by the enclosed Congressional draft of a resolution. It should specifically put them on notice that the House of Labor and its millions of law-abiding workingmen and their families take vigorous exception to their refusal to give due and prompt process to Joseph Doherty, an individual who is entitled as of right to a hearing of his well-established claim for political asylum, which is in keeping with the Administration's own vision of a "kinder, gentler nation".

If the responsible heads of organized labor fail to add their strong and respected voices to all of the others who have protested and petitioned on Mr. Doherty's behalf, and if, as a result, he is denied his legal and moral due and is turned over to those who view and treat him as an uncommon criminal, then they will knowingly and silently suffer the Administration's outrage. Should this ever happen, we and the principles that we stand for will all be diminished.

I am not asking for an act of "courage" — only for an act of "commitment".

GROWING AWARENESS

I enjoy reading (and writing) this newspaper, and the letters to the editor show an awareness growing in our people that I think will become a source of pride to the Hibernian Family.

The letter of Eileen M. Heaphy, acting director, office of Northern European Affairs, to brother Finucane is Classic Baloney and I thank John for sharing it with us. After reading it I say, "Let's face it, we must stand together, because we are ourselves alone."

Remember how Ian Paisley could come and go at will in this country? He would be on all the talk shows and received the red carpet treatment by our government. Remember how Irish Catholic and Nationalist representatives had trouble getting into the country from the occupied counties and how after a while they couldn't even get arrested? Because someone did not want them to have a forum to explain the other viewpoint.

Ian Paisley was denied a visa finally because some of our own stood up for a change. He was not stopped by any government agency interested in fair play. It was a case of sauce for the gander being sauce for the goose.

Let Paisley come in and let Gerry Adams come in and let the people decide in their own mind who the terrorists are.

As far as the International Fund for Ireland is concerned, there are already storm clouds on the horizon about the fund. Watch and listen.

The courts have decided in Joe Doherty's favor; but what is his fate. Will justice prevail? How about British influence?

Eileen M. Heaphy must think we fell off the back of a turnip truck. If so she is badly mistaken.

CONCERN OVER DUE PROCESS

Dear Mr. Attorney General:

We are writing to express our interest in a matter currently under your consideration regarding the case of Mr. Joseph Doherty. At this time, you are reviewing briefs submitted by Mr. Doherty and the Immigration and Naturalization Service to decide if this case should be permitted to continue through the appropriate channels as provided by law.

As you know, this is an extremely complex case which has been litigated extensively both before the immigration authorities and the courts. During this process, Mr. Doherty has consistently received favorable rulings in his various attempts to prevent extradition, withhold deportation and to pursue his claim to asylum in the United States.

The purpose of this letter is to ask that you permit the process of adjudication of Mr. Doherty's claim for political asylum and withholding of deportation to continue. We view with concern the most recent effort of the INS to depart from the normal course of proceedings in this case by asking that you intervene to prevent consideration of Mr. Doherty's claim for relief from deportation.

We are particularly concerned that the principle of due process be upheld in this case. We firmly believe that this central tenet of the American legal system must be maintained. Our Constitutional process is respected throughout the world because it is viewed as one which allows for equitable administration of justice. We believe that a ruling which prohibits Mr. Doherty from having his claim for relief from deportation ruled upon will reflect poorly on our judicial system, especially given the underlying facts and circumstances unique to this case.

As the highest law enforcement officer in the United States we ask that you allow judicial proceedings in the Doherty case to continue without further delay. We urge you to allow for due process in this case by permitting Mr. Doherty to pursue his claims through the normal processes. This is nothing more than what the law requires, and it would be unfortunate to deprive Mr. Doherty of the due process which has been afforded to other asylum seekers in this country.

TRUE DEMOCRACY

Editor:

A contrast in two international elections, prompts this letter.

The recent election in (communist) Poland, which brought Solidarity into the government, permitting Polish citizens outside of the country to vote.

However, in the (democratic?) 26 county Ireland June election, absentee ballots from citizens away from "their" country were not permitted. Astonishing to say the least.

It would seem that Irish citizens become politically disenfranchised once they step out of their homeland! In no way is this democracy in Ireland. I am amazed that Irish American publications have not editorialized on this subject.

Let the members of I.I.R.M. (Irish citizens) who are advocating immigration reform in the United States, start advocating for voting reform (and democracy) in Ireland. DEMAND the right of Irish citizens to vote while away from Ireland. Put Ambassadors and Consuls, abroad, to work on this subject. Does not their job entail this service to Irish citizens?

With regard to Irish immigration, this problem starts in Ireland, not the United States. To me, it is a brain drain and leadership drain, which Ireland cannot afford in this day and age. Ireland needs those well educated young people. Without their future expertise, Ireland faces the bleakest of tomorrows.

The young people of Ireland should be encouraged to speak up for democratic rights, both at home and abroad (per the brave and patriotic Chinese students). If so, there would be no need for an I.I.R.M. in the United States. Their voice would be in the forefront of a true democratic Irish government, which is needed so much today.

To the young Irish people I would advise — do not permit a governmental wall of silence to prevail in the form of censorship. Let the light of truth shine into those dark corners of government. Remember, it is the people who are primary, not politicians.

DIVISION PRESIDENT BERATES BOSTON PAPER

Editor,
Boston Globe

To the Editor:

On Tuesday, June 20, 1989, you printed a feature article concerning the opening of a bar and restaurant in Fields Corner, Dorchester Section of Boston, by three new Irish Americans.

The questioning of the origin of their down payment for the bar and restaurant, and the printing in your newspaper of their immigration status was unusual, to say the least.

When was the last time you questioned in your paper where or how Jewish Americans or Vietnamese Americans borrowed or saved money to open a business in greater Boston? And why should you?

When did you ever print the immigration status of any new American that opened a business in greater Boston?

The Globe's attack on these three new Irishmen should be condemned by the greater Boston community for what it was, vulgar and offensive racism.

The Globe's attack on the new Irish, demonstrated by that feature article, was obviously calculated to discourage the hard-working new Irish, and to prejudice their success in business, and was un-American and beneath contempt.

A.O.H. Digest

Dear Dave,

May I, through the medium of the Digest, try to express, on my own behalf and on behalf of the Irish physically handicapped team, our heartfelt thanks to the members of the AOH in New York for their great concern and generosity.

By their efforts we were able to bring over a team of physically handicapped young people to take part in the New York state games for the physically challenged. The Irish team came from North and South of our country, Belfast, Omagh, Enniskillen, Westmeath, Kilkenny, Carlow, Dublin and Wexford. They very successfully competed in the games, winning 53 Gold, 12 Silver, and 5 Bronze medals. They also enjoyed the great hospitality of the people of New York and New Jersey, which never ceases to amaze me.

We were taken on many trips and were guests at many functions. The result of the whole project was that twenty young physically handicapped people had the vacation of a lifetime; that, but for the goodness of the AOH, would seem to be only the impossible dream.

To be part of this project has given me immense pleasure. Next year we will return with twenty more magic children. We are extremely grateful to Jack Flatley and Jack Irwin for heading our fund-raising committee and to Bill Burke of the Bank of Ireland, treasurer of the fund, to Nick Murphy, past national president, AOH Trustee, along with Ralph J. Lamberth, borough president, Staten Island.

I am extremely proud to be a member of Div. 14, AOH, Nassau County, who worked so hard on this labor of love.

In closing I say with deep sincerity — fellow Hibernians, take a bow, you are a living example of all that is good in the great United States and all that is great in the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Dear Tom:

It was a pleasure to talk to you on the phone last week. As I told you, the AOH stands ready to assist you in any way it can concerning the upcoming legislation and the right to life issue.

The AOH is proud of over 153 years of service to the church, and this is yet another example of our commitment to that history. As you know we have Divisions throughout Florida, as well as many friends.

We fully realize that this legislative battle will be as hard or even harder than our successful MacBride Bill campaign, but are willing to put forth the same great effort.

Please let me know what you need, what we can do and when you want anything done. I, along with the entire AOH membership in Florida, look forward to working again with you and your staff.

Questions and Answers

By Mr. William T. Malone

NOTE: Please forward questions to Mr. William T. Malone, Department of English, Center for Irish Studies, The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064.

Barrett

Q. Could you please inform me about the meaning of my family name. Kathleen Fee Barrett, Newton Square, PA

A. Related to Fee are O'Feighney, Feheny, Hunt, O'Feighrey, Feehery, Fey, and Feeney. These names originate from the Irish O Fiach, meaning 'descendant of the hunter.' The meaning accounts for Hunt being related to your name. When English became the predominant language, many translated their names directly into the English Hunt.

Certainly many of the English settlers with the name Hunt who lived within the English pale did not translate their name from Irish. But many of the numerous Hunts in the West of Ireland did. Today the name Hunt is most popular in Cos. Roscommon, Mayo, and Sligo. O Fiachna is still found in Co. Sligo while O Fiachra is found in Co. Tyrone. While in Co. Waterford Hunt usually replaces Fee or Fye coming from the original Irish O Fiacha or O Fiach. Even in Irish there is a tendency to abbreviate or shorten names of three syllables with an internal h to names of two or if possible, as is the case with Fee and Fye, to one syllable. Considering the low literacy rate of 16th-19th c. Ireland, it is not surprising that people shortened their names so that they knew how to write them.

McCormick — McCormack

Q. Both John G. McCormack, Somerset, New Jersey and Vincent D. McCormick, Binghamton, New York, asked about their surnames.

A. There is no real distinction between the two spellings. The name means 'son or Cormac', and has been in such long usage that it dates at least to the early third century B.C. when Cormac mac Art ruled as High King at Tara Hill. But the legend has it, and we all know about Irish legends!, that the name was first given to a Leinster prince who was born while his mother was journeying in a chariot. As a result she dubbed the boy 'son of the chariot.' Because of its antiquity, we can safely presume that the name appeared independently in many different places. Some argue that the name had a late appearance, but it is in County Cork records as one of the leading families from 1576 on. During that time, a McCormack of Muskerry raised an army to help the powerful Desmond clan in its rebellion against the forces of Queen Elizabeth. Such a move indicates its financial and political status.

McCormack and O' McCormack are variants and the latter was the surname of prominent Bishops of Killaloe in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. The Annals of the Four Masters show the deaths of Fermagh Mac Cormacks who resided there until 1431. The next important mentionings of this family are physicians from County Armagh. One of their descendants was the Arctic navigator Robert Mac Cormack (1800-90). Perhaps the most noteworthy twentieth century Mac Cormack was John Count (1885-1945), the tenor honored on commemorative stamps issued jointly by Ireland and the United States in 1984. Currently the name seems most popular in counties Roscommon, Galway, Clare, Cork, Down, and Derry, where smaller families dwelt.

Murray

Q. Both Jack Murray, Portland, CT, and Ben Coyle, Akron, Ohio inquire about the surname Murray.

A. Most of the Murrys living in Ireland are of Scottish extraction, especially those residing in Ulster. The name derives from a Germanic tribe called the Moravi meaning 'warlike.' From Central Europe the tribe migrated to Scotland and eventually into Ulster, where they affixed their name to the region now called Shire of Moray, which has come to mean 'great water' (mor = great, and ar = water).

Related names are Murry, MacMurry, MacMorrow, and Gilmore. Gilmore has two sources: MacIlmurray and Mac Giolla Mhuire and are really different names but are Anglicized to resemble and seem akin to your own.

The ancient surname O Muireadhaigh pronounced like the name it eventually became, O Murry; but is now more often than not Murray. Many notable ancient septs existed but the most important seems to be the Ui Maine. Their seat was Ballymurry—town of Murry, in the barony of Athlone, county Roscommon. At about the same time that this sixteenth century family flourished an important Cork sept of Ballywiddan in the barony of Carber, Cork used the variant O'Murrihie. This appears to be a localized spelling.

Donogh O'Murry served as Archbishop of Tuam from 1458-84 and created the 'church-state' referred to as the Wardenship of Galway. A

FREEDOM FOR ALL IRELAND

Message from
Freedom for All Ireland
Committee Chairman

I do hope that you and your families are enjoying the summer which, unfortunately, is slipping by too quickly. In a few short months from now, I will be calling on you to help me raise funds to help the prisoners' families in Northern Ireland. We have been helping them for the past 15 years and I can assure you that they are most grateful to us for our assistance.

Therefore, please give some thought to having your Division run a fund-raiser earmarked for the Freedom for All Ireland Committee. I will communicate with every Division in the very near future relative to this.

On July 23rd, a beautiful plaque was dedicated to the memory of our departed brothers and sisters who gave their lives in the cause of Irish freedom. This plaque was erected at the foot of a tree which was specifically planted for this purpose in the North Woodmere Park, North Woodmere, New York. The project was undertaken and successfully completed by Division 3, Nassau County, and the ceremony was very impressive and well attended by members and dignitaries. It was a touching and lovely ceremony befitting the memory of our deceased brothers and sisters who made the supreme sacrifice for Ireland.

I know I will get your fullest cooperation when I call on you for your support and am sure you will do your all to see — Ireland, United and Free!

The Truth About War

BY WILLIAM V. KENNEDY

One of the hallmarks of the Christian era has been an attempt to put some sort of limit, however marginal, on the barbarities of war. Translated in recent centuries into secular, humanitarian terms, that effort at least succeeded in defining a specific, protected status for prisoners of war and civilian non-combatants and an international moral condemnation of certain classes of weapons, notably chemical and biological agents.

The post-World War II war-crime trials powerfully reinforced this nascent form of international law by holding individual military officers responsible for their actions — even if those actions were approved or ordered by higher authority.

That structure of restraint, weak and sporadic in its effectiveness though it has been, is all that separates our civilization from that of Attila the Hun. Yet that precious structure is being steadily undermined by the concept of covert war.

In the trial of Oliver North, we are seeing reassertion of the Nuremberg defense: "I was only following orders." Supposedly that justified lying to Congress and the public, destruction of incriminating documents, and evasion of the law on an international scale, all in the name of fighting a war opposed by a majority of the American public and its elected representatives in Congress.

Not only in Central America but in Angola and Afghanistan as well, the United States has armed and supported people whose methods and ultimate objectives we could not control, but for whose actions the US stands accountable. What accounting have we demanded from our clients of the prisoners of war known to be in their hands? Indeed, we have not even demanded that North Vietnam bring to trial the people who tortured our own prisoners of war, the humiliating end product of our refusal to submit the Vietnam war to a constitutional test.

In Britain, what amounts to a covert war against the Irish Republican Army is eating away at a system of civil liberties we are wont to consider as the fountainhead of our own. The British government has sought for 20 years to criminalize the IRA by denying what even British Army intelligence has long recognized, that the IRA is a well-organized, disciplined military force with clear nationalist credentials and which attempts to limit violence to military and police targets.

The denial of prisoner-of-war status to the hundreds of IRA men and women now in British, Irish, and indeed, American jails was challenged in the 1981 hunger strike in which eight IRA men and two Marxist Irish National Liberation Army men starved to death rather than accept criminal status.

Yet it is now clear from records being made public by the Spanish police and from investigative reporting by British commercial television that nothing less than a military-style ambush was carried out against three unarmed IRA operatives in Gibraltar — the clearest form of recognition a nation can give that it is fighting a war, not a police action.

From former Manchester police chief John Stalker's report of his aborted investigation of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, it is apparent that the Gibraltar ambush was part

On Immigration

In this, the 101st Congress a concerted effort will be made by the Irish American community to ensure the passage of a comprehensive, beneficial, immigration reform bill which will legalize all undocumented Irish immigrants and which will allow young Irish people to immigrate legally to the United States again.

As the oldest, largest and most respected Irish American organization the AOH will be expected by the Irish American community to take the lead in the immigration reform campaign.

The AOH Immigration Committee is presently organizing the fantastic national network of the Order into an effective lobbying force. The objective of this lobbying force will be to co-operate with other Irish American organizations like the I.I.R.M. and the P.E.C. in the campaign to secure vital immigration reform.

Nynex Opposes
MacBride Principles

BY ANN LOUGHMAN

Recently NYNEX share owners held their annual meeting at Radio City Music Hall, N.Y.C., where the MacBride Principles were discussed. N.Y.C. Comptroller, Harrison Goldin, introduced a share owners proposal on behalf of the N.Y.C. Employees' Retirement System, the N.Y.C. Teachers Retirement System, and the Pension Funds of the N.Y.C. Fire and Police Departments. Co-sponsorship of this proposal was shared with the State of Connecticut Retirement and Trust Funds, the N.Y.S. Common Retirement Fund and the Christian Brothers Investment Services.

Comptroller Goldin presented a forceful introduction in support of the MacBride Principles and the importance of NYNEX support for these principles as the corporation has a subsidiary in Northeast Ireland, BIS Beecom Ltd of Antrim. The NYNEX board of directors of a pattern established years ago.

Thus, like the Reagan administration and now the Bush administration policy on Central America, the very structure of British democracy is being convulsed by an attempt to deny to itself and to the world that a war is a war, and, therefore, subject to the codes of constitutional and international behavior established so painfully over the centuries.

The covert-war idea was a direct transfer from the British Secret Service to the nascent US Central Intelligence Agency via the person of William (Wild Bill) Donovan of the World War II Office of Strategic Services, who, like Oliver North, thought it was a "neat idea."

Northern Ireland facility (American Brands).

Nine persons addressed the assembly of share owners and board of directors including Robert Loughman, chairman of the MacBride Chapter Irish Northern Aid. Loughman stated in part, "The voice of the NYNEX share owners was not a weak voice as indicated by Delbert Staley, but a voice of strength, as it was a grass roots voice of people who believe in human rights. It is not enough to say, as does NYNEX, you are for human rights. It does not matter if human rights are violated in Russia, South Africa, the Philippines, or the little six occupied counties of Ireland. We have an obligation to actively oppose these violations. Let the voice of NYNEX sound out loud and strong for human rights. That voice will be heard if today we vote to support the MacBride Principles."

An African American employee of NYNEX spoke out strongly in favor of the MacBride Principles as did a representative of the major union (CWA) representing the workers of NYNEX.

The proposal failed but received enough votes to permit it to be introduced at the 1990 share owners annual meeting. Now is the time to set the pace so we may be successful in 1990. There are many thousand share owners who automatically surrender their Proxy Statement to the board of directors without indicating any votes contrary to the wishes of the directors. We have an obligation to inform these people, through the communication media, of the importance of their vote and the righteousness of voting in favor of the MacBride Principles. We ask all NYNEX share owners to speak out for the oppressed. Speak out at the 1990 annual meeting for the oppressed people of the six occupied counties of Ireland.

island my fathers called home Inexplicably innate qualities inside call from across the sea and seem to give me knowledge of of the Island from which they roamed...

The Island the sons of my fathers called home
They tell me the way it used to be Their blood and my blood mingled back down through time
The same organic being growing forward in a line.

The cries of your murdered children and the sorrow that you've reaped
It tears at my soul the price you pay,
But 100 years I've been away.

Questions and Answers

By Mr. William T. Malone

NOTE: Please forward questions to Mr. William T. Malone, Department of English, Center for Irish Studies, The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064.

Barrett

Q. Could you please inform me about the meaning of my family name. Kathleen Fee Barrett, Newton Square, PA

A. Related to Fee are O'Feighney, Feheny, Hunt, O'Feighrey, Feehery, Fey, and Feeney. These names originate from the Irish O Fiach, meaning 'descendant of the hunter.' Q. Both Jack Murray, Portland, CT, and Ben Coyle, Akron, Ohio inquire about the surname Murray.

A. Most of the Murrys living in Ireland are of Scottish extraction, especially those residing in Ulster. The name derives from a Germanic tribe called the Moravi meaning 'warlike.' From Central Europe the tribe migrated to Scotland and eventually into Ulster, where they affixed their name to the region now called Shire of Moray, which has come to mean 'great water' mor=great, and shire=water.

Related names are Murry, MacMurry, MacMorrow, and Gilmore. Gilmore has two sources: MacIlmurray and Mac Giolla Mhuire and are really different names but are Anglicized to resemble and seem akin to your own.

The ancient surname O Muireadhaigh pronounced like the name it eventually became, O Murry; but is now more often than not Murray. Many notable ancient surnames existed but the most important seems to be the Ui Maine. Their seat was Ballymurry=town of Murry, in the barony of Athlone, county Roscommon. At about the same time that this sixteenth century family flourished an important Cork sept of Ballywiddan in the barony of Carber, Cork used the variant O'Murrihis. This appears to be a localized spelling.

Donogh O'Murry served as Archbishop of Tuam from 1458-84 and created the 'church-state' referred to as the Wardenship of Galway. A

FREEDOM FOR ALL IRELAND

Message from
Freedom for All Ireland
Committee Chairman

I do hope that you and your families are enjoying the summer which, unfortunately, is slipping by too quickly. In a few short months from now, I will be calling on you to help me raise funds to help the prisoners' families in Northern Ireland. We have been helping them for the past 15 years and I can assure you that they are most grateful to us for our assistance.

Therefore, please give some thought to having your Division run a fund-raiser earmarked for the Freedom for All Ireland Committee. I will communicate with every Division in the very near future relative to this.

On July 23rd, a beautiful plaque was dedicated to the memory of our departed brothers and sisters who gave their lives in the cause of Irish freedom. This plaque was erected at the foot of a tree which was specifically planted for this purpose in the North Woodmere Park, North Woodmere, New York. The project was undertaken and successfully completed by Division 3, Nassau County, and the ceremony was very impressive and well attended by members and dignitaries. It was a touching and lovely ceremony befitting the memory of our deceased brothers and sisters who made the supreme sacrifice for Ireland.

I know I will get your fullest cooperation when I call on you for your support and am sure you will do your all to see — Ireland, United and Free!

MARTIN HIGGINS

The Truth About War

BY WILLIAM V. KENNEDY

One of the hallmarks of the Christian era has been an attempt to put some sort of limit, however marginal, on the barbarities of war. Translated in recent centuries into secular, humanitarian terms, that effort at least succeeded in defining a specific, protected status for prisoners of war and civilian non-combatants and an international moral condemnation of certain classes of weapons, notably chemical and biological agents.

The post-World War II war-crime trials powerfully reinforced this nascent form of international law by holding individual military officers responsible for their actions — even if those actions were approved or ordered by higher authority.

That structure of restraint, weak and sporadic in its effectiveness though it has been, is all that separates our civilization from that of Attila the Hun. Yet that precious structure is being steadily undermined by the concept of covert war.

In the trial of Oliver North, we are seeing reassertion of the Nuremberg defense: "I was only following orders." Supposedly that justified lying to Congress and the public, destruction of incriminating documents, and evasion of the law on an international scale, all in the name of fighting a war opposed by a majority of the American public and its elected representatives in Congress.

Not only in Central America but in Angola and Afghanistan as well, the United States has armed and supported people whose methods and ultimate objectives we could not control, but for whose actions the US stands accountable. What accounting have we demanded from our clients of the prisoners of war known to be in their hands? Indeed, we have not even demanded that North Vietnam bring to trial the people who tortured our own prisoners of war, the humiliating end product of our refusal to submit the Vietnam war to a constitutional test.

In Britain, what amounts to a covert war against the Irish Republican Army is eating away at a system of civil liberties we are wont to consider as the fountainhead of our own. The British government has sought for 20 years to criminalize the IRA by denying what even British Army intelligence has long recognized, that the IRA is a well-organized, disciplined military force with clear nationalist credentials and which attempts to limit violence to military and police targets.

The denial of prisoner-of-war status to the hundreds of IRA men and women now in British, Irish, and indeed, American jails was challenged in the 1981 hunger strike in which eight IRA men and two Marxist Irish National Liberation Army men starved to death rather than accept criminal status.

Yet it is now clear from records being made public by the Spanish police and from investigative reporting by British commercial television that nothing less than a military-style ambush was carried out against three unarmed IRA operatives in Gibraltar — the clearest form of recognition a nation can give that it is fighting a war, not a police action.

From former Manchester police chief John Stalker's report of his aborted investigation of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, it is apparent that the Gibraltar ambush was part

AOH to Launch
All Out Effort
On Immigration

In this, the 101st Congress a concerted effort will be made by the Irish American community to ensure the passage of a comprehensive, beneficial, immigration reform bill which will legalize all undocumented Irish immigrants and which will allow young Irish people to immigrate legally to the United States again.

As the oldest, largest and most respected Irish American organization the AOH will be expected by the Irish American community to take the lead in the immigration reform campaign.

The AOH Immigration Committee is presently organizing the fantastic national network of the Order into an effective lobbying force. The objective of this lobbying force will be to co-operate with other Irish American organizations like the I.I.R.M. and the P.E.C. in the campaign to secure vital immigration reform.

The AOH Immigration Committee needs you! Please ensure that your division appoints a chairman of immigration and that this officer then sends his name, address and telephone number to Patrick Hurley, AOH Immigration Committee, 3301 Greenpoint Ave., L.I.C., N.Y. 11101.

Nynex Opposes
MacBride Principles

BY ANN LOUGHMAN

Recently NYNEX share owners held their annual meeting at Radio City Music Hall, N.Y.C., where the MacBride Principles were discussed. N.Y.C. Comptroller, Harrison Goldin, introduced a share owners proposal on behalf of the N.Y.C. Employees' Retirement System, the N.Y.C. Teachers Retirement System, and the Pension Funds of the N.Y.C. Fire and Police Departments. Co-sponsorship of this proposal was shared with the State of Connecticut Retirement and Trust Funds, the N.Y.S. Common Retirement Fund and the Christian Brothers Investment Services.

Comptroller Goldin presented a forceful introduction in support of the MacBride Principles and the importance of NYNEX support for these principles as the corporation has a subsidiary in Northeast Ireland, BIS Beecom Ltd of Antrim. The NYNEX board of directors of a pattern established years ago.

Thus, like the Reagan administration and now the Bush administration policy on Central America, the very structure of British democracy is being convulsed by an attempt to deny to itself and to the world that a war is a war, and, therefore, subject to the codes of constitutional and international behavior established so painfully over the centuries.

The covert-war idea was a direct transfer from the British Secret Service to the nascent US Central Intelligence Agency via the person of William (Wild Bill) Donovan of the World War II Office of Strategic Services, who, like Oliver North, thought it was a "neat idea."

We cannot continue to live a lie

Especially For MA, NJ, NY, OH, PA

Recently we have seen so many lists of which Congressmen have signed on to co-sponsor Joe Doherty H.R. 62. Here is a list of members of the House of Representatives from five key states who (as of this point) have NOT yet become co-sponsors:

MASSACHUSETTS: Silvio Conte, Joseph Early, Barney Frank, Edward Markey, Joe Moakley, Richard Neal, Gerry Studds

NEW JERSEY: Jim Courter, Bernard Dwyer, Donald Payne, Robert Roe, Jim Saxton, Christopher Smith

PENNSYLVANIA: William Clinger, Lawrence Coughlin, William Coyne, Joseph Gaydos, George Gekas, William Goodling, William Gray, Paul Kanjorski, Peter Kostmayer, Joseph McDade, Austin Murphy, John Murtha, Thomas Ridge, Don Ritter, Richard Schulze, Bud Shuster, Doug Walgren, Robert Walker, Gus Yatron

OHIO: Douglas Applegate, Michael DeWine, Dennis Eckart, Edward Feighan, Paul Gillmor, Willis Gradison, Tony Hall, Marcy

Northern Ireland facility (American Brands).

Nine persons addressed the assembly of share owners and board of directors including Robert Loughman, chairman of the MacBride Chapter Irish Northern Aid. Loughman stated in part, "The voice of the NYNEX share owners was not a weak voice as indicated by Delbert Staley, but a voice of strength, as it was a grass roots voice of people who believe in human rights. It is not enough to say, as does NYNEX, you are for human rights. It does not matter if human rights are violated in Russia, South Africa, the Philippines, or the little six occupied counties of Ireland. We have an obligation to actively oppose these violations. Let the voice of NYNEX sound out loud and strong for human rights. That voice will be heard if today we vote to support the MacBride Principles."

An African American employee of NYNEX spoke out strongly in favor of the MacBride Principles as did a representative of the major union (CWA) representing the workers of NYNEX.

The proposal failed but received enough votes to permit it to be introduced at the 1990 share owners annual meeting. Now is the time to set the pace so we may be successful in 1990. There are many thousand share owners who automatically surrender their Proxy Statement to the board of directors without indicating any votes contrary to the wishes of the directors. We have an obligation to inform these people, through the communication media, of the importance of their vote and the righteousness of voting in favor of the MacBride Principles. We ask all NYNEX share owners to speak out for the oppressed. Speak out at the 1990 annual meeting for the oppressed people of the six occupied counties of Ireland.

Of Gaelic way I was born to few One hundred years away from the island my fathers called home Inexplicably innate qualities inside call from across the sea and seem to give me knowledge of the Island from which they roamed...

The Island the sons of my fathers called home They tell me the way it used to be Their blood and my blood mingled back down through time The same organic being growing forward in a line. Erin o'Erin I hear you weep The cries of your murdered children and the sorrow that you've reaped It tears at my soul the price you pay. But 100 years I've been away. F.E. Pennat © 1989

Doirse Dochais (The Doors of Hope)

... is an American based, non-profit and all volunteer organization dedicated to helping community, self-help groups in Northern Ireland which are denied government funding.

We ask you and your A.O.H. division to help those who have no where else to turn. Help us to:

- Provide a salary for an adult education teacher at Fr. Des Wilson's Conway Street Education Center (Belfast) or his Springhill Community House in Ballymurphy where unemployment is 87%;
- Build an Irish speaking nursery school in West Belfast;
- Provide working capital for a commercially viable, sewing Co-op for the people of Derry's Bogside and Creggan;
- Provide seed money for Irish men and women trying to start small businesses in poverty stricken areas systematically denied help because of government policy.

Please send donations to Doirse Dochais, PO Box 485, HoHoKus, N.J., 07423-0485, or call 201-444-4786 for further information.

Nassau County

The Ladies AOH, Nassau County Board, installed their newly elected officers on Thursday, June 1, 1989, at the AOH Hall, Massapequa.

The Officers for 1989-1991 are as follows: Clare Deucher, president; Marie O'Neill, vice president; Fran Dlouhy, secretary; Sheila Hogan, treasurer; Mary D. Wanser, Irish historian; Jane O'Gara, financial secretary; Eileen Waters, chairman of Missions; Virginia O'Reilly, mistress at arms; Genevieve Courtney, sentinel.

Deepest sympathy was extended to Margaret Thornton's loving family and friends. Sister Margaret was the past president of LAOH Div. 14, Lynbrook, immediate past chairman of missions, Nassau County Board, and recipient of the LAOH 1988 "Woman of the Year Award."

Margaret had been elected to the County office of Chairman of Catholic Action for 1989-1991. A member of St. Raymond's Parish, East Rockaway, where she served as

NASSAU COUNTY Comptroller Peter T. King presented a county flag to Dolores Cummings, left, and Mary Donegan Wanser to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Commodore John Barry Division No. 11 of the LAOH in Nassau County. Mrs. Cummings was the Division's first president and Mrs. Wanser is the current president. King commended the Barry Division for "preserving Irish culture and heritage" and for its efforts "to expose British injustice in Northern Ireland."

Queens County

At the first meeting of the Queens County Board, LAOH following her election as Grand Marshal of the St. Patrick's Day Parade, Dorothy Hayden Cudahy was honored by the officers and members of the Board. This is the first time in 228 years that a woman was elected Grand Marshal to lead the St. Patrick's Day Parade. Dorothy presently serves as the Queens County Irish historian and is also the president of Division 14, Richmond Hill.

Also honored was the Queens County's Aide to the Grand Marshal, Alice Jones, the only woman among Dorothy Cudahy's Aides on St. Patrick's Day. Alice Jones is president of Division 13, Bayside, and currently serves as County Financial Secretary.

Mrs. Sheila C. Twomey, past president of Queens County Ladies, as a member of the Bayside Senior Center, Oakland Gardens, sang the role of Maria in their production of the Sound of Music. Mrs. Twomey made all the costumes she wore in the show. Her husband Bill, who is also a past president of the AOH Queens County Board, played the part of the Bishop who married Maria to Captain Georg Von Trapp.

Early in the year the Queens County LAOH held a Gaelic Mass to honor their patroness, St. Brigid, at the Tower View Center. Queens was honored to have as the celebrant Fr. Frank Duffy, an Irish Holy Ghost Father fluent in many languages. Participating was the Junior Division in Whitestone, who led the Communion Hymn, and were supported by their AOH brothers with a large turnout.

Mary E. Bradley
National President

Now as the summer starts to wind down most states have held conventions and elected new officers. Congratulations are extended to all of them. May you enjoy a successful term. It was a great pleasure to be able to attend several conventions, and see the interest and enthusiasm that exists throughout the country.

With the close of summer it becomes time to plan the Hibernian program for the upcoming year.

Our Legislative coordinator has asked that we continue to work for the MacBride Principles in those states that have not passed them. We also need to monitor Congressional activities on immigration and undocumented Irish living in this country. A writing campaign is suggested to encourage Congress to conduct an inquiry on the use of funds contributed to the International Fund by the government of Northern Ireland. Check to see that your state has a coordinator and that she is aware of what has been done and what still needs doing.

State coordinators should be in contact with the National Coordinator—Sr. Annela M. Martin, R.S.M., 2901-F, Terry Drive, Baltimore, MD 21209.

Our National Historian, Dorothy Fowler, is diligently working on the Irish History contest. The information will be sent shortly. Send it out quickly so the schools can add it to their planned programs.

Although some states have made their yearly donation to the Missions, the National Chairman, Peggy Cooney, would love to hear from all.

Mary Paglione, National Chairman of Catholic Action, should also have a report on all the time, donations and types of activities that are so much a part of our organization.

The Juniors have been very busy sending their newsletter information to the National Vice President, Dolores E. Voelker. Hopefully this program will be a continued success for the Juniors. The girls now have dues cards, a directory and the newsletter. We are still working on the officers' badges. Any Division wishing to start a Junior Division should contact the vice president for necessary information. The Trinity College scholarship is available.

The Past National President, Sheila Clifford, is working on the National membership list. If you have not updated your copy it should be done immediately and sent to her.

The state and county secretaries should have mailed a new list of elected officers to the National Secretary so that information can be sent to the correct officer without an unnecessary delay.

Along with all of these programs there is one that must always be ongoing—the membership drive. Several new divisions have been formed and several others are in the works, but each division needs new members. We need to keep working for good publicity in the local newspapers. With all the work we do, it should be brought to the attention of the public.

Hibernians have a right to be proud of both what has been done in their name, and also what they plan to do in the upcoming year. As we approach the close of the decade, let the world know we are here to stay.

The Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians, Suffolk County Board, held their Biennial Convention on Sunday, May 7, 1989, at Division 7 Hibernian Hall in East Islip, New York. Elected to office for the 1989-1991 term were: President, Aileen Mannix; Vice-President, Catherine Wisher; Secretary, Kathleen Conway; Treasurer, Mary Thornton; Irish Historian, Nellie O'Neill; Chairlady of Missions, Mary Ellen McNulty; Chairlady of Catholic Action, Kathleen Nixon; Mistress-at-Arms, Elizabeth Allen; Sentinel, Theresa Frazier.

The Suffolk County Celtic Degree Team conferred the Degrees of our Order in Suffolk County on Sunday, April 30, 1989. Sixty-two candidates received their degrees on that day in the presence of 48 spectators assembled at Division 2 hall in Babylon, New York.

Nassau County

The Ladies AOH, Nassau County Board, installed their newly elected officers on Thursday, June 1, 1989, at the AOH Hall, Massapequa.

The Officers for 1989-1991 are as follows: Clare Deucher, president; Marie O'Neill, vice president; Fran Dlouhy, secretary; Sheila Hogan, treasurer; Mary D. Wanser, Irish historian; Jane O'Carra, financial secretary; Eileen Waters, chairman of Missions; Virginia O'Reilly, mistress at arms; Genevieve Courtney, sentinel.

Deepest sympathy was extended to Margaret Thornton's loving family and friends. Sister Margaret was the past president of LAOH Div. 14, Lynbrook, immediate past chairman of missions, Nassau County Board, and recipient of the LAOH 1988 "Woman of the Year Award."

Margaret had been elected to the County office of Chairman of Catholic Action for 1989-1991. A member of St. Raymond's Parish, East Rockaway, where she served as

NASSAU COUNTY Comptroller Peter T. King presented a county flag to Dolores Cummings, left, and Mary Donegan Wanser to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Commodore John Barry Division No. 11 of the LAOH in Nassau County. Mrs. Cummings was the Division's first president and Mrs. Wanser is the current president. King commended the Barry Division for "preserving Irish culture and heritage" and for its efforts "to expose British injustice in Northern Ireland."

SHEILA C. TWOMEY, past president, Queens County Board, LAOH, as Maria in the Sound of Music.

Eucharistic Minister, Margaret's memory will always be cherished for her valor, courage and deep commitment to her faith.

Queens County

At the first meeting of the Queens County Board, LAOH following her election as Grand Marshal of the St. Patrick's Day Parade, Dorothy Hayden Cudahy was honored by the officers and members of the Board. This is the first time in 228 years that a woman was elected Grand Marshal to lead the St. Patrick's Day Parade. Dorothy presently serves as the Queens County Irish historian and is also the president of Division 14, Richmond Hill.

Also honored was the Queens County's Aide to the Grand Marshal, Alice Jones, the only woman among Dorothy Cudahy's Aides on St. Patrick's Day. Alice Jones is president of Division 13, Bayside, and currently serves as County Financial Secretary.

Mrs. Sheila C. Twomey, past president of Queens County Ladies, as a member of the Bayside Senior Center, Oakland Gardens, sang the role of Maria in their production of the Sound of Music. Mrs. Twomey made all the costumes she wore in the show. Her husband Bill, who is also a past president of the AOH Queens County Board, played the part of the Bishop who married Maria to Captain Georg Von Trapp.

National President

Now as the summer starts to wind down most states have held conventions and elected new officers. Congratulations are extended to all of them. May you enjoy a successful term. It was a great pleasure to be able to attend several conventions, and see the interest and enthusiasm that exists throughout the country.

With the close of summer it becomes time to plan the Hibernian program for the upcoming year.

Our Legislative coordinator has asked that we continue to work for the MacBride Principles in those states that have not passed them. We also need to monitor Congressional activities on immigration and undocumented Irish living in this country. A writing campaign is suggested to encourage Congress to conduct an inquiry on the use of funds contributed to the International Fund by the government of Northern Ireland. Check to see that your state has a coordinator and that she is aware of what has been done and what still needs doing.

State coordinators should be in contact with the National Coordinator—Sr. Annella M. Martin, R.S.M., 2901-F, Terry Drive, Baltimore, MD 21209.

Our National Historian, Dorothy Fowler, is diligently working on the Irish History contest. The information will be sent shortly. Send it out quickly so the schools can add it to their planned programs.

Although some states have made their yearly donation to the Missions, the National Chairman, Peggy Cooney, would love to hear from all.

Mary Paglione, National Chairman of Catholic Action, should also have a report on all the time, donations and types of activities that are so much a part of our organization.

The Juniors have been very busy sending their newsletter information to the National Vice President, Dolores E. Voelker. Hopefully this program will be a continued success for the Juniors. The girls now have dues cards, a directory and the newsletter. We are still working on the officers' badges. Any Division wishing to start a Junior Division should contact the vice president for necessary information. The Trinity College scholarship is available.

The Past National President, Sheila Clifford, is working on the National membership list. If you have not updated your copy it should be done immediately and sent to her. The state and county secretaries should have mailed a new list of elected officers to the National Secretary so that information can be sent to the correct officer without an unnecessary delay.

Along with all of these programs there is one that must always be ongoing—the membership drive. Several new divisions have been formed and several others are in the works, but each division needs new members. We need to keep working for good publicity in the local newspapers. With all the work we do, it should be brought to the attention of the public.

Hibernians have a right to be proud of both what has been done in their name, and also what they plan to do in the upcoming year. As we approach the close of the decade, let the world know we are here to stay.

the Tower View Center. Queens was honored to have as the celebrant Fr. Frank Duffy, an Irish Holy Ghost Father fluent in many languages. Participating was the Junior Division in Whitestone, who led the Communion Hymn, and were supported by their AOH brothers with a large turnout.

The men and women of Queens County AOH and LAOH were among the ethnic groups who took part recently in the annual Queens Festival at Flushing Meadow Park.

For the second year, the Hibernians had a canopy under which they displayed cultural items such as Belleek, Waterford, pottery, books including a copy of the Book of Kells, Irish linen and lace, travel photographs of Ireland, Irish posters donated by the Bank of Ireland, music and Irish art.

During the two days members of the Queens County Board LAOH distributed free Irish soda bread and tea to all who stopped by to enjoy the exhibits and entertainment. Mrs. Alice Jones, president of Division 13 was the chairman.

New York Essay Contest Winners Announced

The New York State Irish Historian, Miss Dorothy A. Voelker, announced the New York State winners of the 1988-1989 Annual Irish Essay Contest sponsored by the National Board of the LAOH. The subjects for this year's contest were: "Father Flanagan, Founder of Boy's Town" for grades 6, 7, and 8 and "Dublin: Its Place in History" for grades 9, 10, 11, and 12.

Winners in the grade school category were Irma Ugalde of St. Patrick's School, Bayshore, Suffolk County, and Christine Golden of St. Patrick's School, Bayshore, Suffolk County, first and second prize respectively. Jennifer Cailin Vogel of Islip High School, Islip, Suffolk County, and Bonnie Sklar, of Benjamin Cardozo High School, Bayside, Queens County, won first and second prize respectively on the high school level.

While the overall response to the contest was poor throughout the state, the outstanding effort and enthusiasm of the County and Division historians is to be commended.

SPRINGFIELD, MA — The ladies of Division 8, here, were pleased to award four scholarships at their June meeting. Recipients were Paudraig Curran, Thomas O'Shea, Tara Reilly, and Stephanie Wynne.

Funds for the scholarships were raised through the efforts of St. Patricia James Sweeney, SSJ, who conducted raffles, and Mistress at Arms Kathy Joyal, who auctioned off donated gifts.

At the 85th Biennial Convention of The Massachusetts State board, AOH and LAOH, the following officers were installed: Massachusetts State President Jackie Lamprey; Vice President Beth Lynch; State Recording Secretary Mary Ryan; State Treasurer Dorothy Flury; State Irish Historian Mary Ellen Palletier; Chairman of Missions Catherine Duvarney and Chairman of Catholic Action Jackie Lee.

NEW YORK CITY: The AOH here offers annual scholarship awards for essays. This year Good Shepherd Parish submitted 87 essays. One scholarship winner at the county level was Harry Rivera. Maire McLaughlin, a parishioner of Good Shepherd and an officer of LAOH Division 3 in Washington Heights, was responsible for the large number of essays submitted. Next year she hopes to have more schools participate. For information call 212 923-0504. The Annual Fundraising Social will be held Sunday, September 17. THE DAY MICHAEL COLLINS WAS SHOT

By Meda Ryan

The brilliant career of Michael Collins, his dynamic personality, and the shot which took his life have all left a permanent mark on the history of Ireland.

Collins was shot dead in an ambush at Béal na mBláth, Co. Cork, on 22 August, 1922. The manner of his death and the identity of his killer have been the source of intense speculation and controversy ever since.

Here is exciting and suspenseful narrative which reconstructs, in minute-by-minute detail, the last four days of Michael Collins' life and follows, mile by mile, his fatal journey through his home county of Cork.

Paper, 192 pp., $12.95.

THE SECRET ARMY; THE IRA 1916 - 1979

By J. Bowyer Bell

Long regarded as the definitive work on the Irish Republican Army, Bell's book provides an absorbing account of a movement which has had a profound effect on the modern Irish state. It dispassionately traces the history of the IRA as a political and military force from the Rising of 1916 to its role in the present Northern conflict, examining the different campaigns the IRA have been involved with and the attitudes of governments in Ireland and Britain to the organization.

The author is a specialist in the problems of unconventional war, terrorism, risk analysis and crisis management. This new edition of SECRET ARMY is a large format paperback. 496 pp., $19.95.

Auburn Hosts New York AOH, LAOH Convention

BY MIKE HESLIN

AUBURN, NY: The 85th Biennial New York State Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Ladies, Ancient Order of Hibernians Convention was held July 12-15, 1989 in Auburn, NY.

Alfred O'Hagan of Brooklyn and Kings County was the unanimous choice of the delegates gathered in session to succeed Ed Carley as State President.

O'Hagan, who is the liaison officer for the Brooklyn Union Gas Company with the various government agencies and bodies in Kings County, moved up from the vice-presidential slot. O'Hagan is active with many Irish events held in Brooklyn, among which are the Great Irish Fair held at Steeplechase Park, Coney Island. This event raises thousands of dollars for the charities of the Diocese of Brooklyn. He has served as a division and county officer and held many state positions before he commenced his career at the state level six years ago when he successfully ran for Treasurer. Al O'Hagan is also active in the Round Tower Degree Team of Kings County.

The vice-president office was filled by Kevin Coggins of Chemung Co. Coggins began his climb in Niagara Falls when he jumped into the race for secretary when a vacancy occurred.

Raymond Mehan of Suffolk County moved up to the secretary's position after serving as state treasurer for two years.

The office of treasurer was a contest between John Burns of Auburn and Cayuga County and Michael P. Heelin of Binghamton and Broome County. In what was called one of the cleanest campaigns in modern times, Burns won the position.

The Directors were elected without opposition except for District 4 where John Foody and Frank Feighery squared off against each other. Frank Feighery bested Foody in the very close race.

The Directors for the next two years are: District 1, John Hogan; District 2, Francis Gaughan; District 3, Timothy Comerford; District 4, Frank Feighery; District 5, Martin Kelly; District 6, James Hayes; and District 7, Thomas Corcoran.

The following appointments were announced by State President O'Hagan as his official act of office: State Organizer, Daniel Heald; State Historian, Mike McCormack; Chair, Catholic Action, Harry Murphy; Chair, Pro-Life, Charles Welch; Public Relations, Tom Foley; Chair, Buy Irish, Hugh Ford; Chair, PEC, Jack Mulvey; Chair, Immigration, Pat Hurley; Chair, Austin Carew Scholarship, Mike O'Connor; Chair, Freedom For All Ireland, Brendan Moore; Chair, Charities & Missions, Randy Lynch; Chair, Commodore Barry, Ed Rice; Chair, Archives, George Foley; the Sports chair was empty at this time until Past President Ed Carley and State Treasurer Jack Burns have researched a qualified person for this auspicious position.

The site for the 1991 New York State AOH Convention was a three-way contest among Binghamton, Syracuse and Watervliet. In 1991, the delegates chose to travel to the Albany area and the Turf Inn on Wolfe Road, where Watervliet will be the host.

The newly-elected officers of the New York State Board of the Ladies, AOH are: President Ann S. Armao of Troy, NY; Vice-President Amelia T. Babcock; Secretary Mary Marrinan; Treasurer Dorothy A. Voelker; Historian Bernadette Harnett; Chair, Missions, Rosalie Rairden; Chair, Catholic Action, Joyce Hennessey.

Various resolutions were passed at this convention pertaining to Immigration, Joe Doherty, the Irish language and Church and Country.

Ann Armao, president, New York State Board, LAOH, made the following appointments following her installation at the banquet Saturday night. She appointed Maureen Dumas of Albany as Public Relations chair; Denise McNabb of Cayuga County, Chair, Freedom For All Ireland. She initiated a new chair for liaison with the various government bodies. This new position went to Pat Fox of Broome County.

The largest increase in membership awards for the NYS AOH and the NYS LAOH went to Division 2-Suffolk County.

Al O'Hagan appointed the Rev. Michael Driscoll, son of Past State President Timothy Driscoll, as State Chaplain.

The principal speaker at the installation banquet Saturday night was Robert Roche, an attorney in Albany, who served as an observer to the Birmingham Six "Reading of the Appeal" in London.

Suffolk County Chaplain Hails His Golden Jubilee

JUBILARIAN FR. VIRGIL POWER, center, concelebrates Mass at the Babylon Hibernian Hall with Fathers Hourihane, Rooney, Cunningham and Fitzpatrick.

SUFFOLK COUNTY, NY — Rev. Virgil P. Power, Pastor Emeritus of Our Lady of the Isle Parish, Shelter Island, NY has celebrated the golden jubilee of his ordination. Up to his retirement four years ago, Fr. Power was chaplain to the AOH Suffolk County Board and also to St. Patrick Division Two, men and women, in Babylon.

The joyous occasion was marked by a special concelebrated Mass on Shelter Island, at which Bishop John McGann and his four auxiliary Bishops presided. The Suffolk Hibernian Choir sang at the Mass and Div. 2's Saffron Kilt Pipe Band was present to add color to the occasion and to pipe the Bishops and clergy in and out of the Church.

At the conclusion of the Mass, Bishop McGann presented the jubilarian with a special Papal Blessing and a gold medal of honor. Later in the day, Father was honored at a Golden Jubilee Dinner at the Irish Coffee Pub in East Islip.

The president and members of St. Patrick Division Two, wishing to honor Father Power for his thirty years of devoted service as their chaplain, also organized a special Mass followed by a dinner dance in the Hibernian Cultural Center in Babylon. Monsignor Thaddeus Rooney, associate chaplain to Division Two, homilist at the Mass, spoke in glowing terms of all Fr. Power had done to promote Irish culture and keep alive Irish traditions on Long Island, since he came to the United States some thirty three years ago.

Father Power retired from his parish on Shelter Island in 1955 and went to live in Beverly Hills, Florida. On the weekends, he helps in Our Lady of the Springs Parish, Ocala. The people of that parish also honored the Jubilarian with special celebrations. Father says that since his retirement he is kept very busy commuting between Florida, Long

As director of Pro-Life activities with the responsibility of being the representative of the AOH for the state of New York for 1988-1989 session, I wish to thank our past president, Edward Carley, and all our state membership for the confidence they have expressed in me that I would do all in my powers in our quest to support and expand our human life, human rights issues.

The past year has given evidence for all to see that the majority in the news media express a "qualified" love of the Irish — if we would just stop being "so Catholic". This same media proclaims that a Pro-Life position is a theological point of view almost unique to the Catholic Church. They do so knowing this angle will fan the flames of bigotry to help divide a people and allow for continuance of their political agenda.

The "Right to Choose" is expressed in such a manner as to express a very American, constitutional, proper response to "the problem." The problem as expressed is unwanted pregnancy. When a problem is expressed in such an emotional manner the media take on a pragmatic humanistic point of view and leave no room for another point of view. A "final solution" is expressed by this form of mind control type of journalism which lends support to organizations such as Planned Parenthood and its sex educational programs with tax-supported activities, all with a so-called good of society expression.

Planned Parenthood's lessons on sexual responsibility include the distribution of prophylactic devices such as condoms, pills and I.U.D.'s.

Annual Pilgrimage to Martyrs' Shrine Held

AURIESVILLE, NY: The New York State Board recently held their Annual Pilgrimage to the Martyrs' Shrine here. This State Board-sponsored function is customarily held on the first Sunday in May, and it also signals the opening of the Shrine for the season.

The Mass was held at Noon, and the assembled National and State dignitaries and a large gathering of Brother and Sister Hibernians were in attendance. The group paraded to the Rotunda, led by the Tara Hall Pipe Band from Division 8, Troy. Prior to the Mass, the Dr. Tom Dooley Choraliers performed a brief concert and then sang the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. At the conclusion of Mass, which was celebrated by our State Chaplain, Father Capistran Hanlon, the pipe band led the worshippers to the picnic area and pavilion.

Everyone enjoyed hamburgers, hot dogs, salads, sandwiches and an assortment of hot and cold beverages. Some of the Choraliers stayed to eat, and everybody joined in a sing-along until late in the afternoon. The camaraderie that prevailed was a joy to behold.

The event is the State Board's first official get-together each Spring, and it certainly does help to shake the winter blahs.

Hibernian Sports

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

Baseball — The saga of Pete Rose continues, and continues, and continues. Rose is not doing much to improve his case. His lawyers claim that Bart Giamotti is biased in this case. These counsellors claim that the Commissioner has prejudged their boy. Etc! Etc!! ETC!!! These guys have been in and out of more courts than Murder Inc. They traipse from County to State to Federal. YR's solution to all this is to have the Commissioner make his ruling. The die is then cast, to quote Julius Caesar. Rose's lawyers may then go to court and ask the court to rule on the Commissioner's ruling. The way it is now, it gives a bad smell to the game of baseball.

One comment heard is Pete Rose has a sickness about gambling. From what YR has heard, this is probably true. Gambling, like any other addiction, is hard to control. If you haven't noticed, there aren't many rich gamblers. Most are trying to break even. That is almost impossible. On a recent TV program, the stats were given on how many people gamble. This figure is in the millions. Out of all those people, only 2% make a living from gambling. This doesn't include bookies, casinos, loan sharks or anyone of that ilk. This was the actual percentage of people who place bets who make enough in return to call it a living.

Does Rose deserve to be suspended for life? The rules of baseball say "Yes". Many fans and others say "NO" most emphatically. They cite Rose's contributions to the game. They say Pete got the bug. He's sick. If all that has been shown on TV is the truth, Pete Rose is sick. He's looking for that one big pay-off to square accounts. This never happens. It's strictly "pie-in-the-sky". It never happens. Bookies only like these guys if they can pay. If they can't, then they employ other methods to extract their dough. Rose should get help immediately. The GA is a wonderful place to start. If Pete doesn't like the public to think he's sick, there must be a private clinic or a therapist in the area who would work with him. Pete, do it while fans remember you as "Charlie Hustle" not the guy who left baseball under a cloud about betting on games including his own teams.

Autographs

While speaking of things that do not endear the game to the fans any longer, have you heard that you may get a Pete Rose autograph at these baseball card shows for $15.00? No, Pete Rose's autograph is not the most expensive but it seems a shame that players now sell their autographs. It takes very little math to figure out in Rose's case: 10 autographs equals $150.00; 100 autographs equal $1,500.00 and 1000 autographs equal $15,000.00. Not a bad pay check for giving somebody your name on a piece of paper, a ball, a bat or a shirt or cap. Usually these shows run Saturday and Sunday in larger metro areas. This insures the largest turnout of fans possible. YR remembers growing up in a minor league city with a Yankee farm club. Whitey Ford pitched here. Other Yankee greats passed through. Some Yankee greats never stopped. Every few years, the Yankees would come to town for exhibition games at the old Johnson Field. They stayed across from the train station in the defunct Arlington Hotel. That year, they brought guys with them such as Yogi Berra, George "Stuffy" Sternweiss, Phil Rizzuto, Joe DiMaggio, Charlie Keller, Spud Chandler, and all those other great ball players that you read about in the papers. TV hadn't come to the old hometown yet. These guys would sign anything you put before them. I had them all on little scraps of paper, long since lost in growing up and moving out. Yet, not one of these players asked for a nickel or a dime. They signed often and willingly. These guys were not making the magnificent salaries that ballplayers of today make. These guys signed because they knew that these guys and kids were fans for tomorrow. It was an innocent time. Perhaps we should return to it.

NCAA Hurt

Football — It's almost time to put on the pads and start spring training for football. Excuse the use of the word, spring. It's just training. A few deals have been cut. SMU is under suspension. They are rebuilding their program. Will there be a major scandal around Miami U? Time will tell. Since they have lost their head coach and their quarterback, perhaps the NCAA feels they have lost enough.

Does Dallas need Vince Walsh? Did he get the money he asked? To the first question and the second question, the answer is "No". Dallas will dangle this guy like bait before a hungry fish. They will get much more in return than they give. Dallas has been making more news off the field than they did on the field last year. They dumped a guy who has been Dallas' only head coach in a manner more in keeping with corporate board rooms than sports. Now it seems they have a cheerleader revolt over the new uniforms proposed by the new owner. The cheerleaders claim the new uniforms are much too skimpy. As Linda Ellerbee says, "And so it goes." Football always did take funny bounces.

Chicago Bulls

BASKETBALL: The roundball took some funny bounces off the court after the playoffs. Doug Collins was fired by the Chicago Bulls. Difthousands of proud Irish people. They deserved every bit of the ferent philosophies was the reason given. The Bulls and the Knicks then named assistant coaches by the promotion of Jackson to the head coach position. Collins should have no problem finding a job, if the Bulls haven't got him on a list. Sports are no longer sports and fun things. Sports are now big business megabuck enterprises.

Irish Invented Golf

GOLF: This is a game where the money is. That is why the Scots claimed it as their own. YR feels the Irish rightfully invented it. The hills and fields of Ireland are more conducive to golf than Scotland. The Irish farmers piled the rocks from their fields in neat layers which became fences. Now everybody knows you cut across fields as shortcuts to places. Two Irishmen were doing this shortcutting many years ago. To pass the time, they turned their shillelachs around and began to see who could put a stone next to the opposite stone fence in the least number of hits or now strokes. This form continued for some time.

As the stones in these fences were not even, there was always some discussion about who was the closest. As many of these shortcuts were used everyday, the logical thing was to add a fixed target that would be the same for all. This brought the hole into play. The first holes were square because they were cut by the same tool used to cut the turf in the bog. There were no winter rules or summer rules. The Irish played the stone they hit where it laid.

Because of this, some of these Irishmen began to massage the head of their shillelagh to give more lift to the stone when they hit it. This innovation gave birth to the various woods and irons now called clubs. These same Irish also took to playing their stone. They would find a good stone and have the mason finish it off by rubbing and polishing it.

This brings up a conversation at the recent NYS AOH Convention. Noel Kingston of Irish music fame was talking to the Editor of this prestigious paper and his loyal assistant about golf. A delegate whom Noel knew walked by and told Noel, "I did 18 this morning". The assistant asked the unknown golfer, "So much for the first hole, what did you do on the second?" This is one of the reasons YR does not play golf. He once was 10 off the tee.

The 19th Hole — This brings this column to a close. Keep sending those bon mots to PO Box 156 ESS, Binghamton, NY 13904. Until the next time on the sidelines, God bless!

Bartholomew Murray of the eighteenth had close connections with the ecclesiastical Irish College in Paris. The form MacMorrow derived from MacMurrays of County Leitrim mentioned in the Composition Book of Connacht.

Faloon

Q. Kindly inform me about the derivation of my family name. Thomas F. Faloon, Cresskill, New Jersey

A. The spelling of your form of the name is peculiar to County Armagh. But because your great grandfather came from County Tyrone we can now include this county among this small list. Faloon comes from a group of words whose root means 'ruler.' Fallan means 'beauty, hand-someness' and in the adjectival form means 'health, soundness.' Falla means 'dominion, sovereignty'. A ruler must be healthy, but whether or not all rulers were attractive is a matter for speculation. Fallamhain means 'I rule'; and as you noted your name means descendant of the ruler: O Fallamhain.

Ward

Q. Please provide me with information regarding our family name. Anthony Ward, Valley Stream, New York

A. The name Ward holds a special interest for me because of my literary interests. The Irish form is Mac an Bhaird and is pronounced similarly to the variants of your form Macanward, MacAward: the Bh is like a w/. The name means son of the bard. As such the name implies that early holders of the name belonged to that distinguished profession. Many noted poets of this sept lived in Donegal during the seventeenth century.

Early Ulster bards celebrated the important O'Kellys of Ui Maine and later the O'Donnells of Tírconnell. But is unknown if these hereditary bards are related to the Falway families who became prominent enough to have towns in Galway named after them: Ballymacward near Ballinasloe and Lettermacaward near Glenties. Still Counties Falway and Donegal are where this common name is today found most frequently.

Because it is an occupational name, it is no surprise that the name appeared independently throughout the country. Today it is one of the one-hundred most popular names. Even though Ward continues to be a common English name, most of the Irish families are native. Some of the most noteworthy Wards hailed from Ulster, but many came from other parts of the island. Maelisa MacAward was Bishop of Clonfert from 1171-73. Hugh Boy Macanward (1580-1635), of Lettermacaward served as first professor of Theology in the Irish College at Louvain. John Ward (1832-1912), of Belfast became a renowned artist.

Donahue

Q. Both Norbert F. Donahue, Kallispell, MT, and James J. O'Connor, Chevy Chase, MD, ask about the family name Donahue.

A. Donogh was an old personal name which gave rise to the modern variants which make your name one of the most popular in Ireland. Many distinct septs or clans existed. Three of the most significant were O'Donoghue of Desmond, O'Donoghue of Ui Maine, and O'Donoghue of Cavan. The latter two usually spell their modern forms Donhoe and continue to be the popular forms in Counties Cavan and Galway.

The Desmond O'Donoghues are still found mainly in Counties Kerry and Cork. This sept is related to the O'Mahonys who are both descended from Domhnall the son of the King of Munster who allied with Brian Boru in the crucial Battle of Clontarf (1014 A.D.). Eventually these were driven out of their West Cork holdings into Kerry by the powerful McCarthy's. In Kerry they settled in the region called Onaght O'Donoghue, but eventually divided in two branches. The Head one was called O'Donoghue Mor (O'Donoghue the Great), whose seat was Ross Castle on Lough Leine and remains a significant tourist attraction near Killarney. The other branch was called O'Donoghue of the Glen. Unlike the Mor, who were driven from their lands during the Elizabethan Wars, this clan held onto its seat at Glenflesk. Today it's Head rightfully calls himself 'The O'Donoghue' indicating his status as one of the few Chiefs of the Name officially recognized and eligible to use that designation.

As for the g disappearing before the h, this could easily happen because it would not be pronounced since it lost its sound before the aspirate.

Dunphy is also a variant of this name. In Ossory the peasants used the form like your own, but the landed class used Dunphy. Still, other Dunphies existed not related to these Ossory faction.

YES! THERE IS A HIBERNIAN LIFE INSURANCE FUND

What it is...

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAAOH members by 1953 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and LAAOH. In 1963, the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Bursary Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.

Ohio Pursues MacBride Passage

CINCINNATI, OH: The MacBride campaign has shifted into high gear, here, as Hibernian efforts focused solidly on lobbying for passage of Ohio Senate Bill No. 34.

On Thursday and Friday, September 7 and 8, the Greater Cincinnati MacBride Coalition held plain-talk meetings with State Senate President Stanley Aranoff, as well as Senators H. Cooper Snyder and Richard Finan. Led by co-chairmen Michael W. Hall and Thomas Mooney, the delegation included Fr. Desmond Wilson of Belfast and National President Michael Coogan.

Following these productive sessions, the group journeyed downtown to meet with the editorial boards of both the Cincinnati Enquirer and the Cincinnati Post.

As shown by the actions of the Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland coalitions, Ohio Hibernians have made passage of MacBride Principles legislation their primary goal for 1990.

Action Sought on British Government Interference

WASHINGTON, D.C.: Congressman Norman Lent of the 4th District, New York, disturbed by the British government's "blatant interference in the legislative affairs of the United States government and its sovereign states," informed the Hon. James A. Baker, U.S. Department of State, of his displeasure at this abuse, echoing the sentiment of a large majority of Irish America. In his statement, Congressman Lent said:

"I respectfully write to bring to your attention a matter of serious concern to all decent citizens who oppose unfair bias and prejudice against minorities. I specifically refer to the British government's extensive campaign in the U.S. to thwart enactment of laws implementing the MacBride Principles which are aimed at combating disgraceful discrimination against Catholics in Northern Ireland. This blatant interference in the legislative affairs of the United States government and its sovereign states is deeply troubling, and I believe an unequivocal call for an end to these activities is both appropriate and necessary."

already adopted MacBride legislation which requires that American businesses operating in Northern Ireland comply with guidelines for fair employment in the workplace. Similar initiatives are pending in 11 more states and federal legislation has also been introduced in the U.S. Congress. The House bill, HR 725 (the Northern Ireland Fair Employment Practices Act), has garnered significant bipartisan support. Under HR 725, companies which fail to comply with these principles would be barred from importing their products into the U.S. As a cosponsor, I feel strongly that the U.S. Congress cannot permit American companies to be party to religious or any other discrimination in the workplace.

"To frustrate these efforts, the British government has launched a multi-million dollar lobbying campaign in state after state against the MacBride Principles. It is this kind of pervasive government-sponsored anti-Catholic discrimination which has perpetuated the tragedy of a 35% unemployment rate among Catholic men and fueled the terrible

HELENA, MT: At the turn of the century, the State of Montana had almost 1,000 active, dedicated Hibernians in Divisions located all across the State. By 1980, the number was down to about 100 and the city of Anaconda retained the only Montana Division.

However, what a turnaround has taken place in Montana in the last few years! During the state convention held this past September, almost two hundred Hibernians participated and 4 Divisions were represented.

The convention was held here in the State Capitol, over September 15-17. National President Michael Coogan was the keynote speaker.

Montana Hibernians took part in an animated business meeting, lunch, breakfast, a banquet/dance, a mass celebrated by the state Chaplain. Besides this, members had the pleasure of watching Carroll College, one of two Montana Catholic colleges, trounce the football team from a state college in North Dakota.

Three key decisions were reached by Montana Hibernians during the convention. There was unanimous agreement that the number one priority during the coming two years is to obtain the passage of the MacBride Principles by the Montana Legislature. Second, by almost unanimous decision, was to launch a

At United Nations Work for Reconciliation States Ireland's Collins

For twenty years — since August 1969 when the Irish Government made an urgent plea for the involvement of the United Nations to stem the tide of violence which threatened to engulf Northern Ireland — successive Irish Foreign Ministers have reported annually to the General Assembly on developments in that troubled part of our island. Twenty years on, the situation in Northern Ireland remains a central concern of my Government and continues to claim the attention of the international community.

The conflict in Northern Ireland is first and foremost a human tragedy: we must never lose a sense of the sadness and loss which lie behind statistics of death and injury. This was brought home to us most forcefully in the past week by the utterly senseless killing of ten young British army bandmen in southern England. The perpetrators of this atrocity stand condemned by both the British and Irish Governments and peoples, and by world opinion.

But our human sympathy for the victims of violence, instinctive and deep as it is, and our unqualified condemnation of its perpetrators, are not in themselves sufficient. As public representatives, we have a responsibility to work actively and imaginatively to achieve political solutions to the underlying political problems.

And central to the situation in Northern Ireland are some of the same elements which are at the heart of a number of conflicts elsewhere in the world. It is a society divided by radically different interpretations of history, different senses of identity and different aspirations for the future. The very complexity of such conflicts defies any simple solution; there is no easy formula for harmony.

The House bill, HR 725 (the Northern Ireland Fair Employment Practices Act), has garnered significant bipartisan support. Under HR 725, companies which fail to comply with these principles would be barred from importing their products into the U.S. As a cosponsor, I feel strongly that the U.S. Congress cannot permit American companies to be party to religious or any other discrimination in the workplace.

"To frustrate these efforts, the British government has launched a multi-million dollar lobbying campaign in state after state against the MacBride Principles. It is this kind of pervasive government-sponsored anti-Catholic discrimination which has perpetuated the tragedy of a 35% unemployment rate among Catholic men and fueled the terrible

HELENA, MT: At the turn of the century, the State of Montana had almost 1,000 active, dedicated Hibernians in Divisions located all across the State. By 1980, the number was down to about 100 and the city of Anaconda retained the only Montana Division.

However, what a turnaround has taken place in Montana in the last few years! During the state convention held this past September, almost two hundred Hibernians participated and 4 Divisions were represented.

The convention was held here in the State Capitol, over September 15-17. National President Michael Coogan was the keynote speaker. Montana Hibernians took part in an animated business meeting, lunch, breakfast, a banquet/dance, a mass celebrated by the state Chaplain. Besides this, members had the pleasure of watching Carroll College, one of two Montana Catholic colleges, trounce the football team from a state college in North Dakota.

Three key decisions were reached by Montana Hibernians during the convention. There was unanimous agreement that the number one priority during the coming two years is to obtain the passage of the MacBride Principles by the Montana Legislature. Second, by almost unanimous decision, was to launch a

At United Nations Work for Reconciliation States Ireland's Collins

For twenty years — since August 1969 when the Irish Government made an urgent plea for the involvement of the United Nations to stem the tide of violence which threatened to engulf Northern Ireland — successive Irish Foreign Ministers have reported annually to the General Assembly on developments in that troubled part of our island. Twenty years on, the situation in Northern Ireland remains a central concern of my Government and continues to claim the attention of the international community.

The conflict in Northern Ireland is first and foremost a human tragedy: we must never lose a sense of the sadness and loss which lie behind statistics of death and injury. This was brought home to us most forcefully in the past week by the utterly senseless killing of ten young British army bandmen in southern England. The perpetrators of this atrocity stand condemned by both the British and Irish Governments and peoples, and by world opinion.

But our human sympathy for the victims of violence, instinctive and deep as it is, and our unqualified condemnation of its perpetrators, are not in themselves sufficient. As public representatives, we have a responsibility to work actively and imaginatively to achieve political solutions to the underlying political problems.

And central to the situation in Northern Ireland are some of the same elements which are at the heart of a number of conflicts elsewhere in the world. It is a society divided by radically different interpretations of history, different senses of identity and different aspirations for the future. The very complexity of such conflicts defies any simple solution; there is no easy formula for harviolence and turmoil that continues to plague strife-torn Northern Ireland today.

"On behalf of Irish Americans and others opposed to prejudice against minorities solely because of their religion, I strenuously object to these activities as deeply offensive. Accordingly, I respectfully ask that the following steps be taken to communicate our government's displeasure. First, an official protest of these activities must be made to the British Ambassador to the United States. It must be made clear that continued intervention in our nation's legislative affairs must cease. Second, a full accounting of the expenditures that the British government has made to oppose the MacBride Principles in the United States should be released to the American public.

"We cannot condone by silence the British Government's continued discrimination against Irish Catholics in Northern Ireland. Your immediate attention to this important matter would be greatly appreciated. Thank you for your time and concern."

National catholic action

PHILADELPHIA, PA: I have written in previous columns about the unborn children, the school children and those who have passed through this life and into their eternal reward. The more I think about what I've written, the more my love grows for our Roman Catholic Church.

Our Church stands with us at every stage of our existence. We may at times take her for granted; because she is so available and so open to us. From the moment of conception through the reception of the Sacraments; from the first day of school to the graveside blessing, we have the church!

Our Church provides special facilities for our brothers and sisters who have special needs. Our Church provides an educational system to be proud of and medical facilities the equal of any in this world. That is something to be proud of!

No matter where you went to school or where you lived, the University of Notre Dame is special. I think, as Catholics, the basis for our love and admiration for this school of Our Lady is the sense of pride we have in a Catholic institution that is the pinnacle of excellence. A beacon of achievement that overcame bigotry and ignorance and succeeded with dignity and honor and did it for the Honor and Glory of God. Of course they play some pretty good football, too! (and the nickname isn't bad either). But again, the Catholic Faith is a part of our pride.

Baptism and the Eucharist, matrimony and the funeral are all a part of our inheritance as members of this universal body, and I am amazed at the many gifts we receive in our Church community. Please serve our Church well and stand up for her and all her ministers. They have done one Heaven of a job for us.

vigorous informational program to tie all the Divisions together into one cohesive body and to create interest in the AOH in Montana cities which do not have a Division. Lastly, the convention dedicated itself to establishing one new Division each year.

According to President Michael Coogan, the hallmark of the newly reborn Montana Hibernian movement is the enthusiasm of its members. "A new Division every year would seem an impossible task," said Br. Coogan, "but after spending three days with the Montana Hibernians, I don't believe anything is impossible. I was impressed with the country, I intend to go back as soon as possible just to visit, and I was impressed with how determined everyone I spoke with seemed to be to build a strong Hibernian organization in Montana."

Pennsylvania's Governor Endorses MacBride Bills

HARRISBURG, PA — In a statement to John Breheny, chairman of Pennsylvania's Irish National Caucus, Pennsylvania Governor Robert Casey declared: "I support the MacBride Principles, and have written to the leaders of the House and Senate to urge prompt passage of Senate Bills 581-585 and House Bills 867-871."

"There are few Pennsylvanians who are not aware of the terrible problems in Northern Ireland, many of which can be traced directly to generations of unemployment and a history of employment discrimination in that country. The unemployment rate in England, Scotland and Wales is roughly 9%; the unemployment rate in Northern Ireland is over 18%. It is even worse in the predominately Catholic regions of Northern Ireland. In one section of Catholic West Belfast, in a community called Ballymurphy, one study indicated the unemployment rate was as high as 70%."

"It is very important to me as Governor that any steps that I can take to improve that situation be both positive and effective. The MacBride Principles send a very strong message to the British government. That message is that we in America will not tolerate any form of discrimination — religious or economic — against the people of Northern Ireland, and that we are prepared to use our economic leverage to enforce both fair and full employment practices there."

"I believe that support for the MacBride Principles — from America and from Pennsylvania — sends a clear message to the British government and represents a real opportunity to bring an end to the discriminatory practices there."

Governor Casey is a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

If the MacBride bills are passed, Pennsylvania would become the 14th state to recognize the blatant discrimination against minority Catholics in Northern Ireland, following closely on the heels of California, which like the other states, passed similar legislation by large legislative majorities.

MacBride Lobby Takes Harrisburg, PA by Storm

WASHINGTON, D.C. — September 20, 1989 — The Irish took Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, by storm on September 19, 1989. Hundreds of supporters of the MacBride Principles poured into the Senate Finance Committee Hearing on the Principles. Extra chairs had to be brought and some could not even get inside — as the largest turn-out for any hearing took place.

The Chairman, Senator Gibson Armstrong (R-Lancaster), gavelled the Hearing to order with the stern admonition: "This is a very large turn-out; it is a very emotional issue. No clapping or emotional displays of any kind will be allowed." Senator Armstrong had bottled-up the MacBride Bill in Committee for a year and was believed to be very opposed to it.

The proponents, those for MacBride, opened up. A number of representatives of Irish organizations, the AOH; the Ladies AOH; Knights of Equity, etc., made a joint presentation. Then followed the British representative, Mr. Harry Call, from Belfast. Next was Mr. Oliver Kearny from Antrim, who has testified for the MacBride Principles at many hearings. A representative of the Pennsylvania Pension Funds then testified against the Principles.

(After the hearing, Senator Armstrong, quite friendly now, came down to the audience, put his arm around Father McManus and said, "I'm glad I don't have to run against you in an election!")

Mr. Sean Neeson, former leader of the Alliance Party, made a rather dejected figure as he approached the witness stand to testify against the MacBride Principles immediately following Father McManus.

"The Hearing in Harrisburg was a case study in what the British Government is up against," said Father McManus. "There was a magnificent display of Irish unity with powerful and eloquent testimony from people like Oliver Kearney and John Breheny; and on the British side, feeble and dejected spokespersons parroting the same old discredited British line," he concluded.

The Bill will next be voted on by the Finance Committee at some date in the future, and then will go to the floor for a full Senate vote.

Irish Soldiers Reinterred at Antietam

SHARPSBURG, MD: The partial remains of four Civil War soldiers discovered on Antietam Battlefield were reinterred with full military honors on September 17, 1989, at noon.

Hastily buried in a shallow but temporary grave, the four members of the famed Irish Brigade finally rest in the Antietam National Cemetery 127 years after their sacrifice in a battle noted as the bloodiest day in American military history.

The handful of skeletal remains, along with artifacts such as uniform buttons, religious medals, bullets and buckshot, and bits of clothing were discovered in March of 1988 by three Civil War buffs. The three Ohio men notified historian Dennis Frye of the National Park Service shortly after they found the human remains. Frye, in turn, notified Dr. Stephen Potter, Park Service regional archaeologist, who then contacted anthropologists at the Smithsonian National Museum of Natural History.

Dr. Douglas Owsley of the Smithsonian stated that this was a rare opportunity to use modern archaeology and physical anthropology for study; however, identification of the remains could not be absolutely determined.

The ceremony reflected military funeral customs of the Civil War era with the assistance of living history units representing the 28th Massachusetts and the 93rd Pennsylvania. The 69th New York National Guard, one of the original Irish Brigade regiments, also participated.

Hard-Drinking Irish A Myth Reports E.C.

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Ireland's reputation as a nation of hard drinkers is more myth than reality according to European Community figures. Not only do the Irish drink less wine, spirits and liquors than our European counterparts but they also drink less beer too.

Not that any of this is saving the Irish money — the average spending on beverages in Ireland accounts for 12.3 percent of income, more than double the amount spent by any other EC country.

The liquor industry is quick to point to the high rate of tax and duty on drink for the higher expenditure which may also account for the drop in national consumption.

Ireland's annual beer consumption is 100.1 litres per head of population, a figure that falls behind Germany (145.5 litres), Denmark (121.3 litres), Belgium (121.0) and Britain (108.9 litres).

Ireland only manages to win out in beer stakes over countries in which wine is a more popular tipple. When it comes to overall alcohol consumption, a survey compiled for the drinks industry put Ireland 25th out of a total of 48 countries surveyed.

Address Dublin Rally

DUBLIN, IRELAND — Three speakers at a rally here, on the anniversary of the deployment of British troops in Northern Ireland, faced a crowd of over 15,000 protesters of this continuing military presence. Left to right are Joseph Roche, national chairman, AOH Political Education Committee and AOH past national president; Neil Blaney, T.D., Irish Government EUR. Minister of Parliament; and Daniel Kennedy, Detroit Irish Unity Conference.

Twenty Years Later: North 'Normality' Non-Existent

DUBLIN, IRELAND: On August 14, 1969 British troops were deployed on the streets of Derry. Within 24 hours they had also been sent into Belfast.

For the previous 12 months the whole foundation of the Northern state had been shaken as a result of the civil rights movement. Over the 50 years since partition, and the establishment of the Northern state, the Unionist regime had blatantly discriminated against the Catholics in jobs, housing, voting rights and access to education, health and other services. The civil rights movement demanded an end to discrimination and enjoyed huge popular support.

But the basis on which the state was founded — "a Protestant state for a Protestant people" — meant that it relied on discrimination for its very existence. The response to the peaceful call for basic civil rights for Catholics was virtual pogroms against Catholics. Over the 48 hour period, August 12-14, 1969, over 1,300 Catholic families in Derry and over 10,000 Catholics in Belfast were forced to flee their homes as a result of mob attacks which were backed up by the notorious B-Specials.

The British Army were sent in — as a temporary measure — to restore "normality". But "normality" was sectarian discrimination. Today, the British Army is concentrated solely in nationalist areas, to remind the people there that they have no rights in their own country. It practices harassment, intimidation, assault, surveillance and murder, just as it has in colonial situations throughout the world.

After nearly 3,000 deaths, it is clear the British Army is not part of the solution but at the root of the problem. Most people in Britain also want their troops withdrawn and a big "Time to Go" campaign is gathering strength there.

Questions and Answers

By Mr. William T. Malone

NOTE: Please forward questions to Mr. William T. Malone, Department of English, Center for Irish Studies, The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064.

Q. Please furnish me with information on my grandmother's family name CARROLL. Norbert F. Donahue, Kalspell, MT

A. The first thing to attempt to find out is whether your family once used the O or Mac prefix because the forms are from two distinct names. But most Carrolls are O'Carrolls. Before the time of the Anglo-Norman conquests six separate O'Carroll families flourished. Except for individual cases, four of these disappeared before the end of the thirteenth century. The two surviving played important roles in Irish history.

The O'Carroll of Oriel in Counties Louth and Monaghan lost his status as Chief of his sept during the Anglo-Norman invasions. Yet his clansmen continued to retain some of their holdings in this region to the present time. The well known tobacco business of the Carrolls of Dundalk process their product in this region. Curiously enough, the current head of the firm also traces his ancestry to the principal O'Carroll clan.

The O'Carroll of Ely O'Carroll in Counties Tipperary and Offaly enjoyed a well documented history until the end of the sixteenth century when the powerful Butlers confined them to the area around Birr, Co. Offaly. Today this name is most popular in Counties Kilkenny, Cork, Waterford, and Tipperary and is one of the most popular in Ireland. This sept derives its Irish name O Cearbhaill from Cearbhal the Lord of Ely who was one of the many victorious leaders of Brian Boru's allies at the Battle of Clontarf (1014 A.D.). His participation helped to secure his fame and to keep annalists interested in his descendants' subsequent activities.

A Maolsuthain O'Carroll (d.1031), of a County Kerry clan was the confessor to Brian Boru. Within the past two-hundred and some years, the most noteworthy Irish Carrolls distinguished themselves on this side of the Atlantic. Most Reverend John became the first American Catholic Bishop and later Archbishop of Baltimore (1735-1816). Charles Carroll (1737-1832) signed our Declaration of Independence. Carrollton, Maryland was founded by this family. At least two biographies are available of this noted name: Pedigree of The Carroll Family by E. O'Carroll, 1883; and "True Version of the Pedigree of the Carrolls of Carrollton, Maryland" found in the Royal Society of Antiquaries Ireland journal, volume 16 (1883), pages 187-94.

The MacCarrolls are an Ulster family who usually use the anglicized MacCarvil or Carvil instead of the Irish Mac Cearbhaill (The bh provides a /v/ sound as it does in the Irish form of your name; hence one of the reasons for the confusion when people changed to English spellings.)

Q. Could you provide me with information about the surname McLAUGHLIN. James J. O'Connor, Chevy Chase, Maryland.

A. Two different Irish septs use the modern anglicized forms MacLoughlin and MacLaughlin (also spelled without the first a). In English the names often became confused so that one would have to research early family records to determine which form was first used. But, for the most part, if your family has Ulster roots then it is probably a McLoughlin; on the other hand, if the roots began in County Meath or the midlands, then you are probably a MacLaughlin.

The MacLoughlins were a powerful Ulster family being the prominent northern branch of the Uí Neill clan. Their territories were in Innishowen in County Donegal, where the name is still popular. In Irish their name appeared Mac Lochlainn, meaning 'son of Lochlainn' a Norse first name, but this does not mean that the family had Norse roots, just that someone, in the early days of the clan had a Norse name. This family seemed to reach its climax just before losing power in the battle in 1241. Before their downfall, numerous noted personages are listed in various Annals of medieval history. The last significant MacLoughlins belonged to the branch which moved into County Leitrim and established itself as a strong ally of the O'Rourkes and were listed in the Composition Book of Connacht, written in 1586.

The MacLaughlins derived from one of the most powerful Irish clans, and lost their dominance when Brian Boru (d.1014), wrested the High Kingship from Malachy II (reign 980-1002). Malachy's surname in Irish was O'Maolseachlainn meaning 'son of the devotee of Saint Secundinus'. Thus the name was originally an O form. Malachy's name was usually anglicized O'Melaghlin, but numerous forms existed until the end of the seventeenth century. Malachy traced his roots to that famous race of Niall of the Nine Hostages; so, this name has always been associated with aristocratic status.

Even though they lost some of their influence during the Norman invasions, they were still prominent enough to be named to an Order for maintaining martial law in the midlands of the island in 1543. After 1691, the O'Melaghins completely lost their power and afterwards only the name MacLaughlin was used by those who still inhabited the

Survey Reveals Public Awareness of AOH

TROY, N.Y.: A recent marketing research survey conducted by the Siena College, Loudonville, NY, marketing class gave the following results: of the total respondents in a survey of people who have viewed a St. Patrick's Day Parade, 83% were aware of the AOH, 28% were interested in possibly joining the AOH, but 60% thought drinking was part of the Irish heritage, and 42% thought the parade promotes heavy drinking.

The survey was commissioned by past New York State President Ed Carley, who wanted to know how the public at large conceived the image of the Irish in their best promotional event: the St. Patrick's Day Parade. Many times the media tends to highlight the least desirable image that the Irish are attempting to project. The drinking aspect is often played over by the media so much that the public gets a much distorted view of the Irish.

Based upon their findings, it was clear to the researchers that the public views the Irish as a beer drinking culture to a large degree. One cause of this view is the fact that the St. Patrick's Day Parade is closely associated with alcohol consumption, and that people see this parade as an Irish cultural event. One step towards deleting this negative image would be to stress that the parade is a tribute towards the patron saint of Ireland. Although this negative image is more directed towards the Irish than Irish organizations, the Irish organizations are also viewed in this way. More needs to be done to disassociate the AOH from alcohol consumption.

Also, it was apparent that membership for the AOH should be made more available to the Irish public, or be projected more in the public eye. Clearly, 28% of the respondents claimed they would be interested in joining the organization.

This statistically-based survey was most economical since only postage and printing were billed to the AOH. (An estimate to perform this survey commercially would place the cost at between $3,000 to $10,000 depending on the depth of study). The college routinely services "clients" in the Capital District area via the marketing class projects performed by the students. The cost is nominal and the results confidential. Other AOH jurisdictions are encouraged to participate with the colleges and universities in their areas that perform similar services.

This particular study of the Irish image indicates a definite need for the establishment of an Anti-defamation Committee at State, County, and Division levels. We should work hard to dispel the drinking image that has been projected upon us by the media over the years.

Members interested in more information about this study should write to: Ed Carley, 57 Excelsior Avenue, Troy, New York 12180.

Ed Carley, Past President, N.Y. State Board original territory in County Meath.

Q. The McINAW clan is having a family reunion on July 8, could you tell us something about our surname. Ernis McInaw, Richmond, Virginia

A. As you and a School Master realize there is some confusion concerning the spelling of your name. You probably know something about your name, but what I have to offer may surprise you as much as it did me.

Mac Conshnamha, pronounced like 'mack in shnaws', is anglicized to a variety of forms depending upon which Irish form of the word was thought to be the original. Although the clans are unrelated the forms of the names are related linguistically and phonetically: these are MacKinnawe, M'Conave, M'Enawe, MacAnawe, Kinnavy, Kineavy (often translated to Adams), Forde and Ford.

The most noteworthy Fords were plantationists from Devonshire, England who settled in County Meath in the fourteenth. Thus a couple hundred years before the official Elizabethan and Cromwellian plantations.

Ford was a mistranslation from a corruption of the name of a southern Connemara sept with the name Mac Giolla na Naomh meaning 'son of the devotee of the saints'. This name is pronounced like 'mack gilla naw neevh' and is easily rendered MacKinnawe, but incorrectly. When names were first transliterated into English, if the name holder was illiterate in either English or Irish then it was up to the official writing the name to use his own judgement as to how it should be spelled in English. If he did not know Irish, as was often the case, the problem is compounded. It may be that members of the same family received different spellings if they anglicized their names at different times, in different places, and with different officials. Imagine the problems that occurred if any family members who still used the Irish came to America! A problem is that mh is pronounced like /v/ or /w/ depending upon the dialect and time. The earliest recorded anglicized form is MacAnawe.

Sometimes Mac Giolla na Naomh appeared incorrectly as Macgiollarnath and the ending -ath is the word for ford: consider Baile Atha Cliath, the Irish for Dublin, here the Atha means 'ford'. Thus the name meant 'devotee of the ford' and that does not make sense; so one can see how it was easily anglicized as simply Ford. But Ford(e) is a post eighteenth usage, except when it was the name of a true English family.

Another Connacht sept is MacConshnamha meaning the 'son of the swimming hound': cu=hound and rhnama is a form of the word for swim, snamh in modern Irish, which is properly anglicized MacKinnawe. In the 1685 Composition Book of Connacht it appears as MacEnawe and in a 1659 census as MacEnaw — both obvious phonetic spellings. MacKinnawe holdings were situated between Lough Allen and the Arigna River. An early celebrity of this family was Cornelius MacCansnamha (d.1335), the Bishop of Kilmore.

The Faith Of the Irish

BY FR. JOHN J. O'CONNOR

March is noted for two things, St. Patrick's Day and the first day of spring, in that order. The Irish have always taken their faith seriously; from the springboard of faith they have a humor that only the Irish have, and only the Irish can understand it. Faith gives a wisdom that learning cannot give. In the lighter vein the Irish always answer questions by asking another, and sometimes that isn't such a bad idea. Pope Pius XI made the statement that the Irish, like God, are to be found everywhere.

It might surprise many a person to know that St. Patrick was the only canonized Saint of Ireland until Oliver Plunket, but it is reported that 152 Irish missionaries became Patron Saints in Germany, 70 in Scotland, 47 in France, 44 in England, 30 in Belgium, 13 in Italy and 9 in Iceland. America boasts of over 400 parishes named St. Patrick.

Irish hospitality has to be experienced; it can't be described. The Irish parish priest is the composite of every profession. He is the doctor, the lawyer, the judge, the financier, the leader of the community, and above all, he is the prophetic word of God. In Ireland the potatoes do have a taste superior to the taste of the staple food of any other country in the world. In Ireland you will never see a drunk.

It is also interesting to note that while Ireland is in the British Isles and the shamrock is the flower of Ireland, it bears no relation to the symbols of Scotland or England. Unlike the thistle of Scotland, the shamrock never wounds; and unlike the rose of England, the shamrock never wears a thorn.

The sad history of Ireland is brushed away as if it never happened. In 1921 England partitioned Ireland. Since then in Northern Ireland, if you kept the faith, chances are you will never get a job while the Protestant population suffers only six percent unemployment. The government of Northern Ireland, which is controlled by England, employs only four percent of the Catholic population, which is thirty-five percent of the total population. The government owned shipyards employ one hundred Catholics in good paying union jobs, while it employs over seven thousand Protestants in the same kind of jobs.

In the past our country bragged of its help to oppressed nations. El Salvador knows where to get financial help; Israel gets support; Washington speaks out against Russian invasion of neighboring countries; but to Washington, Ireland's trouble is an "internal affair." Nowhere is Christ more human than He is in the garden of Gethsemane where He asks His Father to let the chalice pass from Him. Faith in His Father gave Him strength to bear the suffering. It is only their faith that gives the Irish strength to bear their oppressions.

Ireland is famous for its crystal. Every piece is the product of rare craftsmanship and strict adherence to quality.

The same is true for Budweiser.

We brew our beer with the finest hops, rice, and barley malt. Then we age it with Beechwood, to aid the natural carbonation. The result is a clean, crisp taste that has been distinctively Budweiser's for over one hundred years.

For those who appreciate quality, this Bud's for you:

WASHINGTON, D.C. — His Eminence James Cardinal Hickey, Archbishop of Washington, is being presented with a donation of $1,000 by James J. O'Connor, president emeritus and president, Emerald Isle Division, Washington, D.C., AOH. The donation is from the Edward P. Keefe Memorial Fund, a long-standing project of the Emerald Isle Division to provide financial support for men studying for the priesthood who will serve in the Archdiocese of Washington.

AT A RECENT BENEFIT concert are, left to right, Phil Chaney, vice president/co-chairman, Celtic Children of War Fund, Kansas City AOH; Patricia O'Neill, soprano/Irish harpist; and George Christman, president, Missouri State AOH and Kansas City AOH.

KANSAS CITY: Patricia O'Neill, Soprano/Irish Harpist, recently appeared in concert in cooperation with the Kansas City AOH Celtic Children of War Committee. Miss O'Neill presented her concert, "The Quiet Land of Erin" at Rockhurst College, here on July 28, for the purpose of raising funds for this noteworthy cause.

The first two boys, one Protestant and one Catholic, arrived here the week following and stayed several weeks at the home of a local resident. They have enjoyed sharing with many, and especially each other, the joys of simple American living in a peace-filled environment.

The Kansas City AOH is planning several future fund raising events in hope of increasing the numbers of children invited during the coming years. To quote Fr. Matt Wallace of St. Peter's Cathedral, Belfast, Northern Ireland: "If we move one grain of sand at a time, then over a period we will remove the desert of hate and violence which so sadly bedevils our country."

Patricia O'Neill is willing to cooperate with efforts of similar purpose wherever possible. She is represented by Pan Artists, Sandra Hymel, Agent, (816) 737-3136.

Akron Brother Helped Rescue Lt. Geo. Bush

AKRON, OHIO: During World War II, Hibernian Brother, James Vincent Lavery, a member of the Mark Heffernan Division of Summit County, Akron, Ohio, was a crewman on the submarine, U.S.S. Finback.

On September 2, 1944, The Finback made a daring rescue of then Navy pilot George Bush. Of course, the crew of the Finback did not realize they were rescuing a future United States president. At that time it was Lt. George H.W. Bush, the pilot of a T.B.M. Avenger flying off of the aircraft carrier, San Jacinto. The men of the Finback were just routinely doing their duty when they saw Lt. Bush parachute from his plane, which had drawn heavy fire from the Japanese during a raid on Chichi Jima Island. According to captain's log, it was 11:56 a.m. and under Japanese gunfire when Lt. Bush was pulled aboard the Finback from his life raft.

The Finback had an extraordinary war record. The submarine sunk over 100,000 tons of enemy ships and craft, and made numerous rescues of downed fliers. It is no wonder crewman James Lavery had no special recollection of Bush's rescue. At least not until George Bush sent Jim and the other members of the Finback crew a letter expressing his thanks for their heroic service to their country and for rescuing him from enemy waters. Also, each member of the crew received a Certificate of Appreciation complete with Presidential Seal.

After the war, Brother Lavery joined the AOH and has been a member of the Mark Heffernan Division for over thirty years. He is currently Division Chairman of Catholic Action and is working to start an organization to gain tuition tax vouchers for the families of students in parochial schools.

'BEST OF PARADE' A LABOR OF LOVE

BELLEVILLE, IL: Division One, St. Clair County, was overjoyed to have its entry float in the St. Louis Metropolitan St. Patrick's Day Parade judged "Best of Parade" and awarded a huge inscribed Gaiety Crystal. We tried our very best to put forth an entry that is synonymous with the love of our heritage; so we designed it and put it together ourselves. Here's the story.

We purchased a 40 ft. flatbed trailer. Busch Transportation took the trailer, did the necessary plating, removed the tire carrier, and painted it "fleet white" with deep green wheels. We built a rail extending down both sides and painted the rail with the Republic of Ireland colors. We have a group of Shriners known as the Riverside Bugle Band. They played Irish music on the flatbed. Their attire consisted of green tuxedos with the exception being one slightly built gentleman dressed up as a leprechaun.

Our float consisted of a map of Ireland, 6 ft. 6 in. tall by 4 ft. 6 in. wide, having a thickness of 4 inches. On the opposite side of the map is a 6 ft. Bull's Eye with the AOH Coat of Arms hand-painted onto it. This combination map and Coat of Arms revolves by an AOH-built direct drive-slow speed motor. It is held together by a brace shaped like a goal post with 2 inch by 2 inch square tubing steel pipe. It is designed to be able to withstand stress of an automobile. It has a #50 chain and is geared down by two sprockets to achieve extremely low revolutions. It makes a 3/4 turn in one minute and is slower than one rpm.

We secured every County flag (all 32) and we feature the Irish and American flags in a prominent position. We secured astroturf and the various normal float materials through a charitable organization so that they benefit from our work. The total regarding the boxes that held the flags and the map, plus the Coat of Arms is more than 166 sq. feet of astroturf. Our flower bed had a range of 2,500 to 3,000 flowers on it that were done by hand. We had approximately 15,000-plus staples in our float, 26 lbs. of drywall screws, and 16 lbs. of lag bolts. We estimate that the total man-hours to construct was approximately 463 hours. To give you an idea of the time that it takes constructing a float of this type, we used 171 ft. of nylon rope to make the entire border for the map of Ireland and each of its counties.

Due to the summer hiatus, there is not much to report in the area of Division activities. However, I do have some interesting items to pass on to the membership. According to Brevard County Division 1 President Bob Schneider, two new members will be sworn in at the October meeting.

During the September meeting, Manatee Co. Div. 1 President Paul

States despite the fact he has never been charged with or convicted of crime in this country; and

WHEREAS, Mr. Doherty has been jailed six years for an alleged crime in northeastern Ireland and is now the longest held prisoner in the history of the New York Correctional Center; and

WHEREAS, Both United States Federal and U.S. Immigration judges have in every instance ruled in Mr. Doherty's favor regarding his ongoing effort to secure political asylum in the United States; now, therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Mayor of Chicago, the Honorable Richard M. Daley, and the members of the City Council do hereby proclaim June 17th, 1989, Joseph Patrick Doherty Day in Chicago to draw attention to Mr. Doherty's plight; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That suitable copies of this resolution be printed and sent to President George Bush, Attorney General Thornburgh, Joseph Cardinal Bernardin, Senators Allen Dixon, and Paul Simon, as well as every member of the Illinois State Legislature.

Finnerty motivated the members to write legislators in support of the Florida "profile legislation" and HR 62 (U.S. House) granting Joe Doherty political asylum. During September 12 new members were sworn in, of whom six also received the Shamrock degree. The Irish music radio program still seeks sponsors — contact Martin McAndrew, 1701 N.W. 97th Ave., Plantation, FL 33321.

Brevard County Division 2 President Jerry Costlow reports that his division will host an Irish Night on November 4th, in conjunction with the Fall quarterly meeting of the State Board of Officers. The meeting will be held at the Howard Johnson Motel on U.S. 1 in the city of Melbourne. Meetings are scheduled from 9 AM to 1 PM on Saturday, with the rest of the weekend devoted to sightseeing. State President John Cullinan invites all Hibernians in the state to attend with their families to get acquainted with each other.

This reporter continues to urge all divisions to support the State president and Division presidents in their quest to make Florida the nation's outstanding Hibernian state, through increased membership and attendance at meetings and social functions.

JERRY SEXTON

Jerry Sexton, past president of the Massachusetts State Board, AOH, was recently sworn in as a member of the Massachusetts Bar. Attorney Sexton served as state president from 1981 to 1983. After graduating cum laude from Suffolk University Law School's evening division in February of this year, Brother Sexton took and passed the Massachusetts Bar exam. He was also formerly the state vice-president and served three terms as president of Div. 10 AOH in Lynn.

Attorney Sexton has been employed for the past 10 years as a Deputy Commissioner of Banks for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In September he will be leaving that position and relocating to Washington, D.C. to join the staff of the General Counsel in the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Brother Sexton reports that he's looking forward to resuming an active role in Irish-American and AOH affairs.

OFFENSIVE SITUATIONS

Member Eileen Brunetto informs us of another offensive situation. A recent edition of "House Beautiful Magazine" had an ad from the 3M corporation. The ad started with a photo of a very elegant table, "The Design is English,"—then the second caption and photo displays a glass of whiskey stating, "The stain is Irish." The third photo and caption states the "Protection is Scotch." The Scotch refers to a stain removing product.

BOSTON CITY COUNCIL LOOKS AT MACBRIDE

ROXBURY, MA — Councillor Maura Hennigan Casey introduced a MacBride Bill in the Boston City Council that will restrict investment of city pension funds in companies that practice religious discrimination in Northern Ireland. Hearings are scheduled to take place soon.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts was the first state in the Union to adopt the MacBride Principles which restrict the investment of Pension funds in companies that practice religious discrimination in Northern Ireland.

Although many states have now adopted MacBride legislation, only a relatively small number of municipalities have done so, New York and Worcester being two exceptions. We are sure you will agree that our city, Boston, with its long history of individual freedom and strong stands on human rights issues, must now take a stand on religious discrimination in Northern Ireland by adopting the MacBride Principles.

The British Government has spent millions of dollars trying to defeat the MacBride bill in the thirteen states that have passed them. The value of city-controlled pension funds is said to be in excess of 700 million dollars.

ANNUAL MEMORIAL EXERCISES were held for John Boyle O'Reilly at Brookline, MA, sponsored by the Massachusetts State Board. Plans are underway for the 100th anniversary of the multi-talented Irishman's untimely death at age 46.

Annual Memorial Held For John Boyle O'Reilly

BROOKLINE, MA — The Massachusetts State Board recently held their annual John Boyle O'Reilly Memorial Exercises at Holyhood Cemetery here. Celebrant of the Mass was the Rev. James D. Champion, state chaplain, from Shrewsbury. The Memorial Oration was delivered by Mrs. Peggy O'Reilly, president of the Drogheda, County Louth, O'Reilly Memorial Society. A host of Hibernian officials and members were in attendance including State Presidents Joseph McHugh of Swampscott and Jacqueline Lamprey of North Andover, as well as Past National President John Connolly of Watertown. Many other members of various Irish Societies in the Greater Boston Area were also present.

John Boyle O'Reilly was born near Drogheda, County Louth, in June, 1844. As a young cavalryman in the British army, he was convicted of being a Fenian (a fighter for Irish Independence) by a military court. He was sentenced to be hanged, but that sentence was later commuted to 20 years penal servitude in Western Australia. After a year as a prisoner in Australia, he escaped and later came to live in the Boston area.

John Boyle O'Reilly was the most distinguished of the 19th Century editors of The Pilot before the newspaper was purchased by the Archdiocese of Boston. As an athlete, novelist, poet, public speaker and civil rights leader, he greatly bridged the gap between the newly arrived Irish-Catholic immigrants and the Boston populace. O'Reilly died at the age of 46 on August 10, 1890.

Albert James Healy Madden of Boston served as General Chairman of this year's Memorial Exercises. Mr. Madden and other AOH leaders from across the State are presently working on plans to observe the 100th Anniversary of O'Reilly's untimely death.

In July the New London Division changed its name to the John P. Holland Division. John Holland is the "Father of the U.S. Submarine Navy". The New London-Groton area of Connecticut is the home of the U.S. Navy Submarine base and, is known as the "Submarine Capitol of the World". The Nautilus Museum and Library is also located here, and it houses many of Holland's memorabilia and has a permanent Holland exhibit on display; the Division interacts with the Museum.

State AOH Immigration Chairman Jim Larkin is arranging meetings with Congressional Representatives to explain the Irish Immigration problem. On September 8 and 9 he and his team met with CT Congressman Sam Gejdenson and Congressman Bruce Morrison.

The next State Board meeting will be held on October 1, at the Waterbury AOH Hall. A quarterly statewide Irish-American newsletter-social calendar will be reinstituted, with the first issue covering the period October-December 1989.

The 17th annual New London feis was held at Ocean Beach on August 20. Appropriately, the feis began with a Mass for Our Lady of Knock. Bishop Daniel P. Reilly, of the Norwich Diocese, celebrated the Mass.

Our Lady Of Knock

By JIM GALLAGHER

The annual celebration of Our Lady of Knock, the Holy Queen of Ireland, is the Sunday closest to August 21.

It was on the evening of August 21, 1879 that a vision of the Holy Mother Mary, St. Joseph and St. John the Evangelist appeared before about 15 witnesses at the south gable of a small country church in Knock, County Mayo, Ireland. The vision remained about two feet above the ground for a period of two hours before disappearing. Mary was clad in white with a brilliant crown on her head. Over her forehead was a beautiful rose in full bloom. Behind and to the left was a simple altar on which were a cross and a lamb. The vision was bathed in a glowing light, and although it was raining the vision and the ground beneath it remained dry. Two inquiry commissions, in 1879 and 1886, found the evidence of the 15 witnesses to be "trustworthy and satisfactory".

Our Lady of Knock was given the title Queen of Ireland by Pope Pius XI, on the occasion of the Eucharistic Congress of 1932, held in Ireland. Papal visits to the St. John the Baptist Church in Knock occurred in 1974 when Pope Paul VI blessed the foundation stone of the proposed Basilica, and during the Centenary celebration in 1979 when Pope John Paul II presented a golden rose to the shrine — it remains on display.

The Knock Shrine is one of the major Marian Shrines in the world. It is Ireland's National Marian Shrine, and it is visited by millions of pilgrims each year. In 1988, John Cardinal O'Connor, New York Diocese, led a pilgrimage to the Shrine for three days. Bishop Daniel P. Reilly, Bishop of the Norwich diocese, made a pilgrimage to Knock Shrine in August 1988. The purpose of these pilgrimages was to pray for peace with justice in all of Ireland and throughout the world. The annual Our Lady of Knock celebration is one of the observed holidays of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

STATE NEWS: Texas

Abilene Division Recalls Its History of Ten Years

In January, 1979 Abilenian James E. Heaney decided to form an AOH Division in Abilene, Texas. There were already divisions in Houston and San Antonio.

Primarily made up of Irish American Catholics, the Order was founded in New York in 1836 and has divisions in most of these United States.

Heaney was looking for qualified men who were proud of their Irish heritage and interested in learning about this great heritage. By June 1, 1979, 18 men qualified to become Hibernians were signed up. These charter members were: Charlie Folger, Larry Duggan, Rev. Bob Kelly, James A. Heaney, Guy Mattingly, George Kelly, Jim Leonard, Joe McHale, Rev. Steve White, Tom Morse, Rev. Jerry Gallagher, Rev. C. O'Leary, George Stowbridge, Denis McGrath, Dan Hixson, William Sughru, Bill Terry and Jim Heaney.

On June 22, 1979, the Erin Go Bragh Division was chartered at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Abilene. State Vice President Bill Hines from the San Antonio Division swore in the 18 charter members and presented them with their signed charter. State Chaplain Rev. John Wallace gave the new division his blessing.

The first Division meeting was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall on July 30, 1979. Meetings were held on the third Mondays, moving to several locations. The first chaplain, Rev. White, was transferred and replaced by Rev. Bob Kelly.

Four Abilene members attended the first state AOH Convention in 25 years, held October 26-27, 1979, in Houston, with four divisions represented.

The Div. held its first annual St. Patrick's Benefit Dance on March 15, 1980 at the Knights of Columbus Hall. The dance later was moved to the Civic Center in 1982 and then to the Abilene Country Club in 1985, where it is still being held. Our first Annual Picnic was held at the Lytle Shores Auditorium on June 10, 1980 and is still an annual event, although a lot larger.

Rev. Tim Murphy became our third chaplain in October, 1982, owing to the transfer of Rev. Kelly, and is still our chaplain.

In July, 1980, six Texas Hibernians, two from Abilene, met at the AOH National Convention in Miami Beach and won the bid for Texas to have the 1982 National Convention in San Antonio. It would be the first time in American AOH history that a National Convention was to be held in Texas. And indeed it was a great success.

In 1980, the Green Blazer with the AOH patch on the left breast became the Division's dress code. Five of the Division members have received their 4th degree pins and card. This is the highest degree a Hibernian can receive.

The first St. Patrick's Day Parade held in Abilene was sponsored by the Irish-American Society, to which several AOH members belonged. When the Society disbanded after the 1983 and 1984 parades, the Abilene AOH took over the sponsorship. Dave O'Connor, the man behind the parade idea, became a member of the AOH and continued to be the parade chairman. The 7th successful St. Patrick's Day Parade was held in March, 1989 and will continue.

Annual picnics, children's Christmas parties, corporate communion masses and the annual chili cook-off in September are just a few of the ongoing functions. A pancake breakfast was served free of charge in the Sacred Heart Church Basement in November, 1986. More than 200 people were served.

In September, 1983, Abilene's AOH Division sponsored their first Bi-Annual Texas AOH State Convention, at which Jim Heaney was elected State President for a two year term.

Several members and wives attended the 1987 State Bi-Annual Convention in San Antonio, held in conjunction with Pope John Paul's visit to the city.

In the past 10 years, the Division has donated over $15,000 in profits from their annual St. Patrick's Day Benefit dance to local charities and churches.

The "Friends of the Hibernians," a club of Hibernian wives and others, are a constant help with most of the division functions and are greatly appreciated. Another great help has been the work of Joe McHale in his aggressive drive for ads for the dance programs. He recently received a pen set on being named "Super Salesman."

With 43 active members, Div. President Bob Karhan has set a membership drive in motion, already bringing in four of his goal of 12 for the year.

On June 24, the Division held a Tenth Anniversary Banquet at the Briarstone Manor, at which charter members, past and present presidents, the Irishman of the Year honorees, past chaplains and Friends of the Hibernians were all honored.

Burke O'Rourke of Houston was inducted into St. Edward's University's Athletic Hall of Fame during the school's alumni reunion in Austin recently. O'Rourke graduated from the school in 1951, having won two letters in basketball and one in baseball.

He is a founding charter member and past president of the Dick Dowling Division and chairman of the Houston St. Patrick's Day parade for 6 years.

Mike Griffin, the legendary Irish leader of Grif's Shillelagh Inn, saying he's "tired of people telling me there is no fun place to go around here after they roll up the sidewalks at 6 p.m.," recently announced expansion plans for the pub.

The "bigger and better Grif's" will be supported by The Charter Club, best customers and friends who have contributed dues. The expansion will address the sports crowd's need for a fun restaurant, piano bar and central meeting place. Charter members include Dan Pastorini, John Fitzgerald, Brian Hill, Larry O'Toole and astronauts Maj. Brian Duffy and Cmdr. Dave Walker.

Mike is a past president of the Dick Dowling Div., AOH, Houston, and past St. Patrick's Day Parade co-chairman for 8 years. A graduate of St. Thomas University, where he played varsity football, Dick is also a local sports celebrity.

STATE NEWS: Rhode Island

LINCOLN, R.I.: The Irish from all parts of New England, Ireland, Florida and everywhere were well represented at the recent Irish Fall Festival held here in Lincoln Greyhound Park.

The fifth annual festival sponsored by Ireland's "32" Society drew a huge crowd to enjoy the full day of entertainment. The event opened with the celebration of Mass by the Rev. Joseph F. McCabe, Chaplain of Division One LAOH of Central Falls and Pastor Emeritus of Holy Trinity Church, whose homily traced the history of the Hibernians from the Isle of Hibernia to the present good works of the Order for the Church and its Clergy. Music for the Mass was provided by Dermot O'Brien of New York.

O'Brien and his band led the entertainment that filled the giant indoor grandstand at the park. Joining him during the afternoon and evening, highlighting the Festival, was Dermot Henry and his Band from New York and Accordionist Fintan Stanley and his Band for continuous dancing to 9 p.m. The Derry Irish Step Dancers directed by Kathleen Hanley performed; a fashion show with fashions from the Irish Jaunting Cart Shoppe was conducted by Mary O'Hara; Irish vendors sold their wares of Irish gifts and imported items of all descriptions.

Business was brisk at the AOH and LAOH booth from start to finish. AOH members David J. O'Keefe and Leo F. Madden were Festival co-chairmen and Bill McEnery was in charge of Publicity. Another Hibernian, President Robert O.N. Ryan, announced that Erin Lyons was the winner of the trip to Ireland.

THE IRISH GIFT SHOP

The Irish export story did not start with shilleaghs. It originated 5000 years ago when Irish-made stone axes were traded to Britain. Bronze Age tools and artifacts were also shipped to Iberia, Crete, and parts of Northern Europe. At the time of Ptolemy, the Greek astronomer, circa 150 A.D., ancient maps and records show that Mediterranean traders visited Hibernia and that a market in hides, wools, and several agricultural products flourished. Medieval Literature refers to shipping shoes and linens from Galway to Lisbon and Genoa in the year Columbus sailed off to the New World. Candles were made in Dublin and exported in the 15th century by a company whose descendants are still doing business in Ireland.

The 17th century is generally regarded as the start of modern Ireland's trade activity that has continued to this day. The Irish shipped cattle, barreled beef, fish, tallow, corn, yarn, wool and provisions to North America in the holds of the old sailing vessels. A busy trade in Irish whiskey and crystal glass developed in the 18th and 19th centuries.

The gradual growth of the Irish Gift Shops started in the late 1800's. The need for warm woolen clothes in the rugged climate of America, especially during the push westward, which included many Irish, after the Civil War, encouraged many enterprising Irish merchants to open shops. In later years the interest in tourism, involving immigrants and their rapidly growing families heightened interest in the Irish gift line. The trips to Ireland acquainted many travelers with the high quality of easily shipped attractive Irish products.

Irish gift shops have popped out in the U.S. like heather blossoms. There are 279 Gift Shops of record in 33 states — as reported by Co'ras Trachta'la, the Irish Export Board. The shops range in number from one each in Arizona, Nevada, and Minnesota, to 39 in New York, 34 in New Jersey, and 30 in Massachusetts. There may be a few unaccounted for and some may be operated out of people's homes, but the 279 total is an impressive number of shops selling Irish products.

The Irish Gift Shops stock top grade Irish designer garments: sweaters, jackets, coats, capes, scarves, caps and hats woven with the finest wool on earth. The cold damp air and the thick grass encourages the growth of the warm, rich wool on the sheep that graze the hills and mountains of west Ireland.

While Irish-made clothing is a top seller, the variety of Irish manufactured articles make the wares of the Gift Shops unique to the retail trade in the U.S. Along with the popular Aran woollens, Irish-made jewelry is most sought after by the customers. The popular Claddagh rings and pendants are always in demand. The Irish china such as Bealek, Tara, and Dresden is also popular. The World War 2 bombings totally destroyed Dresden and the family business was resettled in Adare, County Limrick, where the beautiful china products are made today. Glass crystal from Ireland is known worldwide. Some brands are household names and some are relatively new: Waterford, Cavin, Galway, Tipperary, Tyrone, and Dublin are the most famous. Also found in the Irish Gift Shops are: rugby shirts, tee shirts, Irish linens, wall plaques and pictures, musical audio and video tapes and records, books, food from Ireland, and even the picturesque Irish road signs.

The outstanding claim the Irish exporters make is that the Irish-made exported products are known for being top quality. Only genuine Irish products reach the Irish Gift Shops. While some bootleg imitations may be found in general market places, the Irish shop owners know well that top quality and well known labels reign supreme in the specialty shop milieu.

It always surprises many people that the North American market is only 9% of the total Irish exports. Europe and the U.K. make up 80% of Irish sales which reached 12.3 billion Irish pounds in 1988. Approximately SHOPPERS browsing in Irish Treasures, a typical, modern Irish Gift Shop.

340 million dollars of Irish export came into the U.S. and Canada in that year. A good part of this business involved Irish Gift Shops. It is indeed big business.

Some of the Irish Gift Shops have catchy Irish names: "The McMac Shoppe", in Anchorage, Alaska (Mary Digney); "Wee Bit O' Wool", Yountville, California (Ray and Tina Yared); "Lucky Leprechaun", Plymouth, Massachusetts (Dan and Dottie Kelly); "The Life of Riley", Old Saybrook, Connecticut (Doraine Wall-Riley); "Tinkers Two", Atlanta, Georgia (John Sadler and Sean Nally); "Dublin Door", Des Moines, Iowa (Catherine Hutchins); "Paddy's On The Square", Long Grove, Illinois (Pat and Linda Barry); "Sheep's Clothing", Baltimore, Maryland (Charles and D'Arcy Norton); "The Feis", No. Hampton, New Hampshire (Joan O'Donnell); "Delta Irish Miner Gift Shop", Virginia City, Nevada (Eleanor Ryan); "Ha' Penny Bridge Imports", Dublin, Ohio (Maureen Murphy); "Boreen", Lynn, Massachusetts (Cathy and Madelyn Cashman); "St. Brendan's Crossing", Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania (Elaine Manning).

The true Irishman would not be seen in a Saint Patrick's Day Parade without his genuine woolen Irish cap. The hand knit Irish woolen sweater is all you need on a cold, snappy day at a football game. The ladies would never go to an Irish racket without the Claddagh ring or pendant. An Irish tee shirt is the uniform of the day at the Feis. It seems that you can't go Irish without the Irish Gift Shop.

Phases of Irish History

By MICHAEL MCCORMACK, National Historian

It Finally Happened. There is someone out there. Since our last column, I've heard from several sources and gratefully accept all their recommendations and suggestions. Gerry Moran wrote that he is the Texas Historian, and couldn't get a copy of a form 9 to send me because they haven't seen a form 9 in years. That's why it's good to communicate, because they'll never have that problem again. Brother McNabb will send you all the Form 9s you want just for mailing a request to him at 31 Logan St., Auburn, NY, 13021.

Speaking of mail, our mailbox is not overflowing with reports from our historians on plaques, statues, or landmarks that may be located in their geographic area; but I did hear from a few. Thanks to brother Moran for doing some digging on the Dick Dowling monument. He is working on a book on the contributions of the Irish to Texas history, and we'll keep you posted on its progress. Thanks to Jim Gallagher over in Connecticut for an informative article on the Irishman for whom Hunter College was named. We will share that information in future columns. Welcome to Pat Martin of Allegheny Co., Pa., who has registered for the monthly profiles. Maybe Pat can dig up some good stories on the Pennsylvania Irish from Thompson's Irish Brigade to the Molly Maguires, and share it with us. The trickle of information has started and that's what we hoped to see; please don't let it stop. If there's a historic landmark of significance to the Irish in your community, get the details of that landmark and share it with us. I'll spread the word from there, and always acknowledge the source.

1. National Essay Competition. A proposal is being studied to link the AOH National Essay Competition to the National History Day competition which is sponsored by several leading corporations, trusts, and fraternal organizations. Black-American, Italian-American, Jewish-American, and other ethnic fraternal organizations sponsor prizes in this annual scholastic event which draws entries from schools all across the country, but there is no representation from the Irish. Why not?

2. Monthly Profiles. The bi-monthly Profiles in Patriotism will continue to be mailed to any historian who has sent me a copy of the form 9 or other information confirming his position as Division, County, or State Historian. That's all you have to do. Send it to Mike McCormack, 37 Harrison Ave., Centerreach, NY 11720.

3. Holland Project. Three cheers and thanks to the Massachusetts State Board. There is the first check received by the committee in our nationwide appeal for funds to save the Holland Papers and publish an index for prospective biographers. Joe Sullivan of New Jersey and Jim Gallagher of Connecticut are Deputy National Historians assisting on the project, and a project office has been established as a reception point for all inquiries and contributions. As a Hibernian, you can help. Publicize the project among the Irish media in your own area (radio, newspapers, etc). Press releases are available from this office; just drop us a line and we'll get them out to you. Seek the assistance of other Irish and Irish-Americans and their respective clubs and organizations. Please send all donations to: The Holland Project,

American Ireland Fund Helps Cause of Undocumented Irish

BOSTON, MA — $50,000 in grants have been awarded by the American Ireland Fund to six organizations throughout the United States to assist in meeting the needs of undocumented Irish immigrants.

The six organizations are: The Irish Immigration Reform Movement, which was awarded $20,000 to be allocated to its national office for distribution on the local level, particularly in Boston, Connecticut, San Francisco and Washington, D.C., as well as in New York; York;

New York Catholic Charities' "Project Irish Outreach," which was awarded $12,000 to help further its outstanding record of assistance to Irish immigrants in the New York area;

Boston's Irish Pastoral Center, which was granted $8,000 to continue its excellent program of assistance to Irish immigrants in need of housing, health care and immigration counseling;

The Irish Immigration Counseling and Training Program in Chicago, which was awarded a matching grant of $6,000 to support the establishment of a special Chicago office for immigration services;

The Los Angeles County Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians (AOH), which was awarded $3,000 towards the cost of producing radio and television public service announcements for its hotline and other immigrant services in the widely-dispersed Los Angeles area;

The Bronx Irish Women's Support Group, which received a grant of $2,000 to assist in the work of aiding young Irish immigrant mothers, through providing child-care and self-help services, with an emphasis on the needs of women.

In announcing the awards on behalf of the Board of Directors of the American Ireland Fund, its Executive Director, William J. McNally, pointed out that they were one-time only grants and that the vast majority of American Ireland Fund grants have been and will continue to be in support of programs located in Ireland. Mr. McNally also emphasized that, because of the Fund's charter and purposes, the grants could not be used for lobbying or other political activity.

4. New Projects. Our congratulations to Brian Phillips of Tom's River, New Jersey. Tom was on our mailing list as a historian and has now acceded to the office of State President. Any state that elects an Historian can't be all wrong; Jersey is starting to move already as our brothers there are planning a commemoration ceremony for the 75th anniversary of the Easter Rising which will take place in 1991.

If you have any projects that you would like to share with us, please call and let us know what you're doing.

Likewise, if you have any historic story you would like to share, please feel free to contact this office. I'm still waiting for Jim Browne to send me the story he found on George Washington's son (or was it his grandson) and the tradition which requires shamrocks to be placed on his grave every March 17. Maybe one of the Washington, D.C. or Virginia members can find out and share it with us.

STATE NEWS: New Jersey Montclair Division Records Great Year

MONTCLAIR, N.J.: Montclair's AOH Division 9 ended their 1988-89 season with a renewed spirit of activism, according to the organization's president, Michael McGlynn. The group has tripled its membership to nearly 100 and plans to establish a scholarship fund and to begin a program of legal counseling for Irish immigrants in the fall. At this year's final meeting are, left to right, standing, Robert Largey, Patrick J. Vesey, Brendan Vesey, Michael McGlynn, William Mallow, Martin Barrett and William Keefe. Seated, John Farrell, John Malone, Joe Dahl and Harry Melody.

Book Project Dedicated on St. Patrick's Day

TOMS RIVER, N.J.: The feast of Ireland's apostle, St. Patrick, was observed in the town of Toms River. The day was blessed with fine weather and the festivities began with the eleventh annual raising of the Irish flag over the Ocean County Administration Building, sponsored by the James J. Howard AOH Div.

Mary Kelly sang the Soldier's Song and the Star Spangled Banner. The tricolor was raised by Division President Thomas J. McBride and Recording Secretary Ralph C. Hodges. Ocean County Freeholder Joseph Vicari presented President McBride with a proclamation which declared the week of March 19th through the 26th as Irish American Heritage Week. The proclamation of the Board of Chosen Freeholders also declared that the flag of Ireland shall be flown over the County Building from March 17th until the morning of the 19th.

Later in the afternoon representatives of every Irish-American organization gathered at the Main Branch of the Ocean County Library for the formal dedication and presentation of 55 books about Irish history, culture and heritage. Brian Phillips, co-ordinator of the Irish Book Project, presented a check for $1,100 which will be used by the library to purchase additional books. The books were received by County Library Director Elaine McConnell and the Chairman of the Library Commission, James T. Mullins. Mr. Mullins informed those present that he was "proud to be Irish and extremely pleased at the success of the Irish Book Drive." Elaine McConnell also thanked the Irish-American community for their donation and promised that "If any books are lacking, I'll bring them back when I visit Galway in the summer."

The following Irish-American organizations supported the project: Amer Gael, American Irish Club of Whiting, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Irish American Unity Conference, Jersey Shore Irish American Club, and Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians.

New Jersey State Convention Hosts Coogan

At the recent State Convention of the AOH the following brothers were elected to state office: President Brian J. Phillips; Vice President Michael J. Murnane; Secretary Thomas J. Corcoran; and Treasurer Martin P. Kelly.

Delegates were delighted to welcome the National President of the Order, Michael Coogan, who by his presence and words of encouragement, greatly enhanced the Convention's proceedings.

During the Convention's business meetings a strong resolution was passed concerning the plight of Joe Doherty. Other resolutions included a condemnation of the Living Will legislation pending before the New Jersey legislature (if unamended it would permit the withholding of life-sustaining fluids and nutrition from terminally ill patients); a call for reduced sentences for pro-life demonstrators and an immediate review of their cases by Gov. Kean; a call for the reunification of Ireland and the withdrawal of British troops; the promotion of the Degree work of the Order within the state; the commencement of a state-wide recruitment drive and better communication among the national, state and division levels.

In other action the state by-laws were amended to make Easter Monday an official holiday of the Order, with the resolve to have the national constitution likewise amended. With the year 1991 marking the 75th anniversary of the Easter Rising, the AOH is exhorted to lead the way in commemorating the occasion. It is the sincere hope of all Jersey Hibernians that Hibernians across the nation will promote educational, civil, social and religious events to observe the anniversary; and New Jersey will place a resolution to this effect before the 1990 national convention.

Must A Christian Be A Wimp?

Humility is one of those words that carry wimp overtones, words like "meek," "mild," "warm," "gentle," and "soft," all attributes scorned by our modern society.

The image of an humble person is one lacking in toughness, drive, and ambition; one not possessed of the competitive edge needed in today's world. These latter characteristics are held in high esteem, the "necessary qualities" for success.

But true humility is not a virtue of wimps or softies. In fact, all Christian virtues are for strong men and women. They are deeply ingrained habits of behavior that become instinctive ways of living and are, at the same time, intelligent, mature, and life-giving to both yourself, and others. They are the ways to become like Christ . . . and Christ was no wimp!

At its core, humility is truth, the no-holds barred truth about ourselves, who and what we are, and where we stand in relation to God and others. Humility is accepting the truth about our worth and dignity as persons made in the image and likeness of God.

It is recognizing the truth about our talents and abilities as well as our shortcomings and inadequacies without exaggerating or white-washing either. To acknowledge all this with unflinching honesty and live accordingly takes courage. Hardly the stuff of wimps.

Jesus is the perfect example of true humility. Scripture reminds us that Christ, "though He was in the form of God, did not regard equality with God" something to be grasped. Rather, He emptied himself, taking the form of a slave, coming in human likeness; and found human in appearance, He humbled himself, becoming obedient to death, even death on the cross" (Phil 2:6-8).

Jesus willingly relinquished the glory that was naturally His as God to enter the humbler state of human being. Even as one of us, He could have commanded special treatment, honors, and privileges, yet He gave these up too.

He went so far as to identify personally with the poor, the lowly, and the obscure of society. Finally, He suffered and died because He remained true to Himself and to the kind of savior He was asked to be. Now here's a real challenge to all "tough" men and women out there. See if you can top that!!!

Trees for Ireland Now Has Toll-Free Number

ST. PAUL, MN.—The Irish American Cultural Institute (IACI) has marked the fifth anniversary of its Trees for Ireland reforestation project with the installation of a toll-free number. That number is 1 (800) 232-ERIN. The program, which was inaugurated by a joint agreement between the IACI and the Irish government in September, 1984, has planted over 26,000 trees since its inception.

"Planting trees in Ireland enables Americans to strengthen emotional and ancestral ties to that country," IACI Director James Rogers said, "We're excited to have the toll-free number to make it even more convenient for them to do so."

Through Trees for Ireland, a tax-deductible contribution of $10 enables one to have a tree planted in a State Forest in any county of the Republic. A contribution of $60 will provide for the planting of a stand of six trees in one name and in the same county. A grove of trees can be planted for $250. A gift of $1000 entitles donors to a family field of trees.

Trees for Ireland is continued through the cooperation of Coillte Teo — the Irish Forestry Board, the semi-state body which assumed responsibility for Irish forestry earlier this year.

Trees for Ireland is one of the cultural and educational programs of the Irish American Cultural Institute, headquartered in St. Paul, Minnesota.

St. Patrick's Day

St. Patrick's Day is the pinnacle of celebrations of Irish-America — witness the hundreds of St. Patrick's Day parades across the nation in March of each year. By fully dedicating ourselves to the perpetuation of these celebrations, through sacrifices of time, effort and funding, we Irish-Americans are continuously proclaiming the survival of our culture and heritage. Such celebrations are our greatest opportunity to affect the welfare of our children, especially in these troubled times of wholesale escape into drugs.

By pouring our energies into our "Feis" committees across the country, where we observe the dedication of parents and teachers, musicians and songwriters, singers, poets and piper bands, athletic trainers and managers and players, and the tremendous response from the Irish-American public, we are impressing our children with values that lead to fulfilled and wholesome futures.

Yet, while we are building up such values, there are forces focused on us which are tearing down and undoing our work. We speak of the Hallmark and Russ Berrie card and gift companies. Year after year, as the Irish National Holiday approaches, these two unscrupulous companies have continued to ignore our impassioned pleas to cease their insensitive portrayal of the Irish race.

We think it is time we took a firm stand by boycotting all their cards and gifts, Christmas, birthday, wedding, etc., until they show more respect for Irish-Americans and their ideals. We should not allow them to undo our valuable work; we should take the time to write or call and convey to them our serious displeasure.

Leaders Discuss International Irish Fund Status

Congressman Eliot L. Engel, who represents the 19th District, NY, and is a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, recently held a reception for Irish-American leaders following his visit to Ireland. During the visit, an attempt was made to determine how funds of the International Fund for Ireland (IFI) were being handled.

Several attending the reception accompanied Rep. Engel on the trip, namely Dr. Robert Linnon, Irish-American Unity Conference; Judith McGowan, advisor to Rep. Engel on Irish affairs; and Robert Stauff, Yonkers Human Rights Commission.

Others attending were David Henshaw, Ancient Order of Hibernians; Kathleen Holmes, American Irish Congress; Ian McGowan, Bronx Irish Community; Pete Foley, American Irish Political Education Committee; Malcolm McDonald, PEC, NY Fire Department Emerald Society; Gerry Coleman, IAUC; Kathy Regan, PEC, Gaelic League; Gerald O'Hara, Irish Immigration Reform Movement; William J. Morris; Alice Tell, Irish Northern Aid, Long Green Line; Mary Lamasney, Irish Northern Aid; David Feltman, aide to Rep. Engel for Foreign Affairs; John Calvelli, Washington chief-of-staff for Rep. Engel; and Frank Pizzurro, press secretary for Rep. Engel.

During his introductory remarks, Rep. Engel made these two significant statements: "My trip convinced me that the only way peace is going to come to Ireland is if the British leave..." While in Belfast, the car was stopped five times and guns pointed at passengers. "If there has to be a police presence... I don't understand why a gun has to be pointed directly at you." Sheer intimidation.

The International Fund for Ireland is intended to promote economic development and help most disadvantaged areas. The following report in note form relates to experiences, and impressions, and suggestions voiced during the discussion, primarily in regard to the IFI.

Engel party visited both approved and rejected sites. "No quarrel" with the five approved sites that were visited. However, it became apparent that approved projects often appeared connected to the "establishment" and did not appear to reach the most seriously depressed areas.

At visit to Conway Mill (cooperative run by Father Des Wilson), Charles Brett of IFI remarked to Rep. Engel that the site was rejected by the IFI Board because the British government said "no". Engel: "The acceptance of projects was clearly based on political thinking. That is what we would call McCarthyism in the United States."

North Belfast/Ashton Center development project — appeared to be quickly funded and furnished "because of our trip" to demonstrate an approved project in a deprived area ("confirmed" by local residents). Engel: "If you talk to the community leaders in those areas, you find that most are strongly in support of Sinn Féin. So if (IFI) continually reject them, you can't say you're reaching the disadvantaged areas."

Engel vows to raise these issues in the halls of Congress. "British can't have this kind of say. A vast majority of the American public knows nothing about this... If our government put pressure on the Thatcher government, it would have to respond."

IFI officials said they hired 4 "grass roots" staff members to assist groups with the application process. We must follow-up on this and make sure the staff members are doing their job.

Mr. Henshaw notes that the application process involves a CPA analysis of a group's finances — a costly step that is often beyond the means of grass roots organizations. Ways of simplifying the application process should be investigated.

Congressman Engel notes that Mr. Brett of IFI told him that 5 of every 6 projects are rejected and that he (Mr. Brett) had never heard of some of the rejected sites Mr. Engel mentioned to him. Dr. Linnon points out that the standard Northern Ireland bureaucracy is used to administer the IFI funds — they choose many of the approved sites and then pass them on to the Board for final review. And that is why it is possible that the Board never heard of some of the most worthwhile projects.

Mr. Henshaw sees the problem to be the "lower committees" that screen the projects and often weed out those run by minority groups. "We should have more American input (on that level)," Mr. Henshaw says. "Or else we are actually helping to discriminate."

Ian McGowan raises the point that the United States has little or no say over the appointment of the IFI Board of Directors. He suggests a screening process where biographical sketches of potential Board members are prepared so that recommendations from American officials can be made. The group agrees that Mr. William Fine, the American observer to the Fund (and the most likely person to raise such concerns), is an appointee from the Reagan era and will do little to "rock the boat."

Mr. McGowan also asks Congressman Engel to investigate the denial of visas to elected officials from Sinn Féin, particularly M.P. Gerry Adams. Engel says he will raise the issue to his colleagues in Washington and that he will press for "no censorship-by-visa denials, especially when this man (Adams) is part of a legitimate political party and obviously has a constituency."

Judith McGowan tells of a mushroom farm in County Monahan that received IFI funding, even though it appears to be in a well-off area. She asks the group to help her learn more about the farm and the area around it. Has the farm expanded as a result of the IFI funding? Has it created jobs, and were those jobs needed? Is County Monahan a truly needy area, especially when compared to inner-city areas?

Several group members suggest that County Monahan is a needy area, and the mushroom farm could well have been an effective way to spend IFI money — but all agree to look into this project further as an example of how the Fund is being utilized.

Discussion on the farm turns to the fact that the mushrooms are sent to Denmark for processing and often don't have a "Grown in Ireland" stamp placed on the packaging. Pete Foley notes that many of the fish caught in the waters of Ireland are sent to Denmark for processing. The group agrees that such processing opportunities are not being taken advantage of, and that the absence of "Made in Ireland" shows a lack of pride in home-grown products that needs to be improved.

Next Steps? Kathy Regan notes that House Speaker Tom Foley appeared to be a threatening presence to Members of Congress and others who might want to speak out critically on Irish Affairs. Rep. Engel says that Mr. Foley "has never tried to restrict me." Engel suggests that Mr. Foley has an open mind and could be swayed if a number of Congressmen from a variety of states showed interest in Irish issues. Engel notes that people take notice of his stands more because he is not Irish.

Engel urges Irish leaders to "recruit" members of Congress from other states, and who practice a range of religions. He also says that he will encourage more hearings — similar to hearings on the IFI held earlier this year — to further inform Washington leaders on Irish issues.

The group agrees that the mass media has not done a good job on portraying the injustices taking place in Northern Ireland, and that the media must be encouraged to better inform the American public. To that end, Dr. Linnon said the IAUC is investigating the possibility of starting a news service that would FAX news releases to the media and Members of Congress.

The group notes that 72% of Britains believe their country should get out of Ireland. Dr. Linnon says that number is lower in America — a sure sign that Americans are "ignorant" of the issues.

The meeting is adjourned, with the group members agreeing to follow through on the points made about the IFI and on efforts to improve the public's knowledge of Irish issues.

New Laws Put Pressure On Northern Ireland U.S. Companies Are Told To Adopt MacBride Principles

By EDWARD WITT

It's a long way, Detroit to Derry, but Detroit's City Council closed the distance a bit last year. It directed the managers of its $1.6 billion pension fund to urge U.S. companies in Northern Ireland to adopt the MacBride principles of fair employment, agreeing to hire and promote Catholics and Protestants alike.

Detroit no longer has a large Irish community — and this is not just an Irish issue, says Councilman Jack Kelley, sponsor of the MacBride ordinance. Many of Detroit's Irish American residents now live in the suburbs. "Corktown is more black than Irish now," says Kelley.

The City Council has four white and five black members. Two of the four whites are of Irish ancestry, one is Jewish and one is a German Lutheran minister. All nine voted for Kelley's measure.

"They're just as much interested in Ireland even if they're not Irish," he says. His way was smoothed by the City Council's 1985 action to divest the pension funds of investments in South Africa. "I supported the South Africa move, and I'm not black," says Kelley, who views the Northern Ireland problem as a question of human rights, not Irish politics.

Detroit is not the only place to act. To the discomfort of the British government and the Bush administration, a number of state and local pension fund managers are now turning the kind of scrutiny long directed at South Africa on the strife in Northern Ireland.

"MacBride Principles Legislation Mushrooms," declared a report by the investment firm of Prudential Bache in September 1987. "There is strong momentum in the United States for such legislation," the firm told its clients.

With hundreds of billions of dollars invested in U.S. companies, public pension funds have enormous potential influence on corporate decisions. Directors for dozens of those funds have insisted that U.S. corporations adhere to the Sullivan principles of equal opportunity in jobs, education and housing in their operations in South Africa. They have backed that insistence with an often-executed threat of divestiture. If a company has not complied, the fund has simply sold its shares in that company.

Northern Ireland is not South Africa. Unlike apartheid, discrimination against Catholics is not official government policy. Indeed, a fair-employment law is on the books, but its enforcement is in Protestant hands, weakening its protection for Catholic workers.

Thus, Irish-American leaders began in 1984 to press U.S. companies in Northern Ireland to adopt the set of principles that is named after the late Sean MacBride, the Irish statesman and international human rights advocate who, among other accomplishments, founded Amnesty International and was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1974. Employers who adhere to the principles agree to increase Catholic representation in jobs at all levels of their work force; to provide adequate security to protect minority employees at work and traveling to and from work; to ban provocative political or religious symbols from the work place; and to appoint a senior management official to oversee these efforts.

Most of the ordinances and laws urging adoption of the MacBride principles are not intended to force U.S. companies or U.S. pension dollars out of Northern Ireland. Only two of the 10 enacted so far, Philadelphia's ordinance and Connecticut's law, threaten divestiture — and some of them explicitly disavow any intention to require divestiture.

Their primary aim is to focus public and corporate attention on the political and religious struggle in Northern Ireland and to force the 24 U.S. corporations that operate there — and ultimately the British government — to address those issues. Although none of the 24 U.S. companies has yet officially subscribed to the principles, leaders of the campaign feel that they are accomplishing their goal. Patrick W. Doherty of the New York City comptroller's office says the campaign has "been very successful in putting the issue of religious discrimination on the political agenda in Ireland, Northern Ireland and Britain."

The economy of Northern Ireland is not strong and unemployment is high, particularly among Catholics, who outnumber Protestants in the ranks of the unemployed 2 to 1. Catholics who are employed face harassment and violence in the work place and on their way to and from work — as well as difficulty in obtaining promotions.

Eleven percent of those employed in Northern Ireland work for one of the 24 American companies, many of which are familiar names such as Ford and General Motors, American Home Products and Du Pont. Others are less well-known — Baker Hughes, Ball, Fruehauf, Onside and Interface, for example. New York City led the way in the MacBride campaign. Early in 1985, the boards of trustees of the city's Employees' Retirement System and Teachers' Retirement System directed Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin to survey U.S. companies operating in Northern Ireland and encourage them to adopt the MacBride principles. "Where necessary and appropriate," the trustees directed Goldin to introduce or support shareholder initiatives requiring adoption. His office now serves as the unofficial information source for other state and local officials interested in the Northern Ireland issue.

This spring, MacBride resolutions will be voted on by the stockholders of 18 of the 24 U.S. companies doing business in Northern Ireland. In 1986, American Brands went to court with the New York City Employees' Retirement System, arguing that the company did not have to submit a MacBride resolution to its stockholders because to carry out the principles would require it to break the law in Northern Ireland by discriminating in favor of Catholics. U.S. District Judge Robert Carter in New York ruled that the company's argument was groundless. Although the MacBride advocates hailed this as a victory, others think that until a British court rules on a similar argument, the debate will continue.

Massachusetts was the first state to pass MacBride legislation, acting late in 1985. Since that time Connecticut, New Jersey, New York and Rhode Island have acted, as have Cleveland, Detroit, Hartford, Philadelphia and Wilmington.

In 1988, the campaign moved out of areas where the Irish-American community has traditionally exerted telling political pressure to cities and states where they must win the support of other powerful groups: California, Florida, Illinois, Maine, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rochester and San Francisco.

Detroit could be the model for the coalition building necessary. The leaders of the campaign are tailoring their arguments to reach non-Irish groups.

New York's Goldin, who is Jewish, recalls that "as a young lawyer for the civil rights division of the U.S. Justice Department, I fought racial discrimination in the South. For the same reasons, as investment officer and trustee of New York City's public-employee retirement systems, I am now committed to fighting religious discrimination in Northern Ireland."

This time the U.S. government is not on Goldin's side. Both the State Department and the British government have been active in their opposition to MacBride measures wherever they have been considered. The State Department warns that the principles "have the potential to exacerbate seriously the present economic difficulties in Northern Ireland, thereby making their adoption a hollow victory indeed."

British diplomats have worked actively in a number of places, and with at least temporary successes, to block action on MacBride legislation. They have flown in witnesses from Britain and Northern Ireland to argue that the legislation is unnecessary or counterproductive.

MacBride proponents have also brought witnesses from Northern Ireland — a move that cost one witness his job. Oliver Kearney, an experienced personnel manager with the Licensed Vintners Federation in Northern Ireland, came to Sacramento in 1986 to testify on MacBride legislation proposed by Democratic Assemblyman Tom Hayden. Kearney was fired as a result and now spends much of his time working on the MacBride campaign.

Leading the U.S. campaign, along with Goldin, is Sean MacManus of the Irish National Caucus, an Irish lobbying group in Washington, D.C. MacManus is optimistic. The MacBride campaign has been effective so far because it does appeal to all sorts of different constituencies, he says. "It's the perfect formula," he explains. "It's one thing to complain about discrimination 3,000 miles away, but what about your own dollars being used to support discrimination in Belfast? With this sort of measure, you get an immediate sense of being able to do something." Furthermore, he adds, "in American terms, it makes sense. There are good political reasons and good moral reasons to support these measures."

Doherty Case Tests Rule Of Law

By WILLIAM HUGHES

Many Americans are rightly outraged over the continued jailing of South African freedom fighter Nelson Mandela. No doubt, these same individuals would be shocked to learn that our country is guilty of the same kind of egregious conduct as that oppressive South African regime. For over six years, an Irishman who has committed no crime in this country has been held in a federal prison.

Joseph P. Doherty is being detained at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in New York City on an immigration warrant. His very name now has a visceral effect on lovers of freedom. He has become Irish America's Byronic version of the immortal "Prisoner of Chillon."

His continued incarceration mocks our nation's stand on constitutional law, its dedication to human rights and the Helsinki Accord, and its reputation as a haven for political refugees.

DOHERTY, a Roman Catholic, was born on January 20, 1955 in a Belfast slum. When he was 17, he was interned for five months. After his release, he joined the Irish Republican Army, one of the oldest insurgency groups in the world, dedicated to driving the British colonial forces from Ireland and creating a united Ireland.

In 1980, Doherty's guerrilla unit engaged in a fierce gun battle in Belfast with plainclothes British soldiers attached to the Special Air Services (SAS). The SAS is an elite unit suspected by Amnesty International of having a shoot-to-kill policy against Irish Republicans. One British soldier died in the duel. Doherty and other members of his group were captured. But Doherty escaped before a sentence of 30 years imprisonment could be imposed on him for a purported "common murder." He was tried in the notorious "Diplock" court without a jury.

Doherty made his way to New York, where he lived peacefully until his arrest in June 1983. The British government then moved for his extradition to the British-occupied north of Ireland.

This action began a legal donnybrook. Its cast included the U.S. Justice Department, the British government, the federal court system, two U.S. attorneys general, officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and Doherty's able defense team of Somerstein & Pike of New York.

AFTER A FULL TRIAL IN 1984, a federal judge, John E. Sprizzo, held that Doherty couldn't be extradited to Northern Ireland.

Judge Sprizzo reviewed the standards of then-applicable treaty between the countries and also the long history of armed resistance by Irish rebels to British rule. He underscored the Derry massacre of 1972, "Bloody Sunday," where 13 marchers at a peaceful protest were killed by British security forces. He found Doherty's alleged wrongdoing was not a common crime but rather an offense of a "political" character. He also held that none of the alleged acts for which Doherty's extradition was sought violated international law or standards of civilized conduct.

But the Justice Department, under intense pressure from the British

As Pushovers for Pomp, We're Primed for a Takeover

By RANCE CRAIN

I am becoming increasingly convinced that our former landlord, Great Britain, is slowly edging closer to reacquiring us. What's more, if that should come to pass, we as a people and country won't be at all unhappy with such a turn of events.

It's the royalty thing that will finally get us. We are pushovers for pomp and circumstance, and we secretly delight when our leaders surround themselves with the plush and gaudy trappings of the throne.

President Reagan wasn't really a father figure; he was more like a king, a benevolent and kindly monarch presiding serenely over his unruly flock. And Nancy was born to be queen.

If someone had proposed that we allow them to stay on as king and queen, making us feel good about ourselves but out of harm's way and above the battle of petty politics, we would have embraced the idea to our bosoms and gladly pledged our allegiance.

And Great Britain is quietly greasing the skids. Not only are the British buying more and more of corporate America, way more than Japan or anybody else, but the government is also preparing us for the monarchy.

Why else did the British bestow an honorary knighthood on Mr. Reagan, and why do they let us borrow Prince Charles and Princess Diana anytime we want (although usually not at the same time)?

Because when Great Britain owns 51% of our assets and declares herself our new owner, she wants us to government and powerful Anglophile interest in this country, has refused to abide by the learned trial judge's ruling.

Despite adverse rulings by another federal judge, an appellate court and many administrative decisions, the Justice Department still is ignoring the rule of law. Richard Thornburgh, former Pennsylvania governor and now attorney general, forgetful that his ultimate authority comes from the American people and not any grasping foreign power, has ordered Doherty deported to the right-wing government of Margaret Thatcher.

Doherty remains in his 8 by 12-foot cell without an opportunity for bail, as his Kafkaesque case makes its tortuous way through the court system.

A BIPARTISAN House of Representatives resolution, with 77 co-sponsors, calls on the attorney general to reverse his decision and grant Doherty bail and, ultimately, political asylum. (Eight members of the New Jersey delegation endorsed the resolution: Democrats James J. Florio, Frank Guarini, William J. Hughes, Frank Pallone, Jr. and Robert G. Torricelli; and Republicans Dean A. Gallo, Matthew J. Rinaldo and Marge Roukema.)

America, since its glorious revolutionary days of Washington, Jefferson and Madison, has always been a beacon for the freedom fighters of the world. It also has an obligation to see to it that human rights are honored, not only in South Africa, Central America, the Middle East, behind the Iron Curtain, but in this country as well.

The writer, a Baltimore lawyer, is chairman of that city's Committee for Justice for Joseph P. Doherty.

feel quite at home. And we will, rest assured, we will.

Do you have any doubts? Is it coincidence that a surefire way to sell millions of magazines is to put a royal visage on the cover? Why did President Nixon dress the White House police in royal grandeur? And you shouldn't be surprised to learn that the current occupant of the White House is a 13th cousin, thrice removed, of Queen Elizabeth. What's more, don't you find it odd how little resentment there is to the blatant and unabashed indulgences of such men as Donald Trump and Malcolm Forbes? These are the courtiers at play, as we all vicariously thrill in sharing their exploits. Andy Warhol was the court jester.

In an age when every action can have calamitous results, we need the safety valve of watching and following the antics of men and women whose frivolities don't really affect anything.

In England the press gives due deference to the coming and goings of the queen and her royal entourage. "The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh gave a luncheon party for the Knights Companion of the Most Noble Order of the Garter at which the Queen Mother, the Prince and Princess of Wales and the Duke and Duchess of Kent were present."

At the time of this gathering, the press was bashing Prime Minister Thatcher for botching the European parliamentary elections, allowing the Labour Party to gain 13 seats. Among other things that went wrong, the Conservatives ran negative ads that gave the impression they were down on Britain's European involvement.

One poster was criticized for being "extraordinarily negative, damaging and confusing." It warned the Tory faithful: "Stay at home on June 15, and you'll live on a diet of Brussels."

William Safire worries about "creeping royalism" among our elected officials. "The problem is not that our presidents want to be kings, but that we cheerfully indulge ourselves in allowing them to act like royalty — remote, almost worshiped for their office, and as capable as any monarch in dispensing 'honors,' Mr. Safire wrote in The New York Times.

My point is that whether our presidents want to be kings or not, we have a great yearning for them to be. That helps explain why we elevated Mr. Reagan to his Teflon status. We didn't want the political intrigues and infighting to stick to him, any more than the British would want Maggie Thatcher's problems with the European elections to stick to Queen Elizabeth.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY ABUSE

Russ Berrie Company
111 Bauer Drive
Oakland, New Jersey 07436
Gentlemen:

As president of St. Brendan the Navigator, Division 17, Nassau County, New York, of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, it has been brought to my attention that your firm is marketing items which are offensive to the Irish-American community.

The Joywin II card store (3955 Long Beach Road, Island Park, Long Island, N.Y.) is selling Russ Berrie baseball caps and Russ Berrie golf balls in anticipation of the great feast of St. Patrick. The imprints on some of these items defames, denigrates and caricatures people of the Irish race.

I request you to remove immediately these items from the Joywin store and any other store where these items are being sold.

The Irish people have contributed much to the history and culture of the United States. Your firm, which I personally know markets excellent gift items, should not be in the business of selling cheap, degrading items. It reflects poorly on the image of your company.

To acquaint yourself with the Irish culture, I invite you to attend the Seventeenth Annual Long Island Feis on September 17, 1989 at the Nassau County office complex in Plainview, New York. The Feis, sponsored by the Nassau County Board of the AOH, offers competitions in Traditional forms of Irish music and culture. More than 15,000 people attend this event each year.

I anticipate your full compliance with my request. If you need further clarification, please feel free to contact me.

Thomas A. Myles, President
Division 17, Nassau Co., N.Y.

RUSS BERRIE REPLIES

Mr. Thomas A. Myles
734 West Bay Drive
Long Beach, NY 11561

Dear Mr. Myles:

I received your letter of March 3, 1989, regarding some of the Russ Berrie St. Patrick's Day products.

Russ Berrie and Company has been marketing gift items appropriate for this Holiday for over fifteen years and it has never been our intention to in any way denigrate or defame the Irish Culture. In the many years that we have been marketing St. Patrick's Day products, we have received market research that such products are very much accepted and demanded by the Irish customer who buys them.

Aside from the very serious and traditional associations of St. Patrick, the holiday has evolved into an occasion for light hearted celebration and it is our intention to provide impulse products appropriate for this secular side of the Holiday.

We apologise for any unintended offense.

RESOLUTION 62

Mr. Thomas Gilligan
National Director
Ancient Order of Hibernians
Dear Mr. Gilligan:

I received your letter of Aug. 17, requesting that I support Resolution 62, which calls for political asylum of Joseph Patrick Doherty and for his release on bail while his hearing is being adjudicated.

This is a frustrating case. I am Irish, and I am Catholic and do not appreciate the ways Catholics have been treated in Northern Ireland. However, it is not the role of Congress to dictate the nation's judiciary policy. The executive branch has been handling this case under former president Ronald Reagan. The Bush Administration is continuing with the case.

Thank you for taking time to write.
E. Clay Shaw, Jr.
Member of Congress

GILLIGAN REPLIES

Congressman E. Clay Shaw
440 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515
September 21, 1989

Dear Congressman Shaw:

Thank you for your answer to my letter concerning Joseph Patrick Doherty. Your letter falls far short of what I expected. The only part I agree with is when you say this is a frustrating case. I don't know why your letter referred to your religious affiliation and your ethnic background. This issue is far above that. Quite honestly we receive more cooperation from those who do not share our religious belief or ethnic heritage, and would call your attention to the composition of the Ad Hoc Committee for Irish Affairs. This issue is certainly above that type of reply.

My letter did not ask you, nor would I expect you, or any member of Congress to interfere in the judicial process of this nation. It is because the judiciary process is being tampered with that we look to Congress to examine this matter. It is a fact that six judicial hearings were disposed of favorable to Joseph Doherty, and now a foreign power is using the Executive Branch to defy the judiciary and to violate our Constitutional separation of powers.

You, as a member of Congress, are sworn to uphold the laws, judicial decisions and the Constitution of this great nation, and that's all your support of House Concurrent Resolution Number 62 will do. Six favorable decisions have been rendered and all we want is those decisions complied with, nothing more or nothing less. We cannot turn our back on this and hope it will go away; a foreign power should never be able to influence our Judicial Branch the way it is in this case.

Your letter indicates that you do not appreciate the way Catholics are treated in Northern Ireland, yet your actions would indicate something very different. Several years ago I met with you concerning the MacBride Principles, which at the time was being considered in the Florida Legislature. I will never forget your answer when we asked for your help: it was an emphatic NO! You gave every reason the British Government gave against these, which by the way, was also parroting the official Republican line at the time. You would not listen to our explanations, and continued to call them sanctions and disinvestment even though those words never appeared in the bill.

We were successful in getting the bill passed in Florida in 1988, and I am thankful that the State Legislature listened to us with an open mind. And by the way, the bill on the House side was sponsored by a Republican, Robert Shelley. Most recently Joseph Roche, our Political Education Chairman, visited your office and asked for a few short minutes of your time, and was treated in a most unprofessional manner. Lastly, you are listed as a member of the Ad Hoc Committee for Irish Affairs, and I have yet to see you support one thing from that committee. Do you really mean what you say, or was that simply the thoughts of one of your aides? Those words may endear you to those who do not know your background of support on Irish issues.

You and/or your staff have missed the reason and point of my letter. I would welcome the opportunity to meet with you to discuss this matter further and will be calling your office for an appointment.

Sincerely,
Thomas E. Gilligan

"GET WITH IT" MESSAGE TIMELY

Dear Editor,

I would like to report on a couple of disturbing instances that came to my attention in July.

During a visit to Washington, D.C. on July 8 I visited the Robert Emmet Statue and mini-park. It was a disgrace. The grass was about nine inches tall and what I imagined were floral plantings were full of weeds and one of the three trees in the park was dead. I resolved that on my next trip to Washington to include a chain saw, lawnmower, grass clippers and rake. As I am not planning to visit real soon, I hope someone closer than myself will take care of it.

On July 12 I visited the Eckley Miners Village in Pennsylvania where scenes for the moving picture, "The Molly Maguires," were shot. This village is administered by the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission and depicts the daily life of the anthracite miner and his family in the 1800's.

On a guided tour our very congenial guide, whose name escapes me now, made a comment on the potato famine in Ireland. As all Hibernians well know there was no real famine in Ireland, but only a contrived starvation; so I explained this to her, reciting some facts on the amount of food that was shipped out of the country at the time. She accepted this but stated it was the first time she had heard that version. Isn't there someone in Pennsylvania that could see that these guides are properly instructed in their subject matter rather than parroting British propaganda?

On sale at the location is the pamphlet, "Mollie Maguires", The True Illustrated Story Of The Terrorist Secret Organization. The author is Monroe Aurand, Jr. and the publisher is Aurand Press of Lancaster, Pa.

Chapter one is headed, "Organization of Outlaws Born in Ireland," and goes on to compare the Mollies to the Black Hand and the KKK. After reading in the Hibernian Digest that Pennsylvania had obtained some type of posthumous exoneration for the Mollies, I was quite surprised to see this one-sided and biased account on sale at a state agency.

It is hoped that someone in Pennsylvania could get this one-sided account removed from the racks at Eckley or any other state-run location and have something more even-handed and educational substituted.

PRO-LIFE

Dear Editor:

Regarding Newsday's article entitled "Cuomo Reaffirms Abortion Funding," Page 15, Sept. 11, 1989, I feel compelled to reply.

How long will people of good will living in the State of New York put up with the rhetoric of men such as Gov. Mario Cuomo, who do no more than throw up red herrings rather than face the issue of just what an abortion actually is. To state with such elegance that he feels absurd in any decision making process of judging right from wrong on this issue and then extends that absurdity to how a woman feels about having an abortion has little to do with the facts. Feelings are important emotions but have little to do with actual right or wrong. To further imply that a male Judge cannot make a moral or ethical rendering regarding a woman's action is to say no man can judge facts.

As always Gov. Cuomo refers to his famous speech at Notre Dame and states in a most articulate manner, "Civil law takes precedence over personal religious beliefs". He is implying that if a matter is legal it therefore is moral. I wonder if David Dinkins would agree with him when reminded of the Dred Scott decision.

Every man (or woman) who states abortion is wrong is required by his very dignity as man to do all in their power to bring about change in the law to defend life in all its stages.

Gov. Cuomo states that he is a Roman Catholic. He implies therefore that he also knows abortion can never be moral. Now, what he really should feel absurd about is as a Man of a stated Faith, just how absurd that statement really is when he attends a Mass or receives the Sacraments while personally

There are many who do not understand us Irish-Americans for we are, in a sense, unfulfilled because the land of our ancestors is still suffering and struggling for its freedom and unity. To those who ask me who I am, I say:

I AM OF IRISH AMERICA

I am of Irish America.
I am a child of Immigrants.
I am of a people who for over eight hundred years
Have bent a knee to no king but the King of Heaven
And bowed a head to no queen but the Queen of Heaven.
I am of a dispersed people sent
In slavery to the Barbadoes,
In chains to Australia, and
In Famine to America.
I am of a people who tore themselves from
Their father's trembling arms, Kissed their tearstained mother's face good-bye and Travelled all over the world
To keep a roof over the beloved heads
And food on the hungry table.
I am of an empire upon which no sun can set, for Wherever you go in this whole wide world,
Wherever a House of God has risen,
Wherever a house of learning founded,
Or a Tree of Liberty planted by loving hands
And watered by the tears of an Irish exile,
There you will find the Irish Empire.
I thank God for the Blood of my Fathers.
I thank God for the Land of my Birth.
I pray that God will save Ireland.
I pray that God will continue to Bless America.

William "Credentials" Burke An Appreciation

By JOHN J. CONCANNON

A great Hibernian of the "Old Breed"... one of the last of the "Old Guard" of the Order... has passed away at the age of 84 years.

WILLIAM BERNARD BURKE died quietly in his sleep on Friday evening August 11, 1989 at the Frances Shevriar Home and Hospital in the Bronx, N.Y. He had been a resident of the Home since May 1989.

"Bill" (or "Willie" but never "Will" or "Billey" and seldom "William") Burke was born in Abbeyknockmoy, County Galway, about 14 miles northeast of Galway City. He emigrated to the U.S. as a teenager, landing in Boston in 1923. In that same year, Bill joined Roxbury Division 4 of the AOH, making him a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians for he past 66 years.

Burke spent two years in Boston before seeing the light and moving to the greener fields of New York City. In the Big Apple, he joined Division 4, New York County AOH, headquartered at the Central Opera House, and worked out of that Division until 1935. In that year, he organized Division 3, New York County AOH in his home neighborhood of Washington Heights/Inwood in upper Manhattan. He served as the Division's first President and as its Delegate to the N.Y. County Board for the past half century. Burke also served the AOH as President of the New York County Board; two-term State Secretary; State Treasurer and State Chairman of Public Relations. He was a former Deputy National Organizer for the AOH.

Bill Burke started attending AOH National Conventions in 1937 with Atlantic City. He has been a working officer at twenty of the past twenty National Conventions of the Order (St. Louis and Killarney conventions excepted). Bill worked on, or was chairman of, the vital Credentials Committee on just about all of the National and numerous state AOH conventions he attended. His prominent and dedicated work at conventions prompted Hibernians, who wished to distinguish Bill from other Hibernians with the surname Burke, to label the man from Galway as "Credentials" Burke.

Bill Burke has worked with the St. Patrick's Day Parade for sixty years, since 1928, serving under four AOH Parade Chairmen — Roderick Kennedy, John Sheahan, Harry Hynes and James J. Comerford. He headed up many of the Parade's sub-committees, labored for many years on the Parade's Formation Committee. From 1978 to 1984, Burke served as the Parade Committee's Executive Secretary.

In 1980, Willie Burke (who had numerous awards, plaques, scrolls and citations) received the "greatest honor of my life." He was elected Grand Marshal of that year's St. Patrick's Day Parade. Burke proved to be the most-widely popular choice in many a year because he had deep roots in the three major groups that participate in and affiliate with the Parade — the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Irish Counties, and the Emerald Societies.

As a Past President, senior active member and elder statesman of the Galway Men's Association of New York, Burke was a delegate to the United Irish Counties (UICA) for 54 years, served as its Vice President and Secretary, and chaired three of its annual fund-raising Galas. He was a prime organizer of the UICA's prestigious Feis in 1933, serving as its General Chairman. He worked on America's oldest and largest Irish cultural festival for half a century.

Burke was a charter member of the Transit Emerald Society. When his job situation would not permit him to accept an offer to be the Society's first President, he was given Transit Emerald Society Dues Card No. 1.

In 1967, Burke retired from the Payroll Division of the New York City Transit Authority after 35 years of service with the City. In August 1977, after residing in the Inwood section of upper Manhattan for 38 years, Burke moved several blocks north to Riverdale Avenue in Yonkers.

William Burke was the last of the family of seven boys and one girl. A bachelor, he was survived by forty one nieces and nephews. The funeral arrangements were handled by his nephew, Alphonsus Burke, (Past President of Div. 3), and wife, Peggy Feerick Burke. Among the Hibernian mourners at the funeral mass and graveside were: John Duffy, Past National Secretary; New York County Chaplain, Monsignor John Barry, Timothy Hartnett, Richard Cunningham, Frank Belrine, Edward Hyland, James Ferguson, Timothy Daly, John Clarke, Thomas Rogers, Brother David Concannon and John Concannon.

National Pro Life

FANATICS WITH A PURPOSE

You have often heard about the "fanatic pro-lifers" but let me remind you of another fanatic, the crusading newspaperman and abolitionist, William Lloyd Garrison. He horrified many when he went to Framingham, MA, to burn the U.S. Constitution in public because it wrote slavery into the basic law of the land.

People don't like to talk about it, but the writers of our Constitution betrayed the earlier Declaration of Independence, which said we are all "created equal" and entitled to the "inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." There was no Bill of Rights for blacks. Our nation paid for that "compromise with reality" with the terrible carnage of the Civil War and a legacy of bigotry, a psychic scar yet to heal in 200 years.

The Roe vs. Wade decision was a tragic attempt by seven men to create a "right-to-life compromise," allowing the states to use a trimester system to protect life at viability. Once again an "inalienable right" in the declaration was betrayed by compromise.

Since 1973 we have generated a legacy of "The Silent Scream" and a holocaust of millions of babies in the womb. There has been an explosion of child abuse.

Some of our friends argue for a cruel compromise when they say "women will have abortions now and for the rest of time." It is also probably true that some women will continue to steal, perjure themselves, sell their bodies in prostitution, murder their neighbors, abuse their children, abandon their elderly parents, become drug addicts and lethal drunken drivers. Does that mean society should let them have "pro-choice" in those areas, too?

If we can make an effort to teach our young people (men and women) to say "no" to drugs and drunken driving, we can make the effort to teach them to get their bodies and sexuality under control. If they can't, there are many pro-life couples waiting to adopt.

To paraphrase abolitionist Garrison, when it comes to the inalienable right-to-life enshrined in our declaration, "We are in earnest. We will not retreat. We will not equivocate and we will win." The alternative is babies in buckets.

him. His likes will not soon come our way again."

If ever a Hibernian deserved (and many have) this encomium from our Order, William Bernard Burke does. The scope and duration of his service to and work for the Ancient Order, by itself, earn Bill Burke this accolade. But there's more to it. His was a unique service record with the AOH.

Bill Burke was not of the heroic mold, not larger than life. But he worked with and for, and supported Hibernians who were. Burke was a valuable aide, a strong right arm, eyes and ears to worthy leaders who held the meeting gavel or stood at the helm of the organization. He knew, as few others did, the rules and regulations, constitution and bylaws, traditional procedures of the numerous organizations to which he

OUR LADY OF KNOCK — QUEEN OF PEACE

Yes, Our Lady of Knock is called the Queen of Peace, and it is for that reason particularly, for peace in their own lives that millions of pilgrims come to Knock each year.

A visit or pilgrimage to Knock, especially for the Irish should, I think, be the fulfillment of an age old devotion to Mary, or as the Irish call her, Mhuire, for it has come down to us from the advent of Christianity to Ireland.

Even some Feast Days of Mary may have, like feast days of our Divine Lord, replaced some pagan feasts. On July 1 this year, a number of Hibernians, among them some members of the National Board like Father Healy, and Father Neal Carlin and myself concelebrated Holy Mass at the actual site of the Shrine and so was history made on the first Annual Hibernian Day at Knock.

We just pray and hope that the good work so begun may be perpetuated down through the years to come. As I mentioned, Knock is a place of peace for the individual; one of the greatest instruments of peace is the Sacrament of Reconciliation (confession). At a given day at Knock some thirty priests hear confessions in the Chapel of Reconciliation. When Cardinal O'Connor visited Knock earlier this year, the number of pilgrims making the sacrament of Reconciliation really impressed him! Another source of peace and a solution for the northern six counties, that lasting peace can come to these six counties, will be found at Knock. It is the National Shrine of Our Lady of Peace. She too desires peace in Northern Ireland's six counties so that her Divine Son be glorified and the Lamb be praised and adored. Should there be an Annual Hibernian Day at Knock? Definitely, yes!! Every Diocese in Ireland has its special day there. Why not the Hibernians?

In order to prepare for such a visit to Ireland's shrine of May (Knock) here are the words of "Our Lady of Knock, as sung by "Dana", an international singer:

VERSE I

"There were people of all ages, gathered round the gable wall.
Poor and humble men and women, little children that you call.

We are gathered here before you, and a heart just the same, filled with such a vision, as we praise your Name!

CHORUS:

Golden Rose, Queen of Ireland, all my cares and troubles see,
As I kneel with love before you, Lady of Knock, My Queen of Peace.

VERSE II

O, your message was unspoken, but the truth in silence lies.
Though I gaze upon your vision, and the truth I try to find.

Here I stand with both the teacher and with Joseph, at your side,
And I see the Lamb of God on the altar glorified.

CHORUS:

And the Lamb will conquer, and the women clothed in the sun,
Will shine her light on everyone, will shine her light on everyone.

belonged. From long experience, Burke knew what had succeeded in the past and failed in the past, which members were part of the problem and which members could be counted on to help with a solution to the problem.

Because he was of the old school, comfortable with the old way, his service was more behind the scene and in the back office rather than up front and out front. Bill Burke was on the quiet side, retiring, unobtrusive, low key, shunning the spotlight and the flashbulb, soft spoken and seldom spoken. He was good at one-on-one talk and chatting with a small crowd; poor at public speaking and addressing a large audience.

Bill was a peace maker extraordinary, a trouble shooter, a talented negotiator, a healer of wounded egos, a builder of bridges, a pourer of oil on troubled waters, a wise molder of compromises, a reconciler of dissensions, a settler of grievances, one who soothed down rather than stirred up, brought together rather than pushed apart. He had the knack of defusing explosive situations, dissipating ill will and creating good will in its place.

Getting the work done, quietly and efficiently, caring little that others might get the credit, was Burke's style. When problems arose and there were loud cries for quick action of some kind, Burke would counsel considered, calm action, maintaining that saying or doing the wrong thing would be more harmful than saying or doing nothing.

Bill Burke was a Hibernian who marched to a different drummer, hearing and keeping in step with a beat that was soft and sure and steady.

William Sherwin to Attend President's Dinner in Ohio

MARLBORO, MA: Bill Sherwin, Executive Secretary of the International Right to Life Federation, is making a personal visit to the Coogan Testimonial Dinner in Dayton, Ohio, on Friday, October 20th and Saturday, October 21, 1989. His purpose in this special visit is to assist Bill Farrell, Pro-Life Director, to obtain the 100 AOH memberships in the International Right to Life. Bill will speak to the members at meetings on Friday and will be introduced at the banquet on Saturday evening.

A native of Delvin, Bill Sherwin, since 1983, has been working in Rome, where he administers the affairs of the Federation, which has affiliated member groups in thirty countries.

Two other full-time staff in the office are both Irish; one is from Westmeath-Siobhan Hall, of Athlone. A third staffer is a Leitrim doctor, David Logan. The office itself is quite close to the Vatican.

Bill was recently in America to get first hand information on the scene here where, at the moment, efforts are being made to have the Supreme Court reverse the legislation which allows abortion.

Bill left Delvin in the late seventies

Ronald Bryan Reelected

WILKES BARRE, PA—The Pennsylvania Hibernians held their 85th biennial state convention here on July 19-22. Re-elected state president was Ronald "Bo" Bryan, who hails from Pittsburgh. Bryan has stated that both he and the Pennsylvania State Board will work vigorously for the passage of the MacBride Principles and to help establish funding for the parochial school systems in the state of Pennsylvania.

Elected along with Bryan were Vice-President Edward "Ned" McGinley, Wilkes-Barre; Secretary Daniel V. Deasy, Pittsburgh; Treasurer David W. Fleming, Philadelphia. Scranton was chosen without opposition as the state convention site for 1991.

work for getting the Federation established and launched in 1984.

"After the Irish referendum in 1983, a number of people of like mind got together, had a meeting, and decided we should spell out the message of the Irish referendum to other countries, and give them encouragement in fighting for the right to life," Bill said in an interview with the Westmeath Examiner recently.

About half Bill's time is spent travelling and his only regret is that he is so busy he is finding it difficult to get the time to learn Italian.

A Celtic Peter, Paul & Mary!

THE RYAN TRIO

When Triur Na Nisain (The Ryan Trio) performs, it's like a 'hoolie in the kitchen. Greg, the leader of the trio, is the emcee of the performances, but soon the relaxed atmosphere has everyone joining in, including the audience. The New York Post describes the sound of the trio as "like a Celtic version of Peter, Paul and Mary... Ryan, Lahr, and Hawkins entertain on the mandolin, banjo, wood flute, pennywhistle, harmonica, guitars, and bodhran. Their wonderful songs and stories bring visions of rolling green hills and the back roads of Ireland to mind."

Performances can be tailored to the needs of your group or organization. The Irish People says the trio provides "an evening of song, story-telling and Irish music in the tradition of the Dubliners and the great song sessions of Ireland... A full-fledged rafter-raising evening as a guarantee."

In addition to performing as a trio, both Greg and Jim are solo performers with their own programs; and Greg also performs with either Jim or Marybeth in duo situations.

FREEDOM FOR ALL IRELAND

Message from Freedom for All Ireland Committee Chairman

Once again I ask for your help! Just about this time each year we commence our Christmas Relief Fund campaign, and I ask your cooperation in sending in your contributions so that we can substantially help the prisoners' families at the holidays. I can personally attest to the fact that they are more than grateful to our AOH for the assistance we give to them.

Please make a special effort to send in as generous a contribution as possible. Make your checks payable to the FFAIC Committee and mail to me at the address listed below. You, the members, are the only ones that can make this campaign a success. Let's make it a banner year so that we can make it a happy Christmas for the families of the prisoners.

Do not put this off; time is of the essence if our contributions are to reach the families in time for Christmas. Please act now! I hope and pray that I can count on your 100% cooperation.

Thatcher vs. Noriega

Panama's General Noriega has been variously described as a "bully", "gangster", and "thug". After 10 years in office Prime Minister Thatcher has never been described in those terms, despite the fact that she has orchestrated the bloodiest period of modern Irish history.

Three years before Noriega's ascent to power Ms. Thatcher had already had the blood of ten helpless hunger strikers on her hands and had begun the "shoot to kill" death squads exposed by Stalker, Amnesty International, and the International Lawyers Inquiry. The General's Defense Forces are presumed to have killed former Minister Dr. Hugo Spadafora in 1985 but the Irish Information Partnership leaves no doubt that British and Loyalist forces have killed 788 civilians since 1969 — more than 1/2 on Thatcher's watch.

General Noriega's loyalists showed their regard for democracy by beating opposition candidates Endora and Ford while at the same time across the Atlantic Thatcher's Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) were beating and detaining Sinn Fein election workers Patsy McCann and Dan McBride. In Gortin, in the Mid-Ulster Parliamentary constituency, the RUC was interrogating and screening voters who had submitted supposedly sealed postal ballot requests.

What need to void the Panamanian elections! Noriega should follow the British example. England simply ignored the results of the last General Election in Ireland in 1918 and has successfully occupied six counties for 60 years through violence and vote fraud. General Noriega could take some comfort knowing that never once after that election and to this day has an American president or columnist asked for England to "honor the results of the election" or "to support the freely chosen leaders" of the Irish people.

In the past ten years Panama has struggled with constitutional democracy while constitution-less England under Thatcher gives new meaning to oppression in Ireland. By keeping the Ulster Defense Association legal she gives "a wink and nod" approval to their successful assassination of Attorney Patrick Finucane, John Davey, a Sinn Fein Councillor from So. Derry and others and the attempted murder last week of Sinn Fein candidate for Co. Down, Sean Fitzpatrick. The Iron Lady's media and election censorship and demonstration banning are extreme by Panamanian standards. Her use of the International Fund for Ireland — U.S. money — to bribe and divide the Nationalist vote has become scandalous even by British standards.

term prisoners in each jurisdiction. I have also stated in Radio and TV interviews that in my view anyone who spends twelve to fifteen years of his life in prison should be released and helped to rebuild his life as a valuable member of society. I believe that respect for the human dignity of every individual demands this.

"I cannot promise you that my voice will be any more effective than your own, but in matters of this kind I believe that the more people who show a personal interest in the case, the better will be the chance of success."

An Opinion: Equal Treatment Under the Law, British Style

BY JOHN P. GAVIN

Alf Lomas, a British member of the European Parliament, stated in a press interview in London recently that Irish defendants who are accused of political crimes do not get a fair trial if they are republican sympathizers. And not only that, once they become prisoners they never have the same chance of parole given to other prisoners.

Lomas said that if an IRA member is sentenced to life he has little chance of getting out of jail. However, if a non-republican prisoner or a Protestant activist from the North gets a life sentence, they have a good chance of getting out within a reasonable time.

Lomas used the case of British Army Private Ian Thain as an example of this contrast in treatment. He pointed out that Thain served only two and a half years of a life sentence for killing an Ulster Catholic, while Catholics had remained in jail for 20 years for killing British soldiers.

The MEP is not arguing that Irish defendants get off lightly if accused and convicted of a crime. What he is demanding is that the Irish get equal treatment in the courts, not stiffer sentences and the denial of parole when other defendants are set free.

Lomas argues that there should be no political bias in the parole system and that objective criteria should be in place that would apply to all prisoners.

Britain is not the only place where there appears to be a double standard when it comes to dealing with Irish political prisoners. Here in the United States, Joe Doherty case is a glaring example of a double standard — one of those whose actions involve a "friendly" country like Britain; another standard prevails when it comes to an "unfriendly" country like Nicaragua.

In an interview with Maria Shriver on NBC on March 12, Doherty complained bitterly about the politics that has kept him in an American jail for five years, while Contras, who are also accused of murder, come and go as they please.

Maria Shriver, while by no means sympathetic to Doherty and the IRA, conceded that there was a double standard being employed here and that Doherty was the victim of it.

Collins: Work for Reconciliation

monizing memories and reconciling aspirations. A minimum first step, however, is to seek to identify those elements which are essential to an enduring solution.

The fundamental prerequisite for progress is equality. Its presence may not guarantee a resolution of the problem but its absence will surely mean that a settlement will continue to evade us. Only on the basis of equality can we conduct an open-minded dialogue leading to reconciliation.

Confidence in the essential fairness and equality of the system is fundamental to any healthy society: it was the total, and well-founded, absence of that confidence on the part of the nationalist minority in Northern Ireland which formed the background to the fateful events of Autumn 1969. Many of the basic civil rights demands articulated then have received a response in the twenty intervening years. More have been answered since the signature of the 1985 Anglo-Irish Agreement which has as one of its basic objectives the achievement of equality of treatment for all.

In the past year, for example, new fair employment legislation for Northern Ireland has gone on the statute books, and we now look to the effective implementation of that legislation. Action on the economic front has, however, to be sustained and equality in the distribution of economic resources has to be developed. Although a legacy of economic discrimination is not easily shaken off, with determination on the part of all involved, it must and will be.

As fundamental as economic equality must be a confidence on the part of the community generally in the essential evenhandedness of all the instruments of government, including the administration of justice and the operation of the security forces. If that confidence is absent, there will inevitably be an erosion of moral and political authority.

My Government have consistently pointed to the need for the security forces in Northern Ireland to win the trust of the nationalist community. In particular, we have focused over the years on the urgent need to address the problems of harassment of the nationalist community by elements within the security forces. We have had to register our deep concern at the involvement of members of the security forces in the most serious of crimes, including immediately. This bill does not merely demand bail and political asylum for Joe Doherty, but in addition provides each House member with an opportunity to address an enduring American injustice.

murder, and at the growing evidence in recent weeks of collusion between members of the security forces and loyalist paramilitaries. We have also had to protest at decisions within the past year to allow soldiers to resume service after they had been found guilty of most serious crimes in Northern Ireland. We have raised these concerns with the British Government in the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference. We are convinced that only the most effective and urgent response can repair the damage done by these recent developments.

Despite such setbacks, we must continue to work for political progress. I believe that the Anglo-Irish Agreement — recently fortified by the Review of its workings — plays a crucial role in this regard. But the effectiveness of the Agreement as a framework for reform, cooperation and political progress must be continually developed by both Governments. Likewise, the differences which inevitably will arise from time to time between London and Dublin in the operation of the Agreement must be resolutely tackled and overcome.

Uncovering My Irish Roots

BY JEANNIE O'NEILL
Los Angeles, Ca.

Imagine journeying far across the sea in search of your ancestral homeland only to find that as far as you can surmise, the town so vividly captured in your imagination doesn't exist.

"It what?"
"It's not on the map, ma'am. In fact, it's not on any of the maps we have here."

Armed with only the name of the town in County Galway, Ireland, in which my grandmother was born, I had set out to find my roots. I was, twenty years old and very adventurous. I fancied myself an Irish Catholic Alex Haley.

My confidence faltered, however, upon learning that no one in the County Galway tourist office had ever heard of Ballynahoun, the town I had grown up envisioning all my life.

"Perhaps I'm not pronouncing it correctly. Or maybe this is an English translation?"

Tenacity paid off and when every person in the tourist office was questioned, one young lady had indeed heard of Ballynahoun.

"Oh, it's not a town you see. It's a small village located between these two towns here," she said, while pointing to settlements substantial enough to warrant the distinction of being charted on a map.

Happy in the knowledge that my destination did, in fact exist, I was on my way, secure in the thought that I would somehow be welcomed with open arms by relatives who didn't know of my existence, but surely would demonstrate the warmth and strong familial bonds so characteristic of the Irish. Little did I know what lay ahead.

After a lengthy bus ride, an even longer walk, and some pertinent inquiries at the local post office, I found myself on the doorstep of one of my oldest living relatives. He was not at home. His wife, the most backwoods person I had ever met, didn't speak English and certainly didn't comprehend who I was. Her door was closed to me. It was late in the afternoon and if I were going to seek shelter at the nearest hostel, which wasn't near, I'd better get on with it.

But like all who hail from the Emerald Isles, I am possessed of a stubbornness indicative of my genes. I wasn't going to have come all this way without at least seeing the house in which my grandmother was born. Climbing over stone walls, avoiding cow dung and the occasional rambunctious sheep dog, I went knocking on doors in the hopes of finding one elderly Irish person who would perhaps know which was the house I sought.

"Nora Folan was me mother's sister!" cried a portly little grayhaired lady when I told her my grandmother's name.

I had stumbled upon an unknown cousin who did welcome me with open arms! Excited by the visit from an American relative, she busily set about making tea, cutting the coarse Irish bread, laying out every jam and jelly in the house and opening all the store-bought short breads that she undoubtedly reserved for special

Nun Receives 1st Anna Ruddy Award

SISTER MARIA VERONICA, I.H.M. IS THE FIRST RECIPIENT OF Pennsylvania LAOH's Anna C. Mallia Ruddy Award. She holds the Kildare Pewter plate, at left, and accepts a birthday cake honoring her 80th birthday, at right. With her is Rose McGonigal, who took the presentation party to Philadelphia since Sister could not travel to the state convention at Wilkes Barre.

Sister Maria Veronica, I.H.M., the first recipient of the Anna C. Mallia Ruddy Biennial Award, was presented with a Kildare Pewter Plate by the Pennsylvania Ladies AOH at the 1989 State Convention in Wilkes Barre. Established to recognize a woman for her outstanding contribution to Hibernianism, the award is in honor of the LAOH First National President, Anna C. Mallia Ruddy, who hails from Pennsylvania and was the organizer of the first Division in Scranton.

Sister Maria Veronica entered the sisterhood in 1926 at the age of eighteen. For 25 years she taught in the Grade Schools and for 23 years at the High School level. In June 1970 she began her work as archivist for the Congressional Medal of Honor. During the next 17 years she wrote books on the hero recipients and assembled files on 3394 honorees. It was during this time that she discovered 66 honorees of Irish birth who were not recognized by any State. Through her efforts the AOH and LAOH established an Obelisk in their honor and the Ladies provided benches to sit and meditate. Rose McGonigal, state chairman of Missions and past president of Philadelphia Division 39, accepted the award as Sister was physically unable to travel to Wilkes Barre. In turn, Division 39, of which Sister is a member, took the presentation party to Camilla Hall. They planned a special congratulatory party with a decorated cake in green, white and gold. The party became a birthday party, too, her eightieth. Also, Division 39 presented Sister with an afghan in the Irish tricolors made by a member. Climaxing the occasion was Sister Maria Veronica's stories of her years at Valley Forge.

Ann Irwin Enriched the Lives of Others

While the delegates to the New York State Convention were meeting in Auburn, N.Y., a much beloved member of the Ladies AOH quietly left us. Anne M. Irwin was called to her eternal reward on July 14. With everyone away, her friends had no chance to pay final respects to an individual who was greatly loved and admired.

Ninety-three years ago, on May 4, Anne M. Kenny first saw the light of day, but it was to be many, many years before the LAOH would come to know and love her as Anne M. Irwin.

Like most fledgling Hibernians who joined our Noble Order in the 40s, Anne was an active member of the Democratic Club. She became dedicated to the aims and aspirations of the LAOH and was elected President of the Queens County Board in 1949. She later served as State Secretary and then State President in 1952 and 1954.

Her genuine dedication to the LAOH made her a natural to be a member of the Queens County Degree Team, an honor she shared with her only daughter, Dorothy Huber, also a member. Later, when the Degree Team was reorganized, it was Anne M. Irwin on whom the members relied to give proper instructions with regard to floor work, and she was a veritable martinet, insisting on perfection, making members practice repeatedly until they were thoroughly familiar with all the nuances that make any Degree Team effective and worthy of our Noble Order.

Subsequently, Anne was elected to national office, serving as Irish Historian but after one term, had to withdraw from the National Board. Nevertheless, she attended all State and National Conventions and all functions in Queens County. Everybody loved Anne, who had a delightful sense of humor and was a joy to behold on the dance floor. In 1975, at the request of the Queens County and New York State Boards, she was awarded Honorary Life Membership by the National Board, LAOH.

Anne M. Irwin is survived by her daughter Dorothy Huber, grandchildren John, Thomas, Patricia, and William and seven great-grandchildren. Anne will be dearly missed by all Hibernians whose lives were enriched for having known her.

Minnesota LAOH Mourns Death of Catherine Novack

Catherine F. Novack, a long-time LAOH member, died on September 10, 1989. She was 64.

For almost 40 years, "Kitty," as she was affectionately known, served her LAOH sisters in a first-class fashion as she held every office on the Division, County & State levels, starting at the bottom and working her way up.

Kitty's mother, Catherine Harrigan, another long-time Hibernian, lead the way and opened the door to Hibernianism for Kitty as so many mothers do. Kitty did the same for her daughter Eileen, who is currently an active LAOH member.

Kitty will be long remembered by all her LAOH sisters for her fine leadership, hard work and dedication. Her final climb to the top found her serving all of us in her leadership roll as National Historian and National Treasurer.

Kitty Novack is survived by her husband, one daughter and three sons. One of Kitty's sons, John, 33, preceded her in death by exactly one week.

Ladies Ohio State News

CUYAHOGA COUNTY — At the Ohio State Convention in July, Division 5 member Elizabeth McGinn was awarded a lifetime membership presented by State President Marie Cooke, at a small ceremony. Mary O'Leary, Mary Reynolds, and Eileen Wallenhorst, all past state presidents of Div. 5 proudly stood by Elizabeth's side.

On the weekend of August 18-20, many Cleveland Hibernians got together to attend the fabulous Irish Festival in Milwaukee. Every bit of Irish entertainment you could possibly imagine was there and plans have already been made for a trip back to Milwaukee next year. Also during that weekend, the LAOH gathered together to celebrate a Mass in honor of Our Lady of Knock, followed by refreshments.

The LAOH and AOH had their first annual Halfway to St. Patrick's Day Party on Sept. 16 at Paddy's Pub. In also serving as a membership social to introduce friends to Hibernianism, entertainment was provided by Pat O'Shea and the Shaffers.

On Sept. 22, a Benefit was held for the Oireachtas (a competition between Irish Dancing Champions) to raise funds to bring judges from Ireland for the competition to be held in Cleveland in November.

LADIES Michigan News

The Michigan State Convention was held May 19 and 20 at the Georgian Inn in Roseville and hosted by the Macomb County AOH and LAOH Divisions. Mass was celebrated by Fr. Russ Kohler, State AOH Chaplain. The AOH installation was directed by National Director John McInerney. Congratulations went out to James O'Kelly, the new State President, and his board.

The LAOH officers were installed by Past National Treasurer Margaret Murphy; the Michigan St. Brigid Degree Team presented the colors and assisted in the ceremony.

The new officers are: Sue Lauster, president; Mary Ochab, vice president; Alice Foley, secretary; Marie Seaser, treasurer; Mary Underhill, historian; Nancy Caird, missions; and Anne Lesotte, Catholic Action.

The State Mass in honor of Our Lady of Knock was held on Sunday, August 27 at the AOH Hall.

The State LAOH will be celebrating their 20th Anniversary on Sept. 23. Watch the newsletter for details.

The 4th Detroit Concert of the St. James Choir from Dublin, Ireland, was performed on Sunday, July 23, at the Michigan State Fair Auditorium. Sponsored by the State AOH and LAOH, the concert was a huge success.

The Ladies of the Ethel Kennedy Division were co-hosts of the recent Michigan State Convention. It was a huge success, from the Friday Ice Breaker, Hospitality Night, down to the Dinner Dance. The ladies meeting was very productive under outgoing State President Rosemary Hoffman.

LADIES CALIFORNIA NEWS

New State officers elected to the board for 1989-91 at California's 77th Biennial State Convention in June are Peggy McDonald, president, San Francisco; Peggy Cahill, vice president, San Diego; Marilyn Schorr, secretary, San Diego; Peggy Kenny, treasurer, San Francisco. Chairpersons elected are Marie Doherty, History, Katy O'Shea, Missions, and Margaret McAuliffe, Catholic Action, all from San Francisco.

The members of the new board were honored to have as installing officer National President Mary E. Bradley, who was assisted by National Secretary Terry Kelleher and Past National President Zoe J. Foley.

AOH National Deputy Chaplain Fr. Michael Healy will also serve as State Chaplain for the LAOH.

The highlight of the convention were the honors bestowed on four San Francisco members when National President Bradley awarded certificates of National Life Membership to Alice Curtin, Mary Doherty, Ella Hoerner and Margaret Madden. The women were recognized for their years of dedicated service to both the LAOH and the community.

The convention was held at the Reno Hilton Hotel in Nevada on June 22-23. Social events included an Ice-Breaker, a dinner honoring the National President and an occasional visit to the hotel's casino.

County Board Presidents

Presidents recently elected at County Board Conventions are Catherine Healy, Alameda, Monica Keogh, Huntington Beach, Peggy Cahill, San Diego, Peggy Kenny, San Francisco, and Mary Ryan, Santa Clara.

Irish History Essay Awards

Two California students received first place awards from the National Board this year for their Irish History essays. Marty Doyle of Archbishop Mitty High School in San Jose won the award for his paper on "Dublin, It's Place in History." Sean Elsbernd of St. Cecilia's Elementary School received his award for his paper on "Fr. Flanagan, Boys' Town."

Mary Heckner and Rita Jordan, both of Div. 14, were recently awarded a Certificate of Merit from the Catholic War Veterans for outstanding patriotism by taking part in Christmas mail call '88 for the U.S. Armed Forces.

In May, Div. 2 sponsored its annual liturgy of the Mass followed by a pleasant social. A successful fashion show was held for the benefit of the Columban Mission Fund.

In June, members of the AOH and LAOH attended a show-of-support Lusu for Ann Marie Doory, who introduced MacBride Principles legislation in the Maryland legislature.

In July, many members were happy and privileged to attend services that brought long-time friend and supporter of the LAOH, William Monks, into the Catholic church. Rita McDonough past national president, was his sponsor.

Maryland Convention

The 43rd biennial convention of the Maryland LAOH was held on June 10, 1989 at the Hunt Valley Inn, Cockeysville, MD. Nancy Perrin, state president, presided. Reports of officers and committees were warmly received and approved. The assembly was addressed by AOH State President Michael LeHane, who outlined the AOH goals and Sally Murphy, past national president, who gave the history of the LAOH. New officers installed by Sally Murphy are: President Nancy Perrin; Vice President Sr. Annella Martin; Secretary Margaret Hamilton; Treasurer Agnes Tighe; Irish Historian Mary Heckner; Chair of Missions Dolores Balassone; and Chair of Catholic Action Bernadette Keenan.

A mass of thanksgiving was offered by State Chaplain Fr. Francis Duffy, S.J., whose inspiring homily exhorted members to use their talents and share their blessings for the good of others. The day's activities concluded with a banquet at which Michael Covington, Maryland Irish Essay contest winner, was presented with a $100.00 U.S. Savings Bond. Michael also placed second nationally for which he was presented $150.00 on behalf of the National Board.

On August 12, Div. 4 sponsored Maryland's fourth annual liturgy of the mass to honor Our Lady of Knock with Fr. F. Duffy, state chaplain, as celebrant.

Divisions 4 and 14 will be having their annual joint brunch in October. Div. 4's Fall trip to the Catskills is sold out and fliers for Div. 14's Christmas season trip to Williamsburg, VA, are in the mail. In August, many members were numbered among a huge crowd that enjoyed an outdoor concert of Irish entertainment featuring Mary McGonigle.

Tommy Maken in concert on September 8, accompanied by Danny Quinn of Nyack, N.Y., opened Baltimore's Irish Festival weekend. Maken was a real crowd-pleaser, not only with his music and songs but also with poem recitations and Irish wit.

The LAOH has been invited to participate in the Columbus Day Parade on October 8 and on November 1. The Divisions are participating in a fund-raising effort sponsored by a brunch from a major department store chain.

At a recent State Board meeting, President Perrin announced that increasing LAOH membership is a top priority goal. Three State Life Memberships were awarded to Clare Cusack, Mary Healy and Jean Finnegan of Division 4.

Ladies Pennsylvania State News

The 1989 Biennial Convention was held July 19-22 in Wilkes Barre. The newly elected State Officers are Claire McNelis, president; Alice Henry, vice president; Sarah Mains, secretary; Shirley Murphy, treasurer; Mary Margaret Maurath, Irish historian; Rose McGonigal, missions; and Dorothy Weldon, Catholic Action. The two-day session of meetings were conducted by State President Margaret Cooney. Guest speaker was AOH Past President Joseph Roche on MacBride Principles.

The Host Division, LAOH Wilkes Barre Division 1, St. John Neumann, with Monica Mullin, president and Luzerne County Board with Jeanette Wydo, president, graciously entertained the lady delegates with a Wine and Cheese Reception, a Luncheon/Fashion Show, and a Champagne Reception. The Convention established the Anna C. Malia Ruddy award in honor of the first Ladies national president, to be awarded bi-annually to a woman for her outstanding work in promoting Hibernianism. President Cooney presented the first award to Sister Maria Veronica I.H.M. for her outstanding work as Archivist at Valley Forge to honor the 66 Irish Congressional Medal of Honor recipients. A plaque was presented to Rev. Ronan Deegan, TOR, our State Chaplain, for his eight years of service.

The Claddagh Degree Team of Allegheny County exemplified Major Degrees to 33 candidates in a beautiful and impressive ceremony. The closing Mass of the Convention was the St. Brigid's Mass with Fr. Deegan as celebrant. The procession was led by the Piper followed by the State Officers of the AOH and LAOH. The gifts of St. Brigid were presented by county presidents. Sarah Mains, past state chairman of Missions, was the coordinator.

Washington County

Dorothy Weldon, president, Charleoi LAOH Division 4 has been very active in projects. An afghan, made by Mary Ellen O'Neill, was raffled at the August picnic. The members manned an Irish Booth at St. Jerome's Church Ethnic Bazaar. To Transfiguration Church was donated an altar cloth and Communion napkins. A set of vestments is now being made by member Garnet DiBuona, as a gift for Thomas Dehmler on his ordination in the Pittsburgh Diocese. Again they joined with AOH Division 1 in the annual picnic. Father Cook, C.S.S.P., a native of Ireland and missionary in Africa for 25 years, was their special guest at the picnic and meeting.

Whitestone Juniors Win

Irish Roots

guests. Here at last I had found the warmth and hospitality as characteristic of the Irish people as the damp cold chill is characteristic of the land.

I stayed with Meg, my elderly cousin and now a dear friend, for the next few days and experienced a lifestyle as beautiful as it was foreign to me; for the jewel of Ireland is its countryside.

A city girl born and bred, I have lived only in San Francisco and Los Angeles. I drew parallels between those cities and the Irish ones I visited and found the Irish cities lackluster by comparison.

But the countryside is unlike anything I'd ever experienced. The land is so natural and unspoiled, revelling in its craginess and gnarly pastures. And it truly is a greener green. It's not simply that there's more of it due to the incessant rain. It's actually a different quality of green than you will see anywhere else.

And if one is to travel to the countryside, I would suggest foregoing a hostel or B&B and seeking shelter with one of the locals who rent rooms in the summer. A stay in a rustic country farmhouse is something you won't soon forget.

With no electric heating, I went to bed with the weight of heavy wool blankets covering me, and the pungent scent of a turf fire. In the morning I awoke to a breakfast of brown shelled eggs fresh from the hen out back, and Irish porridge, the remainder of which is fed to the calves if you don't finish it. All meals are cooked in big, black iron pots, the kind which inspire fairy tales about witches. And all is washed down with hearty Irish tea. Absolutely everything my senses absorbed had strong Irish flavor.

I had never experienced such a basic lifestyle before. I don't think I'd ever been in a home without carpeting before! And as I sat in the kitchen with my tea the last night of my stay, some neighbors stopped by to watch Dynasty on television, the first American thing I had noticed since leaving home. And I couldn't help but marvel at the cross-cultural hybrid of extravagance and simplicity brought together that night in a small farmhouse in the country side of Ireland.

Rosalie Hebron Honored As Woman of Year

Mrs. Rosalie Hebron, past president of the Queens County Board, LAOH, was honored recently as "The Woman of The Year" by the National Council of Catholic Women of Our Lady of Fatima Parish in Jackson Heights, N.Y.

For almost thirty years the Hibernians in Queens County have benefited from Rosalie Hebron's interest in Hibernianism. She was five times president of Division 10, Jackson Heights; served in most offices on the County Board and was president from 1977 to 1979, as well as chairman of various County functions through the years.

Rosalie was named "Woman of The Year" in recognition of her devotion to the parish. During the years she has been treasurer of the Rosary Society; president of the Senior Citizens Society for the past six years; was active in the Legion of Mary and a lector at Sunday Mass.

MONTHLY BOOK SELECTION

Especially for Christmas

SEPTEMBER

Christmas in Ireland introduced by Colin Morrison

"Christmas for us small lads growing up in the 20's was a pool of light in the inky darkness of winter," writes Eamon Kelly in this feast of stories and poems by Ireland's best known writers, including John B. Keane, Seamus Heaney, Hugh Leonard, and Clare Boylan.

In this book we join with them in remembering Christmases of long ago when the world was young and we were sitting by our own firesides. Casting our minds back to Bethlehem, we experience once again "all the little lights winking and blinking through the dark, until, as the man said, the earth below seemed like a reflection of the starry heavens above."

Present Heroes, Past Heroes

KEVIN BARRY AND HIS TIME

By Donal O'Donovan

Kevin Barry died calmly and proudly at the age of 18, executed for his part in an ambush in Dublin. His death was one of the great turning points that culminated in the two Irish states that we have today, and they're still singing "Kevin Barry" in Belfast, Boston, and Crossmaglen.

Barry died a hero after refusing to inform on his companions and his company commander. Though yesterday's heroes sometimes cast uncomfortable shadows over today's problems, succeeding generations can sometimes be saved from repeating history's mistakes thanks to a better understanding of the complexities of history.

This is the well-documented and thoroughly researched story of a lad who might have looked forward to a long and happy life as a doctor if he had been in a different society or a different time. Instead, he was hanged after being discovered holding an automatic pistol underneath a British Army bread van.

Donal O'Donovan draws parallels between Kevin Barry's time and the present as he tries to help us understand why they still sing about Kevin Barry today.

PEGGY DEERY - AN IRISH FAMILY AT WAR

By Neil McCafferty

Neil McCafferty, described as having "the softest heart and the most savage intellect in Ireland" tells us the story of Peggy Deery. A Catholic mother of 13 children living in Derry, Northern Ireland, she participated in Derry's first Civil Rights protest in 1968 and was maimed by a British Army bullet on Bloody Sunday, 1972. She died in 1988.

Her life, scarred with tragedy, traces the story of the northern troubles and the way this woman persists in trying to drag some dignity out of life for herself and her family.

Neil McCafferty is a noted journalist and political commentator who was born in Derry and is as much a product of the troubles as the woman whose story she documents. Her work has been subject to censorship in the Republic of Ireland, and as of 1987 she has not been permitted to participate in live broadcasts on the topic of Northern Ireland. Bernadette Devlin McAliskey writes: "She has a gift, a genius for recreating... the essential humanity or inhumanity of the world around her in all its contradictions."

STATE NEWS: New York Taking in the Great Fair

New York Pro Life

To all my dear brothers and sisters in Hibernianism,

I write to each of you as leaders of the AOH with a fervent thanksgiving for past favors as well as a reverent appeal for financial aid to assist mothers-to-be, for counseling aid as well as care for the unborn child.

First I must thank you all and most especially our past N.Y. State President, Ed Carley, for all the support he gave me as a State Pro-Life chairman of the AOH. We were fortunate in extending our efforts to many other States as well. I am grateful for the outstanding tribute paid to me at our convention on July 15, 1989; by the applause as well as the letters read by Ed Carley from extraordinary people like John Cardinal O'Connor; Fr. Virgil C. Blum, S.J., Pres., Catholic League; our own Denis Dillon, D.A.; the K. of C.; the U.S. Senate; The N.Y. Senate and the Assembly members and the final touch, President George Bush.

Ever since President Ed Carley threw me the ball as Pro Life Chairman, we have been running with it as fast as we can, and have actually come within ten yards of the goal line in reestablishing legal protection for the unborn. But we need funds for the final play. Please go the extra yardage in fulfilling President Michael Coogan's appeal for $100 or more from each division, remembering Pope John Paul II's statement that Charity was not the excess of our tables, but the very essence of ourselves. Do what you can, but time is important.

Make checks payable to: New York State AOH Pro Life Fund, c/o Charles W. Welch, Chairman, 84 South Washington Ave., Centereach, NY 11720. (Telephone is 516-467-8058). All checks will be turned over to the NY State treasurer.

The committee is establishing a pro-life plaque award, one of which will go to each of the five top divisions in our pro-life campaign; more about this later. We also ask the support of the Ladies AOH without whose help we cannot reach our goal.

Charles W. Welch
N.Y.S. Pro-Life Chairman

Doirse Dochais (The Doors of Hope)

... is an American based, non-profit and all volunteer organization dedicated to helping community, self-help groups in Northern Ireland which are denied government funding.

We ask you and your A.O.H. division to help those who have nowhere else to turn. Help us to:

- Provide a salary for an adult education teacher at Fr. Des Wilson's Conway Street Education Center (Belfast) or his Springhill Community House in Ballymurphy where unemployment is 87%;
- Build an Irish speaking nursery school in West Belfast;
- Provide working capital for a commercially viable, sewing Co-op for the people of Derry's Bogside and Creggan;
- Provide seed money for Irish men and women trying to start small businesses in poverty stricken areas systematically denied help because of government policy.

Please send donations to Doirse Dochais, PO Box 485, HoHoKus, N.J., 07423-0485, or call 201-444-4786 for further information.

'A Bit of Ireland' on Sundays

New York's southern tier has an Irish radio program. Cattaraugus County Board President, Bill Connelly, is host of "A Bit of Ireland," an Irish music and information program on WMNS 1360 in Olean.

The program began on Easter Sunday, March 26, 1989, and was received so well in the Olean area that sponsors for the show are on a waiting list.

BILL CONNELLY hosts popular Irish radio show.

Man of the Year Honored at Nassau County Feis

DATELINE: Binghamton, NY

Dear Chief:

YR apologizes for this article being late. The boys from Nassau County were holding their 17th Annual Feis, Sunday, September 17, 1989 at Plainview, NY. The boys and some of the ladies asked YR if he could make it. Perhaps YR should mention who the boys and ladies were, so you won't be angry with him. There was the guy with the great shock of white hair, Jack Irwin and his lovely wife, Mary Ann; Dick Rogers, John Ryan, who always plays the cop on the door, Tommy Farrell, who beats the big bass drum in the Tara Pipe and Drums of Division 15. There were a few others, Tom Myles, John Boyle, George Waters, Rosalie Rairden, Clare Deucher, Noel Kingston and Jim Cummings.

These people said that they were going to honor a Hibernian for what he has done and what he has failed to do. I said that sounded more like the Confiteor. So being a good reporter, YR went to see and hear about this special Hibernian.

Chief, it was a strange sight. Up on this stage were 20 or 30 people all vying to pay their respects to their honored guest. There were AOH and LAOH members. There were politicians, from the state level right down to council members from the various towns in Nassau County, not to mention the Nassau County Executive, Tom Gulotta, the County Comptroller, Peter King and the District Attorney, Denis Dillon.

Joining Jack Irwin, the MC for the day, as Hibernians first and foremost, were Hugh Ford, Noel Kingston, that singer of renown, Mike Carroll, the National AOH Vice-Pres., Frank Kearney, National Director from Conn. There was Tom Myles up there along with George Waters, Rosalie Rairden, Charlie Welsh, John Hennessy, Tommy Farrell, John Kiernan, Francis X. Ryan, Bill Burke, Tom Clarke, Frank Beirne, Kathy Holmes, Steve Grogan, Pat Thompson, Mary Holt Moore, and a few others.

DAVID HENSHAW, editor of the National Hibernian Digest, at center holding plaque, was recently honored as "Man of the Year" at the Nassau County AOH 17th Annual Feis. Joining in bestowing this honor were, left to right, Peter King, county comptroller; Denis Dillon, county district attorney; Gregory Peterson, Hempstead town supervisor; Rosalain Reardon, state Catholic Action chairman; Thomas Gulotta, Nassau Co. executive; Dave Henshaw; Clare Deucher, president, Nassau Co. AOH; Joseph Mondello,

The Nassau County AOH and LAOH dedicated this year's Feis to Claire Stubbs. Claire has been associated with this Feis since its inception. She was the Mistress of Ceremonies in the early 80's. She received the Nassau County LAOH "Woman Of The Year" Award in 1987. She is a member of Division 2, Westbury, LAOH. Interested in things Irish, Claire is also a member of the North Shore Irish Cultural Society, American Irish Congress, New York History Roundtable and the Comhlathas Ceoltóirí Éireann, Mulligan-Quinn Branch. She's a lovely lady, who cried when presented with a plaque.

Chief, the gentleman who was honored was introduced by John Ryan, who was wearing many hats on this day. This was the official introduction. All during these proceedings, accolades were rained down upon this soft-spoken person. Everyone claimed him as a friend. All proclaimed his work for the Irish and the AOH, from the division level, to the county, to the state, to the national. All said he did, was doing, is doing and will continue to do the best job possible.

To give some background on this esteemed citizen of Nassau County, one must cross the sea to Ireland. He was born in Dublin as were his parents, Arthur and Mary, nee Rice. He was schooled by the Christian Brothers at Narino and St. Joseph's. He is a graduate of the Dublin Technical Institute.

In 1962, he and his lovely wife,

Hempstead town supervisor; John Ryan, Nassau Co. AOH president and Feis chairman; Kerry Dawn Gullick, winner, Miss Irish American Society; Joseph Kearney, Hempstead town councilman; Fred Parola, state assemblyman; Thomas Farrell, Nassau Co. AOH vice president and Feis co-chair; and Dan Fisher, Hempstead town clerk. Missing from the picture are National Vice President Michael Carroll, National Director Frank Kearney, and National Director and Feis M.C. Jack Irwin.

Carmel, immigrated to the U.S. where he joined the Carpenters and Joiners Union, Local 608. He resides in Lynbrook. He and his wife have five children, all married. They enjoy their six grandchildren.

He is a charter member of Division 5, Nassau County, on Nassau's South Shore. He has held every Division office. He was a County President. He served with distinction as Nassau County Feis Chairman, Feis Journal Chairman and as "Feis M.C." He has served on the NYS AOH Board. At the National level, he has served as Public Relations Director. He is a delegate to the NYC St. Patrick's Day Parade from Nassau County for the past 14 years. He has also served as an aide to the Grand Marshal. In addition to all this, he has been cited by many organizations, Irish and non-Irish, and politicians from his hometown up to the Governor of New York, Mario Cuomo.

In his remarks, he took issue with the manufacturers of greeting cards which continue to vilify the Irish. He urged all there to boycott the products of these companies.

Chief, YR packed up his pad and pencil, folded his tent, and retreated to the rolling hills which surround his home to ruminate on the events of this great day for this grand gentleman whom YR also considers a friend. Oh! His name? It's David Henshaw, Editor of the National Hibernian Digest.

Hibernian Sports

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

The Last Rose of Summer. It's over! Pete Rose is gone from baseball. The Commissioner stuck to his guns. Pete Rose did not go into the dark of night silently. He still denies he has a problem. He says he will apply for re-instatement in one year, as the rule allows.

To take his last statement first: Of all those who have been barred, banned or otherwise suspended from baseball prior to Rose, none have been reinstated. To his first statement "He doesn't have a problem": Denial is one of the symptoms. It goes like this. If you deny there is a problem, then there isn't a problem. Pete, you do have a problem. This is not a "holier-than-thou" statement. This is said with the hope he gets the help he needs.

The next question that arises, "Should Pete Rose be allowed in the Hall of Fame"? Some say yes. Others say NO! During his career, Rose was known as Charlie Hustle on the field. He has done some remarkable things. He surpassed Ty Cobb. Off the field, Rose is acting like a spoiled brat and more like a hustler. He still sells his name for $15.00 even after the Commissioner's actions. YR says Rose's feats should be in the Hall of Fame. Rose, the person, should not. As the last rose of summer, he still smells.

Bart Giamatti, R.I.P. — The man who had to deal with the question of Rose is dead. He died as a result of a massive heart attack. This was a tragic loss, for his family, for baseball, for the academic world, for the fans.

Here was a man, 51 years old, a man known as an academic, a man who had taught at Yale, a man who went on to become president of Yale, a baseball fan. He was more than just a fan. He was a Red Sox fan. He gave up being president of Yale to take a job in baseball. It probably paid more money, but it didn't carry the prestige that being president of Yale did.

Why would a person do this? Why would anybody in their right mind leave the hallowed halls of ivy for the loud-mouth, uncouth likes of some fans, to take the verbal and written abuse of some fans who get incensed over a ruling by the commissioner. Bart Giamatti was a consummate fan. He was a Red Sox fan. Living in Yankeland, YR does not know many Red Sox fans, only two, Bernie Buckley and his brother, Red Heslin. Buckley was such a die-hard Red Sox fan, he refused to drink Ballantine Beer, smoke White Owl cigars or put Atlantic gas in his car. These were the advertisers of the Yankees. From what YR has read about Bart Giamatti, he would have been right at home with these two gentlemen.

Giamatti went from NL president to Commissioner. He faced the toughest challenge of his career, the Pete Rose caper. Rose and his lawyers denied all the accusations about gambling. Rose and his lawyers took Giamatti and baseball from court to court. Giamatti never wavered, never changed, never varied from what it says in the rules. You gamble on baseball, especially your own team, you're gone!

Did Giamatti relish this? Did he savor the taste of victory? He did not! When he made his statement, Giamatti said it was a sad day for baseball. This was not something he wanted to do. This was something he had to do!

Consider this day and age; when all the bleeding hearts and do-gooders are running around telling all who

New York Golf Tourney Results

The Annual AOH New York State Golf Tournament was held at the Winding Brook Golf Club on Saturday, August 19. The 47 participating golfers, 42 men and 5 women, were from Auburn, Camillus, Hudson, Troy, Schenectady, Syracuse and the host division, Albany.

The tournament was followed by a full course steak dinner at Albany's Hibernian hall, prepared by chef Desi Gilroy and his wife Tisha. After dinner, Sports Chairman Ken Aldrich awarded trophies to the following winners:

Low Gross, John Becker, Troy. Low Net, 71, Terry Burke, Troy.

Longest Drive, 2nd hole, M. Emanation, Troy. Longest Drive, 17th hole, Pat Flanagan, Albany.

Closest to Pin, 3rd hole, Mike McGann, Schenectady. Closest to Pin, 11th hole, Joe Costisic, Troy. Most Honest Golfer, Mike McCue, Albany.

Low Gross, Ladies, Joyce Lynch, Albany. Low Net, Ladies, Sue Meest, Albany.

A special thanks to Joe Fitzpatrick and Norm Shea, members of Div. 5, Albany, who supplied the prizes for the golfers who did not win trophies. Norm Shea did a great job of chairing this event under trying conditions; also thanks to the official starter, Michael Hession, and to Joe Breslin who did an outstanding job of keeping track of the finances and the scores. A full day's work!

A vote taken after the festivities unanimously gave Div. 5, Albany the hosting of next year's tournament.

BROOKSIDE, MA: The first Brookside Hospital-Sally Quinlan Pro-Am drew an estimated 4,000 plus Cape Cod followers to the beautiful Blue Rock Golf course on a gorgeous sunny day. The very well behaved throng was treated to a fine day of golf played by the best women golfers in the world, joined by the amateur playing partners.

The field assembled was probably the best Pro-Am Field in LPGA history. In the pro group were Pat Bradley of Westford and nearby Osterville, the leading all-time money winner in the history of women's golf. Pat is on a great comeback year, after being disabled for two years by Graves Disease. She won the Centinella tournament in California, and later had three strong consecutive finishes in the Lady Keystone, McDonald's, and DuMaurier tournaments. Pat has been an original and continuous supporter of Division 14 AOH, Watertown's Tara Hall Sportsnights, the proceeds of which are donated to the Tara Hall Home for Boys, Georgetown, S.C.

Joining Bradley at Blue Rock were leading money winner Betsy King; number four money winner Beth Daniel; Sally Little, a fourteen LPGA title winner, who made a special trip up from Florida to make her 12:10 tee time; Caroline Keggi, a strong rookie of the year candidate; Laura Hurlbut, consistent money winner and sister of Mike Hurlbut, PGA; Sue Ertle, Muffin Spencer-Devlin, and a host of other pros.

This charity field was a stronger array of talent than the previous week's Boston Five Tenth Anniversary $350,000 Classic. This is a tribute to the esteem and respect that her sister pros have for the great local player, Sally Quinlan.

Betsy King topped the pro competition with an even par which was one better than four runners-up Bradley, Ertle, Muffin Spencer-Devlin and Donna White. Sally Little's team won the team competition, with Pat Bradley's team finishing second. This first year charity event was very well run, well attended and a financial success. Cape Cod Golf followers are hoping that this will become an annual event.

companies can trash loyal, long-term employees under the guise of bettering the company or they get more out of it this way. The mentality of the 80's leaves YR cold. Gilbert and Sullivan once wrote a song for one of their operettas, "Let The Punishment Fit The Crime." YR is not fond of things English but in this case, he will make an exception. That song is quite apropos for Mr. Rose. He knew what he was doing. He chose to ignore the warnings. As the nuns were always telling YR in school, "The more talents God gives you, the more you have to answer for when you reach the final judgment." Rose seems intent on squandering his talents.

Some writers and sportscasters have Giamatti a renaissance man. YR looked up Renaissance Man in his FunkWagnalls. It states "a person who has wide interests and is expert in several areas." Giamatti was a Renaissance Man.

Bart Giamatti was more than that. Bart Giamatti was the type of man all of us can relate to. He was the type of person our father was, our mother was, our uncles and aunts were, what their friends were. What some of our friends are. He was an old-fashion man, a man of principle. Bart Giamatti was a man of his word. May he rest in peace.

Football. Yes, it's that time of year again. Baseball isn't done. Football's started and hockey players are in training camps. First to the college ranks.

ND looked awesome in its opener. The next Saturday ND took on Michigan. It was #1 vs #2. The first half started slow. At the final gun, ND with its "Rocket" had outshone Michigan. In the East, Syracuse had a tough time with Army. This doesn't speak too well for Syracuse or their many fans. Can ND do this week after week? Only God knows! He doesn't tell YR, even if it's the gospel according to the Hibernian Digest.

The Pros are off and running. Who will go to the Super Bowl in January? Why, the two teams who finish at the top in their respective divisions at the end of the playoffs, of course. Yes, YR is being smart. Just keeping you on your toes for the season.

For those of you who like trivial information, here are some facts and figures on making it to the pros. First to quote from an interview done by the Federation of State High Schools Associations. They asked a group of youngsters what they thought the odds were in getting to play for the pros. These kids answered, 50-50. This is a far cry from reality. Here are the stats: 1,000,000 high school boys play football. The NFL employs fewer than 1,300 players. Of these 1,300 only 160 or so are rookies. This is a far, far, lower percentage than the 50% the kids gave.

What about the NBA? The NBA employs 300 players per year. At most, 40 to 50 new players make these teams. At the high school level, there are 500,000 kids playing roundball. Baseball's better, you say. 400,000 kids play baseball at the high school level. The major league retains only 750 players on their rosters. Throw in the minor leagues, that's another 4,100 players.

Hockey? The NHL has about 500 players on team rosters. Motor Sports? The International Motor Sports Association estimates that 2,000 drivers compete in professional racing of which only 1 in every 5 makes a living at it. Bowling? There are millions of bowlers out there. You know some of them. You see them at the bowling alleys when you go bowling on your league night. Only 150 bowlers manage to make it as touring pros. You want to be a touring pro bowler? A few of the qualifications are: 18 years of age, a high school diploma and 190 average for two consecutive years in league play. Golf? There are thousands of golfers out here. Some have very decent handicaps. Others, like YR, have handicaps that look like an astronomical number. Out of all these, there are only 350 men and 270 women who compete on the professional tour.

That's what it looks like. In case you do make it or have an offspring that does, remember that even the greatest athletes reach their careers' end in their 30's or 40's. This is the prime of life for the rest of us.

Game Over. That's it for this time along the sidelines. Send your cards and letters to P.O. Box 156 ESS, Binghamton, NY 13904. God bless!

and the two Governments must together demonstrate their firm commitment at all times to moving the Agreement forward.

Never has there been such a vital need for innovative and creative thinking within and about Northern Ireland; never has there been a greater urgency about translating such thinking into practical steps forward. Both the British and Irish Governments have responsibilities in this regard, as well as both sectors of the community in Northern Ireland. For our part, we must — as we do — strive to understand that mix of emotions, interests and loyalties from which Unionism draws its character and strength. We have continually to remind ourselves of their fears. We have to ensure that our friendship is not mistaken for threat, and our genuine concerns dismissed as one-sided complaints.

The Irish Prime Minister, the Taoiseach Charles Haughey, has repeatedly made clear that the Irish Government wants to enter a new dialogue with Unionists. Our door is open, and we stand ready to advance to meet our Unionist colleagues in mutual respect and friendship. We say directly to Unionist leaders: there is nothing to be lost — neither self-respect nor political advantage nor integrity of position — by meeting with us to discuss together how we can share this island; the gain will be for all the people of Northern Ireland who long for leadership out of the present political impasse.

We will address the period ahead with the same unwavering commitment to a resolution of the problems of Northern Ireland which informed our approach to this Organisation twenty years ago. On that occasion, the then Irish Foreign Minister emphasized that "Differences in political outlook or religious belief need not set people apart . . . the real barriers are those created by fear, suspicion and intolerance." Today, I again evoke that sentiment, applicable not just in Northern Ireland, but in so many situations worldwide. If our discourses at this annual debate of the General Assembly do anything to enlarge understanding or to help lower those barriers, then they will indeed have proved worthwhile.

YES! THERE IS A HIBERNIAN LIFE INSURANCE FUND

What it is...

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAAOH members by 1953 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and the LAAOH. In 1963, the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

What it offers...

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Bursar Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.

National Awards Chairman

President's Message

TEACHTAINEACHT AN UACHTARAIN
By Michael J. Coogan, National President

We have just completed two days of National Board meetings in Dayton, Ohio, which were climaxed by the National President's Testimonial Dinner and the presentation of the Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award. I would like to thank the committee, composed of members of the Dayton Division and chaired by Robert Butler, for making this one of the finest and smoothest run meetings ever. This is not my opinion only; it is also shared by many others who attended.

In addition, I wish to thank the members of the National Board and the Ladies' National Board for the beautiful gifts of Galway and Waterford crystal. Kay and I will cherish them for the rest of our lives.

Oliver Kearney, the recipient of the first Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award, was very worthy of the honor. His acceptance speech held everyone spellbound. A special thanks goes to Mike Carroll, who chaired this committee, and to Past National President Joe Roche, who first had the idea of the award and saw to the creation of the bust of Sean MacBride.

The Board meeting was, I feel, very successful. I wish to thank the members of the Board for their dedication and hard work in carrying out both their elected and appointed offices. I urge all State, County, and Division officers to implement the policies of the National Board at their particular levels. Feel free to write or call any National Officer if help is needed. Only by continuing to work together as we have in the past will be accomplish our goals.

Attention all Division Presidents: With the election of new officers which must take place before January 1st, be sure to send to the National Secretary a Form 9 listing your elected and appointed division officers for 1990.

There has been some misunderstanding about a press release issued by our National Public Relations Director, Michael Cummings, to the Catholic New York. Due to an editing error by the paper, Cardinal O'Connor's name was left out, which caused some concern among our members.

Cardinal O'Connor has proven to be a good friend to the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Irish. The press release acknowledged his concern for the undocumented Irish, and the conflict in Ireland. The point of the article was that more leadership like that of Cardinal O'Connor, and Cardinal Law of Boston, is needed from all of the U.S. Catholic bishops. I have written Archbishop Pilarczyk, the newly elected president of the Catholic Bishops Conference, to begin a dialogue with the hope of encouraging such leadership.

Over 300 Come to Honor Coogan

DAYTON, OHIO: National Vice President Michael Carroll, Chairman of the Award Committee, reads the inscription on the Sean MacBride bust presented to Oliver Kearney, who listens with his wife Brigid. Intently reading along is National President Michael Coogan, at whose Testimonial Dinner the first presentation of the Bi-Annual Sean MacBride Humanitarian Award took place.

DAYTON, OHIO: The National Board of the AOH held a testimonial dinner in honor of National President Michael Coogan on Friday and Saturday October 20 and 21. Joined by the National Ladies Board, the very successful affair was attended by over 300 people.

In conjunction with the testimonial to President Coogan, the first Sean MacBride Bi-Annual Humanitarian Award was presented to Oliver Kearney of County Antrim, Ireland. Kearney is professionally qualified as a fellow of the British Institute of Personnel Management and author of the book, A Long Road to March — The Battle Against Discrimination. Oliver was joined by his beautiful wife Brigid and beautiful daughter Dymphna.

Oliver spoke eloquently of the current conditions in Northern Ireland and how important it is to bring to the legislatures across the United States the true story of conditions there. The story is beginning to get told as Irish Americans pursue passage of the MacBride Principles, explaining and illustrating how their adoption will help end workplace discrimination by American companies in Northern Ireland.

The Sean MacBride award presented to Kearney is a life-size bust of the Nobel Laureate, forged in Co. Kerry, Ireland, by Irish sculptress Paula O'Sullivan.

Also a guest on the dais was William Sherwin, executive secretary of the International Right to Life Federation, who spoke at the meetings on Friday. He is a native of Delvin, Co. Cork, Ireland, and works out of Rome, Italy, as administrator of the Federation.

Three resolutions were adopted by the National Board in the business sessions: the release of the Birmingham Six; British army band protests; and a new national holiday in the Order — the feast of the Holy Innocents celebrated on December 28 — a Day of Commemoration for the Order to conduct anti-abortion activities. National President Coogan called for Hibernians "To heed the call of the Holy Father and stand up and speak out against abortion. The Feast of the Holy Innocents is a most appropriate time to especially remember those who have been slaughtered with the aid of our tax funds, which like the swords of Herod's soldiers, abet this intrinsic evil." And "Irish-Americans," concluded Coogan, "must show the way to alternatives, compassionate understanding, and to a government guided by moral principles, not the path of least resistance."

On the Birmingham Six resolution President Coogan stated, "The Guildford Four and the Birmingham Six cases have been symbols of anti-Irish bias that permeates English Society. . . . The continued imprisonment of the Irishmen, without anything remotely resembling American due process," noted Coogan, "is proof positive of the

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference Issues Statement

DUBLIN, IRELAND: A meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference was held in Belfast on 18 October 1989. The British Government was represented by the Joint Chairman, Mr. Peter Brooke, MP, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, accompanied by Mr. John Cope, MP, Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office. The Irish Government was represented by the Joint Chairman, Mr. Gerard Collins, TD, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and by Mr. Ray Burke, TD, Minister for Justice and Communications. The Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) and the Commissioner of the Garda Síochána (Irish Police Force) were also present at the meeting.

The Conference continued the intensive discussions which have now taken place over three meetings on a range of issues relating to confidence in the security forces and the system of justice. Both sides considered these discussions had been constructive and worthwhile and had enabled each side to set out clearly its views and concerns.

In discussing specific difficulties in this field both sides start from the common ground of their joint commitment to the Agreement in all its aspects and their determination to make the fullest possible use of the process of dialogue it affords them.

They agree that confidence in the impartiality and integrity of the security forces is critically important for their common objectives as set out in the Agreement and Review document. Any collusion between members of the security forces and paramilitaries is an issue of the utmost gravity in this respect and requires urgent action to allay public concern and to demonstrate that no departure from the rule of law by any member of the security forces will be tolerated. It was confirmed that the disciplinary aspects of all such cases would be dealt with on the principle that there could be no place in the security forces for those who betrayed their trust.

Against that background, the British side set out at the Conference certain actions that had been set in train following recent events.

The investigation which the Chief Constable of the RUC has requested the Deputy Chief Constable of Cambridgeshire to undertake is, as evidenced by the charges already brought, being conducted both rigorously and promptly, with a view to the earliest comprehensive report. Thereafter the British Government will address expeditiously any implications of the report which are for them and will consider whether any further measures are needed. A full public statement will be made on the issue at that stage.

Ft. Lauderdale, Florida Open Letter to Congress

Dear Members of Congress:

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, the largest and oldest Irish American organization in America is calling on members of Congress to support House Concurrent Resolution 62.

This resolution calls on the Attorney General of this great nation to carry out the rulings of the courts as they apply to Joseph Patrick Doherty. Doherty is presently in his seventh year of incarceration at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan, although he has never been charged with any crime in this country. In 1984 Judge John Sprizzo's original ruling rejected Britain's request for extradition, and his decision has withstood six direct and indirect challenges from both the Reagan and Bush administrations. Every court, from the U.S. Court of Appeals to the Board of Immigration Appeals, has rejected arguments that Doherty be extradited to Northern Ireland. What is happening here is a flagrant disregard for the rulings of the courts by those in highest authority.

The facts of the case are not in dispute; what is in dispute is the denial by the Bush administration to carry out the rulings of the court. The actions of the Reagan and Bush administrations make a mockery of our sacred judicial system and read like something that would happen in Stalin's Russia or a Belfast Diplock court.

The resolution we ask you to support calls for the rulings of the Court to be upheld; we are asking for nothing more or nothing less. We are seeking the justice that Joseph Doherty deserves. Support of this issue can only be viewed as opting to uphold the laws and court decisions of this great nation. The oath of your office calls for this very support.

English government's determination to punish without proof in its transparent attempt to intimidate all Irish.

People came from across the country to honor Mike, including five past national presidents. Mike, who has dedicated thirty-five years of his life to the Noble Order, has held every National office and chaired many National Committees. He was joined by his whole family. Hibernians attending from around the area included Judy Leddy, the Countess of Markievicz Division; Gerry Curran, Bill Powers, Jerry Preest, Bill Leddy, John O'Connor and Kevin Talty, representing the Padraic Pearse Division; along with Ron Crow, Pat Flanagan, Larry O'Callan, Paul Krumm, and Ann Daley, and the Gaelic League members, who with Fr. Donal O'Carroll and Fr. Healy, celebrated the Irish Mass.

The entire event was capably directed by chairman Bob Butler and his fine committee.

New NYC Parade Officials Elected

NEW YORK, NY: Some 400 delegates to New York City's Ancient Order of Hibernian St. Patrick's Day Parade participated in the nomination and election of the ten officers who will lead the Parade Committee for the next two years.

The new board of officers: Chairman, Francis Beirne; Vice Chairman, John Dunleavy; Recording Secretary, Margaret O'Rourke; Treasurer, Rosemary Lombard; Financial Secretary, Emmet Rogers; Corresponding Secretary, Peter Cassels, Sergeant-at-Arms, Patrick Reynolds; and Directors, Donald Sullivan, Martin Kearns and James B. Ferguson.

Four Parade Committee offices—Chairman, Vice Chairman, Financial Secretary and Directors—were contested, with eleven Hibernians competing for six positions. Five former New York County Board Presidents were after the top two posts, Chairman and Vice Chairman.

The incumbent, Francis P. Beirne, won a third term as Chairman, beating back challenges by Martin Dunne and James Mulvihill. Incumbent Vice Chairman, Richard Cunningham, was ousted by John Dunleavy, who had been serving as Treasurer.

Division 1's Emmet Rogers was elected to the office of Financial Secretary, succeeding his uncle, Thomas Rogers. He won out over Timothy O'Regan, a Past President of New York County's Div. 3 and the Parade's Chairman of Bands and Music. Three of young Emmet's uncles (Bernard and Paul, deceased, and Thomas), his father (Vincent Pat, deceased) and his grandfather, (Thomas Rogers Sr., deceased) were Parade Committee workers and Past Presidents of Division 1. Grandfather Tom Rogers, Sr. was an AOH Past New York State President and Past National Secretary.

Incumbent Directors Martin Kearns and Judge Donald Sullivan retained their offices, while James Barney Ferguson, former Parade Grand Marshal, edged out John Clarke of Div. 7 for the third Director post. Both Recording Secretary Margaret O'Rourke, immediate past president of the N.Y. County Ladies AOH, and Sergeant-at-Arms Patrick Reynolds were uncontested for their offices. Peter Cassels gave up the office of Director to run, unopposed, for Corresponding Secretary, the position vacated by Chairman-challenging Martin Dunne. Rosemary Lombard of NY County's Ladies AOH Div. 3 moved unchallenged into the Treasurer position, vacated by successful Vice-Chairman challenger, John Dunleavy.

The nominations and elections, held at New York's Sheraton Centre on successive evenings, were chaired by New York County Board President, Timothy Hartnett.

Questions and Answers

By Mr. William T. Malone

NOTE: Please forward questions to Mr. William T. Malone, Department of English, Center for Irish Studies, The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064.

O'Shea

Q. Could you give me some background about my family name — O'Shea?

A. The name O'Shea includes a long and renowned line of influential descendants. From the Irish O Seaghdha the anglicized 'descendant of the Shea' means 'hawk-like, fearless'. Modern variants appear as O'Shea, Shea, O'Shee, and Shee. Together these names constitute one of the most numerous in Ireland, with a population over 12,000.

Shee, sounding like sea, is the anglicized pronunciation of Shea. This form of your name is rare outside of County Kilkenny. Of the Ten Tribes of Kilkenny, many say only the Shees can trace their roots to the Milesians, the last invaders of pre-Christian Ireland. Thus yours is a quality name.

A plurality of O'Sheas still live within the Kerry area where the family first asserted its influence. Until the 12th century, the O'Sheas were Lords of Iveragh. During the subsequent Norman invasion their power declined even though they retained the title Iveragh for several generations. Many members migrated into Counties Tipperary and Kilkenny. Odoneus O'Shea is recorded as the Lord of Sheelsland in Tipperary in 1381. Robert Shee became the chief burgess, the Sovereign of Kilkenny in 1499.

Sir William Shee (d.1869), served as the first Catholic judge in Ireland since the 1690 Revolution. He was also a member of Parliament. Captain Robert O'Shea served under Prince Charles at the Battle of Culloden in 1745. He continued his military career in France where at least five other O'Shees served as officers in the French army, usually leading noted Irish brigades.

Some noteworthy modern O'Sheas include: Sir Martin Archer (d.1850), twenty times President of the Royal Academy of London; Daniel Shee (d.1836) expelled from a professorship in Trinity after refusing to testify against some friend's involvements with the United Irishmen. In 1851, when the landlord murdered twelve year old Denis Shea, the Irish purported the story as the most shocking example of landlord atrocity. Parnell knew best the most notorious of all O'Sheas: Kitty, who lends her name to the pub where CU undergrads chunder after the subway closes.

Roohan

Q. Could you provide background on my family name; my grandfather emigrated from the Waterford region? Raymond J. Roohan, Jr., Delmar, NY.

A. The name Roohan finds itself with an extra o; Irish speakers in An Cheathru Rua, County Galway, says Connemara people are generous with letters. Related to your name are so many forms in English and Irish because each dialect observes its own spelling conventions. Pronunciation to a lesser degree and spelling greatly differ from region to region. Imagine what happens when an illiterate couple stands before an immigrant officer and tells him that their name is O Ruadhachain. Compound this with the gentleman from County Clare who earlier told the officer O Robhachain is his surname. And the one from Donegal claiming everyone calls him Mr. O Ruadhain! To the officer these all sound alike not only because this name does in Irish, but also his ear is not trained to distinguish between Irish sounds not usually found in English. If neither the Rohans, nor Misterns Rowan and Ruane know how to spell and write, then the officer uses the nearest equivalent he hears in his neighborhood or from someone else, and he spells it according to what he has seen.

The form Rohan although found mainly in County Kerry, appeared in eastern Cork as early as 1642 when Rohans from Thomond attacked Ballyalla Castle. The most prominent name holders derive from the Ui Maine or Hy Maine and live in East Galway where they use Rowan and Roughan. Ruane live in Mayo. Rowans lived throughout the four provinces and a distinct sept lived in southeastern Leinster since the 16th century. In the 17th century in Cork, O'Rohan and O'Roughane appear and Roghan in Cashel. Rowan creates a problem because it occurs indigenously from the earliest time as both an English and Norman name. The Norman form most common is (de) Rohan.

O'Leary

Q. Please tell me about the family name O'Leary. Ben Coyle, Akron, Ohio

A. Even though Dunlaoghaire was named after a fifth century Irish King his family has no connection to the Cork clan. The name O'Leary has always been closely associated with County Cork. Originally the family lived in the southwestern Cork area of Corca Laoithe. But, during the Norman invasions, they were displaced and moved into remote Inchigeela in western Cork where the Lee River and Lough Allua meet.

Once displaced, they lost their prominence, but continued to exert influence as ruling chiefs under the most powerful Muskerry McCarthys.

Pat Roper's Latest Record His Best Yet

NEW YORK, N.Y.: Pat Roper's growing legion of followers are heralding the release of his long awaited fifth record, "Ireland and America The Beautiful."

America's concern with cultural roots has been made more visible by the reawakening of interest in Irish and Irish American music in recent years. One of the first-rate artists to capture this Irish and American 'hands across the sea' sentiment on his recordings is Pat Roper.

According to Paddy Noonan of Rego Records who released the record, this is Pat Roper's best ever and it's backed up by the news that it is his fastest selling recording to date. Both Noonan, president of Rego Records and Dermot O'Brien, who produced and arranged the record, agree that the recording success is due to Roper's rendition of "My Son," which must be labeled his new signature song.

You'll cherish his handling of such new "standards" as My Son, Flight of Earls, Grace, After All These Years, and When New York Was Irish.

These new standards are

juxtaposed to the vital, emotion-charged Irish rebel songs that came into being during the War for Irish Independence. Pat Roper's inspiring renditions of the Wild Colonial Boy, On the One Road, Green On the Green and Irish Soldier Boy will stir the patriotic feelings in us all.

As star-spangled as the flag itself

As an example of how numerous and influential they were, the Civil Survey of 1654 records ten O'Herlihs, forty-one McCarthys, and thirty-four O'Learys living in Muskerry barony.

Today about eighty-one percent of all O'Learys were born in this region of Cork. Even more amazing when you consider that approximately 10,100 O'Learys live in Ireland. The name itself gives further evidence of O'Leary prominence: County Cork has two Ballylearys.

During the Elizabethan and Plantation Wars, the O'Learys distinguished themselves against the invading English. They lost much of their holdings during the Desmond uprising and after Kinsale (1601) the noteworthy Mahon O'Leary was one of the first aristocrats to leave Ireland with d'Aquila. He continued a good career in the Spanish army. Many O'Learys fought with France. More recently, Ellen (d.1889) and Joseph (d.1855) were noted authors; Father Peter (Peadar O Laoghaire) was called the living master of Irish prose. John (d.1907) was the famous Fenian.

Conlon

Q. My family lived on Eddy Isle off the Kenmare coast. Could you please tell me the origin of my family name? James P. Conlon, Long Island, NY.

A. Your name has several variants in Irish: O Conallain, O Coinghiollain popular in Connacht; O Caoidealbhain the more popular elsewhere. With broad long vowels in the first and third syllables, the middle syllable would be given only the slightest pronunciation and it would be quick. Thus all of the Irish forms sound very similar; even the -ighiol- of Caoighiollain represent a barely audible /hul/: the second i requires an unpronounced i between it and the previous pronounced vowel (here o) it is simply a spelling rule.

Even in modern Hiberno-English the anglicized versions are sounded similarly. Conlon, Conlan, and Connellan, -nel- captures the slight unpronounced middle syllable of Irish, while the other two ignore it.

The principal O Conallain septs hail from Counties Roscommon and Galway and the O Coinghiollain from Sligo. Today the name's variants are still most popular in Counties Mayo and Sligo. In the seventeenth century, at least seven variants appeared in Petty's census of 1659 throughout Counties Roscommon, Clare, Sligo, Longford, Westmeath, Offaly, Kildare, and Louth.

Within the Westmeath and Meath region, the Irish spelling O Coindealbhain (again an unheard medial syllable), the bh sounds like w or v depending upon the dialect, and Coin, with emphasis on the i and little stress on o said quickly between c and n gives a Qu sound. In Hiberno-English the spelling Quinlan occurs. This branch dates to the King Laoghaire (the ferry port in South Dublin County), of St. Patrick's era. So the name has wily roots in several parts of the country.

In Munster, O Caoidealbhain is anglicized Quinlevan and Conlon. In Armagh, Connellan popular several generations appears more frequently as Conlon and Conlan.

The more notable individual name holders (about whom we know), come from Ulster. But Owen Connellan (1800-96), of Connacht, was a noted Gaelic Scholar. Tircconnell genealogies are focused upon in the medieval "Book of the O'Connells." Abraham O'Connell Bishop of Schorny (1492-1508), Thomas and Laurence, two brothers, acquired musical renown — Thomas in Ulster and Laurence in Scotland. Joseph of this century, became a leading northern activist in Ulster's GAA and Sinn Fein.

NOTE: Please forward questions to Mr. William T. Malone, Dept. of English, Center for Irish Studies, The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064; include a self-addressed stamped business envelope and a check in the amount of ten dollars ($10.00), payable to William T. Malone. Mr. Malone is a doctoral candidate in Irish Studies at CUA.

is Pat's renditions of America's military classics like the Caissons Go Rolling Along, Anchors Aweigh, The Marine's Hymn and the Air Force Fight Song. His unforgettable rendition of the title hymn, America the Beautiful, and the Irish National Anthem, can only be labeled an absolute show stopper!!

This is that rare recording in which music and a brand new sound for Pat Roper meld naturally into a terrific entertainment experience. Through the outstanding efforts of prominent Irish record producer and director Dermot O'Brien, Pat Roper, the King of the Irish Festivals, is at his all-time best!

One-Man Show Stars Malachy McCourt in NY

NEW YORK, NY: Beginning January 7th and running every Sunday through February 25th, the Lower East Side Tenement Museum is presenting "Plunkitt of Tammany Hall," a one-man show starring Malachy McCourt. The show is based on the memoirs of Tammany Hall boss George Washington Plunkitt, as written down by New York Evening Post reporter, William L. Riordan, in 1903.

Originally presented at the Irish Arts Center, "Plunkitt of Tammany Hall" draws upon the rich heritage of early New York City politics and politicians. Plunkitt was born in New York circa 1842, and died here in 1924. The material for this show is culled from "A Series of Very Plain Talks on Very Practical Politics." In Malachy's words, "It's hard to say whether he was a charming rogue, a corrupt politician, an honest scoundrel, a garrulous bore or a visionary."

Malachy McCourt, adapter of Plunkitt's stories, is an internationally renowned film, television and radio star. He has been seen in such vehicles as "Mass Appeal" on Broadway, "Ryan's Hope" and "Search for Tomorrow," on television, and feature films such as "Two for the Seesaw," "Brewster's Millions," "The Molly Maguires" and "The January Man."

Featured with McCourt is pianist Jim Colleran.

HOLIDAY RECIPES

'Irish Brown Bread

4 cups whole wheat flour
2 cups plain white flour
1 tsp bicarbonate of soda
1 tsp. salt
1 cup buttermilk

Mix all dry ingredients in a large mixing bowl. Make a well in the center. Begin to add buttermilk a quarter cup at a time. Stir with a wooden spoon to make a thick dough. The mixture should be slack but not wet. Mix lightly and quickly. If the dough seems too stiff, add a little more buttermilk.

With floured hands, place dough on a lightly floured board or table and flatten into a circle about 1 1/4 inches thick. Place on a greased baking sheet and make a large cross in the dough with a floured knife.

Bake in a moderate to hot oven (375 degrees) for about 40 minutes. Test with a skewer for doneness.

NOTE: To keep the bread soft, wrap it in a clean tea towel. The bread should not be cut until it is cold and "set." This takes 4-6 hours.

AFTER ONLY 137 YEARS, DUBLINERS ARE STARTING TO GIVE LENEHAN'S A SECOND LOOK.

When a pub hasn't changed in more than a century, the Irish tend to take it for granted. And that's the way they like it.

But when they learned that Budweiser,* that most American of beers, is now being brewed in Ireland, too...well, you might say a change of heart overtook them.

So now pubs like Lenehan's are serving up the clean, crisp taste of Budweiser along with their other brews. And while that may have caused a few raised eyebrows, it's also been cause for more than a few raised glasses.

Resolutions Adopted At National President Testimonial Meetings

10-21-89 — Dayton, Ohio

BIRMINGHAM SIX INJUSTICE

Whereas, for nearly 16 years six Irishmen from Birmingham have been imprisoned in England for a crime they did not commit; and

Whereas, the evidence of their innocence has been amply demonstrated in a 15 month review of their case and in Error of Judgement authored by Chris Mullen, a Member of Parliament; and

Whereas, support for a retrial, release and/or amnesty of Walker, Hill, Hunter, McKenny, Callaghan and Power has been publicly and repeatedly called for by religious leaders like Anglican Bishop of Woolwich, Peter Hall, Tomas Cardinal O'Fiach, John Cardinal O'Connor and Bishop Edward Daly; and

Whereas, appeals for justice for these individuals have been publicly adopted by the European Parliament, (12/86) the Irish Dail (6/15/88) and by over 200 Members of the English Parliament (6/23/88), the NYC Common Council (6/89), the State Legislature of Massachusetts (10/87); and

Whereas, Amnesty International's "grave doubts about the official denials of ill treatment" by the police (Aug.88) have now been reinforced by the Aug.89 results of the Police Complaints Authority which confirm fabrication of evidence and confessions by some of the same officers involved in the Birmingham Six confessions; Now Therefore Be It

Resolved, that the National Board of Ancient Order of Hibernians call for the immediate release of the Birmingham Six and for full compensation for the British Government's conspiracy to imprison them unlawfully and unjustly; and Be It Further Resolved, that this request be conveyed to the President and Secretary of State and to appropriate Members of Congress and the media.

BRITISH ARMY/AMERICAN TOUR

Whereas, the Black Watch and Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders are active regiments of the British Army; and

Whereas, these same regiments have seen substantial active service in six counties of Ireland known as Northern Ireland; and

Whereas, these same regiments were stationed in areas where occurred disputed deaths of innocent men, women and children by British soldiers; and

Whereas, since 1972 these and other British Army regiments as documented in Shoot To Kill by the International Lawyer's Inquiry have caused the deaths of 157 innocent men, women and children all under disputed circumstances suggesting an illegal and excessive use of force; and

Whereas, the vast majority of these deaths involved men, women and children of Catholic religious faith; and

Whereas, from that time until 1985 only one British soldier has ever been charged and served time in prison for this carnage; Now Therefore Be It

Resolved, that the National Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians petitions Columbia Artists and those sponsoring, organizing or otherwise responsible for the booking and payment of the Black Watch and Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders regimental bands or their agents to cease and desist from promoting these performances as entertainment; Now Therefore Be It Further

Resolved, that the National Board request that these performances be canceled as a matter of human and moral decency and as a matter of concern for persecution for an oppressed minority; and Therefore Be It Further

Resolved, that until such time as the British soldiers responsible for these deaths appear before an impartial tribunal to account for these deaths we ask that no further tour arrangements be secured or sponsored by agents of the British Army or by American organizations; theatres, arenas or municipalities.

Greeting Card Campaign Nets Hallmark Co.

Hallmark Cards, Inc., St. Patrick's Day, and the Irish are all getting entangled.

The 1989 crop of St. Patrick's cards — probably the worse ever — brought out the best in the Irish throughout the country. Hallmark officials will meet with representatives of the American Irish Political Education Committee, reports Phil Chaney of Kansas City, MO — the home base for Hallmark.

The Irish community will be watching closely for improvements, noting that, of course, there is only one way to go since the company hit rock bottom in 1989.

'Irish Way' 1990 Dates Announced

ST. PAUL, MN: The Irish American Institute (IAI) announced that the 1990 Irish Way program for high school students will run from July 2-August 7.

The Irish Way provides American high school students with a comprehensive introduction to Ireland. Students are based on the Gormansan College campus outside of Dublin, and attend specially developed classes in Irish history, literature, language and dance. They take field trips and tours and experience a variety of cultural activities which includes attending plays, concerts and sporting events.

The highlight of The Irish Way for many students is the Home Stay, when each teenager spends a week with an Irish family.

For additional information, contact the IAI, 2115 Summit Ave., College of St. Thomas (5026), St. Paul, MN 55105, (612) 647-5678.

Rhonda Paisley Quits Her Father's Church

BELFAST—Rhonda Paisley, the DUP Belfast councillor, has resigned as a communicant member of the Free Presbyterian Church, led by her father, the Rev. Ian Paisley. It emerged last week that Ms. Paisley was, since last August, no longer a communicant member.

Ms. Paisley said that it was a personal matter which she did not want to discuss. Paisley, the Free Presbyterian Church moderator, said her resignation had been received "with great regret."

Birmingham Six Case Revisited

DUBLIN, IRELAND: A Detective Constable who arrested five of the Birmingham Six now says that he believes that they are innocent. Both the Irish Times and the Irish Independent give details of a British TV programme which claimed that Scotland Yard Anti-Terrorist Squad had 13 years ago identified a link between the Guildford and Birmingham pub bombings.

The programme went on to name three men it understood had been responsible for the bombings. The three are said to be living in Ireland and serving various sentences, including one for murder in Ireland.

200th Anniversary of Catholicism in U.S.

By BRIAN K. LONERGAN

Barry, FitzGerald, FitzSimmons, Moylan, O'Brien and Carroll are some of the Irish Catholic names associated with the successful conclusion of the American Revolution. However, since this is the 200th anniversary of the first Catholic see in the United States, Baltimore, we should note the great contributions of the Carrolls of Maryland.

In 1634, two Jesuits came over to Maryland with Lord Leonard Calvert to establish a church for the 200 Catholic immigrants who had come to colonize a haven of tolerance. Later, Lord Charles Calvert (third Lord Baltimore) brought Charles Carroll of Ireland over as his attorney general. From Charles Carroll the elder came Charles Carroll of Carrollton. Another Carroll family gave us two famous cousins, John and Daniel.

Daniel Carroll (1730-1796) was a gentleman farmer by profession until 1780 when he served Maryland in the Continental Congress. Daniel, a fervent patriot, signed the Articles of Confederation and the Constitution. He was also a delegate at the Constitutional Convention in 1787 and a senator from Maryland from 1789-1791. Daniel was the brother of John Carroll, bishop of Baltimore.

Charles Carroll of Carrollton managed Carrollton Manor's 10,000 acres in Fredna County after completing his education. He had gone to school in France because Catholic education had been disallowed in the colonies. However, in spite of this bigotry from without, and his own personal wealth, Carroll proved to be a true champion of the common man. He argued eloquently against the constant drift of arbitrary taxation. He joined the Annapolis Committee and the Maryland Convention, early revolutionary sounding boards. Charles helped draw up the Maryland Constitution and his sound business mind helped organize logistics for troops and supplies. He was the first patriot to sign the Declaration of Independence and was nicknamed "Charles the Signer." Carroll and Ben Franklin went to Canada to negotiate with Catholic French Canadians concerning the American Revolution. He was a senator from Maryland from 1789 to 1792. Charles Carroll died at 95 years of age, the last survivor of the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence. He lived long enough to help place the golden spike on the Transcontinental Railroad in 1831. Charles almost became "President Carroll" when the Federalists chose him to replace President Washington in case illness were to negate George's faculties.

John Carroll (1735-1817) was the brother of Daniel Carroll and the cousin of Charles. After attending an "underground" Catholic school (Jesuit), he went to St. Omer's School in France, a haven for Catholics from America. After his ordination, John established a "mission" church in his mother's house in Rock Creek, D.C. He was an ardent patriot and encouraged the fight for freedom. John even went to Canada with Charles and Ben Franklin on that early diplomatic mission. He was appointed vicar apostolic in 1784 over his far-flung flock of 25,000. In 1790 his fellow priests noted him as their choice for bishop. Carroll established sees in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Bardonia. He also founded Georgetown in 1789 and brought over French priests fleeing from the Revolution to staff schools in Baltimore and other sees. A tireless worker, John Carroll saw his sees soar from 35,000 faithful in 1790 to almost 195,000 in 1815, at his death. His aspirations shine forth in his words: "In these United States our religious system has undergone a revolution; if possible, more extraordinary than our political one. The United States has banished intolerance . . . all are on the same footing of citizenship . . . with equal rights . . . in national privilege."

News from the States

STATE NEWS: Illinois

Illinois, a long time seat of mid-west Hibernianism is on the growth path once again. Anthony "Tony" Joynt, a mover and shaker from Belleville Division 1, Scott County, vowed at his election as State President to bring the AOH in Illinois back to what it once was — the leader in the midwest. Chicago is teaming with Irish and the AOH has fallen to a back seat. The State President means to reverse that trend!

To date a lot of work with John Maguire, president Div. 59, Cook County (Chicago) and Robert Sloan, president, Div. 1 Peoria County, have produced a massive reorganization in Chicago. Division 59 and Div. 63 are, once again, moving towards a greater role for the AOH in Chicago. Along the same lines an Illinois State Constitution Convention was convened in Chicago the weekend of November 11. Hosted by State President Tony Joynt, the one day working meeting coincided with a Div. 59, 30th Anniversary Party held that night at the Gaelic Park on Chicago's south side. With a State Constitution updated, plans are in the making to expand the activities of the AOH across the state on issues related to Irish immigration and right-to-life.

Peoria Co. Div. 1 under President Robert Sloan continues to bring in new members at the rate of 10 a month since its founding. This Division, named after Richard H. Parsons, who has been active in the Peoria Irish community for many years, now boasts a membership of over sixty.

Look to Illinois to be involved in all things AOH in the future and especially to be present in increasing numbers at our national convention.

NH Division Reorganized

MANCHESTER, N.H.: The newly reorganized Manchester, New Hampshire, Division 1, AOH, held its first Annual Communion Breakfast here at Notre Dame College on October 22. Division Chaplain Father William Shanahan, above, officiated at the Mass and delivered a well researched talk on the history of Irish Catholicism in America. Pictured to Father Shanahan's right is Division President Brian Kelly, and to his left Bill Biser, treasurer and sponsor of the event.

National Director Tom Gilligan reported on the recent National Board meeting highlighting updates on the Joe Doherty issue and the 1992 National Convention.

The next State Board meeting will be the weekend of 26, 27 and 28 January 1990, with Pasco County in New Port Richey the host division.

From the Divisions

Brevard County Division 1 Bob Schneider reports the results of the election for 1990: President, Nick Schneider; Vice President, Ernie Kees; Recording Secretary, Dick Girard; Financial Secretary, Frank Harrington; Treasurer, Sal Vitale; Chairman of Standing Committee, Bob Schneider; Marshal, Bill Rothamel; Sentinel, Don Bell, and Historian, Jerry O'Shea. The officers will be installed by State President John Cullinan, who will also confer the Shamrock Degree on members throughout the state who have not received this honor. The ceremonies will take place at the Division's annual Christmas Social on 13 December at J.D. Bombers Restaurant, Indian Harbour Beach.

Manatee County Division 1 President Paul Finnerty reports that membership continues to grow at a rapid pace.

Past President Tom Condon of Pasco County Division 1 reports that in conjunction with the January meeting of the State Board of Officers, a dinner dance on Saturday night at the local Elks Lodge will be included in the weekend activities. Broward County Division 2 President Mike Mahon reports that his new division had a successful inaugural dance and anticipates a great future for the division.

Broward County Division 1 President Martin McAndrew's radio program is still going strong but can use more sponsors. To be a sponsor, contact Martin McAndrew at 1701 N.W. 97th Ave., Plantation, FL 33321 or call (305) 474-4737. The new division officers for 1990 are: President, Don Hartnett; Vice President, Broughan Gorey; Recording Secretary, Eamon Quinn; Treasurer, Ed McCready; Financial Secretary, Bill Maroney; Chairman of Standing Committee, Tom Howley; Sentinel, Ed Nagle and Marshall, Greg Devrey.

Volusia County Division 1 President John O'Neill is encouraged by progress in the area of membership, which is very good for a new division.

In view of a second division in Broward County, a County Board of Officers was formed with the following officers: President, Martin McAndrew of Division 1; Vice President, Michael Mahon of Division 2; Recording Secretary, Bill McCarthy of Division 2; Treasurer, Ed McCready of Division 1 and Financial Secretary, Bill Maroney of Division 1.

STATE NEWS: New Jersey

Revive - Rebuild - Recruit
The New Jersey AOH State Board is drawing up plans for a statewide membership recruitment effort which will begin in January 1990. Under the direction of Brother Jim Walsh, state organizer, plans are being made to have Hibernian literature tables at every Irish Festival. The State Board is also attempting to establish at least one Division in each of the state's counties. These organizational meetings will be sponsored by the State Board; the counties of Monmouth and Bergen are first on the list. If anyone reading this is a member of an inactive Division and is willing to try to reorganize, please call State President Brian Phillips, evenings, at 201-240-4277. The State Board will help you with hall rental and publicity. The theme of the 1990 drive is REVIVE, REBUILD and RECRUIT. Every Division is urged to engage in outreach efforts throughout the year.

Joe Doherty

New Jersey is proud to boast that 13 of its Congressmen have endorsed C.R.62, which addresses the long plight of Joe Doherty. Hibernians in the state can be proud of the role the Order played in this effort. Only one Congressman is refusing to become a sponsor, Rep. Chris Smith. One of the largest Divisions in the nation is within this district, Mercer County Division 1. The Brothers of Mercer have conducted an intense letter-writing effort and confronted Congressman Smith in a private meeting. The Congressman was provided with extensive information concerning the case of Joe Doherty and strongly urged to become a sponsor of the resolution. The local Division in Mercer has encouraged the formation of a Joe Doherty Committee for Justice which has successfully united the various Irish American groups within Congressman Smith's district in a common and coordinated campaign. Meanwhile, the state's Senators, Bradley and Lautenberg, still need to be persuaded and readers are urged to write to these gentlemen immediately. In a related development AOH State President Brian Phillips has called a meeting of all Irish organizations in New Jersey to discuss the possibility of forming a New Jersey Council of Irish Organizations, to improve communication, cooperation and joint action in areas of mutual concern. If these efforts are successful the Irish community in New Jersey would be given a powerful and effective voice which no politician could ignore.

STATE NEWS: Texas

HUMBLE, TEXAS: The Fifth Texas Biennial State Convention of the AOH was held here on October 28. The proceedings were graced by the presence of National President Michael Coogan and National Director Bill Hines of San Antonio.

State Chaplain, Rev. James Harman, M.S.C., keynoted the convention with a stirring call to examine our mission as an organization — as we examine our relevance in modern times we should keep in mind that the AOH is a part of the Church and we must find our place in the Church. The shortage of clergy was cited as a particular concern, especially in the Southwest.

The convention heard about the research being conducted by State Historian Gerry Moran into the history of the Irish in Texas. The State Board is undertaking publication of the finished work. The convention also heard from National Director Bill Hines on his work on the National Board's anti-defamation campaign.

State President Pat Patton of Houston was reelected for a second term; Dennis Martinez of Dallas was elected vice president; Jim Davin of Houston, secretary and Tim O'Connor of San Antonio, treasurer.

The convention set as the top priority for the next biennium the passage of MacBride legislation. Plans were discussed to introduce legislation in various Texas cities and the next session of the state legislature. The convention also passed a resolution demanding the release and freedom of Joe Doherty, to be forwarded to the Attorney General.

The Rebel and His Pen

"The literature of a nation is spun out of its heart. If you would know Ireland—body and soul—you must read its poems and stories. They are Ireland talking to herself."

—W.B. Yeats

The Irish write a lot, and they talk a lot. To do this the Irish must be great thinkers. From the genes of the past Celtic generations come the thinkers, talkers, and writers of recent years. There is no question, the Irish written word is the talent of Ireland. It must be nourished now as it has been over the centuries.

Many well known Irish writers were also well known for their rebellious, political views. The British government leaders were a bit perplexed with the close bond of rebel/intelligentsia. The brains behind most of the Irish uprisings were the teachers, poets, writers, clergy, publishers, professors, and lecturers.

In the pre-television, pre-radio days the glib Irish orators spread the word to the gatherings of students, peasants, town folk, church goers, and anyone who would listen. Getting a sympathetic crowd to listen was easy in the days of widespread oppression. This was the way it was done in the old days. The newspaper and the pamphlet were the only media, aside from books and talk. The pamphleteers wrote and sold their short political essays and incited the smoldering anger in many an Irish breast.

Translations of many of the old Irish language ballads were the sources of early Irish history. The Irish language did much to preserve the inborn talent. The old literary compositions were written with an intensity of language beauty only the Irish could write—with their perception and expression of life's beauty, love, violence, religious faith, and people passions.

The early Gaelic and the later Anglo-Irish writings combined a poetic tradition unmatched in the world. Legends, myths, themes, rhythms, and literary ideas are similar in some ways to political and social endeavors. The two schools enriched each other in their aims and in their scholarly, learned way of spreading their message.

Many of the ancient Irish language writings have been brought to publication by scholarly translators. Ireland's Frank O'Connor (1903-1966), a well known short story writer, novelist, biographer and translator, was one of the best. O'Connor was imprisoned during the Civil War, 1922-1923, and his experiences with prison and the violence of the times inspired his book, Guest Of The Nation. He was director of the Abbey Theater until 1939 when he began to devote his days to writing and translating. O'Connor is typical of the great Irish literateurs who have brought into our times the historical, legendary records of the ancient Irish, and of the later writings of the Gaelic-Irish of more recent times.

The living Irish poets are known for their liberal-rebellious literature with their more sedate, oblique, socially acceptable way with the words. We read now of the troubles in Derry and Belfast in the verse of the Irish in the North. In not too many years these Celtic bards will have their names in the niches of nationalism—like so many of their forebearers.

The Irish poet reaches way, deep inside of himself for the strong patriotic feelings of the proud Celt. His inner being is one of centuries of hardy life, tyranny, and that immense longing for the Irishmen's cause that has kept the words flowing for countless generations.

Irish poets and writers perpetuate a powerful heritage. They stimulate the Irishman's imagination. Then the Irish do great things. What could be more Irish: a legendary genesis to history; a Celtic emotion to the birth of great things to come.

The path from ancient Irish glory to modern day Derry and Belfast has been hewed through the stones of Erin by the bards, the poets, and the rebel with his powerful pen.

A few of the great ones:

Thomas Davis (1814-1845) Founder of The Nation, a nationalist newspaper, and leader of the Young Ireland political party. His poems and literary works were published in 1846. A great Irish patriot.

Thomas D'Arcy McGee (1825-1868) A well known Irish activist. Forced to flee Ireland. Assassinated in Canada. His collected poems were published in 1869.

John Boyle O'Reilly (1844-1890) An active Fenian. Sentenced to penal servitude in Australia, but escaped to America. He was well published and became editor of The Pilot, a Boston newspaper.

John Keegan Casey (1846-1870) An imprisoned Fenian. He died as a result of brutal treatment. One of the best known Fenian poets.

Fanny Parnell (1854-1882) Sister of Charles Stewart Parnell. Very active in Irish politics. Her poetry inspired Irish freedom lovers.

Thomas McDonagh (1878-1916) Executed in Dublin, Easter Week, 1916. Great Irish writer and poet. Well known for his literary work.

Padraic Pearse (1879-1916) Executed in Dublin, Easter Week, 1916. Wrote in both Irish and English. Teacher, poet, orator, dramatist. Founded St. Enda's School. Well published and well known Irish martyr.

Joseph Plunkett (1887-1916) Executed in Dublin, Easter Week, 1916. A well published poet and Irish martyr.

All things must come to pass as one

So hope should never die, There is no height or bloody might That a freeman can't defy. There is no source or foreign force Can break a man who knows, That his free will no thing can kill

And from that, freedom grows. Bobby Sands (1954-1981)

Phases of Irish History

By MICHAEL McCORMACK, National Historian

We're Finally Underway. It took a while, but we can finally report contacts throughout the country. We've got State, County, and Division Historians on our monthly mailing list; we're getting news of historical projects across the Hibernian Nation; we're receiving stories and anecdotes of a historical nature; and even information on historical sites is coming in. Thank you brothers, thank you. Now let's share what we've got.

1. Landmarks & Legends. Did you know that all who died with Gen. Custer are not buried at Little Big Horn, Montana? The final resting place of Brevet Col. Myles Keogh is in Auburn, N.Y. Keogh was an Irish immigrant from Co. Carlow who served in the Irish Brigade during the American Civil War. He earned battlefield commissions to the rank of Major for conspicuous bravery at Gettysburg and Lt. Col. for the same reason at the battle of Dallas, Georgia. He later served on the American frontier, and was a Company Commander with the predominantly Irish 7th Cavalry when they met their fate at Little Big Horn.

Prior to his death, Keogh had spent much leave time with the Martin family of Auburn, N.Y., whose daughter Cornelia was especially fond of the daring young cavalry officer. Two years after his death, Miss Martin had Keogh's remains removed from Montana and reinterred in her family's plot in Auburn's Fort Hill cemetery. It is said that Miss Martin placed flowers on the grave every day until she too passed away in 1927. That was over 60 years ago, yet fresh flowers are still placed on the grave daily, and no one knows by whom. I thought of that as I stood looking at the fresh blue flowers—blue as a Union Army uniform—laid before the stone which was engraved:

Sleep Soldier! Still in honored rest your truth and valor wearing; the bravest are the tenderest, the loving are the daring
National Secretary Tom McNabb was kind enough to show us the memorial during the recent New York State Convention, and a postscript was provided by Jean Rademacher. She noted that the sole survivor of Custer's Last Stand was a horse named Comanche, which has often been mistakenly identified as belonging to General Custer. The truth of the matter is that Comanche was Myles Keogh's horse, and after Little Big Horn it was made an honorary Colonel, and never ridden again. When the horse died in 1890, it was stuffed and is now on display at the University of Kansas. And in Auburn, the citizens still stage an annual Pentathlon called The Great Myles Keogh Race.

New Historians. While some of us old warhorses have retained the office of historian over the course of several terms and at several levels, we must not lose sight of the fact that occasionally new men are selected to join our ranks. At this time of the year many Divisions are selecting their Historians for the upcoming year, and in more than a few, he will be a first timer. To the men who will be selecting, I urge careful consideration. Our founding fathers made the Office of Historian the highest appointed office in the Order since they knew its importance. A Historian can be a valuable asset to a Division: good Historians can inspire membership and reduce dropouts; they provide background information on cultural activities, commemorative events, monument dedications and holiday observances; and, when MacBride Legislation was being sought in many State assemblies, it was our Historians who researched the contributions of the Irish to that particular State and made that information available to those in deliberation.

Therefore, I urge you to select a good Historian—one who is knowledgeable or, at least, trainable; and most of all, one who is sincere in his desire to spread the glorious history of our forefathers to any and all who will listen.

To those who aspire to the office of Historian at any level, I welcome your interest and offer the full resources of this office. If you need help, contact the Historian at the next level (County or State), and if they can't help, please write to me. Whether for monthly readings or special projects, I invite you to join a nationwide network of Irish Historians who draw upon one another, and whose combined efforts publicize the great history of our people.

2. Monthly Profiles. The monthly "Profiles in Patriotism" are mailed to any Historian requesting them. To keep costs down, in February, 1990, the mailing list will be purged and names will be automatically dropped unless a form 9 is received confirming reappointment or indicating a new Historian. Those Historians wishing to be added to the list need only to send a Form 9 confirming his or her position as Historian to Mike McCormack, 37 Harrison Ave., Centereach, NY 11720. Thanks to Gerry Moran the Profiles are now going to the Hibernians in LaPorte, Texas; also thanks to Gerry Curran for bringing them to the AOH in Columbus, Ohio; William Harrington to the AOH in Helena, Montana; John Garrah to the AOH in Honesville, Pa.; and Marie McLaughlin to the LAOH in New York City. Are you getting yours?

3. Holland Project. Sincere thanks to the New Jersey State Board who joined the Massachusetts and New York Boards in contributing to the Holland project at their State Convention. Thanks also to Pat Bergin of San Diego for his particular help in the project. John P. Holland of Co.

PA Update on MacBride Bills

A hearing was held on September 19, 1989 by the Senate Finance Committee, chaired by Sen. Gibson E. Armstrong, R-Lancaster County, on S.B.'s 581 through 585, sponsored by Sen. Mike Fisher, R-Upper St. Clair, Sen. Mike Dawida, D-Pittsburgh (member Ct. 9) Sen. Joe Rocks, R-Philadelphia, and attended by various Irish organizations throughout the state. Also present were Hibernians Joe Roche, Bernie Bailey, Jim Caldwell, Leo Sweeney, and Bill Coggin, to present our side of this important issue.

We won our case against the British lobbyists paid by the British Government to present their lies to the effect that there is no discrimination in the work place in Northern Ireland. Every instrument of the Northern Ireland government has been used for 65 years to impoverish the Catholic/Nationalist community and to force them to migrate.

The Senate Finance Committee will evaluate each side's testimony and hopefully a full senate hearing will be held. We think we have the necessary votes for passage. Sen. Eugene Scanlon, D-Northside, has signed on, and Gov. Casey stated he will sign the legislation when it reaches his desk.

Remember, our goal is not divestiture; on the contrary, we will be overjoyed if Americans invest in any part of Ireland—if, and only if, employers treat all employees equitably. If economic development in Northern Ireland must be made at the expense of fairness on the job, we want no part of it.

STATE NEWS: Michigan

The Michigan State Board acted as host for a two city visit of the Ohio Degree Team, in mid October. State President James O'Kelly initiated the program after noting that it had been six years since the Major Degrees of the Order has been offered to the Brothers in Michigan. A Saturday evening ceremony in Flint, under the direction of Thomas O'Sullivan, drew members from Traverse City and Grand Rapids along with Flint.

The next day, a Sunday morning, a gathering at Detroit's Hibernian Hall drew Brothers from the tri-counties and was overseen by Wayne

Co. President Richard Louster and Past State President Kevin Murphy. In all, 42 members took part in the program. National President Michael Coogan, Degree Team leader, spoke after both ceremonies on the future of the Order, in light of the lessons learned, and urged the newly Degreed members to work to insure that more Brothers in Michigan follow their example and receive the Major Degrees.

Patrick Ryan Division member, Jack Derrig, was once again behind the counter as he has the largest Irish restaurant at the 1989 Milwaukee Irish Festival. Jack,

"IT'S A PIECE OF CAKE," states National President Michael Coogan as he slaves over a hot grill under the able eye of Chef Jack Derrig at the Milwaukee Irish Festival.

STATE NEWS: Massachusetts

Pro Life March On Washington

SUNBURY, MA: Plans are announced for the forthcoming Pro-Life March on Washington on January 22, 1990. All will gather for the Hibernian Mass at 9:00 A.M. at St. Joseph's Church on Monday morning January 22nd, following which we will proceed to the Senate and House Office Building to lobby our elected representatives.

Lunch will be held at Irish Times from 11:30 to 12:30.

We will meet Jim Herlihy (703-536-8628) at the Southeast Corner of the ellipse. Jim will hold high the Tri Color and at 1:00 P.M. we will march down Pennsylvania Avenue. The march will be led by National President Michael Coogan and Vice President Mike Carroll.

A reception will be held at The Embassy Suite Hotel in Crystal City on Sunday evening at 8:00 P.M. for President Michael Coogan. We request a good turnout for the reception and the march. After the march, all Hibernians are urged to return to their respective states to continue this never ending battle for The Right to Life.

20,000 Walk For Life in Boston

BOSTON, MA: On October 1, 1989, Pro-Life Sunday, a Walk for Life was held here, led by Archbishop Bernard Cardinal Law. There were over 20,000 participants.

Hibernian presence was led by National Vice-President Mike Carroll and State Presidents Joe McHugh and Tricia Lamprey. Over fifty Hibernians from Lynn, Lawrence, Marlboro and Watertown AOH Divisions participated.

along with fellow Ryan Division members Charles French, Jim Haggerty, Thomas Moriarty and National Director John McInerney, served up his "Derrig's Deli Delights" to the thousands who attended this premier midwest Irish event, over August 18-20. Visitors to the back room included Division President Roger Weist, Cleveland, and National President Michael Coogan, Dayton, who proved he could definitely "stand the heat in the kitchen!"

Both the Art Walton Division 1, Livingston County, under President Jack Murphy and the Genesee County Division, under President Patrick Murphy, reported complete success with their late summer charity golf outings. The Stephen Walsh annual picnic found AOH/LAOH members and friends from across the tri-counties gathering for a long day's fun and games to benefit Detroit's Hibernian Hall.

President John Cahill acted, not only as host, but also part of the entertainment for the day. John also chaired the Charity Ball which this year honored both the late Detroit Mayor Jerome Cavanaugh and Father Duffy/Sister Mary of Saint Patrick's Social Center. Long time member Clifford Sullivan received his AOH life membership that night and all in attendance agreed that the Charity Ball was the best in recent years.

Finally, State President James O'Kelly and the Michigan State Board co-hosted, with the State LAOH, a Mass for deceased members. Held on November 5, over one hundred Brothers and Sisters were in attendance at the Hibernian Hall AOH/LAOH members and friends for the event, which was co-celebrated by both State chaplains.

Voices Ring Out

From a Boston Hibernian, to the Prime Minister of Ireland, to a member of the British House of Commons, voices are supporting the validity of the MacBride Principles in solving the omnipresent problem of discrimination against the Catholics in Northern Ireland.

Joseph A. McHugh, President Massachusetts AOH State Board Addressing Boston City Council

The British Government, by its Government of Ireland Act of 1920, violently and undemocratically partitioned Ireland — thus violating its essential and inalienable right to be One Nation.

The new, artificial area carved out by the British and now known as Northern Ireland, was created for a two-fold reason: (1) to ensure the continuation of British rule in that part of Ireland; and (2) to establish their loyalists friends (the one million Protestants) in a permanent position of supremacy.

Northern Ireland was created to be a sectarian state. That's its purpose. That's the very reason for its existence. Since the 1920's, the Catholics of Northern Ireland have been systematically discriminated against in every area of life — especially in employment.

What compounded the tragedy is that the plight of the Catholics was ignored by London, Dublin, and Washington. Since 1920 Catholics have been treated as second class citizens in their own country, and the world ignored them. The problem in Northern Ireland could have been solved years ago — peacefully and non-violently — if people with power and influence had not turned their backs.

America, which was supposed to be standing up for all sorts of just causes around the world, was silent about the oppression of Catholics in Northern Ireland, so as not to offend its ally, England. Moreover, U.S. investment dollars have been directly subsidizing anti-Catholic discrimination in Northern Ireland. As such, it is the single largest subsidizer of anti-Catholic discrimination in Northern Ireland.

There are 25 U.S. companies doing business in Northern Ireland and many of them are automatically caught up in the systematic pattern of anti-Catholic discrimination in employment. Isn't it sad that American companies do not stand out from the rest, and take a principled stand against anti-Catholic discrimination? The reason U.S. companies have not done so, is because there is no corporate code of conduct.

Well, now there is, in the form of the MacBride Principles. The MacBride Principles represent a perfect way for Americans to stop U.S. dollars subsidizing anti-Catholic discrimination in Northern Ireland.

The reaction of the British Government is exactly the same as all other Governments when confronted with discrimination — they first deny it; then they suggest remedies will only further harm the victims of discrimination. That is the classic mind-set of discriminators the world over.

There is another well known device discriminators use the world over. That is to produce members of

Peace on Earth

As the holy days of Christmas draw near, we in America thank God that our nation is at peace; and owing to the crumbling of the Russian empire, our men in the services can look forward with hope to a period of lasting serenity and peace.

It is amazing how fast the Russian block is being dismantled just as it is shocking to behold how a handful of individuals with a disciplined army and police force can virtually imprison millions of people within their country's borders.

These despots, who live daily in fear themselves, were blind to the erosion mounting from within, an erosion akin to termites eating out the core of a tree, a slow but steady process.

We Americans are protected from such erosion by the safeguards built into our republic, namely the Constitution, Bill of Rights, and our three separate branches of government — Executive, Legislative and Judicial. These institutions assure that we will remain a land of laws, highly resistant to corrosion by power-hungry men or foreign governments.

Yet our congressional branch has removed the political exception clause from our extradition laws as they apply to Ireland — at the behest of the British. Concomitantly, our judicial arm holds Joe Doherty seven years now, against the rulings of our courts — at England's behest. And the executive branch treats Ireland unequally as a nation compared to England.

Let us hope that the east Europeans, free at last, will find peace on earth, and through their reopened churches and synagogues, will not only give thanks to God, but petition Him that the oppressed Catholics of Northern Ireland may some day also find peace on earth.

Remarks of Mr. Oliver Kearney of Co. Antrim, Ireland First Recipient of the AOH Sean MacBride Bi-Annual Award

Presented at the National President Michael J. Coogan, Sr.'s Testimonial Dinner
Dayton, Ohio — October 21, 1989

Honourable National President, Reverend Fathers and Members of the National Order of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America; Honoured Guests and Members of the Dais; Brothers and Sisters of the Ancient Order of Hibernians; Friends.

It is an immeasurable privilege for anyone of Irish blood to be honoured by this noble and historic Order which, for over 150 years, has remained dedicated to the cause of Irish Freedom. Your Order has held that faith through the Great Famine, the Irish Land Wars, the Young Ireland and the Fenian insurrections; through the Easter Rising, the War of Independence and the bitter tragedy of the Irish Civil War.

Truly you are a Faithful People, and I salute your courage and your steadfast faithfulness, on behalf of the Silent People of Ireland who have no voice — and whose Mighty Voice you have become.

I can conceive of no greater honour for any Irish man or woman, than to stand before you, Citizens of the great American Republic, Children of the Greater Irish Family, to be bestowed with this award in the name of a man whose entire life was a model of service to the Irish Nation and Human Race — Dr. Sean MacBride.

In accepting this award, I want to pay a special tribute to that great and courageous lady, my wife Brigid, and our five children, who have devoted so much of their own lives to supporting and encouraging me in my endeavours. For it is from within the families of Ireland that the courage and strength has sprung to continue to resist that legacy of colonial servitude which has been inherited by each generation of Irish children for almost a thousand years.

It was that legacy which was inherited by the young Sean MacBride when, as a child of fourteen, he ran helplessly behind the prison van which was transporting to gaol his widowed mother, because of her resistance to the colonial ruler. As she was taken away, she watched through the bars a lonely child standing in a Dublin street, orphaned by the imprisonment of his mother, who was denied the right even to sign a cheque for the child's upkeep; and by the death of his father, executed two years earlier for his part in the Easter Rising.

That was Sean MacBride's childhood inheritance — the legacy of the prison van and the firing squad; the legacy of colonial oppression, of economic exploitation, of discrimination and of emigration. It has been the inheritance of Irish children in every generation; of many of your own parents and grandparents; even of some of you here present tonight.

It is the inheritance of Irish children today.

It is time that this agony ended in Ireland. It is time for the children of future generations in Ireland to be offered a new and more noble inheritance of Justice, Peace and Freedom in their own homeland.

The creation of that new and more noble inheritance was Sean MacBride's life-goal — first as a young revolutionary soldier, making war against a colonial army on his Nation's soil; later as a world-renowned constitutional lawyer, international statesman, and champion of Human Rights.

Yet he, who risked liberty and life as a revolutionary soldier, understood that the courage and self-sacrifice of a pitifully few brave men and women, however dedicated, could not ultimately prevail over the ruthless power of England's grim colonial infestation of Ireland; or the cowardice, treachery and malice of native Quislings, whose slave mentality bound them in past generations, and binds them today, to the servitude of Ireland's bullying neighbour.

And he recognised that the division, the exploitation and the servitude of his people is deeply rooted in the preservation of the power and privilege of any class or creed or party who secure their self-interest through the maintenance of the Status Quo of Irish Partition and England's mastery of Ireland.

Therefore, in the closing years of his life, he forged a powerful instrument for justice and peace, which is his Personal Legacy to all future generations of the children of Ireland; which is his Personal Legacy to the children of the Greater Irish Family in the United States of America.

His Personal Legacy — the Legacy of Sean MacBride — is the MacBride Principles for Northern Ireland. For the MacBride Principles challenge the very basis of English rule in Ireland — a rule founded in sectarianism, inequality and division.

England can certainly create new classes of privilege and self-interest; she cannot create universal equality and social justice in any part of Ireland, least of all in that statelet which she governs through the rifles of her modern-day Black & Tans; she created that statelet as a permanent guarantee of division, anti-Catholic discrimination, and the domination of one section of the Irish Race over another.

Therefore, if England were ever to commit herself to promoting full equality in the miserable little statelet through which, today, she exercises her colonial control of the Irish Nation, she would already have decided that Partition could no longer be sustained. She would already have decided that her corrupting influence must finally, after a thousand years, be withdrawn from Ireland — that it was Time to Go, and permit the inhabitants of the Irish Homeland to build a new nation for future generations.

That analysis will, of course, be labelled harsh and imbalanced by the smooth-faced, smooth-tongued Englishmen, who traverse every corner of the United States, proclaiming in glossy propaganda brochures the good things which they will do tomorrow to promote equality in North-East Ireland. It will also be dismissed by Redmondite politicians and their confidantes in the Irish Foreign Service, who proclaim England's Honest Brokerage in the Irish War. Let them then consider the judgement of a very honourable, and noble English gentleman: —

On 1 December 1980, Dr. John Austin Baker, Anglican Theologian and

Chaplain to the British House of Commons, declared in Westminster Abbey "... England seized Ireland for its own military benefit. It planned Protestant settlers there to make it strategically secure. It penalized the native Irish and their Catholic religion; and then when it could no longer hold onto the whole island, it kept back part of it to be a home for the settlers' descendants, a non-viable solution from which Protestants have suffered as much as anyone. Our injustice created the situation; and by constantly repeating that we will maintain it so long as the majority wish it, we actively inhibit Protestant and Catholic from working out a new future together. This is the root of the violence. ..."

It was from that historic injustice, perpetrated through generation after generation that the young Sean MacBride inherited the legacy of terrorism and violence of a mother in a prison van and a father in a prison grave. It is from that historic injustice that the children of Ireland today inherit the same legacy of terrorism and violence.

And I believe, as Sean MacBride believed, that it is the inescapable moral duty of each one of us to oppose with all the means at our command, the exercise of such terrorism and violence for political ends in Ireland today.

For Irish children of this generation inherit the terrorism of random death by plastic baton rounds fired from armoured cars in the name of law and order. They inherit the terrorism of the dawn raid, the prison van, the shattered home, the weeping wife or mother. They inherit the terrorism of the Death Squad, in uniform and out of uniform. (When I hear Senator Edward Kennedy today announce his discovery that Crown Forces in Ireland are comparable to the Death Squads of El Salvador, I question from whom the man has obtained his information belatedly for the last 20 years).

Our children in this generation inherit the terrorism of systematic torture in the interrogation cells; the bullet in the back for the Sunday Afternoon Gaelic footballer, and the bullet in the back of the neck for the wounded prisoner; the terrorism of British Intelligence-directed assassination of the Civil Rights lawyer before the eyes of his wife and children — after authority for that foul deed has been proclaimed in the English Parliament.

Irish children today inherit the violence of structured and endemic discrimination and economic inequality; the violence of a slave economy and the enforced emigration of whole generations of Irish youth; the violence of subservient politicians and churchmen fulsomely pleading for innocent Irishmen and women in the Dead Cells of English prisons, convicted under torture by a racist judicial system — while simultaneously extraditing young Irish people into the jaws of that same ruthless and racist system of English lawmaking for the Irish.

The seeds of violent revolution have been sown in Ireland in every generation, because peaceful revolution has been made impossible through the exercise of colonial terrorism and violence in defence of that historic injustice so precisely identified by John Austin Baker in Westminster Abbey.

And now it is time to invoke the Legacy of Sean MacBride to make peaceful revolution in Ireland possible, and to render violent revolution redundant. It is time to recognise the democratic rights and freedoms of the Irish Nation which have been denied by England for 25 generations of brutal colonial strife and suffering. There will no peace in Ireland until those democratic rights are given full recognition by the nations of the world, and most particularly, by Ireland's bullying neighbour.

That generous and dedicated American Friend of Irish Freedom, Judge Daniel Cohalan, addressing a meeting in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, 70 years ago on 23 March 1919, to further the cause of Irish Independence, issued this most prophetic declaration "... There will be neither a just nor a durable nor a permanent peace unless the people of Ireland who have set up (an) Independent Irish Republic receive from all the nations of the earth the recognition to which they are entitled, and unless, with the making of (world) peace we have an opportunity of saluting this latest and newest of Republics as a sister republic of this great nation of America."

You proud Americans, who for 150 years have been the Honour Guard of Irish Freedom in the United States, have the right, you have the duty, and you have the means to make that noble dream of saluting a sister Republic within the commonwealth of nations, become a reality in this generation.

You have the right because you are sprung from that ancient ethnic root as Sean MacBride and are justly proud to be called Irish; sprung from the same constitutional root as George Washington and Jonathan Dayton, and are justly proud to be called American — offspring of that honourable tradition of American constitutional liberty and historic commitment to Irish Freedom. Heirs to that tradition, you are called upon from Ireland almost daily, by social, cultural, political and religious organisations to contribute your wealth to the homeland. You are asked to invest in Ireland; to financially support political parties and social development in Ireland; to contribute your taxation in Foreign Aid to Ireland.

You have the duty as people who love America, because the continued colonial exploitation and abuse of Human Rights in Ireland is eating away at those very Constitutional Rights which you treasure. When a young man who has never committed a crime in this country, and who has been safeguarded by every level of your judicial system, languishes in prison without charge or trial for seven years — do you suppose that your own children are forever immune from such a perversion of justice?

When your sacred American Right of Freedom of Speech is eroded through denial to you of the opportunity to hear elected politicians from Ireland address you — do you suppose that your own political system is secure from such arbitrary censorship by faceless public servants?

When your State Legislatures, your City Councils and your media are infested daily by British Intelligence agencies, pouring out millions of dollars to subvert your political process and your public communications; when your friends and neighbours are intimidated and victimised in their homes and workplaces by the Federal Bureau of Intelligence because they are exercising their constitutional freedoms as American citizens; when your State Department has become, like the Foreign Service of the Irish Republic, an echo chamber for British Information Services — do you suppose that the voice which proclaimed "WE THE PEOPLE" cannot be silenced?

England's dirty little war in Ireland, with all the corruption of Human Rights and political freedoms which it involves, is being fought at this very moment on your doorstep in Main-street America; and if you stand aside and ignore it, you do so at your peril.

You have the means to bring the Longest War of almost a thousand years to a just and peaceful conclusion in this generation, for you have been endowed by one of Ireland's greatest sons with a Legacy of peaceful, non-violent, moral action to engage your political and economic power as citizens of the American Republic in promoting equality and social justice in Ireland.

Under the wise and selfless leadership of one of your former National Presidents, Joe Roche, and his National Board, your historic organisation has spear-headed the building of generous and dedicated unity of purpose within the Irish American Family and kindred ethnic groups all across the United States. That same selflessness, and generosity of leadership, embracing in one common bond of American idealism, Fenian and Celtic societies, Brehon Lawyers, Political Education committees, Protestant Action groups, Unity Conference, Irish Northern Aid chapters, American Irish Congress and cultural and religious organisations, has been renewed and strengthened by successive National Leaderships under Nick Murphy and your current National President, Mike Coogan. So that, today, this Ancient Order of Hibernians in America stands at the centre of a powerful coalition of unity of political action in the cause of Irish Freedom.

In the forefront of this non-violent, moral struggle for social justice, have been the women in America, from Maine to Florida and Minnesota to Illinois; from New Jersey to Pennsylvania and California to this State of Ohio where we meet tonight. From East Coast to West Coast, American women have felt empowered by the Legacy of Sean MacBride to lead the struggle for Justice, Peace and Freedom in Ireland. (Daughters of the American Republic, your compassion and commitment to justice has renewed Hope in the hearts of a people who had almost abandoned hope.)

Already the achievements have been remarkable. Twelve states and as many cities have enshrined the MacBride Principles into law, and are now commencing to implement the sanctions available to them (while Democracy was cruelly violated in California to serve the interests of England).

Through the single-minded dedication of one man, Gerry Coleman, the International Fund for Ireland was catapulted into critical scrutiny and control at the highest levels of Congress. Many Presidential Candidates have felt compelled to respect the pre-election Forum called by the National Leadership of Irish America; and politicians at City, State and Congressional levels have begun to recognise the Mighty Voice being raised across this Republic by a united and organised Irish American Family.

Anglo-Irish Conference of security material such as photographs have been introduced, and it will in future be an offense to retain such documents without authority, and all serving personnel are required to surrender any such material. These rules apply to personnel of the armed forces, including reservists, who are serving or have served for an appreciable period in Northern Ireland.

— Improvements have been made to the process of screening new recruits to the UDR and transferees from other army units, and for follow-up action such as re-vetting. Among the new measures is the establishment of a special unit for screening in the UDR (Ulster Defence Regiment), manned by the regular army. Any form of association between members of illegal paramilitary organizations, of whatever persuasion, or other association incompatible with membership of the security forces, is totally unacceptable to the British Government.

— Very strict controls have been introduced governing both the issue of plastic baton rounds to the UDR and their use. Specific and personal authorization by the Battalion Commanding Officer is required for their issue to individual patrols. In addition, the British side are considering a possible role for the RUC in this process.

It is the Royal Ulster Constabulary which has the primary responsibility for the maintenance of law and order in Northern Ireland: the armed forces, including the regular army and UDR, operate in support of the police and only for so long as the threat from terrorism makes that support necessary. In this regard it was agreed that a working group of officials should make early recommendations, in accordance with the Review, on further effective development of the policy of ensuring as rapidly as possible that, save in the most exceptional circumstances, there should be a police presence in all operations which involve direct contact between the armed forces and the community.

The British side emphasized that in their operations the security forces would at all times take account of their relationship with the community. There will be further exchanges at future Conferences on the way in which this objective is being achieved.

The Irish side stressed that the events under discussion had raised general issues going beyond individual cases. The widespread concern raised by these issues could best be met by a comprehensive enquiry into all issues affecting relations between the security forces (in particular the UDR) and the community. It was their intention to return to this proposal at a later Conference, after the Stevens enquiry had been completed. The British for their part disagreed with the Irish analysis of the problem.

The Irish side made clear that they objected to and remained firmly opposed to the issue of plastic baton rounds to members of the UDR under any circumstances.

The British side expressed their disappointment that it had not proved possible to prosecute Patrick Ryan. The Irish side stated that the DPP (Director of Public Prosecutions), who is completely independent in the performance of his functions, has stated his clear conclusion that the material made available to him was not sufficient to justify the initiation of a prosecution in this case.

Irish Ministers raised the case of the Guilford Four, welcomed the terms of the statement of the British DPP (Director of Public Prosecutions) and set out their views on the implications for other cases. In particular the Maguire family and the Birmingham Six.

In the course of the Conference, Ministers discussed the current security situation in Northern Ireland. They affirmed their determination to continue their close cooperation under the Agreement to combat terrorism from whichever side of the community it may come.

The Conference welcomed the appointment of the new Board of the International Fund for Ireland and expressed its gratitude to the outgoing Chairman and members. Ministers looked forward to further efforts directed in particular at the most disadvantaged areas, and the development of cross-border projects.

Ministers also had a discussion on current issues of cross-border economic cooperation and of the implementation of the conclusions of the Review of the Working of the Conference. They agreed to resume fuller discussion of these and a number of other issues at the next meeting of the Conference, which will be held next month.

CONGRESSMAN REVERSES POSITION ON DOHERTY

Dear Mr. Gilligan:

I hope you will be pleased to hear that I have decided to support and cosponsor H.R. 62, which urges the U.S. Attorney General to release Joe Doherty on bail, and to rehear his case. The letters and briefing materials that you sent to my aide Nancy Roman were helpful in making this difficult decision.

Thank you for your interest.

SHAW SIGNS ON TO HCR 82

Congressman E. Clay Shaw, Jr.
440 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

November 14, 1989

Dear Congressman Shaw:

I want to take this opportunity to thank you for becoming a co-sponsor of HCR 82. I know that you had many reservations about supporting this resolution; however, your support for this resolution can only be viewed as support for the sacred judicial system of our country.

Recent events in Britain such as the release of the Guildford 4 and hopefully the soon-to-be release of the Birmingham 6 indicate a decayed judicial system that depends on paid informants and perjury to dispense justice. Our justice system must never decay to that level, nor should it be influenced by foreign powers.

Let me assure you that this organization will continue to speak out against the injustices in Northern Ireland, and we will continue to look for peace with justice in a united Ireland. The British government has the ability to mount and sustain a propaganda campaign in the United States and has been able to keep the American public unaware of the extent of the ongoing tragedies which are perpetuated upon the Irish Catholic people by the British government.

Again, many thanks for your support and I look forward to our meeting in Fort Lauderdale.

BRITISH SECURITY LEAKS ADDRESSED

Dear Mr. Henshaw:

I am writing to let you know that I have introduced legislation in the Congress concerning the collusion between British security forces in Northern Ireland and illegal paramilitary groups.

I have been disturbed by the disclosures over the past few months which indicate that British security has leaked information to illegal paramilitary groups which undertake acts of violence against the Catholic minority. Moreover, I am appalled that the United States government has failed to speak publicly on this issue.

Therefore, on Tuesday, October 31, I introduced H.R. 3546 in the House of Representatives which does the following:

1) Makes a policy statement by the Congress deploring all violence in Northern Ireland.

2) Urges the President to call upon the British government to halt cooperation with paramilitary groups and to establish a judicial inquiry into the killings of civilians by security forces.

3) Imposes a statutory ban on sales of defense articles and crime control equipment by the United States government or corporations to the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) and the Ulster Defense Regiment (UDR). There is currently a policy banning sales to the RUC, but it can be reversed anytime on an administrative decision. The proposed legislation would put the ban on sales to both the RUC and the UDR in law.

4) Requires the Department of State to report to the Foreign Affairs Committee in a classified and unclassified form on cooperation between United Kingdom security forces and militias and paramilitary groups in Northern Ireland.

It is important that the U.S. government be forced to address this issue which it has failed to adequately do so far. Equally important, the legislation sends a strong signal to the United Kingdom that the American Congress is carefully watching its activities in the North and deplores the collusion with the illegal paramilitaries.

As a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, I will work hard to get hearings on this measure. I will be working to gather additional cosponsors for the bill and would welcome any assistance that you or your organizations might lend in securing additional cosponsors. You will be pleased to know that Representatives Ackerman, Fish, Gilman, Manton and Morrison joined me as original sponsors of the legislation.

I look forward to working for the adoption of H.R. 3546 and welcome any assistance you might offer to move this legislation forward. Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions or further concerns on this or other issues of mutual interest.

EMOTIONAL HATE

Dear Editor:

Speaking of creative approaches to the human rights abuses in Ulster, I believe Collins is thinking in such a manner, proposing the process of dialogue to eventually enable the Irish nation to heal and reconcile herself. That process will only be successful if the United States government takes acts of violence against the Catholic minority. Moreover, I am appalled that the United States government has failed to speak publicly on this issue.

Therefore, on Tuesday, October 31, I introduced H.R. 3546 in the House of Representatives which does the following:

DEAD-ENDED U.S. POLICY CONTINUES

Mr. Daniel P. Dougherty
Elmhurst, New York

Dear Mr. Dougherty:

I am replying to your letter to Secretary Baker regarding U.S. policy toward Ireland.

The United States advocates peaceful solutions to the political, economic, and social issues facing Northern Ireland. We believe such solutions are possible today and support the Anglo-Irish Agreement which states, "any change in the status of Northern Ireland would only come about with the consent of a majority of the people of Northern Ireland." As tangible evidence of our commitment to peaceful and just solutions, the United States has pledged $130 million to the International Fund for Ireland which seeks to promote economic development and reconciliation between Unionists and Nationalists.

We strongly support efforts to promote equal opportunity and to protect human rights in Northern Ireland. We oppose terrorism in all forms and from all quarters. Individuals convicted of murder or other serious offenses, such as Joseph Doherty, should be returned to the jurisdiction where they were convicted. As in the case of Gerry Adams, we oppose admitting to the United States those who support terrorism.

The U.S. Government can play a supportive role in the search for solutions to Northern Ireland's problems. However, the people of Ireland and the United Kingdom must determine Ireland's future.

Margaret DeB. Tutwiler
Ass't Sec'y for Public Affairs and Department Spokesman

We can influence and speed the healing and reconciliation process in Ireland. Rather than calling ourselves "Boston Irish" or "Cleveland Irish," we must become stronger in our unity and become the "Irish-in-America."

Doesn't it strike you as odd that while the "Iron Curtain" appears to be falling we seem to be no closer to Irish unity? While my intent is not to be self-critical I think I recognize that one factor escaped us when Crown forces divided Ireland and her people. That same factor escapes us today. We did not, nor do we today, recognize our power. We are only now beginning to recognize it.

It's true that we are divided by distance but those borders are non-existent when we do get together as the Irish-in-America. Charles Stewart Parnell believed that we would never unite until we reverted to our old traditional color, blue.

I envision a day in Ireland when all her people who support the process of dialogue wear blue as a sign of solidarity against human rights violations and the resultant violence. This Day of Reconciliation would be a sign for all Irish who support the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

This vision also includes the Irish-in-America wearing blue — a day when we, too, pledge to reconcile any of our differences, or at least attempt to. A day when the Irish families of Ireland would realize a life that promises safety, health and prosperity... a life free of human rights violations, hate and violence. It begins with us.

THORNBURGH IMPORTUNED REGARDING DOHERTY

Dear Attorney General Thornburgh:

On behalf of the 1.3 million residents of Suffolk County, I write to urge you to reconsider your decision regarding Joseph Patrick Doherty's case.

Mr. Doherty has been incarcerated longer than any other prisoner in the history of New York's Metropolitan Correctional Center. He has been neither charged nor convicted of any crime here. Yet the government wants to return him to the United Kingdom, where he is sure to face political reprisals, possibly even death.

In 1984, the Honorable Judge John E. Sprizzo of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York denied a request by the United Kingdom's government for extradition. Judge Sprizzo wrote that the facts in the case "present the political exception in its most classic form."

During the past six years, other federal and immigration judges have consistently ruled in Mr. Doherty's favor, yet your office continues to deny him a hearing on his request for political asylum in spite of the fact that the federal Board of Immigration Appeals has ordered you to do so.

We call America "the land of the free." But by imprisoning a man for six years without so much as a formal hearing practically invalidates this claim. Such a denial of elemental due process of law is personally repugnant to me, an elected official who is sworn to uphold the Constitution of the United States of America.

At the bare minimum, Mr. Doherty should be released on bail pending a hearing on his request for political asylum. To deny him this Constitutional guarantee makes a mockery of the provisions of our most fundamental legal document.

I trust that you will promptly remedy this situation and grant Mr. Doherty the hearing our laws entitle him to.

Patrick G. Halpin
Suffolk County Executive

"BRIGAND"

It was they who killed our ancestors
It was they who stole our land
It was they who tried to starve us out
Then they called us "Brigand".
It was they who said we couldn't pray
In our own and ancient voice
They forbade us Mass and The Eucharist too!
Death and torture was our choice.
And for Blessed Mary's name

we died
They didn't like our Queen
And our priests were hunted like the wolf
For bounty, if they be seen.
But they never turned our hearts
From Rome
Nor dashed our dreams of a Gaelic land
And 'til our ancestors sleep in peace
They can call us all
"Brigand".

ERIN GO BRAGH

What shall I say about the Irish...?
The utterly impractical, never predictable,
Sometimes irascible, quite inexplicable Irish?
Strange blend of shyness, pride and conceit.
And stubborn refusal to bow in defeat.
He's spoiling and ready to argue, and fight.
Yet the smile of a child fills his soul with delight.
His eyes are the quickest to well up with tears.
Yet his strength is the strongest to banish your fears
His hate is as fierce as his devotion is grand.
And there's no middle ground on which he will stand.
He's wild and he's gentle, he's good and he's bad.
He's proud and he's humble, he's happy and sad.
He's in love with the ocean, the Earth and the skies.
He's enamored with beauty, wherever it lies.
He's victor and victim, a star and a clod.
But mostly he's Irish... in love with his God?

Tom Egan, Irish Activist, Dies at Home in Vermont

By MICHAEL P. QUINLIN

Tom Egan, who adopted Vermont as his home state in 1963 and who became its leading voice on Irish issues, died quietly at his home in Rutland on Thursday, October 12, 1989 at age 75.

Born in Greenwich Village in New York City, the son of immigrant parents, Egan was a colorful committed man with a flair for entertainment and a feel for the art of politics. He wore many hats during his lifetime: artist, composer, singer, photographer, activist, organizer, candidate, and raconteur, as well as being an insurance salesman and later executive for the John Hancock Insurance Company.

Foremost, Egan cherished his Irish heritage and managed to combine the best characteristics of being Irish and American during his life. He was the spokesman for several Irish organizations in Vermont, including the Michael Davitt division of the AOH, which he revived, the American Irish Political Education Committee, the Irish Cultural Institute, Irish National Caucus and the Irish American Unity Conference.

Egan befriended many Irish politicians and activists during his career. One of Egan's greatest victories was the enactment of the Vermont MacBride Bill last spring — after coming out of retirement last December to lead the lobbying effort in the legislature and the governor's office.

Longtime friend Bill Nevins noted that Egan travelled to New Hampshire earlier in the year to testify for MacBride but also to observe the British opposition. He returned to Vermont prepared to refute the British strategy, which tried to tie MacBride backers with terrorism.

TOM EGAN

Egan's final victory came when Senator Patrick Leahy signed onto the Joe Doherty petition, which Egan and others had worked on vigorously through the summer and fall.

In addition to his Irish connections, Egan had a fierce love for America and for Vermont. He served on General MacArthur's staff in the Philippines, helping to liberate the country in 1945. Years later he returned with his wife to renew friendships with people he met during the war.

In Vermont, Egan designed the state's license plate as part of the bicentennial celebration, and was active in the Rutland Historical Society. He wrote a radio play about the surrender of Cornwallis to George Washington, stressing the role that the Irish and French troops played in the War of Independence.

In true form, Tom Egan helped to orchestrate his own funeral, producing a green-colored program with a Celtic cross, black rose, and Egan clan crest on the cover. Titled 'A Celebration of the Passage to Paradise,' the booklet was a joyous and reflective recap of his life that affirmed his deep faith in God, and his love for his family and friends.

The program also included specific instructions for the mass, which included Tom's favorite biblical passages, and music ranging from Mozart to the Coolin, an old Irish air, on the uilleann pipes." As always, Tom got the last word," said his close friend, Kyran McGrath.

Tom Egan is survived by his wife Peg, his six children, many grandchildren, and hundreds of friends throughout the world. His legacy as a formidable advocate for peace and justice in Northern Ireland is undiminished by his death, and his uncompromising dedication to the betterment of his fellow man will long be remembered by those who knew him. In a tribute, Father Sean McManus of the Irish National Caucus said he was saddened by the death of Tom Egan.

"He was devoted to the cause of Ireland — in a profound, authentic and compassionate way. But what touched me most about Tom, was his extraordinary faith in God. I've never known anyone who more calmly and with such resignation accepted his death. Tom had the heart of a lion, the soul of a saint, and the talent of a remarkably gifted Irishman. May he rest in God's eternal peace," he said.

victimized class or category to speak for them and to help cover up discrimination. In the United States such persons are called "Uncle Tom's". In Ireland we call them "token taigs". (The word "taig" is a derogatory name for Catholics).

And sure enough the British Government has produced a number of "token taigs" and has dispatched them to the U.S. to oppose the MacBride Principles. These "token taigs" have appeared wherever there is pending legislation on the MacBride Principles.

The problem in Ireland could have been solved long ago if people with power and influence had not turned their backs on the plight of Catholics in Northern Ireland. This Council has power and influence. I ask you, please, not to turn your backs. Please support the MacBride Principles legislation and stop Boston dollars from subsidizing anti-Catholic discrimination in Northern Ireland. Thank you.

Prime Minister, Republic of Ireland
Addressing Irish Parliament

"I want to avail myself of this opportunity to state that I fully endorse the MacBride Principles. I welcome the efforts and initiative of concerned Americans who wish to see something done about the chronic discriminatory patterns in employment in Northern Ireland.

The regrettable position is that fourteen years after the imposition of direct rule in Northern Ireland, the situation in most sectors of employment is as bad as it ever was. The purpose of the MacBride Principles is to ensure that if there is to be American investment, if there are to be American orders, the firms con-

New A.O.H. National Holiday

DAYTON, OHIO: At a recent meeting of the National Board, an important resolution was adopted that requires your utmost attention. The Board adopted the Feast of the Holy Innocents (Dec. 28) as a Hibernian Day of Commemoration so that special attention may be given to the slaughter of innocents through abortion.

I ask that in November and December meetings plans be made to participate in anti-abortion activities, promote anti-abortion discussions/seminars, promote and distribute pro-life literature and organizations. You are encouraged to join in prayer services or sponsor liturgies that give special emphasis to the need for all citizens to stand up and speak out against abortion — the ultimate child abuse.

Our National Pro-Life Chairman will answer any questions you may have and will be glad to work with a local Pro-Life Committee to develop an appropriate response for your area. He can be reached by calling:

William S. Farrell
191 Pratt Mill Road
Sudbury, Massachusetts 01776
Tel.: (508) 443-2878

Following is the resolution in full.

Special Day of Commemoration — Feast of the Holy Innocents*

Whereas, the Ancient Order of Hibernians is the oldest and largest Irish Catholic organization in America; and

Whereas, Ireland is one of the few nations to constitutionally protect the unborn against the intrinsic evil of abortion;

Whereas, in 1979 in Washington Pope John Paul II asked all the American faithful to "stand up" and "speak out" against the slaughter of innocents by abortion; and

Whereas, the Board has designated certain days for Hibernian activities celebrating our Irish and Catholic heritage including Commodore Barry Day, St. Patrick's Day, Our Lady of Knock Day; and Now Therefore Be It

Resolved, that the National Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians adopt and designate the Feast of Holy Innocents (1989-Dec. 28) as a Hibernian Special Day of Commemoration and promote its use by all State, County and Division Presidents as a day of action and prayer for the victims of abortion including the unborn child, the father, the mother, and Be It Further

Resolved, that this Feast Day be set aside for Hibernian support for educational forums, fundraising and protest action.

*Feast of Holy Innocents in Catholic Calendar commemorates Herod's slaughter of first-born males in his attempt to kill the newborn king, Jesus.

—Address to Irish Parliament, 7/4/86

The Rt. Hon. Peter Archer, Q.C., M.P.
Remarks in the House of Commons, London

Unemployment among Catholics in Northern Ireland is still twice the rate for Protestants. There is general agreement that much remains to be done, including implementing affirmative action measures, to make existing equal-opportunity legislation effective. The Government has published a green paper proposing further measures, which we, along with many others, regard as inadequate. The Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights has published an interim report on Equality of Opportunity in Employment, making proposals which go significantly further than those of the Government.

We take the view, contrary to suggestions in some quarters, that the principles cannot reasonably be construed as entailing reverse discrimination or a quota system. The findings of a New York court have supported our view, and I have checked personally with Sean MacBride that he did not so intend. No U.K. court has yet tested the issue.

The MacBride Principles simply bring together proposals which are widely accepted as necessary if inequalities are to be redressed. We welcome the contribution they have made to putting equality of opportunity on the political agenda.

DID YOU KNOW ...?

THE GREAT SEAL OF THE UNITED STATES

was designed by Charles Thomson, a native of County Derry, and Secretary of the Continental Congress during its entire existence, from 1774 to 1789. His design of the Great Seal was accepted by the Congress. Of special historical significance is his name on the Declaration of Independence attesting to its authenticity. His last official act, upon instruction of the Congress, was to notify General Washington at Mount Vernon of his election as the first President of the United States, and to accompany him to New York for his inauguration. He resigned from the Congress on July 23, 1789.

His service was such that John Adams described him as "the life of the cause of liberty." After delivering all of the official records of the Congress to his successor in the new Congress, he refused to write his account of the American Revolution, regarding his knowledge as a sacred trust.

THE WHITE HOUSE

was designed by James Hoban who emigrated from County Kilkenny in 1785, after completing studies in Dublin as an architect. His design won a competition for the President's House, later the White House. He supervised its completion and following its destruction by the British in 1814, he directed its reconstruction.

Thereafter, the State and War offices, begun in 1818, were designed by him and he assisted in the building of the U.S. Capitol. He also served as a member of the Washington City Council from its incorporation in 1802 until his death in 1831.

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT

was completed under the direction of Thomas Lincoln Casey, Colonel, U.S. Army Engineers. He devised in 1878 a plan for finishing the construction of the monument which had been started on too shallow a foundation, causing its abandonment for 23 years. He was a member of a Rhode Island Irish family.

Continuing his building career, Casey, now a General, was permitted to remain on duty after retirement age, through an Act of Congress, to direct the completion of the Library of Congress.

The above material about historical events and personalities was provided by James Brennan, Washington, D.C., a member of the American Foundation for Irish Heritage, 2010 National Press Building, Washington, D.C. 20045. (301-585-2048).

THE NATION'S CULTURE

has been enriched and enhanced by the millions of Irish in America where their creative, artistic and intellectual talents were given every opportunity to flourish, unlettered by regard for their social, economic, political or religious condition.

Thatcher Denounced For Suppressing Freedom of Press

GLASGOW, Scotland — The International Federation of Journalists, in a report published in Glasgow last week accused Prime Minister Thatcher, of a "systematic and extensive" attempt to control press freedom in Britain. It said Britain's standing had suffered because of government moves against the media, particularly broadcasters.

The IFJ, which represents 150,000 journalists, said the broadcasting ban on Sinn Fein had the "alarming" consequences of allowing authoritarian countries to justify their own "repressive" actions against the media.

It also ridiculed the government's attempts to ban "spycatcher" and denounce as "shocking" plans for a new Official Secrets Act under which, it said, journalists could be jailed without any proof that they had harmed the public interest.

The report said, "Although many factors play a role, the Thatcher government lays itself open to the charge that it is much less concerned with press freedom than protecting itself."

The IFJ urged that: •Britain should recognize the public's "right to know," rather than just the freedom to express opinions; •Journalists should take action to "stop the rot" and the tabloid press should stop giving ammunition to arguments that the press was irresponsible; •Press freedom in Britain should be guaranteed either by a written constitution, a Freedom of Information Act, or a Bill of Rights.

Message from
Freedom for All Ireland
Committee Chairman

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

Approximately four weeks ago I wrote to all Division Presidents and Chairmen of the Freedom for All Ireland Committee asking for donations towards the Christmas Relief Fund project. As you know, each and every Christmas we send checks to the Green Cross and An Cumana Cabrac for distribution to the families of the prisoners in Northeast Ireland.

Please do your part to make this worthy cause a huge success. I am sure you can think of ways to raise money for donations — from your Division, from Division members, cocktail party, etc.

Make your checks payable to the FFAIC Committee and mail to me at the address below. An Honor Roll of donors to this noble cause will be published in the Hibernian Digest, so please include your Division number when responding.

Thanks to all who have already responded. Your promptness and generosity is deeply appreciated. To those who have not, please remember it is only through the efforts of everybody that this worthy cause will be successful. PLEASE, Act now! I look forward to your cooperation and early reply.

Joseph Patrick Doherty
A Modern Irish Patriot

By MIKE McCORMACK

Patriots are not always past tense. There are patriots today as dedicated to Irish freedom as were Emmet, Tone, or Pearse. The only thing that has changed is our perception of them and their struggle, but before we judge them, we must walk a mile in their shoes. It is also well to remember that Pearse was called a terrorist in his day as was George Washington — until history proved the justice of their struggle.

The state of Northern Ireland was created in 1923 against the vote of the Irish people for a free 32-county Ireland. A portion of Ulster, where descendants of English settlers formed a Loyalist majority, was partitioned from the rest of the nation, and gerrymandered to insure that Loyalist majority. In addition, systematic discrimination was practiced against those who did not subscribe to the Loyalist philosophy to keep them politically and economically powerless so that they would never threaten Loyalist supremacy. Those who didn't subscribe to the Loyalist dogma were termed Nationalists. Mostly Roman Catholic, they were the true Irish who felt that the nation their ancestors had struggled for and that they themselves had fought and voted for should have been created. They became victims of a discrimination aimed at forcing large numbers to emigrate, thereby insuring the Loyalists' majority. And until the 1960s that is exactly what happened.

Joseph Doherty was born in that turbulent state on January 20, 1955. A boy from Belfast, he had no childhood as we know it in America, and clearly had no future. He heard the hateful dialogue of Paisley-like preachers who swore in the name of Christ Crucified that Catholics were traitors and devils; he saw the Royal Ulster Constabulary turn a blind eye as Loyalist mobs burned his friends out of their homes simply because they were Catholic; and he felt the pain of the crying mothers and wives whose husbands and sons were shot dead for no other reason than to intimidate the 'croppys' to lie down. As a boy grows to a man, the influence of his environment shapes his destiny, and while Joe's religious background kept him from violence, there was resentment building in his young heart against the injustices visited upon his people. The innocence of youth and the pride that is such an inherent part of the Irish character would not let him kneel; damned if he would bow to strangers in his land, Joe became another candidate for emigration.

Safety Valve Closed

In the 1960s, the safety valve of emigration was closed. No more would America hold her door open for the race that had contributed so much to her growth. Likewise, restrictions were placed on immigration to Australia, New Zealand, and England itself. The traditional escape routes were closed, and Joe was trapped in a situation he neither understood nor could tolerate. The youth of Northern Ireland were now forced to remain at home, and with the energy of youth they protested their second-class citizenship. It began in the schools and universities, and then it came to the streets. The protest took

Tribute To Joe Doherty
Nat'l Committee

WASHINGTON, D.C.: The Hon. Eliot L. Engle of New York, in the House of Representatives, on Monday, September 15, 1989, paid the following tribute on the floor of the house, which is entered in the Congressional Record.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the National Committee to Free Joe Doherty and to Joe's attorneys, Mary Pike and Steve Somerstein. On the occasion of this tribute, I am proud to raise my voice in the U.S. House of Representatives on this important issue.

I would especially like to express my admiration and respect to my good friend Mary Pike, who I have come to know well from my involvement in promoting justice for Joe Doherty. Mary's tenacious pursuit of this case, through virtually every possible legal channel available, evokes a feeling of warmth and gratitude from all of us in this country who believe that due process and the integrity of the U.S. Constitution have been breached in Joe's case.

As the National Committee to Free Joe Doherty and its supporters well know, Joe has faced an unprecedented level of opposition from the highest places within the U.S. Government. Yet, there is no hint among the national committee, from Mary Pike or Steve Somerstein, that they will permit an unjust U.S. Government policy to prevail.

The tribute for Mary Pike and Steve Somerstein on September 29 demonstrates that despite the long duration of this case, the supporters of justice for Joe Doherty will not permit a hostile U.S. Government to defeat us without a vigorous battle for what we know is right. Just as Joe Doherty has demonstrated his personal strength by continuing to fight for asylum in the United States, his supporters have been unyielding in their struggle.

The National Committee to Free Joe Doherty can be proud that House Concurrent Resolution 62, of which I am an original co-sponsor, has nearly 80 co-sponsors with new support for the resolution growing each day. This is a tribute to Joe and to the thousands of his advocates who believe that he deserves a fair shake in the United States. Building support for this resolution demonstrates the importance of each individual getting involved and doing whatever possible to advance this cause.

the form of non-violent marches demanding such basic civil rights in their own land as the ability to vote and an end to discrimination in jobs and public housing.

Brutality had always been the tactic of the Loyalist mentality, and the peaceful marches were met with violent opposition. Marchers were beaten senseless and arrested, and anyone under 25 was suspected of complicity in the Civil Rights movement. Young Joe Doherty was not actively involved in any organization when he was first picked up and interrogated; but he was under 25. It happened again and again, and the interrogation was physical. On his 17th birthday, this

In Praise of the UDR

The commander of the Ulster Defense Regiment, Brigadier Charles Ritchie, has recently stated that his soldiers have worked "under circumstances unique in the history of the British Army." And judging from their record, we would have to agree that they are a "unique" group, indeed!

Formed in 1970 for the defense of Northern Ireland, the UDR is the largest regiment in the British Army, is recruited only in Northern Ireland, and serves only in Northern Ireland. Given its short existence, it can only be described as outstanding.

•Over 100 members of the UDR have been convicted of criminal offenses.

•23 members have been convicted or murdered.

•The UDR is currently at the center of the inquiry by the Cambridge-shire Deputy Chief Constable, John Stevens, into leaks by security forces.

•Over 700 members of the UDR have "lost their weapons."

•Two UDR members were convicted of the Miami Showband murders of 1975.

•A UDR member was one of the "kill Butchers" who tortured and dismembered Catholics.

•A former UDR soldier is serving a five-year sentence for illegal possession of a machine gun.

•A UDR sergeant is serving a five-year sentence for robbing his armory and selling guns to the Ulster Defense Association, a loyalist paramilitary organization.

•A UDR member is serving a nine-year sentence, and another has received a suspended sentence, having admitted that they assisted the Ulster Defense Association in stealing weapons from the UDR's armory.

It appears that the UDR is doing the job of the UDA. In fact, Irish nationalists in the Six Counties are convinced that the UDA is really the UDR when not in uniform.

proud young Irishman was picked up and interned at the convenience of the government for 5 months — without trial. Put yourself in Joe's place and imagine his frustration at hearing that his two sisters had also been interned — one of whom was strip-searched 82 times before being acquitted at her trial. If he was not a violent man when interned, he certainly understood violence when he was released. One would have to be a saint to resist hatred after such an ordeal — which of us could?

Convinced that force was the only answer for his people's degradation, Joe joined the IRA upon his release from internment. Membership in the IRA is a crime in British eyes, and the final piece was in place — Joe could be legally condemned for becoming what the British had molded him into with their own injustice. In 1980, his IRA unit was ambushed by the Special Air Service, a counterinsurgency unit of the British Military. In the gun battle, one British soldier was killed. Doherty and the other IRA men were captured and sentenced to life imprisonment before a juryless court. Under Orders from his unit, Joe and several other members escaped from jail. He was ordered to resign from the IRA and escape to the United States because he was as good as dead in Northern Ireland.

Joe arrived in the United States and lived in New York in the peace and quiet that he had been denied all his life. He was a changed man; the bitterness was still there, but the rage was beginning to fade. He was forced to live undercover, for America's doors were still closed. But for Joe Doherty it was a matter of survival — life as an undocumented alien in America was preferable to death in Northern Ireland. It was not to last. On June 18, 1983 Joe was arrested by federal officials for entering America illegally. In short order the British filed an extradition request, and Joe's hardest ordeal had begun.

The American State Department's wishes to comply with Britain's extradition order was foiled by the decision of the American Courts. On December 12, 1984 the Honorable John Sprizzo denied the request for extradition citing that the facts of this case present the assertion of the political offense exception in its most classic form. Joe was safe; or was he? The State Department appealed the decision, but the decision was upheld. Again the decision was appealed and again Joe was declared free from extradition. But the State Department would not be swayed from bending their knee to British wishes, and Joe was kept interned during the long period of appeal.

Taking another approach, the Government in 1985 revised the extradition treaty with Great Britain eliminating the political offense exception. Still in jail in a country in which he lived as a model citizen, committed no crime, nor was ever accused of one, Joe saw his situation as hopeless. There was only one hope. Under U.S. law a person agreeing to be deported may choose the country of destination so Joe applied for extradition to the Republic of Ireland — not Northern Ireland or Britain. In spite of Ireland's willingness to accept him, and a U.S. Immigration Judge's order to deport him, the Department of Justice claimed it was prejudicial to our nation's interest to deport Joe to Ireland. In June, 1988, a frustrated Attorney General Edwin Meese, ignoring all propriety in the case, ordered Joe's deportation to the United Kingdom anyway. An appeal was immediately filed on Joe's behalf and will soon be heard.

Thousands of Irish-Americans, objecting to the treatment of this Irish patriot, are appealing to their Senators to support HR 62 which asks for bail and political asylum for Joe Doherty. Thousands of Americans, infuriated by the betrayal of our Constitution at the behest of England, are joining them. As Joe nears his 7th consecutive year in an American jail with neither indictment nor trial to justify such internment, what are your elected representatives doing?

Patriots are not always past tense. Here is your chance to help a modern Irish patriot. Call your elected representative today.

Elizabeth Division No. 4

The Elizabeth Division of the LAOH attended the New Jersey State Convention held June 2-4 at the Warren Hotel, Spring Lake. The turnout was fabulous. We are honored to have Anna Cosgrove as new state president; Rose Langan, vice-president; Mary Moran, secretary. (Mary is also our Division 4 secretary) which is a great honor to our Division; Mary Weston, treasurer; Ruth Gibbs, historian; Kathleen Brew, missions; and Marion Watchon, Catholic Action.

Church. Mass was celebrated by Rev. Richard Arnholz, administrator of St. Patrick's, and was followed by a small buffet. This Mass is held each year in conjunction with National observance.

Our Margaret Donelan is busy in her role as Catholic Action Chair, getting donations for St. Joseph Social Services (for those in need of household items, clothing, etc.), encouraging our members to support local nursing homes, and not to forget daily prayer for peace in Northern Ireland.

State Secretary and Division Secretary Mary Moran continues as Chairlady of the Spaghetti Dinner for the Priesthood Fund. Proceeds are added to a statewide fund which enables many priests to complete their seminary training.

Our Division attended the State luncheon held at the Quality Inn, Bordentown, sponsored by the Burlington Division. Delightful entertainment was furnished by Mary Paglione's two nieces.

The Ladies will join with AOH Daniel O'Connell Division 2 at a dance on January 13, to be held at the Portuguese Social Club, Rte. 1, South, Elizabeth. Music by the very popular Noel Henry's Irish Showband is scheduled.

On December 14 Division 4 Ladies will install New Officers for the year 1990 at a holiday season gathering of all the members. Division meetings are every Fourth Thursday of the month at Hibernian Club, 630 First Avenue, Elizabeth. If you're Irish, come into our Division; there's a Welcome there for you!

Our division wishes all our Sister and Brother Hibernians, near and far, a very Holy, Happy and Healthy Merry Christmas and New Year.

State Board

Claire McNelis, president. Very Rev. E. Francis Kelly, pastor of St. Ann's in Freeland, has been appointed as LAOH State Chaplain. Members of the State Board have been active politically and socially. Members headed by Claire McNelis, State President, and Margaret Cooney, National Chairman Catholic Action, attended and testified before the Pennsylvania Senate Finance Committee Hearing on the MacBride Principles, endeavoring to have the Bill passed by the Senate. Margaret Cooney, Sally Mains, Shirley Murphy and Dorothy Weldon attended the Interim National Board Meeting and Testimonial dinner for AOH President Michael Coogan in Dayton, Ohio.

Allegheny County

Kathleen Parker, president. Fall County Meeting was held at Sacred Heart Social Hall in Pittsburgh, hosted by Division One, Catherine Needham, president. The County Ladies participated in the Memorial Mass and Ceremony for Commodore John Barry at which Father Cheetham of St. Anslem Church delivered the homily. Commander Michael Ryan, United States Naval Reserve, placed the wreath at the war memorial. Brunch was served following the impressive ceremony, arranged by AOH State President Ronald Bryan and County President David O'Connor.

Co-sponsoring the 85th Irish Day Reunion, the AOH and LAOH held a dinner dance at the Blarney Stone in Pittsburgh. Proceeds will benefit the Little Sisters of the Poor and the Columban Mission Fathers. Mary Margaret Maurath, past county president, was recognized for her work and devotion with LAOH Life Membership and Past President's Pin.

Division Eleven

Eileen Martini, president. This Division sponsored a Luncheon Fashion Show on October 14 at the Blarney Stone Restaurant. Proceeds went to the Columban Missions and S.O.A.R. Members, acting as model, wore many beautiful Irish imports.

Washington County

Dorothy Weldon, president. Division Four, Charleoi, held a Day of Recollection at St. Joseph's Mother house in Baden, Pa. The Division financially supports Life Line of Southwestern Pennsylvania. The members are also actively involved in the Local Food Pantry for the indigent.

LAOH National President Mary Bradley Submits A "New Bill"

By PATRICIA OBERRATH

NEWPORT, R.I. — Mary Bradley McEnery, LAOH National President, was married, here, to William J. McEnery on October 14, 1989. The wedding took place here at St. Mary's Church, with pastor Fr. George B. McCarthy, LAOH national chaplain, officiating. The bride is the daughter of Elizabeth Bradley of Central Falls and the late Albert E. Bradley. Mary is a graduate of Rhode Island College and will continue teaching in the Cumberland school system.

The bridegroom, past national president of the AOH and current State president, is the son of the late James and Nora McEnery of County Kerry, Ireland and Providence. A graduate of LaSalle Academy, he attended the extension divisions of Providence College, the University of Rhode Island and Brown University. Bill is the retired personnel administrator of the Providence Journal Company and currently writes the veterans column in the Sunday Journal and is staff member in the office of Rhode Island General Treasurer, Anthony J. Solomon.

Patricia McGuire was matron of honor for her sister, and Dr. Kevin W. McEnery was best man for his father.

A reception was held at The Pier, Newport. For a wedding trip, the couple went to the Irish Village, Cape Cod, MA and visited in Ohio. The couple will reside at 201 Wyndham Ave., Providence, R.I. 02908.

Congratulations to Mary and Bill McEnery from the entire LAOH.

HIBERNIANS cut their wedding cake at the reception held at The Pier in Newport, R.I., following their marriage. Looking on while William J. McEnery, past national AOH president, and Mary Bradley McEnery, current national LAOH president, perform the honors, are Hibernians, the Rev. George B. McCarthy and Dr. Kevin W. McEnery.

The State Memorial Mass for all deceased members of the LAOH and AOH was held November 5, celebrated by AOH State Chaplain, Fr. Russell Kohler and LAOH State Chaplain, Fr. Robert McGrath. The priest celebrants were piped at the Processional and Recessional by John McGlinchey. During the reading of the names of our deceased brothers and sisters, a gong was struck, creating an impressive ceremony. A buffet was held immediately following along with a Waterford Biscuit Barrel raffle.

The State Board Mass honoring St. Brigid will be held in February; please watch your newsletter for details.

Rose Kennedy Div., Wayne Co.

The Children's Christmas Party will be held at the AOH Hall, December 9 from 2-5 pm. The Ladies sponsored an enjoyable Halloween Party, thanks to the work of Patricia Glynn and Maureen Martin and their committee.

Daughters of Erin, Kent Co.

The ladies of Kent County recently hosted a "Half Way to St. Patrick's Day" fund raiser for the division's Scholarship Fund. The Wakes and Wedding Band from Detroit entertained and we were delighted to have National Board Officer John McInerney and State President James O'Kelly and wife Shirley. It was a great party.

The Michigan Ladies would like to extend to all our Brother and Sister Hibernians our very best for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

CLEVELAND: Friday, November 3, 1989 the AOH/LOAH held their annual Reverse Raffle with the grand prize being $1,500. Out of the final five winners, three were LAOH winners. Now that's what we call fair. Sunday, November 12, 1989 brought the AOH/LOAH together again for the Deceased Member's Mass. Hibernian Chaplain Fr. Brendon McNulty celebrated the 10:00 Mass followed by a brief ceremony and prayer meeting remembering all our deceased members in a very special way. A light breakfast was served.

On that same day, some LAOH members attended a brunch, the proceeds of which go to the St. Joseph Sisters to help fund a home devoted to care of children with Downs Syndrome. The breakfast was well attended.

On December 13, Divisions 5 and 10 will celebrate our annual joint Christmas meeting with a dinner at Brennan's Party Center. A donation will be taken up for the battered children of Providence House.

SUMMIT COUNTY: Our Lady of

Time passes quickly but it seems impossible that the holidays are once more upon us and only seven months until the National Convention in Virginia.

The Interim Board meeting held the weekend of October 20, 1989 was a very important time for the Ladies. Board members reported on progress made and their plans for the remaining period. It was most productive.

At a special ceremony, the officers of the LAOH were presented green, white and gold sashes of their respective offices and each past National President received as a gift the sash marking the years of her service. Sashes will be worn when members of the Board take part in parades or functions that warrant it.

Charity was an outstanding part of the meeting. The Board, in an attempt to select a national cause, realized that there are many — too many in our case, to consider all, but it did attempt to participate where possible.

ALL HALLOWS SEMINARY: $1,500 was presented to Fr. Michael Healy, Deputy National Chaplain, for the All Hallows restoration fund and for the education of Irish missionary priests who travel all over the world. We, the Hibernians, are the recipients of some of these missionaries. No priest ordained at All Hallows can remain in Ireland; he must enter the missionary field. One of the first graduates of All Hallows became the Bishop of the Sacramento Valley, prior to the 1906 earthquake in San Francisco.

These charitable donations made in Dayton, Ohio, by the Ladies AOH National Board, epitomize the dedication of our Order to the ideals of our organization which are devotion to God and Country.

As we approach the 1990s, the Ladies AOH is ready to accept the challenge of a new decade. May each member and friend have a Happy and Holy holiday season.

Mary Bradley McEnery

Knock's feast day was observed on August 13 with a joint corporate communion at Immaculate Conception Church. Fr. Thomas McCann officiated; Nan Dugan, Catholic Action chairperson, organized the event.

Summit County Juniors have had a busy summer. Their activities included a father-daughter miniature golf outing, a visit to Dover Lake water slide park and a swimming party at President Jennifer Lase's home. They planned the games for the Annual Family picnic and sold pop as a fund raiser at the Akron Hibernians Feis.

The Juniors who are now making plans for Fall and Winter projects, participated in a Haunted Halloween Hayride and will be forming a Junior Choir to entertain at a local senior citizens home and the Annual Hibernian Children's Christmas Party. For Christmas, the girls will be donating clothing and toiletries to the home for unwed mothers.

Ohio wishes everyone a very Merry Christmas and Blessed New Year.

ON OCTOBER 21, 1989, at the Testimonial Dinner for AOH President Michael Coogan, LAOH President Mary Bradley McEnery presented two checks of $1,500 each, to Fr. Michael Healy, Father gratefully accepted the checks, one for the San Francisco earthquake victims and the other for All Hallows Seminary restoration fund.

Ladies Massachusetts News

Would just like to let you know that all is alive and well in Massachusetts. The Ladies throughout the state are in high gear for the coming season, planning installations, fund raisers and good neighbor projects.

The Mass. State Board will hold their quarterly meeting in Marlboro on December 3, followed by awarding a basket of cheer.

The Watertown division recently held its annual scholarship dance and presented the Kay McNamara scholarship to David Piselli, grandson of Bernice Murphy, a member of that division.

The Mass. State Board joined with thousands of other concerned citizens in the Respect Life Walk in October in downtown Boston. State Pro-Life Co-ordinator Mary Leah held a flea market in Watertown and raised $1000 for this cause.

A party was held in Clinton in September for Past State President Mary Dolan; many members gathered for this gala event.

The Essex County Board held its first meeting in September, chaired by County President Geraldine Rheume. Many plans are being formulated for the coming year. The Ladies of the Newburyport division are holding a dance for the "Make a Wish" foundation, a very worthy charity. They also held a spaghetti supper.

The Peabody Ladies were involved in the Annual International Festival attended by over 50,000 people.

The Lawrence Hibernians held their annual Festival in September.

The Lynn Ladies along with the Men's division hosted their second annual Clergy Dinner. Over 70 priests and sisters were entertained and served a wonderful supper by the catering crew of Div. 10 Lynn. The division also held a dance for the IIRM movement chaplains and will be holding a prize-a-rama to help build up their treasury.

The Salem Ladies held their annual election of officers, preceded by a pot luck supper, which was very enjoyable. Congratulations to Beth Lynch on becoming the new division president from Salem.

The North Andover ladies held their regular meeting and presented a scholarship to Nathan Welch, grandson of Eileen Welch.

St. Brigid Division 1, Pasco County, has started off their Fall season with increased membership; an annual Card Party and Fashion Show was held November 2, and on November 11 members participated in the Gulfview Square Mall's Christmas Bazaar for which they have been busy over the summer making items; a picnic with the men is planned for the future. Proceeds from these events will go to their many charities.

St. Dymphna Division 1, Manatee County, recently participated in the annual Flea Market of Sacred Heart Church, Bradenton, where their monthly meetings are held. Proceeds from this are earmarked for the expenses, and for hurricane Hugo and earthquake victims.

Our Lady of Knock Division 1, Pinellas County, held their Halloween Dance on October 28. They remind all Floridians of the upcoming Barley Bree Irish Concert at Ruth Eckerd Hall, Clearwater.

Brevard County Division 1, Palm Bay, recently hosted in Melbourne the November 4 State Board meeting and dance. President Mary Herbert reminded the ladies that the Irish Festival in Ft. Lauderdale will be held March 16, 17 and 18.

The next State Board meeting will be hosted by St. Brigid Division 1, Pasco County, on January 27 at the Sheraton Inn, New Port Richey.

State Board Irish Night
It was indeed a party to be remembered. The Palm Bay Division 1 AOH joint divisions hosted an Irish Night on November 4th. The Shades of Green played traditional Irish music, snacks were provided by the ladies, and half-time tea and soda bread for the watchers. Two well-stocked baskets of cheer were awarded by the Murphy Clan. President Jerry Costlow and President Kathleen Cullinan and their members outdid themselves with this affair.

The State Board meeting was held in conjunction with the dance, a day-long meeting. Presidents Mary Herbert and John Cullinan took much care in the planning.

The Men's Division will host a St. Patrick's Dance on March 17.

KILIAN, The Missioner

BY BRIAN K. LONERGAN

Gunifort, Arbogast, Siloa, Ursus, Rumald, Frigor, Fiacre and Fridolin do not appear to be the names of Irishmen from our everyday experience. In a sense they are not, for they are the names of heroes of bygone days, i.e., the missionaries who helped Christianize Europe. These intrepid souls labored (and often died) in such strange sounding places as Amiens, Soissons, Mainz, Reichenou, St. Gall, Bobbio and Lucra in the countries of England, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, Austria and Italy. The aforementioned itinerants established about 40 foundations, even as far as Russia.

One of the most famous of all the Irish missionaries, Kilian, labored in the area of Franconia, near the city of Wurzburg in Southern Germany. The people of that section are holding special ceremonies in his honor, for it is the 1,300th anniversary of the death of this heroic churchman. Germany plans to issue a commemorative stamp in his honor.

Kilian's birthplace in Ireland is not exactly recorded although Kerry and Cavan in particular celebrate his memory. Mary Ryan D'arcy, however, notes: "Kilian was born about 640 in Mullagh in County Cavan." He left Ireland with companion monks Coloman and Totnan to make a pilgrimage to Rome. Kilian impressed Pope Conan with his wisdom and intelligence and was nominated by the Holy See to evangelize Franconia. He converted Duke Gosbert and many of his subjects, but failed to convert an important "figure" in his life, Geilana. It seems that Gosbert had married his brother's widow, Geilana, against the regulations of the Church. Kilian, like other Irish missionaries, balked at the free-wheeling lives of the aristocracy and pressed Gosbert to put away his forbidden love. Gosbert, with much chagrin, obeyed the Church in this matter, but not so Geilana. Like Herod's wife with John the Baptist, she waited her chance for revenge. During Gosbert's next military campaign she engaged an assassin to murder Kilian, Coloman and Totnan. When Gosbert returned from the battlefield he was told that the saints "had left town." Local traditions say that Gosbert eventually developed insanity and Gosbert fell victim to one of his own servants. The remains of the saint are now enshrined in the Neumunster Basilica in the beautiful city of Wurzburg. An imposing statue of Kilian greets the visitor on the main approach to the area. The city also houses a rare collection of Irish manuscripts, including Kilian's bible.

Ireland honors the saint with numerous churches and an Aer Lingus 747; an Irish ferry ship also carries his name.

Like St. Patrick and the Irish, Kilian is believed by Franciscans to become their chief advocate on their behalf at the last judgment when everyone will appreciate a kind word.

A Prayer for the Missions at Christmas

Dear Father,

You loved the world so much that You gave us Your own Son as our Redeemer.

Remembering the innkeeper who closed the door to Christ, I pray for all who stand rejected and unloved, who do not know God as their Father.

Remembering the shepherds who were the first to come to Christ, I pray for missionaries who call others to Him by their words and deeds and lives.

Remembering the kings who brought Him gifts, I pray that I may be generous in sharing the greatest of all gifts—my faith—with all who long to know God our Father.

I ask this through your son, Jesus Christ, Redeemer of the world.

Amen.

The Columban Fathers are grateful and feel privileged to work with you.

May yours be a Holy Christmas indeed!

Profiles in Patriotism

By MICHAEL McCORMACK, National Historian

Joseph Mary Plunkett

Joseph Mary Plunkett, son of George Noble, Count Plunkett, was born in Dublin in 1887. His family name had been prominent in Irish history for over 600 years; in fact, St. Oliver Plunkett, who had been martyred by the British in 1681, was an ancestor. The family took great pride in their loyalty to Ireland and the faith, as is evidenced by Joseph's middle name in honor of the Mother of God.

Sickly since childhood, Joseph grew into a youth of frail health. He was educated at Belvedere College in Dublin, Stonyhurst in England, and then at University College, Dublin. After his graduation he spent some years recuperating in the drier climates of Italy, Egypt, and Algeria. In 1911, he returned to Dublin, and renewed his friendship with Thomas MacDonagh, another UCD graduate. Always creative and bright, he and MacDonagh launched the Irish Review and helped Edward Martyn to found the Irish Theatre in Hardwicke Street. The sincere nationalism that Joseph inherited from his family soon emerged in inspired nationalist poetry in which he damned the conquerors of his land and praised the glories of his heritage.

His patriotism was not only oral and written — young Plunkett worked for his beliefs. He was one of the founders of the Irish Volunteers and a member of its first Executive in 1913. He joined the Irish Republican Brotherhood (IRB), and was sent on several secret and dangerous missions. He was sent to America as a liaison to the AOH and Clan na Gael organizations, which were actively raising funds for an insurrection, and he was sent to Berlin in 1915 to assist Roger Casement's efforts in securing that country's aid for Irish independence. Upon his return to Ireland he was made a member of the Military Council of the IRB, and became its Director of Military Operations. When a rising was decided upon for Easter, 1916, it was Plunkett who drew up the original strategy and plans for the occupation of Dublin. He was a tireless worker, and his efforts in spite of his ill health, were an inspiration to all.

Then, early in 1916 as plans were reaching fruition, young Joseph fell seriously ill. The many exertions on his frail frame in the cause of Ireland's freedom had taken their toll, and he was taken to hospital to undergo throat surgery. While recuperating from that surgery, he learned of Casement's capture on Banna Strand on Good Friday. He knew the game was up; the blow must be struck now or the opportunity would be gone forever. He also knew that he had to be a part of it. So he left the nursing home in which he was convalescing to join his comrades-in-arms.

Though concerned for the young man's health, Tom Clarke was nevertheless delighted to have Plunkett back at so critical a time, and Pearse, Connolly, and the other leaders drew considerable confidence from Plunkett's heroic and unselfish dedication to the cause. In this noble company, Joseph Plunkett and his good friend Tom MacDonagh proudly affixed their signatures to

Long Island Colleen Wins Scholarship

TRICIA ELLEN RATTIGAN

NEW YORK: The New York State AOH Board recently announced that Tricia Ellen Rattigan has been selected as the 1989 recipient of the Austin V. Carew Scholarship. Ms. Rattigan, who resides at 59 Linden Street, Lindenhurst, N.Y. 11757, is a recent graduate of Lindenhurst High School.

Tricia intends to study Political Science and the Russian language at Wellesley College in Massachusetts. Eventually she intends to study law and practice international or corporate law. She is the daughter of John and Patricia Rattigan, who are active members of Babylon's St. Patrick's Division 2, AOH and LAOH.

The scholarship is in the amount of $500 per year for four years of college study and is awarded each year to a member, son or daughter of a member of the AOH on the basis of S.A.T. scores and an examination on Irish and Irish-American history, culture and geography, administered by the New York State Board.

Downey Urges Fair Treatment of Doherty

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Rep. Thomas J. Downey (D-Amityville) announced recently that he has joined with other Members of Congress in filing a "friend of the court" brief in support of Joseph Doherty.

Downey, who is a member of the Ad Hoc Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs, said, "I believe that Joe Doherty must be treated fairly and he must be accorded the due process of law. His request for political asylum deserves to be considered expeditiously and according to the procedures established by law."

Doherty faces deportation for having entered the United States illegally after fleeing a British jail where he was held for killing a British soldier in Ulster. For the past six years, Doherty has been held in U.S. jails without bail and without conviction. Although the Board of Immigration Appeals voted to reconsider Doherty's request for political asylum, the Attorney General ordered his deportation and Doherty is now challenging this ruling in the courts.

Congressman Downey, who visited Doherty in jail last year, noted that "the Attorney General is ignoring both the judicial process and congressional intent to provide a mechanism for protecting those seeking political asylum in the United States. Joe Doherty's incarceration is a travesty of justice. He deserves the opportunity to be heard and to present his case before the appeals board."

"I will continue to work hard to assist Joe Doherty in his effort to secure asylum," Downey concluded, "and I will fight any attempt to take that right away from him."

The trophy is awarded to the Division with the largest increase in membership in both the men's and ladies' divisions. This is the second consecutive victory for Division 2. Admiring the trophy are, Noreen Murphy, president Division 2, Ladies Division; Eileen Mannix, president Suffolk County Ladies; John Dooley, vice president, division 2; Jack Gerrity, organizer, Division 2; John Hennessy, president, Suffolk County men; and Tom Maher, president, Division 2.

John Barry Commemoration Held

BUFFALO, N.Y.: The AOH Buffalo Division 1, Queen City of the Lakes' 10th Annual Commodore John Barry Observance was held Saturday, September 9, 1989. An enthusiastic group enjoyed the gathering at the Buffalo Naval and Servicemens Park in downtown Buffalo.

Guest speaker was Division Member Thomas Higgins, Sheriff of Erie County, and President John Brady, who welcomed the group.

Division 1 Kiltie Saffron Color Guard and piper displayed the colors. After the ceremony, a brunch on the fantail of the USS Little Rock was enjoyed as a fitting finale in tribute to a great patriot, Commodore John Barry.

Mike Heslin

BINGHAMTON, NY

Greetings and Salutations, Hibernian Sports Fans!

The Last Rose of Summer. Pete Rose just won't fade away. Now, he says he knows he has a problem and will begin working on it. But first, he has a few commercial things to do. He has to plug his book. He had to appear on ABC's 20/20 with Barbara Walters and a few other things from which he can make a buck. YR is glad that he has admitted that he does have a problem. YR just has a problem with his sincerity. Oh well, the Hibernian Digest has spent enough space on Pete Rose. Shall we move on?

Football. In the college ranks, Notre Dame is doing well. This weekend ND played their weakest opponent, Forrest Gregg's SMU. Yes, children, ND won. Yes, they won by a large margin. Did they beat the point spread? On some sheets, yes. On others, no. See your favorite bookie for an explanation. ND should go to a bowl. They will probably go where they can play the best opponent. Yeah! YR is quite cynical these days.

Speaking of bowls, YR did hear some disheartening news about bowls and how they select teams. It seems some teams, no matter how good their records are, will never get a major bowl bid. Why? Economics, my dear Watson, Economics. It seems teams such as Pitt and Arizona do not draw the crowds on TV like other teams. Therefore, dear Hibernian Sports Fans, if either of these is your favorite team, do not look for them on New Year's Day. So who says TV doesn't rule sports.

TV put much pressure on a certain college in the East to push the starting time of their game back so the network could show another game earlier. For the fans, it was a good deal, they got a "twofer".

In High School Football in NYS, the state allows what they call "Bowl Games." The other night, Elmira Notre Dame played in a bowl game against Chenango Valley. Chenango Valley won but Elmira ND put up a good fight.

There must be some proud father, mother or grandparents of a kid who has done well this year in high school football or soccer. YR would love to hear about his exploits. What about the girls? They also play soccer.

Speaking of soccer, the local schools, Vestal and Chenango Forks, did not fare well against intersectional opponents in their respective bowl games.

Pro Football. The NFL is into the second half. The Giants were doing well until they played the Rams. The Giants got sidetracked. Maybe it was all that sunlight out in Arizona. They're not used to sunshine and fresh air. Giants Stadium is near the NJ Turnpike. They are more used to breathing carbon monoxide than air that has less than a pound of carbon per square foot. Then again, maybe they miss Jimmy Hoffa.

There is a rumor that Jimmy Hoffa is buried in the end zone. This led Sean LaDetta, the Giants punter, to muse that this gave an entirely new meaning to the term, coffin corner.

The Chicago Bears are struggling. Their coach, Mike Ditka, seems to be sputtering and blistering but can't seem to turn the team around. Keep trying, Mike!

San Francisco 49ers is the team to watch. They appear to have their act together. Joe Montana and their wide receiver, Jerry Rice, seem to be

ALL OF THE BARRY DIVISION were betting on No. 13 "Wexford" but it was No. 6 "Island Performer" that won the AOH race at Laurel, Maryland. Sponsored by the District of Columbia State Board, a Day At The Races brought together brothers and sisters of Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia for lunch and long shots. At the presentation of the trophy in the winners circle are, left to right, front row: Ann Marie Carmody, John Fitzgerald Div. 1 LAOH, Arlington, VA; Joan Vidsens, JFK Div. 5 LAOH, Prince George's County, MD; Kathryn Back, president, District of Columbia Board, LAOH; Allen T. Stacey, Jockey; Russell B. Jones Jr., Owner; Warren Sweeney, president, District of Columbia Board; Matt Hannon, past president, District of Columbia Board. Back row, James Carmody, president, Virginia State Board; Jack Keefe, Michael Dowd Div. 6, Rockville, MD; and John Maher, vice president, District of Columbia Board and Race Day Chairman.

Crown City Is Inter-Club Champion

By SEAN MC GUINNESS

HAVERSTRAW, N.Y.: The Second Inter-Club Championships were held at Haverstraw Golf Course here on Sunday, October 8, 1989.

Finalists in the team championships were Crown City and Gaelic. At the turn it appeared that Gaelic had a slight edge; however, at the end Crown City, led by Capt. John Neenan, prevailed. The final score was Crown City 10 — Gaelic 7, and there were 2 ties.

Eighty-four golfers teed up in quest of the individual championships. All prizes were Irish Crystal, donated by Aer Lingus. Brendan McMenamin from the Aer Lingus executive office here in New York, was on hand to make the presentations.

an unbeatable combination.

What is "Neon" Dion "Prime Time" Sanders up to with all those face mask penalties. That's not nice!

Baseball. This is old news. The Oakland A's won the World Series in four straight, albeit, a delayed four straight. YR was hoping the San Francisco Giants could do something.

YR has a confession to make. He has been a Giant or a "Jint" fan since the days of John Mize when they played at the Polo Grounds on Coogan's Bluff. He never saw a game there. His heart and soul were there. Then they went west, with the "Bums of Flatbush."

Walter O'Malley had made a deal to move the Dodgers from Brooklyn to Los Angeles. But there was a fly in the ointment. Whose ointment? YR doesn't know. But they thought it would be more economical if there were two National League teams on the West Coast. So O'Malley sweet-talked his good friend, Horace S., into moving his Giants to San Francisco. Baseball has never been the same since!

A side bar to this occurred in the recent New Jersey campaign for Governor. The Republican candidate hired what is left of the "Brooklyn

Profiles in Patriotism

(Continued from Page Twenty-Four) the Proclamation of the Irish Republic. The die was cast; Plunkett and the other leaders assembled their men, and marched to the General Post Office in Dublin and into the pages of Irish history. In one short but glorious week it was over.

After the Rising, Plunkett and the other leaders were convicted by Court Martial, sentenced to death, and remitted to Kilmainham Jail to await execution. Broken in health, but not in spirit, Plunkett busied himself by scratching his most memorable poem on the wall of his cell; it stands today as mute testimony to the virtue and caliber of these men.

I see His blood upon the rose and in the stars, the glory of His eyes,

His body gleams amid eternal snows,
His tears fall from the skies.

I see His face in every flower;
the thunder and the singing of the birds are but His voice — and carved by His power rocks are His written words.

All pathways as His feet are worn,
His strong heart stirs the ever beating sea,

His crown of thorns is twined with every thorn,

His cross is every tree.

On the night of May 3, as the prisoners tensely awaited the coming fateful morning, the prison Chaplain arrived with Joseph's childhood sweetheart, Grace Gifford. In fulfillment of their wishes, they were married in the prison chapel. Six hours later 29 year-old Joseph Mary Plunkett added his name to the glorious list of Martyrs who have sacrificed all to free Roisin Dubh*.

*Roisin Dubh (RO-sheen DOO-v) - literally translated the Little Dark Rose or Darl Rosaleen; it is a metaphor for Ireland used by her Bards when it was forbidden to sing praises to the name of Ireland.

Syn-Phony" to play at a fund raiser. As Mel Allen would say, "A blast from the past!"

Speaking of the Series, YR would like to add his thanks to Al Michaels for doing an excellent job of reporting the events of the San Francisco earthquake. Not only did he provide thought-provoking insight, but being a Californian, he recognized many of the areas from the pictures as they appeared on TV. Thanks should also go to Ted Koppel for running with Al the way he did.

Trivia Time. Thanks to Jim Howard, the editor of Division I-Ulster County of NYS for this bit of trivia. What was the most prolific brother act to play in the major leagues? The three DiMaggios & The Alou's & The Boyer's? None of the former! The Delahanty Brothers, five Irishmen from Cleveland. There's one for you, Terry McGuirk. Ed Delahanty played the outfield for the Phillies and old Washington Senators. Tommy Delahanty played the infield for Cleveland. Joe Delahanty was an outfielder for the Cardinals. Frank Delahanty played 1st base with the New York Highlanders, later to become the Yankees, and Cleveland. Last but not least, Jimmy Delahanty, who played for five teams including the NY Giants. Of all the Delahantys, Ed was the most famous — a Hall of Famer who batted .346 lifetime, which just happens to be 5th highest of all time.

Another Irish family that made its mark on or in baseball were the O'Neils. Steve O'Neil, catcher and manager with Cleveland. Mike O'Neil was with the Cardinals. Bill was with Washington. Jack O'Neil played with the Cubs.

Time Out. That's all for now until the next time on the sidelines. In the meantime, if anyone has use for a writer, please let YR know. After 24 years, 10 months and some days, with the same company, he was let go. So much for loyalty and dedication. Have word processor. Will travel. Send those bon mots to P.O. Box 156ESS, Binghamton, NY 13904.

Fifth Annual Irish Golf Open in Texas

HOUSTON, TEXAS: The team of Jack Preston, Fr. Gene Francis, Guy Hayes and Marty Hammer scored 10 under par to win the 5th Annual Gene Peterson Irish Open Golf Tournament at Walden-on-Lake Houston Country Club. That team won a scorecard playoff over Jim Hoey, Bill Worrell, Chappell Dixon and Sam Class, who also recorded 10 under par. Third place at nine under went to the quartet of Ed Okruhlik, Don Underwood, Jim Foley and Ray Byrne.

The event was sponsored by the Harris County AOH with proceeds benefitting Houston's Annual St. Patrick's Day Parade. Seventy-two players participated in the tournament according to chairman Mike Davitt.

A nine-hole Pub Tournament preceded the Irish Open and ended in a three-way tie at four under par. Winning a scorecard playoff for the pub title was the team from Buddro's, headed by owner Bud Friedman along with Royce Gilliland, Ken Looney and Jim Foley. Tying for second place were teams representing the Westcrest Pub and Grif's.

4. New Projects. The National Board has given this office permission to use the AOH Logo for a fundraiser in support of the Holland Project. Battery-operated, quartz wrist watches, with gold tone case and real leather strap have been ordered with the 5-color AOH logo on the dial. These beautiful watches are being sold through the National Secretary's Office with the profits going to the Holland Fund. The price — an unbelievably low $30 in either men's or ladies' styles. Congratulations to the AOH in Savannah, Ga. for reprinting the journal of their 1905 St. Patrick's Day celebration, and thanks to E. Graham Harold for the copy. It is not only a memorable souvenir and a welcome addition to the historical annals, but a deserving tribute to the men and ladies whose names and photos are contained therein. It was they who labored to build the Order at the turn of the century in an area not known for its tolerance of Irish Catholics. May their memory remain green.

Congratulations to the New Jersey State Board on their activities planned for 1990 to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the Easter Rising.

Looking for more historical data on sites around the Virginia area that would be of interest to our Order. We'd like to make up a guide to sites within travelling distance of our next National Convention. How about Irish Civil War memorials, famous Irish men at Arlington, the story of George Washington's son or grandson, whose grave is decorated with shamrocks each March 17; even interesting Irish items on display in the Smithsonian or other museums. How about it, Virginia, can we ask a local museum to arrange an Irish exhibit in conjunction with our convention?

NEW YORK: Join Nick Murphy on his annual jaunt to the famous golf courses of Ireland's glorious southwest, for a week in June 1990.

This tour will play the most challenging of the courses including Lahinch, Ballybunnion, Tralee, Killybeg's Killeen course and Water-ville.

The group will be confined to 4 foursomes, and will be staying at grade A hotels, bed and breakfast basis, at Lahinch, Dingle and Killybeg's. Transportation by luxury coach. Green fees, cocktail reception at Ballybunnion and a farewell dinner is included also.

The tour price is $770.00; airfare starts from $449.00.

Call Nick Murphy at O'Connors Fairways Travel, 1-800-288-7609, or 212-661-0550, or at home, 914-634-2304, to book your place on this trip of a lifetime.

Until next time, if you're working on a historic project, or have any historic story you would like to share, please contact this office.

YES! THERE IS A HIBERNIAN LIFE INSURANCE FUND

What it is . . . What it offers . . .

The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund was founded in 1896 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Minnesota. Its rapid growth led to its incorporation of all AOH and LAAOH members by 1953 and subsequently to extended family members and all persons otherwise eligible for membership in the AOH and the LAOH. In 1963 the Illinois Hibernian Insurance Fund merged with the Hibernian Life Insurance Fund of Minnesota to form the present fraternal association. Now, everyone with a 'drop of Irish' can be a part of the Hibernian Fraternal family.

Minnesota and Illinois Irish may apply through their Hibernian Divisions. Irish living elsewhere may apply through the mail — directly to the Home Office.

FRATERNAL SUPPORT • The Hibernian Life Insurance Fund has supported — financially and actively — the AOH & LAOH, The University of Notre Dame/Hibernian Fund ($12,500), Irish American Cultural Institute, American Irish PEC, Marathon for Non-Public Education, the Hibernian Burse Fund for education of Clergy, the Columban Missions, the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Divisions of AOH & LAOH and the National Boards will receive an annual percentage of premiums collected on policies held by social members.
